JOTTINGS.

Dr. Hasbrouck's lecture to-night.

—Miss Moody has a new announcement in our out-of-town cards.

—The New Jersey State Legislature will re-convene at Trenton to-night.

—A band of Irish bag pipes invaded the city during yesterday discoursing national Irish airs.

—To-day the new dog ordinance goes into effect and all unmuzzled dogs are to be shot by the police.

—The Bound Brook Reform Club celebrated its first anniversary by a strawberry and ice cream festival.

—The city is to be invaded by a circus on or about the 5th. The advertisement for which will appear.

—The colored people of the city gave a strawberry festival in Manning's Hall on East Front street last evening.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Zopyrus Hook and Ladder Company will be held in the company's parlor this evening.

—A band of Indians (?) have encamped on the west Fourth street near Plainfield avenue, in which they give an entertainment.

—The Bound Brook Base Ball Club defeated a nine from Bloomington on the grounds of the former club yesterday, by a score of 15 to 13.

—At the conclusion of the services in the First Baptist church on Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. Dowling administered the rite baptism to 16 persons.

—John T. VanClief, Esq., and Rev. O. B. Cost, each made a Memorial Day oration at Clinton Hall Grove, Somerville, on the court house at Somerville yesterday.

—A large iron boiler consigned to Mr. R. M. F. Close of this place arrived at the depot on the 10 o'clock express. The boiler is to be placed in position at the stone cracker at the notch.

—Throughout the city yesterday numerous flags floated at half-mast, while many of the residences and public buildings of each displayed elaborate decorations in honor of the day.

—The residence of Postmaster Boyle on Finderne avenue was the scene of a social in the parlor on Thursday night, but the flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

—Many persons visited the various burying grounds during the afternoon to view the floral tributes deposited on the graves of loved ones by the members of the Grand Army Posts.

—Rev. Mr. Goodrich occupied the pulpit of the Congregational church on Sunday, and in the evening Rev. Mr. Cost took from Luke 14:25—"And there went great multitudes with him," etc.

—A spits dog, the property of Joseph Tice of Scotch Plains went mad Saturday and was shot before biting any other animals, but was first taken to the watch and showed other symptoms of the rabies.

—A broken-down horse which has been substituted in the place of one of the Zopyrus' black steeds for the occasion on Broad-way and the services of three men were required to lift the animal to its feet.

—Officer Lynch on Sunday afternoon arrested Harman Gray, one of four men who ago last violated the city ordinance by fast driving. City Judge Ulrich yesterday morning fined him five dollars which he paid.

—Thirty-two pleasure-seekers went from here yesterday on the Mauch Chunk excursion. The train was composed of seven coaches, and was nearly filled when it reached this city. Those from Plainfield spoke warmly in praise of the trip.

—Notwithstanding the large audiences that assembled in the various churches on Sunday evening, Reform Hall contained but few persons, the majority of whom don't in the regular Sunday evening meeting of the club. Capt. Wm. H. Ostrom and Dr. A. Oliver addressed the meeting and the usual choir rendered appropriate music.

—The inquest into the death of the late Lawrence D'Neil, who died suddenly last Thursday morning, was held on Friday and a jury in the city court room at ten o'clock this morning. A number of witnesses testified and the deceased came to his death. Inquest was adjourned over until 1.30 o'clock this afternoon. The case is still on as we go to press.

—The baptismal service in the Park Avenue Baptist church last Sunday evening was a very impressive one. Among an excellent sermon by the Rev. Dr. Cheney of Boston, from John 1: 42, the ordinance of baptism was administered to six converts, and the scene was a beautiful sight to see a sister and brother, and then two sisters come into the baptismal waters together to put on Christ by baptism. And the beauty and impressiveness of the service were greatly enhanced when Dr. Cheney took together his little five grand-daughter, Miss Mabel Clark. Few who witnessed this scene but were touched and impressed as they saw the grandfather thus attended. Others are to follow these six in a short time.

DECORATION DAY.

Decoration Day was observed yesterday in a manner to fittingly commemorate the brave men who fell in the terrible deadly strife of bloodiest sectional encounter—that which arose to save the other to destroy the Union.

The commemoration really began Sunday evening, when a memorial service was held in Crescent Avenue church, at which Rev. Dr. Richard Newton officiated. He particularly denounced Jeff Davis, the arch-traitor, for his recent unseemly conduct, and the spirit of the people was aroused to such a pitch that, who tried, instead of making treason odious, to make traitors appear persecuted martyrs. He chose for his text from Holy Writ the words: "For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, etc."

Yesterday the program published Saturday was carried out, the first work in order being the decoration or the dead soldiers' graves.

Following is a list of the cemeteries visited and the graves decorated:

WASHINGTON VALLEY.

V. Good-win, W. R. Mirek, S. Mirek, Gerhart Ottman.

During the morning a detail from Winfield Scott Post, accompanied by the drum corps, left the rooms of the Grand Army Hall for Cemetery, together with a number of the girls, visited Scotch Plains and deposited flowers on the graves of the dead soldiers there. Those of the dead heroes who are laid at rest in Fairview cemetery at Westfield were decorated by resident members of the Post.

There was a parade in the afternoon by the fishkill few living comrades and friends. The line was formed on East Front street, and the company marched in the following order:

ORDER OF MARCH.

Marshal and aid, horseback, band, fire zouaves, G. A. R. Drum corps, Winfield Scott color bearer, unarmed comrade (Sergeant Maj. Robert Walker), six-pound fieldgun (decorated by post Sheriff Bliss), commander and officers Post 73, Past colors, uniformed members Post 73, in charge of colors of ten old G. A. R. soldiers.

The line of march was published Saturday, Messrs. William Smith, George W. Snooks and Edward Thorn being the committee in charge of the debate.

In town the afternoon exercises were held at Stillman Music Hall, which were very interesting, the hall being packed, many being compelled to stand.

The curtain arose upon a scene which evoked warm applause. One hundred and fifty children, all of whom were under the age of fifteen of the number being dressed in white and all seated on a tier of five steps extending across the stage, sang a chorus of welcome under the leadership of Mrs. Westphal, Mrs. W. R. Mercer and Mrs. Wm. C. Smith, assisted at the piano by Miss Jones, who also had assisted in training the children.

A tray of choicest flowers were presented to each of the Misses Mary F. Opdyke, who had carefully selected the flowers for the occasion from their delightful conservatory. The exercises opened by the children singing "Before all Lands," and after prayer by Rev. Mr. Cost, a memorial service was explained by Post Commander Addis and responded to by other officers. A selection by the drum corps followed, the drummers wearing their new uniforms.

The children then sung "We'll Deck their Graves with Flowers," and while singing, one after another of the children marched in a circle to the center of the platform and deposited a bouquet of flowers each a bouquet, as memory's tribute to the gallant dead, as a finale the smallest of all the children placed a flag at the head of the cenotaph. This beautiful exercise was very effecting.

After this the drum corps rendered "Nearer my God to Thee," and the children sung a funeral hymn, when Rev. Mr. Cost, the orator of the day, was introduced by Commander Addis, and spoke in substance as follows:

ADDRESS OF REV. CLEAVER'S ADDRESS.

The Nation mourns! Its flags drop at half mast. The people deck with flowers the graves of their patriot dead! The Winfield Scott Relief Post of noble women perform their tender offices; this throng of people attest their faith in the principles for which our brave soldiers died. Yet, while, in sympathy with the universal grief, the eye of heaven is blinded by a frequent tear drop, while our hearts are bowed, and green the name and the memories of New Jersey's dead, while we mourn with Mrs. M. Tucker, New Jersey's first martyr (applause) General Mott, another, (applause). The Nation mourns, and the soldiers and Grand Army corps in himself—Philip Kearney! And the long roll of the boys who carried muskets. (Much applause.)

We are here to remember those of your own Post, whose places have been vacated within the year, and to see that others shall rise to occupy the 'post of honor' here. We are gathered to remember the names and the memories of Lieut. Colonel Sapper, and Grant, the leader of leaders. We are here to remember also the names dear to you, who sleep in the graves, and for whom each year Winfield Scott Post with splendid recognition of American institutions. Third, and fourth of July, and Memorial Day, finds it at its head the flag for which they died. (Applause).

The speaker eloquently portrayed the various battles of the war, the terrible carnage, and the valor both sides displayed, and concluded with:

A time this for tears and tender thoughts and troops of stately memories. The land swears with solemn unity, and prayer, deposits flowers on the graves of her sons, who in '61, when the war drums throbbed, kissed wife, husband and babe, gave up everything and left the arms of the mother that bore them, set their feet away from the white porch of home and marched to the music of the fife and lighted flag deliberately turned their faces toward death. Together they fought and together they prayed, fell and fell, and from the red folds of the flag they loved have taken on deeper hue, enriched by the chrism of their blood.

As heroes fall they fell. Millions yet unborn them on each Decoration Day. The nation seamels in emerald their memories. Bronze and marble and printed history hall their names. Chaplain Chaney, Lieutenant Colonel Sapper, Captain Grant, but the volunteer private soldier has his place in the hearts of the people. Hearts of bronze and hearts of flesh. Here, then, was the secret of that great uprising of the people! Those of you who saw it will never forget! The student put aside his books to don the line of a western soldier. The lawyer quitted his brief, the worker in iron became acquainted with steel, the shops were empty, farms were left to weeds, home, wife, mother, children, sweetheart, everything men count precious and pleasant was left. Why?

Do you think they died in order that the rich man's ballot should out-weigh yours mine?

Do you think they died that Anarchists should rule! In order that Communism and Socialism should confront the law of the land! In order that the saloon should control in both State and Nation?

No! They died that God might to enable the government, this great, proud government of the United States, to issue an 80-cent dollar and to allow the circulation? Did they die to permit men to put up corners in food products so that the poor man has to eat diminished bread? Did they die that the Internationals of a European Sunday might be repeated in the United States? Why?

Their lives, their examples and their careers are an inspiration to us and to our rulers. Let not only rulers, but Gladstone in Spain, and Grevy in France, and Dom Pedro in Brazil, and Davitt, and Parnell, and Bright, and Cobden, and all good men, even where who are striving to break yokes and establish constitutional liberty; are made stronger and more hopeful by the day of inspiration as they contemplate the magnificent careers of your heroic dead!

Fellow soldiers! Not alone for the perpetuation of a wise political economy did these men die, but for the higher ideal that this land might be more largely dedicated to a wise development of morals. They died that there might be one land Christianity might find growth. Those were it that they fought and fell for "God and Home and Native Land." When shall their memories pale? Never while memory keeps her seat, or gratitude presides over our hearts. Never will we forget those slain ones.

Who dies for liberty is never dead,
Laurels unfading twine each gloried head,
While freedom's flowers spring beneath the sod,
A new born spirit rises from the clod,
Each still, in veins that are and veins to be,
Counts ablin, that good, the true, the free.

"On fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
While Evening gives to rest the solemn round
The bivouac of the dead."

The speaker spoke for over an hour, and concluded amid round after round of applause, his grand oration.

The children sung "Liberty," and Mrs Marie B. Jones solo "The Soldier's Prayer," a selection was rendered by the Drum Corps, and the exercises were brought to a close by the singing of the hymn "My Country 'Tis of Thee," Mr. Cleaver pronouncing the benediction.

While the audience was dispersing the children were taken down stairs and treated to ice cream.

In the evening Garfield League, an organization of wives and widows of soldiers, observed the day by exercises in Reform Hall, which was filled by a large audience in attendance on the occasion, and was the scene of interesting exercises, in which a large number of children with look a large part. The following is a synopsis of

REV. DR. VINCENT'S ADDRESS.

We meet on this Memorial Day to pay tribute to the patriotic dead. Some of our dear dead soldiers who, in a great emergency, gave their lives to save the life of the nation. And it is fitting that we should on a day like this to impress the children of the country with the value of the work accomplished by the brave men whose graves we decorate, and it is well at the same time so to educate these children that should occasion arise they will be ready to add to what it bravely. It will, however, be much better for them to be able to add to what was done in the principles of justice, truth and human brotherhood, so that war will never again be necessary. The fact is the late speaker showed the breadth of our national spirit, welcoming to our shores, as we do, the oppressed of foreign lands, and we strive to become American citizens, at the same time protesting against the abuse of Liberty. Is there a Plainfield boy dead? Yes, and the nations now represented in America for the destruction of riotous and barbarous anarchy. Let us strive to put up a good deed in behalf of four institutions on which we, as a nation, must depend for the future. First, the home, where the boy is instructed, and thus the opinion and will of the American people are formed, and the power of effective form. The speaker here expressed the hope that in due time we may have prohibitory legislation and the hearty support of the people by which the evils of intemperance may be abolished, and to this extent the safety of the home and the state guaranteed.

The school-house, where American citizens are trained to be intelligent; to the public school system, which is designed to give to every child the right and privilege in useful reading; to study under judicious teachers the history of the nation and the principles of political economy that we may increase the independent vote which refuses to be commanded by employers or corporations. The increase in intelligence is absolutely necessary to the perpetuity of our free American institutions. Third, the church, in its various branches, where individual hearts are brought into contact with the Divine Spirit, and where are expressed and enlightened and the high destiny of man as an immortal being appreciated, and the Christian commandments of liberality and generosity, protesting against all bigotry and bitterness, pleading for the church free from sectarian jealousy, and pleading for the work of cultivating conscientious, reverent and God-fearing philanthropic citizens. Fourth, the home, where children may receive in the very beginnings of their lives true ideas illustrated by pure, faithful and godly mothers. The hope of America is in the home, with the well-cultivated garden, the well-kept yard, the well-ordered family, and that our plainest people may be landowners, and thus feel especial interest in the soil; the home, where the children of foreigners may become familiar to the child and be early acquire them; where intelligent women will be influenced to cast the votes of their husbands; where people will be respected as individual and immortal souls for the noble purpose for which they were created and redeemed; where servant girls who are true women shall be treated as such; where the rich shall be afraid of the example by the children; where the spirit of benevolence is enjoyed and exercised towards the poor, and loving gifts made in helpful way to those who are in need.

The address, characteristic of the glorious speaker for force and eloquence, closed with congratulations and with prophesy of continued prosperity for our nation. The audience manifested its hearty endorsement of the views expressed by warm applause, although the address was but of ten minutes length.

PERSONAL.

James Arthur, the five-year-old son of Sigmund and Mary Arthur (colored) died at the house of his parents on West Fourth street, about five o'clock on Sunday morning, from a lingering illness. The little fellow had been confined to his bed for about two months. The funeral took place from the house at two o'clock this afternoon.

The funeral arrangements over the remains of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Loomis, the wife of Rev. Dr. Loomis, who died at her home on Plainfield avenue on Friday, in the 61st year of her age, were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Vredenburgh at the house on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. Interment was made in the Methodist cemetery.

Mrs. Edward B. Ryder, whose serious illness has been reported in the city several times, died at her home on Central avenue at about nine o'clock on Sunday evening, aged 32 years. Deceased was a daughter of Theodore J. Gillies of this place, and was highly esteemed and greatly beloved by all who knew her. She had been ailing for some months past from progressive pernicious anemia from uncontrollable irritability of stomach which finally resulted in her death. The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon.

A Serious Accident.

Nellie, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rafferty of Park avenue, met with a serious accident on Sunday morning. She had just removed one of her shoes and substituted in its place a stopper with a high heel. In attempting to descend a flight of stairs in front of her home, the little girl is supposed to have stumbled, and fell, rolling to the bottom below. She was terribly bruised and bleeding about the head. A doctor was summoned who found that the child had received a blow fractured by the fall. Otherwise she is not thought to have been hurt internally.

Base Ball.

The grocers and butchers of the city engaged in a base ball contest on the grounds at Somerset street and Greenbrook road yesterday afternoon, resulted in a defeat of the butchers by a score of 38 to 37. The playing for a time was somewhat exciting, and the victory brought to a close by an outsider getting into an argument with the umpire.

The Park Avenue and a nine from the Potter prom works played a game of ball on the Somerset street grounds yesterday afternoon. The former scored 26 runs to their competitor's 14.

—The NEWS was two years' old Saturday, and begins its third year under the best of auspices. We had intended to refer to this more extendedly but our space is so crowded to-day that we must forego it. We but modestly appreciate the general good will and co-operation of the people of all classes and parties whereby the paper has proved such a gratifying success, and trust it may prove more and more worthy of the favor it has received. Our efforts shall be to deserve it, as hitherto all our efforts will be directed. The NEWS is an exemplification of home trade doctrine, and our merchants can supply your wants just as fully as we have reason to believe THE NEWS does. If you will do this, the same generous support and it will in the end cost you less and benefit you more than running after strangers. Patronize the men who advertise. They want your trade and are not afraid of competition. They benefit by it and should be favored by all who love to see home trade prosperous. We are all interested in each other's welfare.

WESTFIELD.

A young daughter was presented to R. F. Goodrich's table Monday morning. Frank is now a happy father.

Charles H. French is obliged to put se, to his signature after this, for the latest addition to the family is a boy, jr.

Rose McCune, aged 13 years, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McCune, died of consumption Sunday afternoon. The funeral took place from the house at one o'clock this afternoon.

Decoration Day was observed by most of our storekeepers, but not many of our mechanics. Nothing special going on in town there was nothing to draw them away from work.

The Laurel Base Ball Club played two games yesterday, one at Jersey City in the morning and one at Elizabeth in the afternoon on the home grounds. In both games the Laurels came off victorious.

Charles Forsyth (colored) was arrested on Saturday on a warrant issued by Justice Jacques to answer the charge of assault and battery preferred against him by his former employer, George Thatcher. On account of the absence of Mr. Thatcher the case was postponed until to-day. Forsyth not being able to procure bail to the extent of $200, Justice committed him to the county jail. Forsyth had already left town a week ago with his wife for New York, but came up at the request of his boss to settle matters. He was arrested on the train here as walked up to Elizabeth and there being held on requisition. Constable Marsh arrested him.

An Old Journalist Retires.

NEW BRUNSWICK, June 1.—John F. Babcock, who is the founder of The New Brunswick Fredonian, retired from that paper yesterday, after thirty-three years' service. He is a poor man, never having been able to make the business profitable. He was presented with a gold-headed cane by his fellow-workmen and was toasted and roasted at the banquet given him last night. This is the first time he has ever used the old man cane. He is now sixty years of age.

Fire at the Meyer Rubber Works.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 1.—Last evening about nine o'clock a large crowd of people assembled on the Albany street bridge heard a loud explosion followed by an outburst of flames at one of the small buildings of the Meyer rubber works. In the building were a number of brass and separated from the other buildings, there were stored fifteen to twenty barrels of naptha and twenty casks of linseed oil, which made flames endangering not only the works but the Albany street bridge, near by which is an old wooden structure. The entire fire department turned out, and work of the greatest part of the night to prevent the flames reaching the bridge. Water would only make the fire all the greater, so the firemen were guarded in its use and finally succeeded in extinguishing it; loss $1,000; no insurance. Joseph Koffler, the only man who knows of the cause of the fire, borrowed a lantern and went to the rear of the small building a few moments before the explosion. He was seen running towards his home shortly after ward, but to-day he could not be found.

Training Rabbits for the Pit.

I see that some ingenious sport over in Jersey is training rabbits for the pit. It used to be quite a popular diversion in certain rural districts to train dogs for fighting, bull, bears, the country breeds, for fighting. The determination and ferocity with which they cuff one another with the forepaws in an act that possesses no quality of a task. To be an American citizen, officiating in a service of gratitude to the fallen defenders of his country. Not a second to being numbered among those to whom this homage is rendered. No more lofty acts are to be found in the records of the world than the deeds of the heroic dead of the American soldier upon the field of battle and the votive offerings of his countrymen upon the holy altar of his memory.

You have devolved upon me the duty of voicing your sentiments of fellowship, of gratitude and of affection upon a day that has been consecrated to the American soldier —one that will continue to be observed by our countrymen as long as the republic shall last or patriotism shed its beam across our happy homes.

Kind indulgence alone has prompted you to think he nor one that had the good fortune to call Abraham Lincoln friend, since your last tribute to our departed countryman, has taken his place beside the pale sleepers—he who now lies resting by the murmuring waters of the Illinois, in the forest shade whose tomb requiems are sung by gentle voices swelling from the tree tops and mountain; or on the mystic Catskills.

Within a single decade and a quarter of a century has fallen into the abyss of eternity since the vocal air of an April morning was filled with the sound of "peace, be still," was still upon our people. Men and women are now before me in the full growth and estate of maturity, who have come upon the stage of action and of life since that appalling even occurred.

But they know as well as the actors in it, the history of that fearful conflict, when men of the same nationality met in opposing ranks upon the field of battle. Their hearts swelled with the same pride of country and indignation with the same fervor of patriotism to do those of the men and women who lived through the crucial test, whereby the strength of the republic was tried in the fire of steel. Two millions three hundred and thirty two thousand nine hundred and fifty-one patriots voluntarily left their homes, their farms, their peaceful pursuits to defend in one battle plain or another the waving war-the rine-pile then submitted to decision under the dread arbitrament of war. Of this vast army, 359,528 graves in the national cemeteries mark the number of those killed in battle, and dying in hospitals, upon roadsides, in prisons, as the result of wounds, of disease, of hardships, of exposure or of maltreatment.

We are not here to talk of causes that demanded the sacrifices represented by these figures, but not yet to narrate thrilling incidents of battle with fascinating stories of gallant patriotism. But, my friends, nearly one-half million young, brave, useful lives have perished untimely, relinquished in battle in the most circumstances of war, and within the close circle of that excruciating fact is to be found the moving causes of the remarkable scene this day presents to our eyes.

It is no new custom to offer oblations in memory of the dead. In every age of intelligent man the struggles of life have been marked by efforts to build "monuments after immortality." There is no existing record of the human race that does not attest this interesting fact. Monuments, mounds and sepulchres that have survived the names of individuals and outlasted their more perishable bodies alike bear witness of it. Homer declares that "All gods pay honor to the dead," and this observation is no less true of those who worship the monstrous creations of the Nile, the Orantes, the Ganges, the pagan deities of the Greeks and Romans, or the vain inventions of all rude theologies down to the annunciation of the Christian Saviour.

The monument period of America represents a mound period. The mounds, monuments and sculptures of Palenque, in Mexico, in Yucatan, in Copan and other places record the same belief. In a single state (that) had constantly budded from the flower of hope—from the first day that man's voice vibrated upon the cheery air of morning.

The aspirations of the human mind future sought fitting expression, in the very earliest times, in a tender regard of the living for the dead. Before the full development of language communication consisted largely of symbolic expression, and by this mode of speaking some of the most beautiful truths of nature have been taught and related. It is no less natural than poetic to call in the vegetable and floral worlds to represent the verdict of the ages, against the hopeless decay of the human body.

By one poet flowers have been called "the blooming alphabet of creation," and by another "the prophets of immortality." They have been associated with the heralds of heraldry, and as such the fleur de lis became an ornament of the crowns of royalty and of the dress and armor of the nobility in such countries as England, France, Spain and Italy, and in the latter the red and white roses signalized the warring houses of Lancaster and of York. The fleur de lis became the national emblems of France, the thistle of Scotland, and the shamrock of Ireland.

The rude warriors of the middle ages, becoming fascinated with the custom of flowers, carried these emblems from fair hands through all the years of chivalry. The aborigines of Mexico annually laid rifled manuals, "the first fruits of the harvest," on the graves of dear friends, and in some parts of that country the custom is still continued.

But the beautiful ceremonies of love and remembrance of the old world performed with flowers came to their fullest expansion through the growth of the Christian religion. Its birth-place was the manger in the path of the Saviour as He entered Jerusalem. The crucified Christ received a crown of thorns from His executioners, but flowers strewn by loving hands were always the emblems of the resurrection and of the life beyond the grave granted on the cave wherein His body was laid.

The important feasts of all the churches are largely celebrated with flowers. Every religion that promises a renewal of life after the sleep upon earth symbolizes its faith through the resurrection of plants in the floral tribes. From the baptismal font to the last couch of man there lies but a single step, and the rose which unfolded its crimson petals in the bridal robe of the child may, in the evening, give place to the gentle amaranth, that unfading emblem of immortality, as it speaks of hope from the grave of a friend.

Men and women of America! we have come with beautiful flowers and evergreens, culled by the eager hands of our brothers, and sisters and children, living from the fair and warm fingers of our sisters, to render the homage due to patriots, who have died for their country and for all mankind. We do not need a consecrated and an extravagant expression. The now silent soldiers, whose life work is finished, champioued a principle toward which the whole civilization of the world have been constantly drifting from the earliest recorded struggles upon the plain of Sumar.

That principle—the rights of man and the liberty of the individual—which was planted with the first blood ever shed in behalf of government, has, like the flower, bloomed upon the healing air of all the years. It has been the task of royalty to cut it down as a weed encumbering the ground. Watered by the wine of martyrs, its seed found lodgment upon the fertile soil of America, where it has grown and filled the world with its sweetness. Our brothers, whose memory we honor to-day, came upon the field to perpetuate its growth and progress to the end of time. They comprehend that a dissolution of the American Union meant a killing blow to the principle of liberty and a withering of the cherished hope of the race. Did these revered warriors hesitate in duty through considerations of life or death? No! they opened their breasts to the leaden storm of the defense, and from out the nettle danger they plucked the flower safely for their country and posterity.

The work of the Union forged the couplet of Simonides in commemoration of the men that fell at Thermopylae:

> stranger, the tidings to the Spartans tell,
> That here obedient to their laws we fell.

Was any American soldier immolated upon a blind law of his country? Not one! Every soldier in the Union ranks, whether of the regular army or volunteer, died in full sense, a member of the great, the imperishable, the immortal army of American volunteers. Their memory now lies in an untimely sepulcher. No more will they respond to the fierce blast of the bugle or the call to arms. But let us believe that they are not dead, but sleeping.

Let us bring flowers in the spring time, my friends, and by their gentle office—whether the bodies of our comrades and defenders lie buried beneath the soil of our common country, or await the final transition in the grottoes of the fretful ocean—we may symbolize our faith in the life of the atmosphere with the fragrant gratitude of an appreciative generation.

Bring flowers, then, to their memory;
Throw the fragrant offering o'er the sleeping dead,
That on the green turf around the honored sleepers,
And perfume the pathway of our country's heroes.
Bring for pale princesse that fairest flower,
The lily of the valley, the sweet and modest rose,
The white pink and the pansy, streaked with jet,
The glowing violet,
The sacred flower that grew where Lattimer woodbine,
With evergreen, was the type of hope the promise heard,
And every flower that sheds its fragrance on the breeze,
Bring flowers, then, to their memory.

The silent cities, whose work is destined to influence posterity to the latest syllable of recorded time, have come to its couch, and neither the call of battle nor the sound of beckoning of earthly glory will e'er break the soundness of his sleep upon this hither side of eternity. Two millions three hundred and thirty thousand nine hundred and fifty-one patriots voluntarily left their homes, their farms, their peaceful pursuits to defend in one battle plain or another the waving war-the rine-pile then submitted to decision under the dread arbitrament of war. Of this vast army, 359,528 graves in the national cemeteries mark the number of those killed in battle, and dying in hospitals, upon roadsides, in prisons, as the result of wounds, of disease, of hardships, of exposure or of maltreatment.

THE HERO DEAD.

Decoration Day Generally Observed Throughout the Land.

GREAT DAY IN NEW YORK.

The President, Four Cabinet Officers, Senators and Eminent Soldiers

Join With Grand Army Posts, Military Organizations and Patriotic Citizens to Do Honor to the Soldier Dead—Eloquent Addresses by Secretary Vilas and Senator Logan.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The procession was one of the grandest and largest ever seen in this city on a Decoration day. The different civic and military organizations seemed to vie with each other in contributing to the importance of the occasion. Each of the divisions comprising the memorial column had Grand Army of the Republic contained full representations from the different posts of the order. The three divisions of uniformed veterans marched with precision and presented a fine soldierly appearance. Among these men were man whose gray hairs gave evidence of advanced years and reminded the spectators that the soldiers who took part in subduing the great rebellion were veterans indeed, both in age and military bearing. Occupying almost the principal position of honor in the procession were the blue jackets of the naval detachment. Nearly 1,000 blue jackets were in line. It was evident that they were at home on land as well as at sea. Their marching was excellent. They turned twice complnice, and were accompanied by three companies of marines and a detachment of artillery from the regular army.

A halt was ordered at Twenty-seventh street to await the coming of the president, who was to review the procession from the grand stand. Mr. Cleveland appeared in company with Col. Lamont. A position was taken at the last step, and the procession moved on. A smile played around the president's lips as Capp's band marched past playing the tune "Two Little Girls in Blue."

On the grand stand were Gen. P. H. Sheridan and staff, Gen. Schofield and staff, Rear Admiral Jouett and staff, Gen. Ingalls, Secretaries Whitney, Endicott, Vilas and Lamar, and several senators, aldermen and city officials.

ORATION OF HON. JOHN A. LOGAN

At Riverside Park, N. Y., on May 31st, 1886.

COMRADES, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: A great poet has described the character and impulses, a dramatist to whom posterity has conceded the first rank, has placed in the mouth of one of his characters the words:

> "How, blow, thou winter wind,
> Thou art not so unkind
> As man's ingratitude."

For 300 years this matchless thought of Avon has been silently accepted by the readers of his enchanting works, until the stricture it records has come to be considered in the light of a truism.

The sentiment it expresses has found frequent place in the speeches of poets, writers, weeping declaimers, superficial observers and turgid orators bewailing the imperfections of human nature.

Standing on the threshold-land end of 300 years, Shakespeare has passed a sentiment down the line of the centuries, which has been amplified by a sorrowing mentor of the ages, and in all its varied declaration that "republics are ungrateful." And thus, upon the one hand, we are confronted by the allegation of the poet, and upon the other, we are met by its corollary; the full proposition being reduced to the statement, men and republics are alike ungrateful.

Every spring, when the sun of the budding spring, when "hoary frosts have fallen in the fresh lap of the crimson rose," our smiling land presents a scene that should forever shut from the record the slander of the poet and the silly carping of the politician.

Millions of people have gathered to their sleeping dead, and from one end of the land voices to chant anthems of sweet appreciation, that may rise from earth to heaven like

> Solemn strains to join the spicy shore
> Of ambry the blest.

We have come to claim our share in this beautiful and grateful service, and to perform our part in an act that possesses no quality of a task. To be an American citizen, officiating in a service of gratitude to the fallen defenders of his country. Not a second to being numbered among those to whom this homage is rendered. No more lofty acts are to be found in the records of the world than the deeds of the heroic dead of the American soldier upon the field of battle and the votive offerings of his countrymen upon the holy altar of his memory.

You have devolved upon me the duty of voicing your sentiments of fellowship, of gratitude and of affection upon a day that has been consecrated to the American soldier —one that will continue to be observed by our countrymen as long as the republic shall last or patriotism shed its beam across our happy homes.

Kind indulgence alone has prompted you to think he nor one that had the good fortune to call Abraham Lincoln friend, since your last tribute to our departed countryman, has taken his place beside the pale sleepers—he who now lies resting by the murmuring waters of the Illinois, in the forest shade whose tomb requiems are sung by gentle voices swelling from the tree tops and mountain; or on the mystic Catskills.

Within a single decade and a quarter of a century has fallen into the abyss of eternity since the vocal air of an April morning was filled with the sound of "peace, be still," was still upon our people. Men and women are now before me in the full growth and estate of maturity, who have come upon the stage of action and of life since that appalling even occurred.

But they know as well as the actors in it, the history of that fearful conflict, when men of the same nationality met in opposing ranks upon the field of battle. Their hearts swelled with the same pride of country and indignation with the same fervor of patriotism to do those of the men and women who lived through the crucial test, whereby the strength of the republic was tried in the fire of steel. Two millions three hundred and thirty thousand nine hundred and fifty-one patriots voluntarily left their homes, their farms, their peaceful pursuits to defend in one battle plain or another the waving war-the rine-pile then submitted to decision under the dread arbitrament of war. Of this vast army, 359,528 graves in the national cemeteries mark the number of those killed in battle, and dying in hospitals, upon roadsides, in prisons, as the result of wounds, of disease, of hardships, of exposure or of maltreatment.

We are not here to talk of causes that demanded the sacrifices represented by these figures, but not yet to narrate thrilling incidents of battle with fascinating stories of gallant patriotism. But, my friends, nearly one-half million young, brave, useful lives have perished untimely, relinquished in battle in the most circumstances of war, and within the close circle of that excruciating fact is to be found the moving causes of the remarkable scene this day presents to our eyes.

It is no new custom to offer oblations in memory of the dead. In every age of intelligent man the struggles of life have been marked by efforts to build "monuments after immortality." There is no existing record of the human race that does not attest this interesting fact. Monuments, mounds and sepulchres that have survived the names of individuals and outlasted their more perishable bodies alike bear witness of it. Homer declares that "All gods pay honor to the dead," and this observation is no less true of those who worship the monstrous creations of the Nile, the Orantes, the Ganges, the pagan deities of the Greeks and Romans, or the vain inventions of all rude theologies down to the annunciation of the Christian Saviour.

The monument period of America represents a mound period. The mounds, monuments and sculptures of Palenque, in Mexico, in Yucatan, in Copan and other places record the same belief. In a single state (that) had constantly budded from the flower of hope—from the first day that man's voice vibrated upon the cheery air of morning.

The aspirations of the human mind future sought fitting expression, in the very earliest times, in a tender regard of the living for the dead. Before the full development of language communication consisted largely of symbolic expression, and by this mode of speaking some of the most beautiful truths of nature have been taught and related. It is no less natural than poetic to call in the vegetable and floral worlds to represent the verdict of the ages, against the hopeless decay of the human body.

By one poet flowers have been called "the blooming alphabet of creation," and by another "the prophets of immortality." They have been associated with the heralds of heraldry, and as such the fleur de lis became an ornament of the crowns of royalty and of the dress and armor of the nobility in such countries as England, France, Spain and Italy, and in the latter the red and white roses signalized the warring houses of Lancaster and of York. The fleur de lis became the national emblems of France, the thistle of Scotland, and the shamrock of Ireland.

The rude warriors of the middle ages, becoming fascinated with the custom of flowers, carried these emblems from fair hands through all the years of chivalry. The aborigines of Mexico annually laid rifled manuals, "the first fruits of the harvest," on the graves of dear friends, and in some parts of that country the custom is still continued.

But the beautiful ceremonies of love and remembrance of the old world performed with flowers came to their fullest expansion through the growth of the Christian religion. Its birth-place was the manger in the path of the Saviour as He entered Jerusalem. The crucified Christ received a crown of thorns from His executioners, but flowers strewn by loving hands were always the emblems of the resurrection and of the life beyond the grave granted on the cave wherein His body was laid.

The important feasts of all the churches are largely celebrated with flowers. Every religion that promises a renewal of life after the sleep upon earth symbolizes its faith through the resurrection of plants in the floral tribes. From the baptismal font to the last couch of man there lies but a single step, and the rose which unfolded its crimson petals in the bridal robe of the child may, in the evening, give place to the gentle amaranth, that unfading emblem of immortality, as it speaks of hope from the grave of a friend.

Men and women of America! we have come with beautiful flowers and evergreens, culled by the eager hands of our brothers, and sisters and children, living from the fair and warm fingers of our sisters, to render the homage due to patriots, who have died for their country and for all mankind. We do not need a consecrated and an extravagant expression. The now silent soldiers, whose life work is finished, championed a principle toward which the whole civilization of the world have been constantly drifting from the earliest recorded struggles upon the plain of Sumar.

That principle—the rights of man and the liberty of the individual—which was planted with the first blood ever shed in behalf of government, has, like the flower, bloomed upon the healing air of all the years. It has been the task of royalty to cut it down as a weed encumbering the ground. Watered by the wine of martyrs, its seed found lodgment upon the fertile soil of America, where it has grown and filled the world with its sweetness. Our brothers, whose memory we honor to-day, came upon the field to perpetuate its growth and progress to the end of time. They comprehend that a dissolution of the American Union meant a killing blow to the principle of liberty and a withering of the cherished hope of the race. Did these revered warriors hesitate in duty through considerations of life or death? No! they opened their breasts to the leaden storm of the defense, and from out the nettle danger they plucked the flower safely for their country and posterity.

The work of the Union forged the couplet of Simonides in commemoration of the men that fell at Thermopylae:

> stranger, the tidings to the Spartans tell,
> That here obedient to their laws we fell.

Was any American soldier immolated upon a blind law of his country? Not one! Every soldier in the Union ranks, whether of the regular army or volunteer, died in full sense, a member of the great, the imperishable, the immortal army of American volunteers. Their memory now lies in an untimely sepulcher. No more will they respond to the fierce blast of the bugle or the call to arms. But let us believe that they are not dead, but sleeping.

Let us bring flowers in the spring time, my friends, and by their gentle office—whether the bodies of our comrades and defenders lie buried beneath the soil of our common country, or await the final transition in the grottoes of the fretful ocean—we may symbolize our faith in the life of the atmosphere with the fragrant gratitude of an appreciative generation.

Bring flowers, then, to their memory;
There is fitness in the fragrant offering,
That on the green turf around the honored sleepers,
And perfume the pathway of our country's heroes.
Bring for pale princesse that fairest flower,
The lily of the valley, the sweet and modest rose,
The white pink and the pansy, streaked with jet,
The glowing violet,
The sacred flower that grew where Lattimer woodbine,
With evergreen, was the type of hope the promise heard,
And every flower that sheds its fragrance on the breeze,
Bring flowers, then, to their memory.

The silent cities, whose work is destined to influence posterity to the latest syllable of recorded time, have come to its couch, and neither the call of battle nor the sound of beckoning of earthly glory will e'er break the soundness of his sleep upon this hither side of eternity. Two millions three hundred and thirty thousand nine hundred and fifty-one patriots voluntarily left their homes, their farms, their peaceful pursuits to defend in one battle plain or another the waving war-the rine-pile then submitted to decision under the dread arbitrament of war. Of this vast army, 359,528 graves in the national cemeteries mark the number of those killed in battle, and dying in hospitals, upon roadsides, in prisons, as the result of wounds, of disease, of hardships, of exposure or of maltreatment.

We are not here to talk of causes that demanded the sacrifices represented by these figures, but not yet to narrate thrilling incidents of battle with fascinating stories of gallant

Can it be?
Matter to unravel, and shall spirit die?
Shall man alone, for whom all rise revives,
No resurrection know? Forbid it, Heaven!
Immortal man, he seem in instinct groveling!
Lost forfeit to the future his fate and hopes!

But, my friends, the supreme work that our now sleeping hero performed will endure quite as long as the republic. The man shall leave this planet a mere counterpoise of the other mighty worlds that people their celestial orbs around the blazing orb of light and day—when their appointed time to cast themselves into their sire's arms.

Friends, this noble man's work needs no monument, no written scroll in order that its merits be perpetuated. It rears itself above the pyramids; it soars beyond the highest mountain tops and is written in letters of the deepest azure in the blue sky that forever looks down upon the busy tribes of men.

Two names should be chiseled upon the rocks of Gibraltar that, leaping from the banks of the Potomac, rears its graceful head far into the clouds, the living ambassador from a grateful people to the borders of the undiscovered country, to which both soldiers have gone—Washington and Grant! The warriors of liberty! One its father and the other its last defender.

Oh! mighty agent of a grateful people, we are here to do you honor. Oh! inspired genius, we come to render testimony of the love and gratitude we bear you. Noble citizen, kind husband loving father, good friend, great captain, chosen agent! the work thou hast done will shine from the firmament as a new star to the end of the generations. Its ray shall pale the rich troopers of the night, and forever flash with undiminished fire in presence of the god of day! Until the sunshine shall rob the waking the flowers and fill the vernal air with incense, we leave thee with the faithful spirits that guard thy rest and amile about thy tomb.

MR. VILAS' ADDRESS.

A Glowing Tribute to the Dead Leaders.

MR. PRESIDENT, COMRADES OF THE WAR, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: The day has been taken from our eager labors for the future to testify our reverence for the past. In decorous parades, with music and with banners, with solemn pomp and show, and in every circumstance of honor, the people of the nation have repaired to hallowed graves and celebrated with the tender rite of flowers the memory of the dead who died for them. And now that we are gathered by prayer, by song and speech, to fittingly finish our share in the honored ceremonial, the spirit of the day is present with us, and the dead are with us.

It is a duty and a privilege of two-fold value to recount and emphasize the features of the patriotism, the courage, the self-sacrifices by which our Union soldier gained their title to the veneration of their countrymen and the world; first to them, in the feeling of their rightful glory, bright and pure; and then to living men and to our children, by emulous quickening and better understanding of the love and duty due our country.

It is not from their soldier ship alone that the sheen of their renown is so bright; their labors, privations and dreadful self-rings, their glorious courage and gallant deeds in arms; for these were not distinctive in their ennoblement. These they shared with their fellow-countrymen, whose duty it was to serve many a hard fought and bloody field, worthily competes for it; equal place on the page of military fame. Beyond the soldier's qualities, though they were the qualities of men who wrought by arms the salvation of this government raise noble or claim to gratitude and remembrance in the unselfish, unselfish sacrifice of the soldier for the liberty and progress of man, and in the vast, far-reaching benefits bestowed by them on their country's men. Your meed of praise rests on higher appliance of conditions never before imposed in human affairs; conditions exigent of more generous, self-forgetting unbound self-sacrifice for fruits to be gathered by other men in after times—than liberty or philanthropy ever demanded, or it had entered into the heart of man to conceive. Your glory will be found in your widespread people to such a cause alone. In the calm of history, now that the clouds of contemporaneous turmoil have disappeared, it may be seen in clear view. That the height of the great argument" to which their souls responded.

It was a grand and strange problem that fell upon this people twenty-five years ago War, that has every where desolated the earth, was beyond conception of Americans as a people. Between the two great sister states in this our land of free and heaven-given institutions. Desperate threatenings were entoned unmeaning bluster and nothing to be weighed as portions against an American's patriotism.

There was a rough and sudden wakening. While politicians trusted here, too, ambition had plotted its advantage, regardless of human suffering; here passion raged obscuring reason's light; here fraudulent, pretentious claims had blinded many; here had disguised the aspect of revolt until it seemed the duty of allegiance, and while incredulous fidelity gazed insect, secession became a fact and menaced the Union with dismemberment.

What, then, was their duty who faithfully acknowledged the allegiance, that was the debt of all, to the support of these rights?

"What patriotism, what sentiment, can warrant you thus to join in so gigantic and so deadly war as which Earth has seen? How shall you reckon it with your families and your posterity if, thus rashly fighting, you shall fail; consigning them to long oppressing obligation and a proud spirit with domestic sorrows and sunk in humiliation?"

Well might the calculating wisdom of the world, reckoning the palpable self-interests of the living, have said this. Well might the sufferance of separation! Set debit and credit in their different columns, and how did every mercenary argument, touching living men, be made the balance against the Union! On what might rise the hope that patriotism could be so lofty, courage so daring, fortitude so long enduring, men so sacrificing that they would so waste their substance and slay themselves, in a fanstrained forecast of loving care for generations yet unborn, and unborn in the future grasp the humanity of their enemy as their own!

It was a noble study, a surpassing spectacle, that the demeanor of the great people long accustomed to quiet freedom, confronted with such a fateful war. The overwhelming magnitude of the interest, involving ever man in the issue, engaged and concentrated the intensest attention, thought and passion; and public opinion, usually slow to form and deep expression, became quick of decision and impatiently incisive in declaration. But partially roused and still sluggish with lingering confidence at the first call to arms, the initial disasters and what more threatening failed to produce. Then, in colossal form and feature, majestically rising in clear lines, the spirit of the freemen of the republic arose, and in view, towering in the northern sky like an apparition from above. Upon its aspect amazement had given way to understanding; sorrow and anger to grief and pride. Then in noble rage, and every lineament kindling with inward fire, told of stern and unrelenting resolution. Then rising murmur of united voices broke into clear and full response to the grand challenge of their patriotism and courage.

The union of these states shall not fall; not a state shall be lost to the great family of the constitution; not a star shall fall from the azure field of the flag of our country. We will not compromise, we will decide as right. But resisting no cost, no sacrifice, no peril, whether treason and rebellion raise their heads against this government, there we will strike them down, till the last foe bends his knee in duty and allegiance.

Locked in almost continental deadly conflict, contending armies swayed to and fro, in equal, tail-calve struggle; while, with mighty strokes, the western forces cut off great segments of the southern territory from co-operation, and the constricting bands of the nation's power drew closer and tighter their fibres embrace. Once and again, deeper and wider in the beleaguered forces were caused, but encountered and repelled with bloody lesson; while, in hot rapidity, Thanic blows of battle broke their narrowing lines of defense.

At last, after weary, fearful years, surcharged with battle, toil, privation, disease and death, came the glorious triumph, and the war-worn boys in blue beheld the last armed enemy a captive, and their tremendous labor done. By many signs in recent years the nature of the late war and of regeneration has been signalized. Most impressively Death has marked with its monuments the year which has passed. No battle of the war slew so many men as were the resistless fate has borne away within the fourteen-month past, an army of noble men. Among them the dispatches some whose illustrious names are immortally inseparable from the great events of our national career.

Rash with enthusiasm and inexperience, we sent out our earliest body of troops as if victories in war required only a feverish desire. They soon returned in panic, a disorganized mass. Their hard overtaxed with a tremor of humiliation and fear.

MCLELLAN TOOK THE MOB;

demoralization was subdued to order, enthusiasm to discipline; esteem became soldierly, and in many respects the army was surpassed in all the ages of war. That splendid corps was his, the army of the Potomac. He created it, and breathed into it the spirit of its organization. From the beginning to the end it coped in constant struggle with the best trained and best led enemy the world ever saw. Its purpose, at last it gained the crowning triumph of the age and took the sword of Lee.

And Hancock's name was also called by that dread constable who summons to the grave.

THE SUPERB HANCOCK!

The beau ideal of manhood's epidemic! Fancy's ideal of the perfect general! Bred in all the learning of the martial art, practiced in its exercises, in stature, port and speech the soldier and the gentleman in carriage, bearing and in all the duties of commander who wielded the thunderbolt of battle with the dexterous but deadly grace which the rapier wielded by a paladin of old. His brilliant star shines in the galaxy of the heroes of the battlefield, whom, from both sides, history has chosen for the firmament of military fame.

Upon the rocky side of your majestic Hudson, another sepulchre has been builded, an urn of mortality inclosed within it.

And Hither, through ceaseless day far beyond the stretch of human ken to tell, the patriots of ours and the great souled of every land, in unceasing pilgrimage will hold their feet and their hearts' glad tributes. For, in that shrine of immortality are stored the ashes of the invincible instrument of God, who breathed the breath of the wind of war to the salvation of the republic. There, parted from the sight of his lamenting countrymen, the perishable form of

Let us pause for a brief space to view the outlines of the character and deeds which are forever to be sweetly cherished in human memory and which will be graven in place upon this tomb you typify your reverent gratitude to all the heroes of the Union. Not that he was their victorious leader, but because in his own person he was the incarnation of the ideal attributes of the freeman in war, in soul, in faculties, in character, in power, in action, that personified what the Union cause and the combination of the brightest excellence of its soldiery.

Wrapped in the sweetest love of family, his home and his hearth, he was a man among men. He knew the spirit of the cause he led and the necessities of the victory he won. Sad pity moved him, not exultation, as they bore from the field of battle the dead, the finish to his martial crown. He thought not of himself, the assured idol of unrivaled power, but of them. No one knew the duties of defeat, like he forbade the guns of victory to sound humiliation to their ears; and kindly counseling their future, he left their private grief to the soldiers of the republic and encouraged them to restore their homes. Recognizing with joy the fruition of his hope in the new era opening to his countrymen, he was the first to have spoke the supremest glory of his work to the first of the great antagonists he overcame, when he said to Gen. Buckner, "I have witnessed since our parting just what I wished to see ever since the war—between the sections." Visited with exceeding kindness by the people, his appearing and his patience wrung the tears of his countrymen. Even then was not Heaven with him for his greater glory! His magnetic heart was to be broken by the loss of all men, and the grandeur of his character was exalted far above the clouds of calumny and misfortune. Bravely struggling with coming death, and with every engine, he uttered no cry or moan; but, toiling on to finish his life work in the narrative of his deeds, gave to his tribute to the honor of the soldiers and sailors on both sides of the war, and thanked God for the lingering hours of torture which had enabled him to see the last one of the armies he had engaged but a few short years ago in deadly conflict.

And grandly did he triumph over death.

Oh! noble dead! Your sacrifice was not in vain! Safely rests the land you saved on the patriotic breasts of your countrymen. "With malice toward none, with charity for all," with firmness in the right, as God gave us grand career; and in their hearts your hallowed memory shall be your country's treasure and stay forever.

A SCENE AT CHICAGO.

Decoration Ceremonies Disturbed by a Bigoted Religious Question.

CHICAGO, June 1.—The decoration of the graves of soldiers dead who lie buried in Calvary cemetery was undertaken by Mulligan post, No 330, of the G. A. R. and representatives from the Union Veteran association. Thirty or forty veterans, accompanied by several hundred citizens, went out to Calvary on the 9 o'clock train. At the Calvary depot they formed in line with Post Commander B. H. Lincott at the head. Lieutenant Col. H. Guinea stood at the entrance to the burying ground.

"Please step aside and let us get in," said Commander Lincott.

"Oh, I am not permitting to do here," said Mr. Guinea, and the veterans had to wait. They were a little angry at the interruption, but they cooled down in a few moments and ranged themselves in front of the marble monument to Col. Mulligan, after whom their post is named. The members stood silently and with bowed heads while the head of the station was being given to the people. Then Commander Lincott stepped to the front and began a brief address:

"Comrades, he said, "we are assembled here to pay our respects to the memory of a

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR PASS RESOLUTIONS

Setting Forth Their Ideas of How a Government Should be Run—A "Little Wine for Their Stomach's Sake"—A Lobbying Committee.

CLEVELAND, June 1.—Mr. Powderly left the chair in which he presides over the deliberations of the Knights of Labor and took the floor in order to move and urge the adoption of a resolution he had drawn up and had expressed great interest in. To a close observer two features of these resolutions were conspicuous. In the first place, Mr. Powderly admits that every man has a right to drink liquor, and requests that it be put into effect. In the second place, it is an absolute surrender to a very hearty opposition that was aroused by Mr. Powderly's extreme views on temperance. A month ago he did not appear to think that any Knight should ever drink. He did not represent the Knights in the s and he took on that subject. They all found a temperance clause in the constitution forbidding the admission of members when they entered it, and all preferred to favor that provision; but they don't want too much temperance sentiment in the structure they're building, and this surrender of Mr. Powderly of those views that so many outsiders warmly commend seems to indicate that the leaders of the unions is not to go any further than the constitution warrants. The other feature of the resolutions that is especially significant is the political one. If any one who has had nothing to do with politics the Knights are acting peculiarly. How they can watch the polls, send candidates to congress, draft laws and then exert their influence to have them passed without going into politics is a problem the solution of which will be eagerly awaited, especially as the Knights are a non-political class, not only by instinct but by profession. The resolutions, which were adopted unanimously, are as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this general assembly that the occupation of the bribe giver and the bribe taker should be destroyed. To do this it will be necessary to educate those who suffer most through bribery and corruption that it is as hurtful to the welfare of the nation to receive a bribe as to give one. In order to deal with this question more effectively and intelligently, we should use every means in our power to secure for the toiler the right to protect himself upon that day which of all days is important to American citizens, election day. That he may have an opportunity to protect his interest on that occasion, we should ask that election day be made a national holiday, on which no employer shall have the right to demand service at the hands of the employed.

We furthermore recommend that the workmen of the nation declare their intention to make election day labor's holiday, and that they observe their entire time on that day to looking after their interests; that they shall on that day keep watch and ward over the destinies of the nation by guarding the polls from the influence of the bribe-taker and bribe-giver; and, while we recognize the right of any man to indulge in liquor to such extent as he may deem necessary for health and comfort, yet we do recommend that on that day each workman refrain from the use of liquor of all kinds, so that he may exercise with a clear head his prerogative as a citizen in selecting proper men to represent the people.

The committee on law made a very important report, investigating the people and their representatives in congress with the deliberate demands of the order so far as legislation is concerned. The general assembly acquiesced entirely and promptly in the report of the committee and ordered that the general master workman appoint a committee of three Knights to go to Washington and look after the interests of laboring men in this regard. The report is as follows:

1. We demand the creation of a system that shall make future generations more than tenants at will, so long as there is land idle that is needed by American citizens to live and work upon.

2. We demand the reservation of the public lands for actual settlers only, and that all lands now held by individuals and corporations in excess of 160 acres, not under cultivation, shall be taxed to the full value of cultivated lands of like character.

3. We demand the immediate forfeiture of all lands now under grant to corporations or individuals, the conditions of which have not been complied with.

4. We demand that all lands now held by individuals or corporations upon which patents have not issued, and which are not forfeited, shall be escheated, without delay and taxed to the full value of lands of the character under cultivation.

5. We demand the immediate removal of all fences upon the public lands, without the authority of law, and that equal protection be secured to all citizens of the United States in the use of public lands for free communication.

6. We demand that on and after A. D. 1890 the government shall obtain possession, by purchase at an appraised valuation, of all lands legally held by railroad and telegraph aliens, and from and after A. D. 1888 aliens shall be prohibited from acquiring title to or owning lands within the United States of America, and that all deeds by citizens of the United States to aliens, after said last mentioned date, shall be null and void, and land so deeded shall revert to the government.

7. We demand the abolition of all property qualifications for voting similar to those now existing in the state of Rhode Island, and the establishment of a gradual income tax.

8. We believe that the labor bureau is one of the most valuable means for the dissemination of needed information, and we demand for it the full appropriation asked for, that its efficiency be not impaired.

9. We recommend the passage of the several bills indorsed by the body and approved by the committee on labor of the house of representatives.

10. We recommend that this body appoint a committee of three to visit congress during its present session to make known to the members of that honorable body the wishes of the Knights of Labor respecting the matters named by this committee and indorsed by this body.

Resolved, That we hold to strict accountability at the ballot box all members of congress who refuses compliance with these demands.

The question whether or not a permanent headquarters shall be established in some building to be fitted with appliances for the printing of a weekly newspaper organ of the order was referred to the various local assemblies of the order throughout the country. The order now has a monthly newspaper published in Philadelphia.

As to the startling statements made by John Morrison, George K. Lloyd and P. C. McGuire in three printed circulars, setting forth the existence and aims of a band of alleged conspirators in New York called the "Home club," Mr. Powderly said that they were so much ancient history, only to be likened to the waving of the "bloody shirt." Nevertheless they are being formerly investigated.

THE SALONS OF MONTE CARLO.

A Visit to the Famous Casino—Among the Visitors—Unfortunate.

As the old Greek armies marched to battle, so the infatuated players lose their last Napoleon to the sound of flutes and soft recorders. The band plays in the pavilion on one of the terraces back of the casino, overlooked by a balcony, to which the ruined can resort and scream their losings and findings by listening to the delicious harmonies. No grander concert-room can be imagined, the splendid casino, the gardens, the terraced hillside, the Mediterranean stretching its blue expanse of water in front and the high bare hills behind, which complete the vast amphitheatre. Nothing has been omitted at Monaco which can render its special form of vice attractive or diffuse a roseate tint over its miseries.

On this occasion there were perhaps 100 visitors. There was not the usual babel of tongues, though nearly all modern languages could be heard in the gaming salon. The fashionable world was not largely represented, though some rich English women were present. As for the majority of women, though generally well dressed, they were not of classe. commonly deemed respectable. An old couple were passing from one to another of the four or five tables that were kept feverishly busy, hazarding a small piece here and there. The modiste consided to me with signs of emotion the fact that she had lost 2½ francs. The commissaire was also present in plain clothes and had heroically resolved to keep it, though, as it was still early in the afternoon, it was impossible to tell what he might do later. A hoodwinked Englishwoman at one of the tables was said to have won 10,000 francs since mid-day.

There was an air of decorum about the place, people speaking in low tones, the principal part of the noise that broke the stillness coming from the croupiers. About the tables all agog were rouleaux of sous with piles of gold before them, which were rapidly diminishing; others with a little board, of which but a few coins remained. Among the rare women were those who had evidently earned the money they were losing by hard labor. One of these I saw afterwards, a poor woman of Marseilles, who had lost all and was begging enough of the management to take her home. On the balcony listening to the band were men and women with faces as wo-begone that it was evident they had ceased to hope as well as fortune.—Paris Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The assurance that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an assessment. There are no Membership Fees, or annual dues, nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year. For $36 a year a policy of $10,000, and the contract is clear and definite. Over $600,000 The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since. It has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $643,000 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to the large substantial assets amounting to over 600,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $1,000,000. ## WOMAN AND HOME.

A SHORT STORY OF FAVORITISM AMONG CHILDREN.

Mary Clemmer's Success—Matrimony—Physical Difference—Milliners Not to Blame—A Congressman's Wife—Live It Down—Stuffed Eggs—In Paris.

Visiting at the house of a well-to-do farmer's family one day a lady was shown by one of the children, a very bright and pretty child, perhaps 10 years old, an autograph album, in which she had collected a number of the names of her school friends. Her manner was a little pert, but not disagreeably so, and it seemed to the lady inside to the visitor that the child was uncommonly bright and had been too much petted. The autograph album disposed of the child, at least for the time. Effie had a gold locket from her neck and displayed it with an air of pride. Various other little mementoes were brought forth by her to entertain the visitor after she retired from the room to help her mother in the kitchen.

Presently a pale, timid little face peeped in.

"How do you do?" said the lady, pleasantly. "I suppose you are another of Mrs. Ball's nice little girls?"

The child opened the door wide enough now to admit her whole person, and came hesitatingly forward. She was evidently older than Effie, but looked scarcely larger, and her face had a slightly pinched and very sad look.

"Yes," she said, in a manner the reverse of Effie's, "I am Susie—but I am not very nice."

"Not very nice?" said the lady facetiously. "Why, you look to me like a very nice little girl, indeed."

The child's face flushed with pleasure, but she kept on steadily: "It's Effie that's nice. Effie's very nice."

"Yes," the lady admitted, "Effie is nice, but I don't believe she is any nicer than you are. Now you get me your autograph album and our affairs are settled."

Susie looked surprised.

"I haven't got any," she said slowly. "That was Effie's. Mother bought it for Effie—but I had a white apron," she added as if trying to still a little discontent that would rise within her.

Later it transpired that Susie had no locket, nor hardly any of the other treasures in which Effie appeared to be so rich. A pathetic little face was that one that could seemed to have become so accustomed to having fewer things than Effie that it hardly occurred to her to imagine that she might have these things. At the table it was "Susie, do sit up," "Look pleasant, Susie;" "You must excuse Susie's awkwardness," until I was very indignant. Effie was scarcely reproved at all. After supper was over Effie sang a little song.

"And now will Susie sing?" said the lady.

"She can't sing," said one of the older brothers, with an accent of contempt.

Nobody else seemed to perceive it, but a fine moisture came into the child's eye, looking sharply at the pale, plain little face observed a glistening tear on her lashes, which she hastened to wipe patiently away.

"That Susie is a queer comus to me an uncommon child," the visitor found a chance to say when the children had retired.

The mother, an obtuse, rather vain, but well meaning woman, said with pride:

"You mean Effie, don't you?" she said.

"No, Susie, the pale one."

"Oh, we don't think much on Susie. She ain't really sickly, but then she ain't strong, and she can't help around like Effie. She's a reader, Susie is, and she ain't tugly, but she has aggravating little ways and she ain't generally noticed much."

"I don't see why," pursued the lady, "she may not be quite so Effie, but she is to me a very interesting child. I should say that she needed a great deal of petting and encouragement and bringing to the front—more, perhaps, than Effie."

The mother thought a moment. Perhaps she felt a little resentment, but the lady would not refuse saying what she did had she known the mother would have been very indignant.

"Perhaps she does," she admitted. "Her father thinks her rather too unlicked one we've got, but maybe noticing her more would do good. We do find a great deal of fault with Susie, and she's a great reader and good at her books. But you must own she's homely and clumsy somehow."

No, the lady would not own even this, and with a few more words, which she tried to make very telling and very judicious, she took her leave.

It was not her lot to see more of this family for several years, but not for every reason to think, from the reports she heard, that her words had been productive of good, for when these girls had grown to womanhood, Effie turned out to be a commonplace vain, though by no means insufficient woman, while her sister became a distinguished teacher, and added largely in the support of the family, when misfortune came upon them. She later married a missionary and became one of the most intelligent of the honored and noble missionaries whom America has ever sent forth.

In these days your own home a child who attracts little attention and whose face or slow mind or awkward figure frets you and makes you continually find fault with it? Are you better to one of your children than another? Are you not, perhaps, unwittingly the choicest plant in your garden under a load of misunderstanding, unappreciation and undeserved blame?—Atlanta Constitution.

Mary Clemmer's Journalistic Success.

To the growing multitude of those who look to the pen for daily bread, and who are yet fain to win by it some portion of the personal repute which is the glory of industry in the so-called liberal professions, Mary Clemmer was a sympathetic and stimulating figure. For a great many years she was in the technical sense the most exacting sense a woman journalist, recognizing and punctually conforming to the editorial requirement that she should never lost the hope or abandoned the endeavor to accomplish something that should make it her highest mark in letters. More than the ephemeral profession for of a journalistic hack. For the most part of the ten days elapsed from an early age she had to supply bread, and, not long after, support others—forced her to write as the scribes, but she was not on that account content to idle away life in the unbeneered treadmill of newspaperlabor.

She began to write for money before she was twenty, and she continued to toil in the same groove until her happy second marriage, which occurred but a short time before her death at 46 gave her at last an opportunity to rest—not what she meant but what she would. Not that while leisure seemed unreachable she indulged in repining over the rigid requirements of our trade, or in unmanly feeling that the thankfulness of every honest workman who finds work enough to do. This is proved by the unflagging and exact fulfillment of every journalistic duty which she assumed. Not only was her correspondence for a very extended period an uninterrupted feature of the New York Independent, but she spent three years in the office of The Brooklyn Union under a contract to supply a column daily, and she never by so much as one day violated or evaded the stipulations of the contract.

We may add that during the last of these three years she received from The Union a salary of $5,000, and that the fact of this material is right in thinking that this sum is the largest ever paid in this country to a woman for a journalistic service. No woman has better understood what journalism means, or was better fitted to depict its aspirations and shortcomings, and one of her graceful tributes to Greeley will be gratefully remembered was called "The Journalist." She assumed the vocation in which her life was mainly spent, and her brave, strenuous, and useful career deserved to be fittingly and tenderly commemorated. —M. W. H." in New York Sun.

The Milliners Not Entirely to Blame.

The effort now being made by certain humanitarians to discourage the wearing of birds or their plumage by ladies in their hats is all very good in its way and gives opportunities for such persons to pose as reformers; but why they should heap such wordy wrath upon the poor milliners, as some have done, is as mysterious as it is inconsistent. The milliner does not make the birds, nor do they teach her until they have passed through the hands of several dealers or middlemen, and she would not sell them were they not desired by her customers. The consumer of an article is the person responsible for its being offered as merchandise. So we advise our benevolent brothers and sisters to look to the consumer.

And while they are about it, let them not stop at plumes on hats, let them reconsider the delightful bonnet of the past. Fashion wears in her hair was originally taken from a poor, innocent creature who used this material for its only defense. The kid gloves she has on her hands were stripped from a babe whose parents had hoped that its maternity would be spent in the harmless amusement of bounding about on suburban rocks and foraging freely on fence-board circus posters.

The satchel she carries on her arm but a short time ago formed part of an amphibious animal whose only crime consisted in basking in the sunlight on the mud flats of the St. John's river, Florida, occasionally frolicking in its waters, or watching for an incautious black pleasantry on whom to make a meal.

The silk cuss she robes herself in was made from the winding threads that formed protection for thousands of nature's beautiful creations, who were cruelly scalded within their cocoons to retrieve which they might eat their way out and spoil the continuity of the valuable fibers.

The sacque that takes her fair form from the rude wintry blasts once helped protect a beautiful animal, whose native home is amid the icy regions of Alaska, where he was ruthlessly murdered for a species of skin game, an animal susceptible of domestication and capable of a high degree of culture, vying with the average Italian in musical ability, as was demonstrated by several that have been exhibited at various museums, where they handle the barrel organ with much skill.

The portemonnaie she so daintily carries in her hand and the card case that accompanies her on calls of ceremony were once part of beautiful tusks that graced the cupidity of Asiatic or African hunters, who murdered a possible Jumbo to secure them for commercial purposes.—Millinery Trade Review.

Some Suggestions Concerning Matrimony.

There are still, thank heaven! pure love matches, but these are often looked upon with grave disapproval by the "best people." One grain of patched idea of the small amount of real matrimonial felicity there is in the world from the warnings uttered by those who ought from experience to be able to speak intelligently.

"I was engaged for a year before my marriage," said one woman, "and in all that time there were three women who, in wishing me joy, coupled their kindly expressions with sincere congratulations upon the fact that I was not to marry him. One of them shook their beads and sighed significantly as they hoped I might be happy. I shall never forget the gratitude which filled my breast for the one friend who had assured me that I could not do a better thing than marry, provided I had chosen the right man." "You have given me many joys," she said, brightly, "and you gain some one who will help make your troubles and sorrows hail what they would otherwise be."

Many parents warn their daughters with a keen eye to the main chance. Affection is all very well, but a good bank account is better. "Marry well, young girls," said a matron, "that it is easier to begin married life with respect and kindly feeling than with this tremendous devotion that there is so much talk about. Hot love soon cools, and a calm friendly sort of affection makes a firmer foundation for marriage than anything else."

This theory may be excellent for people who are run into one mold, but for those who have strong individualities, quick tempers and passionate natures, something more than mere friendly feeling is required to assist them in bearing the countless rubs and annoyances that arise even in the best regulated household. Money can not do everything, and one may venture to say that there are few, if any, women who make loveless marriages for money who escape suffering seasons of bitter regret. When a girl deliberately turns her back upon wealth and chooses the man she loves in spite of his limited income she is undertaking a life that will have its trials and privations, but at all events, she is not stultifying her higher nature.—Christine Terhune Herrick.

Differentiation of Physical Energy.

Now, can any one seriously argue that, on the physical side, divergence of pursuits and habits is not indicated for the sexes? The common sense of mankind has long ago answered this question, and even the female reformers, I believe, admit that plowing and driving cattle, soldiering, and sailing are not appropriate to women, nor feeding and rocking children, nursing the sick, and keeping house to men. Not that women have not as much physical strength and energy as their husbands, but men in them, but that energy appears to have a different scope. Men would find the common tasks of women desperately fatiguing and irksome, and women, if imagined, would certainly not cultivate manly strength and energy as a child's nurse; yet the nurse exercises as much strength, endurance, carrying and nursing a heavy child.

The ignoring of this differentiation of physical energy in the two sexes is always the note of the barbarian or degradation among mankind. Where you find women put to tasks which do not suit with their physical constitution and function—a practice always evidenced by premature decrepitude—there you have a people low in the scale of humanity. Now, human nature being all of a piece, it is but reasonable to think that a divergence as between the sexes in pursuits and habits, which is strongly indicated physically as we see on one side of it, is likely to be wise on the other. The energy of women, as it differs in kind and in scope from that of men in physical matters, so differs in moral and intellectual matters. No doubt it is not so easy to discriminate between the intellectual and moral powers of men and women as between their bodily powers; but there is a real difference there, and the public good it ought to be carefully preserved. Especially is it required in the case of their action as members of the commonwealth.—Nineteenth Century.

What a Washington Winter Will Do.

Take a shy, unfashionable, unassuming, unsophisticated little country town, and set her down, the wife of a member in congress, with her first congressional winter all before her. It is like her first baby, too good to be true; for too grand and wonderful to be realized in a hurry. She finds out by that mysterious intelligence office or law of gravitation the way to secure good milliner and gets herself a half-dozen silk and velvet dresses. She is boarding, but has the use of a parlor, and on Tuesday afternoon, her day "at home," takes her seat in that parlor and receives in quite a grand style. O, she is so sweet and kind, and friendly in her manner, and you, her one shy self and all great stars of the doings of these official ladies, come away entranced. You don't know yourself the unutterable contempt, the lofty pity, the timid ambition, the lack of self-confidence, the embarrassment that come of the unconsciousness of possessing power that fascinates every member's wife so sweet, and lovely, and kind to you.

But only wait a year. In a year the shy, unsophisticated little country woman has complaisant, bland, patronizing, elegant. She may be, and often is, just as sweet and kind-hearted as ever before, but after a year she has learned that form goes for a great more shy. If she was a dainty bud she blossoms into a perfect rose. If she was an important little gaudy flower that flaunted at a Washington winter have opened the heart and disclosed the velvety petals touched and smirched with the canker.—Washington D. New Orleans Picayune.

Suddenly Run to Things Horses.

The ladies indulge in sporting brooches with such subjects as a tiny gold horse and cavalier jumping a five-barred gate, a corde chasse and hunting knife supporting an emerald bit of turquoise, a jockey with whip up going as mad speed, the cap and jacket powdered with diamonds. Horseshoes of all sorts and sizes are generally indulged in, while the pedunculated red oats wear in their white corded cravats mimic stirrups, bits, and, as in one case, two tiny spurs of gold, with rubies for studs. Saddle bracelets are also worn by some ladies, but the latter are not to be complimented on their taste.

How the ladies manage to get the latest fashions in that part of masculine attire, and are of dark cloth, upon which, in very small patterns, are traced hounds and riders, and a winning post. The tracery ian red upon blue, yellow upon brown, white upon black. The description sounds vulgar, undoubtedly, but the effect itself is not. It is generally that one must be very close to the young man who has such a waistcoat on to make out what the figures are.—Paris Morning News.

Must Be Independent in Reality.

Women may train their daughters in all the ways they imagine to be pleasing to men; they may teach them to wriggle and and a parlor, to look languishingly and roll their eyes and lisp out insipid things between carmine-stained lips, and those men will assert them to flock about the girl who is fully accomplished in these arts, but to them, and who cares very little whether they fall in love with her or not. It is natural, then to wish what they can not get too easily, and women, cheaply themselves who thus "stoop to conquer." But no girl can affect independence. She must be independent in reality, and in order to be so, if she has no fortune in her own right, she must have an occupation that renders her self-essential. Now, girls, consider this fact. The day of tambourine is nearly past. Young men are not going to gobble you up for wives on the strength of any look or manner, for there were women in the

JOTTINGS.

—The regular June meeting of the Borough Council will be held in the council chamber on Friday evening.

—A certificate of incorporation has been filed in the county clerk's office at New Brunswick of the "Middlesex Rifle and Gun Club."

—The Executive Council of the Sanitary Association of the State will hold a meeting at the office of Dr. C. C. English in New Brunswick on June 5th.

—The "Somerset County Central Committee" appointed at the Prohibition convention, consists of George Lamont, A. F. Sutphen and Wm. H. Vactor.

—It is said that the hatters of the city met recently and perfected an organization with John Bray as president; M. Field, secretary; and Asa Vail Treasurer.

—A pleasant incident in connection with the memorial services in Music Hall on Monday was the placing in position of a flag at the head of the "cenotaph" by little Miss Maude Gee.

—Peter Higgins was incarcerated in the borough lockup during yesterday for disorderly conduct. Justice Mattison before whom he was arraigned, liberated him upon payment of the costs.

—Police officer McCue last night arrested James Russell for being drunk and disorderly. This morning he was sentenced to the county jail for 30 days in default of a $10 fine imposed by the city Judge.

—The Public Library will be open here after from 9 a. m. to 12 noon, from 2 to 6 p. m., and from 7.30 to 9 p. m. The Job Male Art Gallery will be open from 10 to 12 in the morning, and from 3 to 5 in the afternoon.

—An action upon contract brought by M. H. French & Sons against George Belcher, which was to have come up before Justice Nolyne on Saturday, has been postponed for one week, partial payment having been made.

—Mr. J. L. Duckworth, Secretary of the Potter Prum Works base ball club, requests us to state that there was only one of the Potter's club took part in the game of ball on Saturday afternoon, Day between the Tuxers and a picked nine.

—The case of Wm. Moore vs. Maurice Daly, Ellen McCarthy, et als., an action brought to recover arrearages in rent for the City Hotel came up before Vice Chancellor Van Fleet in Newark this morning. The case has already been tried three times.

—A sad sight indeed was that witnessed by many people along Front street, Park and North avenues last night, when a neatly-dressed and prepossessing female apparently about 25 years of age, was seen staggering through these thoroughfares. To all appearances the woman was beastly intoxicated, but she is said by some to have been suffering from the effects of opium.

—Complaints have of late been made against a lot of boys and young men who are in the habit of congregating along the brook in the rear of the Harbergar residence on West Front street on Sunday and there spend the day in card playing. On Sunday last Officers Brown and Becker went to the place and routed some 25 or 30 youths, some of them running through the brook in their eagerness to escape arrest.

—A man giving his name as John Hill and his occupation that of a scissors sharpener, applied at the residence of Mr. F. B. Mackenzie, on Green street this morning. He became very abusive and gained admittance to the house by pushing his way past a girl employed by the family. Marshal Backer went to the place and arrested the man. He was subsequently given a hearing before Justice Mattison when he was committed to the Somerville jail for 30 days.

Selling Day at the Industrial School.

To-morrow, Thursday afternoon, the officers of the sewing school will be at the Warren Mission chapel to sell to scholars the garments which have been made by them during the past year. These are not bought with money, but with the merit marks which the children earn from week to week. All scholars who have not redeemed their merit and buy garments must be on hand at four o'clock in the afternoon. EMMA C. CADWELL, Sec.

The Coroner's Inquest.

Coroner Terrill of Elizabeth and a jury empanelled by Constable Smith to inquire into the sudden death of Lawrence O'Neil which occurred at his late home on Short Second street at an early hour on Tuesday morning, a week ago, met in the city court room yesterday morning at ten o'clock. The first witness for the State called was Clarinda P. Winfield, who was stationed at Muhlenberg Hospital, who testified to having been called to the home of deceased early on the morning of his death; when she arrived Mr. O'Neil was in bed with his face downward dead; the stove was partially overturned and various household articles were disarranged; witness noticed that Miss Hyland, the housekeeper, had been drinking.

The next witness called was Ambrose J. Jones, an employee at the hospital, who testified in substance to the foregoing. He also noticed that the woman had been drinking.

Dr. Victor Mewing of Elizabeth testified to having come to the city in answer to a telegram from Patrick Casey. He viewed the remains, and at the request of Mrs. McCarty made an autopsy. The doctor gave in detail the condition in which he found the deceased's internal organs, and stated two ribs removed and he was of the opinion that death resulted from "an acute edima of the lungs;" deceased might have smothered from natural causes.

Mrs. McCarty, a daughter of Mr. O'Neil testified to having arrived at the house at about half-past six o'clock; Mr. O'Neil was dead when she arrived. She suspected foul play and in consequence asked that an autopsy be made.

Miss Hyland, a comely looking woman of about 30 years, testified in substance that Mr. O'Neil came to her room about three o'clock on the morning of Tuesday, May 25th, and told her that he had cramps; witness followed him to his room and applied antidotes and bathed him; she was in the habit of drinking tea in the morning and that morning she had taken nearly a gallon of whiskey in mistake for what she supposed to be tea; deceased died before she had time to summon Mr. Jones at the hospital; which she did, and upon her return to the house found Mr. O'Neil dead.

The case was given to the jury about three o'clock in the afternoon, the shortly rendered a verdict of "Death from natural causes."

Bucking the Tiger.

Prof. Hasbrouck did not give an exhibition last evening because of a mishap which has never occurred to him before and may never occur again. The oxygen with which his calcium light is made escaped during the afternoon through an undiscovered leak in the tank that had contained it. The loss was discovered a few hours before the exhibition, and a messenger was sent at once to New York to obtain more oxygen, but he was too late to do so. The professor was greatly mortified when he appeared upon the stage to apologize for the disappointment and stated that he would gladly have given $100 rather than to have had it occur, but the audience could have their money refunded at the door or he would give the exhibition on the next evening. The audience by unanimously against receiving back their money, but several prominent men in the city urged the professor to come again in the fall. He happened to come here in the midst of the Moody revivals, and after an unusual number of entertainments in quick succession, and despite the extraordinary merit of his exhibition, was compelled to suffer from the public inaction, which Rev. Dr. Vincent in the Methodist church last Sunday evening so clearly showed always occurs, because people have not the strength to bear such a physical and mental strain. The professor's stage is a man of pluck as well as means, and has won admiration which cannot but avail him should he ever visit Plainfield, as he would like to more opportune season. The exhibition Friday evening will probably surpass any yet witnessed.

The Legislature.

The New Jersey Legislature reconvened at Trenton yesterday morning. But little business was done in the morning except to talk over the Governor's statement to-day. The Governor's Message, a long document, was read, with reference to railroad taxation and asking the Legislature to take action on the matter before adjournment.

In the Senate several notices were received and laid over under the rule.

A stringent act requiring fire-escapes on public buildings was among the measures vetoed.

A resolution was adopted providing that the Legislature empowered proceedings be printed in the Senate Journal.

In executive session the following nominations from the Governor were referred:

John Carpenter, jr., of Hunterdon, a Riparian Commissioner, in place of Arthur S. Digby, the New Brunswick defaulter.

Henry C. Gokon, as Judge of the First District Court of Newark.

Robert Hamilton, jr., of Mercer, as Trustee of the New Jersey School for Deaf Mutes.

The Governor vetoed a bill allowing the Board of Aldermen to give the City Solicitor a five-year term of office.

The Governor also appointed Assemblyman William H. Corwin, Col. Duffy, of Essex, and Gottfried Krueger, of Passaic, as the commission to superintend the erection of monuments on the Gettysburg battlefield to mark the positions of the New Jersey regiments which participated in the fighting.

Election of Officers.

The regular annual election of officers for the Muhlenberg Hospital took place in the Hospital building between the hours of eight and nine o'clock in the evening and resulted in the election of the following:

President—J. Evarts Tracy.
First Vice President—W. Rockhill Potts.
Second Vice President—Isaac K. Case.
Secretary—William R. Cock.
Treasurer—Geo. H. Goddard.
Managers—Edward Cooper, R. Cock, Rufus K. Case, E. W. Erickson, John H. Cuthbert, Charles Schipper.
Finance Committee—John M. Whiton, W. R. Potts, Samuel Huntington, W. E. Lowe, John H. Jackson.

Held for the Grand Jury.

Charles Edward Staats, a colored youth about 15 years of age, was arrested this morning and arraigned before the City Judge to answer to a charge of larceny. On Friday last Jacob VanDyke, an aged man left hanging on the fence in front of his lot on West Second street, where he was working, a coat and vest, valued at twelve dollars. Staats is alleged to have carried off the garments for his own use. The police were given a description of the accused and it was finally arrested, as stated, and held in $100 bonds to await the action of the grand jury.

Another Successful Case of Ovariotomy Performed at Muhlenberg Hospital.

Three weeks ago with the assistance of the medical staff, at Muhlenberg Hospital, Dr. G. W. Endicott removed an ovarian tumor from the abdomen of Mrs. Footit, who is 36 years old, and lives on West Third street. The patient had been suffering for six months and had been treated with electricity without any improvement. She then applied to Dr. Endicott for relief. He told her the only chance she had to live longer than two years, was to have the tumor removed, but as she was a delicate woman and the tumor so firmly adherent he could not promise her that the operation would be successful. She then went to Prof. Sands of New York city for advice. He said the tumor was adherent and its removal would be difficult and dangerous, and if operated upon with the greatest skill, she would not have more than one chance in fifty for her life, but could not live more than eighteen months or two years without the operation. Mrs. Footit returned to Plainfield, and with her husband requested Dr. Endicott to perform the operation, which he consented to do.

The doctor told them as the case was very unpromising he would not advise the operation, but if they requested it he would do it, provided, however, that the patient would go to Muhlenberg Hospital and allow the operation to take place there, as the conveniences were much better than in a private house. This she consented to do.

The operation was performed on the 12th ult. with all the antiseptic precautions employed. After opening the abdomen the tumor was found more adherent than was anticipated, which greatly lessened her chances of recovery, and here the skill of the surgeon was called into play. At one time it seemed as though she would not survive the operation, but by prompt and proper action of all present she soon rallied and the operation was completed without the use of more anesthetics. The patient is now able to walk about her room and will leave the hospital next week a convalescent woman.

Great credit should be given Muhlenberg Hospital for saving the life of this woman. There is no home in Plainfield that could have had all the conveniences necessary for such an operation. Is not the Hospital needed in Plainfield?

This is the second successful ovariotomy operation ever accomplished in Plainfield, and both of these were done in Muhlenberg Hospital. Three years ago, the late Dr. Chas. A. Hart had the honor of performing the first successful case.

Another Peculiar Verdict.

In the case of P. Muldoon vs. H. O'Donnell, tried on Saturday last before Justice Vincent W. Nash and the following jury: Wm. Connets, foreman, Peter H. Stryker, Daniel Van Fleet, Thomas Bucklin, George Brown and Jacob Naylor, the facts as brought out were as follows: The plaintiff, Muldoon, sued the defendant, O'Donnell, for a balance of account amounting to $155. The defendant, O'Donnell, filed a set-off amounting to $161. The defendant admitted on examination that the debt was not yet paid in money, but swore that it had been more than paid by money lent to plaintiff at various times and by work performed for plaintiff, at plaintiff's request, as per set-off previously filed. Items in the set off amounting to $161. The jury after a short deliberation returned the peculiar verdict of $147 for the defendant.

The First of the Season.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church a strawberry and ice cream festival will be held in the church parlors under the evening of Wednesday and the following afternoon and evening. Fancy articles in abundance will be offered for sale. A feature by the entertainment will be good music. A nominal admission fee will be charged which with supper has been placed at 50 cents.

PERSONAL.

Sealy Edsall who has been confined to his home for some time past through indisposition, is able to be around again.

The eldest son and a daughter of Mark Lees of Chatham street, have recently recovered from a severe attack of mumps.

W. Alexander Barr, jr., and C. Courtney Moore have returned from their fishing trip to Barnegat Bay, and report plenty of fishing—but very few fish.

St. Mary's Dramatic Society held a second rehearsal of the play "Kathleen Mavourneen" in the presence of a number friends in St. Mary's hall on Monday evening, with very gratifying success.

The talented Madame Alberti has concluded for the summer her lessons in elocution, and will spend her vacation at Alfred Center, N. Y., where her husband is confined by the injuries received nearly a year ago on the railroad.

The directors of the District Telegraph Company have arranged with Mr. C. M. Goddard, to take hold of their plant here and put it, including the Fire Alarm system, into complete and satisfactory running order. This is a step in the right direction, Mr. Goddard is perfectly conversant with the subject of electricity in all its details of electrical work, and the directors have authorized him to spare neither time nor money in making their system here complete and satisfactory to our citizens. Mr. Goddard informs us that he shall give his attention to the fire alarm system, when he proposes to put into such order as will be satisfactory to the firemen, and to have it run so that it can be thoroughly depended on, and the city have a fire alarm that will be of value to them.

The veteran actor, John Gilbert, of Wallack's theatre, is visiting his brother-in-law, William L. Gavett, of this city. Mr. Gilbert stands at present unrivaled, not only in this country but in the world, in his particular line—that of old men—in such characters as "Sir Anthony Absolute," "Sir Anthony Absolute," "Old Dornton," "Mr. Hardcastle," etc. The residents of this city will undoubtedly esteem it a pleasure the coming season to witness Mr. Gilbert's acting in some of those parts, supported by the other members of Wallack's company. Mr. Gilbert is endeared to the hearts of the American people, not only by his magnificent acting, but by his honorable and upright life ever since his first appearance on the American stage, and his name will rank in the future, as now, among the brightest stars of the profession.

The London Artificial Stone Works.

W. R. Warner & Co. are now engaged in making and laying the London artificial stone walks around Charles C. Potter's, jr., new house and stable on West Seventh street; also a serpentine foot walk one hundred feet long on a line of the road way leading from the house to the street, which has a twelve-inch curb. The main walk from the front of the house over fifty feet long and eight feet wide has the appearance of one large flat stone. These are said to be the only walks of the kind put down in this section of the country, and consequently excite much admiration from our citizens. These pavements and side-walks are about nine inches thick, and are made of the best imported Portland cement. Hundreds of these walks have been laid in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and other cities and towns throughout the country, and are recommended by the leading architects of all large cities. The walks do not be an instance known in the past eighteen years where the frost has upheaved one of the walks put down by this company.

Death of a Prominent Politician.

Culver Barcalow, a noted politician of Somerset county died at his home in Somerville at six o'clock last evening. He had been failing since Friday morning and was thought to be convalescent until within a short time of his death, which was caused by paralysis of the heart. He carried on the drug business in Somerville in former years, and was latterly engaged in the same business under the firm name of C. Barcalow & Co.

In politics he was a stalwart Republican and was appointed postmaster by President Lincoln and held that position until Gen. Grant gave him the appointment of collector of internal revenue, which office he held until President Cleveland came in office. At the time of his death he was a director in the Somerset County Bank, First National Bank, Home Savings Bank, Somerville Water Company and the Raritan Water Power Company. He was about sixty-five years of age and leaves a wife, two children, one son and two daughters. He leaves an estate valued at $1,000,000.

A Masonic Reception.

Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., has invited St. John's Commandery Knights Templar of Elizabeth, and Damascus Commandery Knights Templar of Newark, to be their guests on the evening of Ascension Day, June 3, for the purpose of attending divine service in Grace Church. It is expected that 150 Sir Knights will be present in full uniform. They will arrive here at seven o'clock. A short street parade will take place after the services, starting from the depot they will pass down Park place street to Front, to Madison avenue; thence they will countermarch to Park avenue, through Park avenue to Ninth street, to Franklin Place to Second avenue, through Le Grande avenue and Seventh street to Sycamore street, to Grace church, arriving at the depot. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Cornelius H. Twing of Calvary Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. After the services the Sir Knights and other invited masonic brethren will be entertained at the rooms of Anchor Lodge.

NEW MARKET.

Rev. Mr. Cubberly has been absent from town visiting the Baptist meeting at Asbury Park.

The Sunday school of the First Baptist church are making preparations for children's day.

We noticed one flag, beautifully festooned, on the residence of Miss Sarah Rogers' Decoration Day.

Mr. Voorhees of Lacey, Va., is a new comer here. He is painting the new mantel factory of C. T. Rogers.

New Market sent six delegates to the Sunday School Association at Westfield. Reports to say they were all Sabbath school delegates.

The Seventh-Day people have been fixing up their church, giving it quite a new and pleasing appearance. Many minor improvements in the yards speak of the on-coming anniversary to be held in this place this and the next week following.

The Seventh-Day Baptist Eastern Association will hold meetings in the church here, beginning June 3d and ending June 6th. The program for the first day will include a sermon by Rev. Jeremiah Ellis, Rockville, Ct., appointments of committees, etc. Arrangements have been made to meet all delegates at the depot.

As John Stelle was driving to the station Monday, the horse evidently thought it was Sunday when he passed the Baptist church, turning in so quickly as to cause Stelle to upset the buggy, throwing the occupants, Mr. and Mrs. John Stelle and their little daughter, against the fence. Mr. Stelle, however, took a circle around the church, leaving everything but the shafts within easy reach, taking the horse by the head and thus bringing quite a commotion in our quiet village. Fortunately no one was seriously injured.

WESTFIELD.

The Misses Maggie and Sarah O'Doud of this place spent Sunday with friends on East Third street, Plainfield.

Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of Oscar M. Arnold of Cranford, died on Tuesday morning, aged 46 years. Mrs. Arnold had been an invalid for some years.

Assessor Marsh has just completed the annual assessment of School Districts, No. 10, and finds there are 548 between the age of five and eight years; the lowest number is 88, between the ages of six and six years. The number of children are between the ages of eleven and twelve years, of which there are 64.

The annual meeting of Wm. Dodd Post G. A. R. Post rode up to Fairview cemetery Monday morning to decorate graves. The occasion was of double interest, combining a lack of interest by our public, which is partly the fault of the Post in not calling attention to it in time for preparation.

At the regular meeting of Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, the subject of a Fourth of July celebration was brought up and a committee of five, consisting of R. S. Wetherill, Charles R. Clark, J. R. C. Marsh, Joseph Moffett and C. F. W. Wittke, was appointed to take the matter in charge and confer with like committees of the other companies, if they wish to join in the proposed plan of a pleasant day and bring some life into town.

The examination of Chas. Forsyth, (colored), charged by his former employer, George Thatcher, with embezzlement, took place yesterday afternoon before Justice Jacquet. The only witness present, Joseph Perry, was for the complainant, who swore that he did not receive the money, neither made out the bill, or gave his receipt therefor. Justice Jacquet committed the prisoner to the county jail, he not being able to furnish bail, to await the action of the grand jury.

Circumstances Attending the Death of Young Bayard at Mount Vesuvius.

The subject of presentiment concerning death and its finality in families spoken of in Hancock's race records and points in the Bayard history. Few families have been more deported by sudden death than the Bayards, and many instances there have been forewarnings and presentiments. It is said that Miss Bayard wrote a letter indicating her approaching death. There are now in Washington many oral oral officers who remember the interesting circumstances attending the death of Miss Bayard's cousin, Charles Bayard, the father of Senator Bayard. He was the fave its son of Richard Bayard, of Philadelphia, whose father and Secretary Bayard's father were brothers

In 1841, while on board the United States ship Congress, in company with several young friends from on board, he made the ascent of Mt. Vesuvius. The ship Congress that went down in Hampton Roads before the Merrimac, and in the party was the same Joseph Smith, who, as commander of the Congress, had his head taken off by a cannon ball, and of whom his father said, when he heard that the Congress was lost, "Then Joe is dead." In the party also was Lehman B. Ashmead, of Philadelphia, with whom young Bayard afterward went to Jerusalem to visit the Holy Sepulchre. While there they both had tattooed on their arms by an old dragoman the heraldic arms of Jerusalem, with the motto, "Dieu le veut," in the word. In the party young Bayard the tattooed crowd developed virulent features. Festered, and finally he became sick and the arm became greatly swollen. Finally it was thought he had lost would die, and even after it appeared to grow entirely well he was in the habit of saying that it ailmened and other friends "This arm will be the death of me yet."

Ten years afterward young Bayard left for a cruise in the Columbia, as flag lieutenant, and Colonel Morris, who was leaving he took a and farewell of all his friends here, and declared to one and all that "they would never see him again." He was very dejected and despondent. Ten years to a day from his previous visit, in company with young Carroll Tucker, of Maryland, and a few others, he ascended, being then at Naples, he made the ascent of Vesuvius during an eruption. With him were Rear Admiral Stockton and Rear Admiral Shubrick, who were then lieutenants. He had the arm of a Prussian army officer. He was quite gay. Just near the Hermitage where he had been ten years before, he leaned, stopped, finding it would be dangerous to go nearer the crater. As they were turning, a mass of lava and rock struck young Bayard on the arm where he had been tattooed, vanting it fearfully and obliterating the cross and before the party could reach the foot of the volcano he died. His mother is still living, upward of 90 years of age. His body is buried near the foot of Vesuvius.—Philadelphia Times.

JOHN KELLY DEAD.

The Great Tammany Chieftain Peacefully Passes Away.

END OF AN EVENTFUL LIFE.

His Nervous System Gives Down From Overwork.

Meeting His Final Dissolution with Full Knowledge of Its Near Approach—The Sacraments of Religion Administered On His Last Day of Life—Career of a Remarkable and Honored Citizen.

NEW YORK, June 2.—John Kelly, the Tammany chieftain, died yesterday afternoon at his home in this city. Dr. Edward J. Keyes and Dr. Alexander, who had been constantly attended Mr. Kelly, saw two days ago that he could not last much longer. Mr. Kelly also knew that death was near. On Monday he spoke calmly of it to Dr. Keyes. The cause of his death, the physicians say, was general failure of nerve force and vitality, without any known form of organ. There was no special disease. His breaking down was caused by overwork.

JOHN KELLY.

Apparently he was getting stronger about three weeks ago, but during a week from Sunday he suddenly showed signs of a change for the worse. At 1 o'clock Monday morning the nurse noticed that Mr. Kelly was growing weaker. Dr. Alexander, who has constantly attended Mr. Kelly, saw two days ago that he could not last much longer. Mr. Kelly also knew that death was near. On Monday he spoke calmly of it to Dr. Keyes. The cause of his death, the physicians say, was general failure of nerve force and vitality, without any known form of organ. There was no special disease. His breaking down was caused by overwork.

ELECTED TO CONGRESS.

Became the Friend and Companion of Alexander H. Stevens.

In 1854 he ran against Mike Walsh for congress. Walsh claimed that Kelly's friends counted him out by juggling with the ballot box. He contested the election for several days, and when a notice of contest appeared he threatened to kick the process server down stairs. The process was never heard of again, and Kelly took his seat. He chiefly noted for his savage onslaughts upon the Know Nothings and his defense of Irish Catholics, against and again protesting that the free fundamentals of America were not endangered by the Roman priesthood or by immigration. He also secured the confirmation of Augustus Schell as collector of the port of New York. For the second time he was elected to congress, and his squat but sturdy figure began to appear prominently in the old-time scenes of the House. Alexander H. Stevens became his warm friend and admirer, and a curious pair the two cronies were as they walked about the streets of the capital together.

ELECTED SHERIFF,

He Resigned From Congress to Accept the New Office.

The fierce opposition of John Kelly made Tweed wince. Those were days when a man who had gone through the furnace of religious and race oppression, and who had, in a sense, been martyr to the cause of Irish Catholics and Germans, could wield a vast influence.

Tweed put one finger on the side of his nose and closed his eyes. That was in 1858. The next thing that happened was that John Kelly was nominated for sheriff and was supported vigorously by Tammany. And he was elected by a large majority. He resigned from congress to take his new elected sheriff's office, and when Mr. Lynch left the office Mr. Kelly was elected to it by a plurality over the Republican competitor of nearly 6,000 votes. His second term expired Dec. 31, 1867.

It is said by the old leader's most intimate friends that during his terms as sheriff Kelly made, honestly and fairly, over $800,000.

A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR.

The next step in the municipal intrigues was the nomination of Kelly by the Democratic convention of 1870 for the office of mayor against A. Oakey Hall, the candidate of the Tweed ring. Only Tweed and Hall Kelly were again face to face and enemies. Although the ring candidate, Kelly went to this fight were Andrew H. Green, Samuel J. Tilden, Augustus Schell and Nelson J. Waterbury. The sturdy leader was stiff in the fight this time. He had a belief of his nomination he went before the Democratic county convention and made a burning, bitter speech, full of scorn and anger, denouncing Tweed and Sweeny and the other rascals whose dishonesty was eating out the heart of good government.

Nobody knows how it happened. Some say that Kelly yielded to Tweed, but most men say that Kelly broke down physically and mentally. It was true that the leader's wife and son died about the time his own health was impaired. He was afflicted with insomnia and nothing could bring rest to his tortured brain. The middle-aged Kelly sailed for Europe with his two daughters, and spent three years traveling in Ireland, Italy and the Holy Land. It was rumored that he had become a skeptic and had abjured the world and its frivolities.

HIS RETURN FROM EUROPE.

He Again Entered the Political Fight Against Tweed.

Wifeless and childless, John Kelly returned from his wanderings in the fall of 1871. Charles O'Conor and Tilden had opened their terrible battle against the Tweed ring, and Kelly became associated with the nose of the conflict. Hardly had John Kelly appeared in the metropolis than he was surrounded by the best men in the Democratic party, who begged him to enter Tammany Hall and smash the corrupt men sitting in its high places. Some came to Kelly and implored him to do it. Some of the men who urged their influence in this direction were Mr. Tilden, Horatio Seymour, Charles O'Conor, Abram S. Hewitt, Samuel Tilden Church, Augustus Schell, De Witt C. West, Chief Justice Ruger, Senator Gorman, of Maryland; Samuel J. Randall, Thomas F. Bayard, William Butler Duncan, Congressman Hurd, of Ohio; Judge Henry Hilton, and a host of other powerful Democrats of the metropolis and of the country.

It was plain to every one that John Kelly was the man for the hour. Yielding to the appeals of the Democratic leaders he entered Tammany Hall in good time several successions when his life was threatened by the hireling of the Tweed ring.

HE KNOW NOTHING RIOT.

In the K. N. bolting Kelly came to the front as a champion of Irish Catholics, and drafted the set of Patrick's cathedral at the head of an armed force, under the supervision of Bishop Dubois, to protect the men who attempted to burn it down. Later on he tested the right of Irish-Americans to the ballot by running for the office of mayor, and signing when elected alderman in 1853. He was a well-known figure in the old Volunteer Fire department, which was then in its zenith, and his herculean strength and great courage were frequently talked of by the entire town. His fearlessness, later in life, was shown in grand style on several occasions when his life was threatened by the hireling of the Tweed ring.

FIRST CONFLICTS WITH TWEED.

Mr. Kelly's First Entrance Into the Political Field.

Mr. Kelly's first venture in politics was when he ran as a stump candidate for ward assessor against the Tammany Hall candidate, Mr. He was defeated, but his enthusiasm in politics was aroused. Again he was set up as a builder for official honors against the candidate of Tammany—this time for assistant alderman—and again he was defeated. While Kelly was rising among the young men of the Fourteenth ward, Tweed was becoming as the white flower of the Seventh ward. Kelly and Tweed were leaders, but were enemies. Nature made them opponents. Had Tweed been an honest man, or had Kelly been a rascal, there a little doubt that they would have be a political partners. Circumstances drifted these two men together again and again during their lives.

IN TAMMANY HALL.

Mr. Kelly's first appearance in Tammany Hall was as a delegate to the county convention. At that time old Isaac Fowler was the dominant spirit of Tammany Hall and waged war with Augustus Schell in its councils. He took a great fancy to Mr. Kelly, and the latter ran a ticket in the Fourteenth ward primary in Fowler's interests. Fowler controlled the Tammany machine, and for the first time in the history of the organization the Tammany society, or Columbian order, interfered with the political branch. Fowler won the battle, and Kelly was elected to Tammany hall the board of aldermen by a good majority. This was in 1853. Too hard fisted mechanic made his power felt in a very short time and was recognized as the leader of the Fourteenth ward, the hottest political district in the city and the stronghold of the Irish

CANADIAN SENTIMENT.

THE POSITION OF THE DOMINION GOVERNMENT DEFINED.

Great Britain Somewhat Ignored in Counting the Parties to the Fishery Dispute—The Real Object of the Present Agitation Hinted At.

MONTREAL, June 2.—There is a very independent spirit manifested by the Canadians in the discussion of the fishery question. "This matter will be settled as Canada wants it to be or not at all," said Hon. Peter Mitchell, member of parliament and ex-minister of marine and fisheries. "It will not be as England says, but as Canada wishes, the Granville and Chamberlayne to the contrary notwithstanding. England dare not oppose us in this. We know our rights and shall maintain them at whatever cost. I do not mean to infer that Canada desires a tilt with the United States. On the contrary, the interests of the two countries are so closely allied that it is to our interests to be on the most friendly terms. I do not think there is anything in the present situation to give cause for serious apprehension, and I believe that the whole matter will be adjusted amicably; but in the meantime there are certain things that must be considered.

"I know that most American statesmen regard Canada simply as a dependency of Great Britain, and that we will be forced to do just what she says. They were never more mistaken. We have a large country, and the time has passed when our rights can be ignored with impunity by the mother country. The Canada of to-day is not the Canada of twenty years ago, and the English leaders will make the discovery if they attempt to trifle with our interests. As to the seizure of the David J. Adams in the first instance, I have taken the ground from the start that the seizure was first made without any authority of law. She was seized first for buying bait, and when it was found that she could not be held legally on that ground the charge was changed to a violation of the revenue laws for being more than twenty-four hours in port without making entry at the custom house.

"In my judgment, it was undignified for a great government to first seize a vessel on one pretext, and then, finding that would not do, to detain her on another. The subsequent seizures on account of purchasing bait should be returned to their owners, and due reparation made for the unjustified. While those seizures were ill-advised and illegal, the principle is one that will be promptly sustained by every Canadian. The act of 1818 was passed in the interest of the years before, provided no penalty for the mere purchase of bait in Canadian ports by foreigners. What is why the seizure of the Adams was illegal. A law was recently passed by the Ottawa parliament, and which will receive the approval of the governor general in a day or two, which is to provide for this omission in regard to the purchasing of bait by foreigners, under penalty of forfeiture of their vessels. But my opinion is that such a law is unnecessary, as that is being a violation of our commercial obligations.

"I do not see how we can assume that the mere act of buying bait by a Yankee can justify implies that we have a right to use it in Canadian waters. The Americans will be prevented from fishing in our waters unless they grant us some reciprocal benefit. We do not propose to sell our fish without receiving for nothing. I do not say that we will only be satisfied with the conditions of the old Washington treaty, but we will insist upon a commission to discuss the matter, and determine what is right and fair for both parties. The Washington treaty may have hurt a few New England fishermen, but it gave the great bulk of your people cheap fish."

"What conditions will Canada demand in the event of a settlement?"

"A free entry for her fish into American ports; also lumber and other commodities—in other words, something commensurate with the privileges Canada grants to the United States. Unless something is done by the American congress your fishermen will be driven forcibly if necessary, out of our waters. No party could remain in power a day in Canada that would permit any other course. It is more than probable that Senator Frye is not working so much in the interests of the New England fishermen as he is to stir up bad feeling against Canada and defeat the section of the new tariff bill before congress placing Canadian lumber on the free list.

Asked about the threatened secession of Nova Scotia, Mr. Mitchell said that it would be impossible. The Canadian provinces were bound as firmly together as our states in the Union, and any overt act of secession would be summarily suppressed.

They Burned a Babe.

LITTLE ROCK, June 1.—John Bunch and Ike, residing near Pocahontas, Ark., have been arrested, charged with murdering their daughter's illegitimate child. The girl seems to have anticipated her fate, for she told a friend that she deserved to leave home before illness, for four her parents would kill her babe. After murdering the babe, they burned it to ashes. The affair had created much excitement.

THE MATTHEWS CASE.

Committee at Washington Giving the Senate Information.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Mr. James C. Matthews, whose nomination for recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia has been hung up in the senate district committee for a long time, came to Washington to give the committee a chance to question him in person concerning the charges which have been filed against him. He was accompanied by a number of friends, colored and white, who were anxious to satisfy the committee that he was all right. It is said to be confirmed for the place President Cleveland proposes to have him fill. Several other persons from Albany and other places were also in town on business connected with the Matthews case. They had been subpoenaed by the committee to come and tell whether they knew that Mr. Matthews had threatened to have colored men employed at the capitol in Albany discharged unless they voted the Democratic ticket, this being the special charge filed against Mr. Matthews. All these witnesses were heard by two members of the committee—Mr. Ingalls and Mr. Harris—who took the testimony without any closed doors. Each witness was received alone, and after each had answered the questions put to him Mr. Matthews was admitted. He denied emphatically that he had ever engaged in the sort of political work charged against him, and presented the evidence of Pastor Stevenson of the African Methodist Episcopal church of Albany, the Rev. Mr. Derrick, of New York, and other gentlemen, that he was not that sort of a politician. Mr. Matthews's case will probably go over until next autumn, that a colored man named Cook was the only witness who had anything to say of his own knowledge against him. Cook testified that he was a capitol employe he was told by Matthews that if he voted the Republican ticket Matthews would have him di charged. He voted the ticket, Matthews did, and was discharged. The witness did not care to swear that Matthews had him dismissed, but he thought that was the case. That is the strongest evidence against the nominee. Whether or not it will furnish the full committee a reason to report against confirming Mr. Matthews remains to be seen.

HOME RULE DEFINED.

Mr. Blaine Gives His Views to a Portland Audience.

PORTLAND, June 2.—In the course of his remarks last night on home rule Mr. Blaine said:

YOUR EXCELLENCY: Directly after the publication of the call for this meeting I received a letter from a friend of William in an adjacent county asking me to explain, if I could, just what the Irish question is. I appreciate the question, or rather I appreciate his request for an explanation of a question that calls forth so much sympathy and sentiment on the part of the world at large and evokes so much opposition on the part of those who are directly interested. There may be danger of not giving attention enough to the simple elementary facts of the case. Now, what is home rule? Why, it is what every state and territory of the United States enjoys (applause) and it is what Ireland does not enjoy. In the parliament of 658 members, Great Britain has 653 and Ireland has 105, and except with the consent of that parliament Ireland cannot legislate a single hour. (Laughter), or a horse railroad company, or a ferry over a stream (laughter), or do the slightest thing that implies legislative power. Now, suppose we should propose that the state of the state of Maine should be linked with the state of New York, relatively as large with the state of Maine as England in numbers with Ireland, and your beautiful river could not take a step for its own improvement, nor the state of Maine organize an association of any kind, unless the overbearing majority of the New York legislature gave her consent, how long do you think the people of Maine would stand it? (Applause.)

Eight Hours for Letter Carriers.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The senate has passed the bill extending the eight hour law to letter carriers.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—For the district bordering on the Atlantic, generally fair, slightly warmer weather.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to
"Eighteen Dollars"
per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and can not depend upon an assessment. There are no Membership Fees or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $25 a year for a $5,000 policy or $25 for a $10,000 policy, and the contract is backed by assets of over $600,000. The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims and has never passed a dividend but has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $562,195.91 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over 600,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. ### QUESTIONS.

To question of the silence vast,
Of souls that people distant spheres;
What of their future and their past?
Have they our sorrows, joys and fears?
Do the same flowers quake on their sight
The same birds sing? On their great seas
Do ships like ours, with canvas white,
Move stately, answering the breeze?

Have they their Christ, their Christmas Day?
Know they Mahomet! Buddha! One,
Or all or none? And do they pray?
And have they wrought as we have done
We can not guess—'t is hard indeed,
Our own orb's tale of life dim past,
Through centuries untold to read,
And who its future shall forecast!

We know the hand that holds in check
The whirling world, as 'a in its course,
And saves the universe from wreck
And peril—this tremendous Force
Holds likewise all our little lives:—
The sun- and stars do all obey
His bidding—unseen strings of wire
To swerve from its appointed way.

The dangerous bone alone to us
Is given—to choose 'twixt ill and well,
Rebellion or obedience—thus
To build our heaven or dig our hell.
But each great thought of our strength up holds;
Nothing shall perish Though His rod
Smites every first-born still and dire
His own—God's souls are safe with God.
—Celia Thaxter in Cottage Hearth.

LEADING THEM INTO TEMPTATION.

How a Detroit Merchant Tests the Honesty of His Customers.

"That's the tenth one this forenoon," said a Woodward avenue florist to another day, as a woman hurriedly passed out.

"What—tenth woman?"

"No; tenth portemonnaie."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, this house bought a job lot of portemonnaies last spring, and we got one on cheap—had we known it would almost give them away! A few days ago I took it into my head to see how many of our customers were honest, and I stuffed a portemonnaie with paper and left it on the silk counter. It was slyly pocketed by the first lady who discovered it, and she is the wife of a man worth $50,000."

"And the next?"

"Well, we lose an average of twenty portemonnaies a day. That means we have twenty ladies come in here who are thieves, for it is theft to gobble up lost or mislaid property without saying anything about it."

"It must be interesting to watch 'em!"

"It is. Now and then a woman will observe the article and hand it over to the clerk, but that is the exception. I have seen a woman work for half an hour to get the portemonnaie in her pocket or shopping bag. But that isn't where the fun comes in."

"Where is it?"

"Why, on a slip of paper stuffed into the little wallet I write: 'Stolen from the counter of ——— & Co.' At least one half the wallets are returned. There comes a lady now.

She was a well-dressed and respectable looking lady. She had a portemonnaie in her hand and a smile on her face, and as she came near she sweetly said:

"Boy, perhaps I am trading here this morning. I accidentally picked up this purse on some way. I presume it contains money. I have not opened it. Please tell the loser that it was all a mistake, and I am sorry if I put her to any trouble."

"Very well, ma am."

"That was well done," said the reporter as the lady left.

"Yes, fairly well, but it's story they all tell. She opened the portemonnaie, saw the post-up job and tries to play off innocent in returning it. You can't blame her, you know, but nevertheless a lost wallet will tempt human nature sooner than any other bait I know of."—Detroit Free Press.

Had Something to Live for.

A prominent citizen of southeastern Dakota was thrown violently, injured in a railroad accident. While awaiting the arrival of physicians the Dakotian grew very weak from loss of blood.

"I'm getting terribly weak—don't believe I can stand it much longer," he said.

"It won't be long now, try and bear up," said a friend who was with him.

"But—I—I—can't—I know I'm just about gone."

"Oh, no you aren't—they'll soon be here, just make up your mind that you're all right."

"I can't, I know I can't stand it any longer."

"Hold on, don't talk that way—remember your wife and children, you know—"

"Oh—yes—I tell you good-bye," and his head sunk down.

"But, say, Bill, try and hold out a little longer, you know that lay horse of yourn—"

"Hey!" demanded the dying man.

"That big bay horse—I believe I can give you a good trade for him—mate for your sor'l."

"Match my sor'l mare. Well, if you can do that I believe I can hold out a little longer."—Estelline (D. T.) Bell.

Turning the Tables on Them.

Mr. F. W. Bennett, of Frelighsburg, Canada, seeks to turn the tables on his critics in this way: "During my late sickness I was doctored thirty-one days by three medics, and before it was discovered that I had the small pox the disease was scattered in different parts of the town. Now there is no case for raid because some of the people that called caught the vaccine and died. They say it was because I was not vaccinated, but it is a poor rule that won't work both ways, and if those that died had been vaccinated they would not have caught the disease."—Chicago Tribune.

The Work of the Orchestra.

An old violinist who has played in old theatre orchestra seldom gets full credit for the quality of its work. People complain if the music is not as it as suits their individual taste, but a good leader must have regard to the entire audience and not to single members of it. For this reason his selections are usually made from a wide range, so that he may have something suited to every taste. Yet, however perfectly a piece may be performed, if the music does not please the listener he visits his displeasure upon the orchestra.—Chicago Journal.

When Watterson Is at Work.

When Henry Watterson reads he uses a magnifying glass. When he writes he takes off his coat and goes at it with a vim. He is a bundle of activity. His talking fast goes on the trot, and steps hard. He has fits of laziness, in which he ceases writing.—Frank Leslie's.

A College Scholarship on Condition.

Dartmouth has received a $4,000 scholarship on the condition that no student who uses tobacco shall ever derive any benefit from it.

Appropriate sign for church in need of musicians: "Wanted—Singers: in choir within."

Girls' Aprons.

Aprons are very fashionable for little girls, and becoming so for ladies also. Here are some of the prettiest patterns we have seen:

Fig. 1.

Fig. 1 is an apron for a girl of 10 to 12 years old. It is of white or colored linen or cotton goods. It is trimmed with embroidery. The design is so simple that it needs no explanation.

Fig. 2 shows an apron for a smaller girl. It is cut very full in front. A casing is run upon the under side, both at the neck and waist. The skirt is stitched across so as to divide it into two or three casings. Tapes are run into them, the gathers are drawn to the proper size, and the tapes are tied. The garment is buttoned down the back to the waist. There strings two inches wide tie the backs in a double bow.

Rose Perfume.

I would suggest to our readers a habit I have had for forty years, which gives my writing materials and clothing a delicious, pleasant perfume. I get full-blown roses, pluck them just before the leaves begin to fall, pull them to pieces and place over them a newspaper, which lies on the bottom of my dressing case drawers. I then lay my clothes upon the paper.

Another Perfume.

A very delightful perfume may be made from rose leaves and other fragrant flowers, and this would be a good idea for society belles who receive so many floral offerings during the season. Should any one of these young ladies save up the rose leaves from the bouquets which she often receives, the required "peck of leaves" would have been obtained. When a half peck is obtained, take a large bowl and strew table salt on the bottom; then three handfuls of leaves, and repeat until all the leaves are used, covering the top with salt. Let this remain five days, stirring and turning twice a day, when they should appear moist. Add three ounces of bruised or coarse-powdered allspice; one ounce of cinnamon stick bruised, which form the stock. Allow to remain a week, turning daily from top to bottom. Put into the permanent jar one ounce allspice and adding the stock, layer by layer, sprinkle between the leaves the following mixture: One ounce each cloves and cinnamon, two nutmegs, all coarsely powdered; some ginger root, sliced thin; half an ounce of anised, bruised; ten grains finest powdered musk; three drops of the lavender flowers; two ounces powdered or finely sliced orris root, and essential oils ad libitum; also any fine colognes, rose or orange flower water, or tincture benzoin, if you prefer dried violets, tuberoses, clove pinks or other highly scented flowers should be added each year in season. Fine extracts of any kind will enhance the fragrance, while fresh flowers, leaves, salt and allspice, made as before, must be added when convenient in the rose season. Shake and stir the jar once or twice a week, and open only during the day. The delightful effect produced throughout the dwelling by the daily use of these jars is not as universally known as it should be.

Bows.

"Bows and continually bows" is the constant cry of fashion. The reference to the trimming of a hat, or dress of any sort. Bows are worn in the hair, at the waistband, on the shoulder! Indeed, there is scarcely anything that requires such a finishing touch, a coquettish bow, which gives the plainest style of hairdressing a festive appearance, and the dress or robe an additional finish, and can itself be so easily made. Sometimes we see the well known Alsace bow, with its broad dark ribbons, sometimes little pyramid shaped bows made of a quantity of narrow ribbon, also of different colored ribbons, or a full rosette made of loops and cut out ends of ribbon, which usually finds its place in the hair, while for trimming the shoulders tied bows made of soft ribbon, with long falling ends, have the greatest preference. Very small bows without ends made in graduated sizes "a l'echelle," as they were called in the time of Louis XV, and used for trimming the stomacher part of the bodice, as well as the back of the dress, are especially charming. They should always be made of some light material, such as gauze, tulle or lace, or these their peculiar style of beauty. We have already informed our readers that bandeaus bows may be made, according to taste, in one or more harmonizing colors, and ribbon of almost every make or shade may be advantageously used for these highly fashionable and popular adornments. —The Season.

Traveling Cloak.

This stylish and useful garment may be made of any material—flannel, cloth, linen or mohair. It is called the square-sleeved cloak.

SQUARE SLEEVED CLOAK.

This long cloak is made of dark colored English cloth, dark blue with a wide grayish blue band. The model is lined with plaid silk. The model is so cut that the woven bands in the fabric border the front and bottom; bands are sewed along the back, and the shoulder corners of the fronts and back are faced with a piece of the border to outline a yoke. Plait the front and back as shown in the illustration. Sew the plaits together all the middle of the back in the waist. An inner belt confines the back at the waist.

White Hands.

White hands are coming in fashion again, lawn hands, boating and all the masculine accomplishments having for a time driven women to seek publicity to redden their hands. Chapped and red hands are never pretty. The daughters of fashion now have dishes of hot water, chapped lips a flower bed, on their dressing tables, in which they steep their hands for awhile before going to bed, then anoint them with vaseline and put on gloves lined with a preparation of cold cream. These gloves should be of wash-leather and several sizes too large for the hand. In the morning wash the hands with almond powder water, and in hot water and chalk, afterward dipping them for a moment in cold water to prevent chapping. Then rub them from the finger tips back to the wrist. If a manicure is not brought in for the nails an ivory instrument should be used for the pushing back of the skin from the root of the nail, and each nail carefully trimmed with a sharp knife, then rubbed with a soft pad of chamois skin.

Paris Styles.

For undress toilets for little girls, young ladies and a few youthful dames, plaid stuffs are reappearing, but only for the skirt, the corsage being invariably of jersey cloth, or of a material to match the skirt, jersey cloth, of a color to match the lightest tint in the plaid stuff of the skirt.

There are many models to be seen with cashmere stripes in designs that imitate embroidery. These are used more particularly for the skirt and plastron of a dress, while the corsage pardessus and the sleeves, the basque and the overskirt are of a plain stuff of the color of the ground in the striped fabric, with trimming of the striped material. With such costumes the overskirt is always much open, spreading widely on one side to display the skirt beneath.—Harper's Bazar.

Wedding Anniversaries.

Wedding anniversaries are: First year, cotton wedding; second year, paper wedding; third year, leather wedding; fifth year, wooden wedding; seventh year, woolen wedding; tenth year, tin wedding; twelfth year, the wedding of silk and fine linen; the crystal wedding is fifteenth; skip the twentieth, and have a china wedding at the twenty-first anniversary; the silver wedding comes at the end of the twenty-fifth year; the pearl wedding is thirtieth anniversary; the ruby wedding is the fortieth, and the golden wedding the fiftieth; the diamond wedding is the sixtieth.

FASHIONLETS.

Tucks are revived.

Colored ribbon bows upon cream color and white dresses are very pretty.

High-shouldered sleeves have gone out of fashion.

The long, wrinkled apron front is still universally fashionable.

Infants are put in short clothes much younger than formerly—as early as four months old.

A novelty in lace, which is very attractive and not expensive, is the finest silk muslin embroidered in white silk floss and a very delicate, fine, wool thread. The muslin is so fine and thin that one cannot imagine how it could hold embroidery, and the effect of the wool and silk stitches is exquisite.

Redfern Dress Designs.

The following are selected from some designs kindly sent us by the Redfern' New York house. They are quite new, having just arrived from Paris:

They are very stylish and quite unlike most of the patterns that have been issued heretofore. The designs need no particular explanation. They are chiefly made, with large tournures and are very high in the back. The gigantic tournure is especially noticeable. It is evidently to be a tremendous splurge, so to speak, of the bustle before it vanishes altogether. The gown on the left is of plain wool or gingham goods, with shirred plaited on the sides and back, and draped very high and full. The plain front is braided and fastened with large buttons at one or both sides. Basque cut with vest front and collar. Wrist and sleeves at the wrist braided to match skirt.

REDFERN SUMMER GOWNS.

The gown on the right is more elaborate, though still simple, is rather elegant. It is a combination plain and flowered goods, trimmed with a plain, darker color in panels, and on the revers at the waist, and on the cuffs and collar. The skirt at the back is plain. Over it is a long polonaise, draped slightly at the back. It is open at the side of the waist, fully exposing the combination of the revers. It is fastened by small buttons placed out of sight. The front of the polonaise is cut in one piece. At the side where the opening is, a portion of it is hooked in folds under the back, just below the waist. This gives the graceful, wrinkled apron front now so fashionable. The folds are gathered closely, almost like a knot, at the point where the front is lapped under the side.

Men's Clothes.

The new materials for men's spring and summer clothing show a preference for light colors, and the use of plaids and stripes. In cutting the sack coats, however, no change is made to open lower at the neck, showing more of the scarf and something of the shirt bosom. Such coats are also slightly curved in at the waist in English fashion. Trousers are wider, and are quite straight.

The only change in evening dress suits is the more frequent use of white vests. Black vests are of course still worn, and three or four vests are sometimes sent home with each black dress coat. White satin vests have a slight line of embroidery as a border in the fine needlework done in convents; black satin and cloth vests are similarly wrought. A new shallow-tail coat is of the fine black cloth called cashmere, and is cut with very low lapels widely faced with silk; the trousers are of the same cloth.

Neat, light blue jackets for the country are made of homespun and cheviots in large plaids of gray, brown and mixed colors. The tasteful jacket has wide box plaits and knee breeches to be worn with ribbed stockings. The regular shooting suits and the country suits worn by Englishmen are of tan and yellowish brown, in blocks or checks, or plaided with red, green or blue; a plaited cape, belted coat, with a cap to match. The very large trousers are then caught in at the knees with a wide band of double, and are worn with long buttoned gaiters of the dog-skin.

Cream white grounds are the fancy of the moment for neckties for all hours of the day and evening. They come in long strips two inches wide, and may be tied in a four-in-hand or in the slender, small, ready-tied knot called the sailor's knot. Some flat folded scarfs are shown, but these are also now made narrower, and the puffy scarf is pandowdy. These come in plain cream white satin, Chinese crape, or ottoman silk for day weddings and receptions. For more general wear, they have dark checks, dots or cold cream, or fanciful small figures of color—blue, black, brown or red—and are made of silk, surah, foulard, Cashlon, or organdie of fine lawn finish. White polka dot scarfs are shown in the same shape, embroidered with white or colored dots.

Plain shield-shaped shirt bosoms are still made of three thicknesses of linen, without ornamental stitching. These are fastened by two studs of white enamel, and are worn for day and evening alike.

Black socks remain in favor for dress occasions, and only very dark socks are worn at any time with low shoes. Very narrow stripes of a color, or black with white, are also shown in silk and lisle thread hose. Buttoned gaiters of calfskin are worn in the street, and of patent leather for dress. They are now made with wider tops, round, or half round, and with low heels.

Suits of high black silk hats for dress have been worn somewhat all day for some time this season, and will be followed in the summer by light pearl colored and silvery drab ones—more nats of similar styles.—Harper's Bazar.

Untrimmed Straw Hats.

Any way one likes is fashionable for hat trimmings this season, in front, behind or at the side.

The illustration shows a few of the most fashionable shapes. They are much handsomer after being trimmed.

UNTRIMMED HATS.

At the top of the picture is an olive green English straw with bands of cream-colored straw inter woven. On the left below is a snuff-colored straw hat with wide poke brim sloping to the back. There it is turned up into a straw braid bow. On the right, opposite, is a bronze straw hat with a brim that is narrow in front, and wide at the back, where it is turned up in a high point. At the bottom is a very pretty round hat of white open work straw, with high crown and round brim.

Basques.

Basques for general wear are not at all changed in shape from those worn for two seasons past, with pointed front short over the hips, and with position-pleated backs. The double-breasted front has one cut diagonally, and outlined with a single velvet revar, the Moliere vest, the surplice, plaited on the shoulders and shirred at the belt, and the plain bodice simply crossed with many folds of the dress fabric, all remain in fashion. The shoulder seams are still short, and the sleeve is still high shouldered, but not made at all full at the top of the armhole as formerly.

Lace Dresses.

Lace skirts, on ladies of wide flounchings or narrow plaitings set upon foundations of surah, and worn under polonaises of various elegant summer silks and other rich materials, will be among the most charming dresses for summer wear for either day or evening toilets. Shot silk will often be used for the silks of the polonaises made wholly of lace, and the ribbon trimmings used upon the dress will match exactly the two shades of the changeable silk foundation—pale gold and maize—or iron rose and turquoise blue, and pink and silver being favorite combinations.

For Boys.

For small boys to wear in the country are imported jersey suits of soft yet strong wool with shirt and knee breeches, one of which must be in plaid and the other striped jersey, or a navy blue and red shirt, with plain blue trousers, and vice versa. Fashionable and sensible, and withal very simple, easily fitted and durable suits, with jersey caps to match in dark colors, for comfortable summer garments that will permit rough usage, and endure the small boy's usual disregard of his clothes. Light blue and white suits are also shown.

Tie for Eyeglasses.

Ladies requiring eyeglasses will find the use of a new safety pin, made both in gold and silver, which is provided with a spiral for holding the glasses. As the safety pin can be worn either on a dress or on a mantle, it conveniently holds the glasses always at hand and when the wearer, as is too often the case, front unhanging the eye glasses in the watch chain.

FASHIONLETS.

Full skirts and round waists are the features of little girls' frocks.

American ginghams are very fine this season, and some are seen in Japanese patterns.

Worth, who does not believe in plaitings and ruffings for mourning dresses, says: "Crape may be as rich in effect as velvet, but its peculiar grace is lost when it is gathered into plaits."

Changeable silks and satins overshot with rice dots, minute polka dots, miniature foliage and floral devices, and tiny geometrical figures are elegant, choice and colored. These fabrics are worn en polonaise or as bodices and tunics over plain silk or satin skirts, or over those of striped materials whose colors correspond with those of the shot silk overdresses.

For ladies who do not like to wear a stiff bustle or tournure, the best substitute is a cambric petticoat with flounces all the way from the waist line to the bottom on the bias breadth, which the laundress should be instructed to starch very stiff and smooth with her hand, but not iron, so as to retain all the starch.

An odd and very pretty bonnet is of orange surah. It is studded with ornaments of jet and has face finish of crape de chine, plaited and in shells, each shell centered with one of the jet ovals with which the outside is spotted. Strings of black velvet, front trimming loops of crape, with upstanding fringe of jet placed on each side of the large

JOTTINGS.

—The family of Mr. C. Potter, jr., will this week take possession of their handsome new residence on West Seventh street.

—The General Synod of the Reformed Dutch Church in America convened in New Brunswick at two o'clock this afternoon.

—At the request of Trinity Reformed church Chief Saltzman has kindly consented to discontinue ringing the tower bell at noon Sundays.

—The Junior members of the Boys' Brown Y. M. C. A., are to be entertained to-morrow by a base-ball party, at which they expect great fun.

—Tuesday the black bass season opened in this State. Fishermen from this place may be daily seen en route for the "stocked" stream at Bound Brook and thereabouts.

—The recent amateur entertainments in aid of the Church of the Heavenly Rest has netted $275, thanks to the talented Plainfielders who so kindly aided the worthy object by their earnest personal efforts.

—The borough officers are waging war on all unmuzzled dogs found running at large through the streets of the borough. Already a number of unfortunate canines have been taken charge of by the marshals.

—The Methodists noted everywhere for their whole-souled way of doing whatever they undertake, will assure you a cordial welcome at their strawberry and ice cream festival to-night, in the church parlor.

—For the closing entertainment of the Industrial School to be held next Saturday, June 5th, all donations of cake are requested to be sent to the Mission chapel at any time after ten o'clock on the day of the entertainment.

—The result of the recent revival services conducted in this city by Messrs. Mooly, Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan will count, it is said, in the neighborhood of $1,500, which is to be equally assessed upon the various churches.

—The Laurel Base Ball Club of Westfield will play a return match with the North Plainfield Stars, on the grounds of the latter club in the borough on Saturday next, the Laurels having been defeated by the Stars on Saturday by a score of 14 to 9.

—In connection with his large and varied stock of dry and fancy goods Eldredge shows a very complete line of gents' furnishing goods which he sells at the same popular low prices as prevails all through his stock. Read his new advertisement to-day on one special line.

—An old pet cat, the property of Councilman John Simpson, died on Tuesday from the effects of poison supposed to have been administered by some person unknown. The feline weighed about 14 pounds and had been in Mr. Simpson's possession for a long time.

—No session of the Union County Court was held in Elizabeth yesterday, court having on Tuesday adjourned over until this morning. The case of Samuel Tice of Rahway for indecent assault upon his fifteen year-old step-daughter will come up to-morrow.

—The case of Moses H. French & Son vs. Geo. Belcher, which was to have come up before Justice Dayton on Saturday last, but amicably adjusted, the only partial payment referred to yesterday having been made by the defendant who has an off-set claim which he had not yet prepared.

—The mayor of Rahway on Tuesday evening sent to the Common Council the names of Louis Springer, Matthew T. Gay and Thomas Martin, as his nominees for a New Board of Finance. The Council refused to confirm them and this gave way to a lively discussion, in which the conduct of the board of Finance and the city attorney, in their alleged opposition to the Mayor, was exposed.

Industrial School.

The Industrial School Entertainment will be held Saturday afternoon next at 2.30 o'clock in the Warren Mission Chapel. Invitation is extended to all who are interested in this enterprise. A mother Goose exercise and a Doll drill will be features of the entertainment.

The Legislature.

The New Jersey Legislature adjourned sine die at 5.10 o'clock yesterday afternoon. During the noon recess ex-Gov. Bedle appeared before the Special Joint Committee on Taxation and argued on behalf of the Morris and Essex road bill. It was finally passed by a vote of 50 to 7.

During the day the Local Option bill was taken from the table and a long argument followed. After favoring remarks by Messrs. Seymour and Corbin the bill was defeated by a vote of 39 to 3.

Mr. Gangewer offered a resolution for printing 1,000 copies of the recent State election returns, which was adopted. A resolution by Mr. Corbin, congratulating President Cleveland on his wedding, was adopted. Mr. Peloubet offered a concurrent resolution asking New Jersey representatives in Congress to take steps looking to the removal of the late Gen. Judson Kilpatrick's remains from Chili to this country. It was adopted. The House passed the bill providing extra compensation to the officers of the Legislature for the extra session.

At 12 o'clock in the afternoon a recess was taken. On reassembling a concurrent resolution for final adjournment at five p. m. was adopted. The Senate subsequently concurred. The Speaker appointed Messrs. Alcott, Seymour and John Martin as the Assembly's contingent of the Special Committee on State Prison for Female Convicts. Mr. Parker presented the formal report of the managers of the Laverty impeachment trial. It was received. Mr. Harrigan's motion to table having failed. The following bills were passed:

Senate 224, providing for the payment of fees due to Labor Inspector Fell; Senate 236, relative to the mendamusing of roads (being the act vetoed by the Governor); Mr. Roe's act for the appointment of a commission to ascertain the value of the fee titles along the Delaware shore below Trenton; the new act cutting down the legal rate for publishing the laws, so as to bring the expense within the appropriation of $50,000 ($1 to 13); the Sugar Bounty bill (over the Governor's veto, 31 to 12); House 476, validating certain insolvently advertised sales in Monmouth county; the act giving an increase of salary to legislative officers for extra services, with Senate amendments, and Senate act allowing municipalities to devote public lands for burial purposes.

Bills passed 476, introduced Tuesday, were reported and indefinitely postponed.

Messrs. Roe, Norwood and Budd waited on the Governor as a committee and brought back word that he had no further communication to offer.

A vote of thanks to Speaker Armstrong was offered by Mr. McDonald and adopted.

Mr. Benson, on the part of the House, presented the Speaker with an "Encyclopedia Britannica." The Speaker responded pleasantly.

Doubly Afflicted.

Some days ago a pony was tied in the yard of Samuel T. Wilbur on East Third street. Louise, the little five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur was playing around the yard when she stumbled and fell over the carelessly left rope to which the pony had been tied. At the time it was not thought that any serious injury had resulted from the fall. But upon examination it was found that one of the minor bones in the child's right shoulder and the collar bone had been fractured. The wounds were dressed by a physician and the child is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances. Yesterday the little girl was attacked with the mumps, having made their appearance on both sides of the neck alternately, which adds doubly to her affliction.

The Result of an Acquittal.

Miss Marion Hyland, the housekeeper, alleged to have been implicated in the death of Lawrence O'Neil and who was subsequently exonerated from all blame by the coroner's jury on Tuesday seems to have been laboring under a great mental depression. Yesterday she was the opposite of at the depot for the purpose of checking her trunk to New York, whither she has since gone, when she became so demonstrative from over-excitement that it was found necessary for an officer to take her into custody, which he did. At the depot the woman used some very "loud talk" indeed, and "They say I choked him." During the afternoon she became more calm and was allowed to go on her way.

Major Stanley Pleads Guilty.

Major Alfred V. Stanley, the absconding cashier of the Elizabeth Steam Cordage Works, was arraigned yesterday before Judge McCormick in the Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth. He retracted a former plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzlement of $4,500. The Prosecutor entered a nolle prosse on the indictment charging him with confiscating $145 from the office safe. Counsel for the prisoner pleaded leniency for his client. Judge McCormick sentenced Stanley to two years in State Prison.

Election of Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary Board of Rahlenburg Hospital held May 27th the following ladies were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Rowland Cox, vice president, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, secretary, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, treasurer, Mrs. H. D. Burlingham; auditors, Mrs. W. R. Lowe, Miss Mary Treesdy.

Before the Vice-Chancellor.

The case of Miss Ellen J. McCarthy against William Moore, Maurice Daly, Dennis J. Daly and Wm. H. Smith, which has been in litigation in the various courts for a year or more past, came up for a final hearing before Vice Chancellor Van Fleet in Newark yesterday. Craig A. Marsh of this city and James English of Elizabeth were the counsel for Miss McCarthy, Mr. A. P. Miller of this city and Mr. R. V. Lindabury of Elizabeth represented Moore and Sault (constable), and Borough Counsel John H. Jackson the defendants, Maurice and Dennis J. Daly. The suit was brought by complainant to foreclose a chattle mortgage of $6,500 on furniture in the City Hotel. The defendants, Maurice and Dennis J. Daly, claimed $2,416.27 allowance for money paid on insurance and to receiver, which amount was allowed, and the decree signed in favor of Miss McCarthy for balance of $4,083.63 and interest from June 9, 1885, and costs. The defendant, Wm. Moore was allowed $200 without cost.

Miss McCarthy seems now to be sufficiently vindicated, since, besides the decree of court, she has had the opposing counsel always given, she secured the verdict of a Plainfield jury in her favor in the proceedings against her, on alleged unsigness of the Somerville jail, where he had been confined for some weeks past pending an examination as to his mental condition. About 35 years ago the deceased is said to have been slightly demented, but since that time he had lived a life of sobriety, no symptoms which marked his condition on the former occasion. He arose as usual yesterday morning apparently in good health and spirits. During the morning he is known to have hacked away at his right arm with a pen-knife, inflicting wounds from which the blood flowed freely. Having failed to accomplish his design in this respect he wandered away to the woods a mile to the west of the place, where his body was found later with a pocket handkerchief drawn tightly about the neck. Coroner Stephens of Somerville was notified and after viewing the remains issued a permit for their removal to the late home of the deceased. The inquest will probably be held this afternoon. The funeral will take place Saturday morning. Deceased at the time of his death was a director of trustee, and superintendent of the Sunday-school of the Baptist church here.

Time for a Change.

A few Saturdays ago a manufactory in a Massachusetts town paid to his army of employes 700 bright, crisp, ten dollar bills. Each man got one with his pay. They were all marked new as the receipts showed. By Tuesday 410 of them had been deposited in the banks of the city by saloon keepers. When the fact became known to the workmen they organized a temperance society and set in motion the machinery of a reform that will do them a great deal more good than it will do a great lesson in it.—Flemington Democrat.

Let us see, that story was culled from an exchange and published in these columns nearly a year ago. It is about time it was permitted to die a natural death, or it will do more harm than good. There are plenty of living truths to show the evils of intemperance, with out resurrecting a fact fossilized with age and laid out tried to a falsehood. Our talented Flemington correspondent has been imposed upon.

OVER THE GRAVE OF A. E. T.

GREENWOOD CEMETERY, May 31st, 1886.

I plant, dear one, the flowers of love,
And bend my head in sorrow here;
Of love that suffered, love that strove,
But could not save.

For though wert like a full-blown rose,
Untimely severed from its tree,
When came that last dark year, whose close
Left thee from me.

And, as these buds of hope expand,
My heart would ease its aching pain,
Feeling it may, in you fair land,
Press thine again.

Oh, with my love, dear glad relief,
I saw thy patient sufferings cease,
And quenched, at first, my poignant grief,
In that sweet peace.

But since, in exile or at home,
However fair the scenes I trace,
The longful memories will come,
Of thy sweet grace;

Of how thy gentle spirit drew
From realms above its own pure light,
Til scenes of earth, transfigured, grew
As heaven bright;

Can't thou forget—I never can!—
How every year we wandered wide,
And every May thou went again
My own fair bride?

Alas! those days are dead, but now,
Fro while I weave this mournful rhyme,
A redeeming spirit seems to bow
From you sublime.

And look with pitying smile on me,
And others—spoke thee dearest years—
Who wet this wreath of memory
With dew of tears.

And ask, "Why bend you still above
The mounds of earth, that nought disclose?
For sure, you only lost your love,
Her blest repose."

"You saw the spark, immortal, shine,
The soul wide she flung to God;
And well you know the word divine,
Her soul's high trust."

"There, then, rest over the buried past,
Let noblest hope your bosom swell,
With her it is, with you, at last,
It shall be, well."

"HE HOLDS THE KEY."

(Isaiah xxii. 12. Rev. 1-17-18.)

He holds the key of all unknown,
And I am glad;
If God but wisdom should hold the key,
Or, if He trusted it to me,
I might be sad.

What if to-morrow's cares were here
Without its rest!
I had no power He un-locked the day,
And, as the hours swing open, say,
"My will be done."

The very dimness of my sight,
Makes me secure,
For groping in the misty way
I feel His hand, I hear His say,
"My help is sure."

I cannot read His future plans,
But this I know:
I have the smiling of His face,
And all the refuge of His grace
While here below.

Enough: this covers all my wants,
And so I rest.
For, what I cannot, He can see,
And in the care I safe shall be,
Forever blest.

A Somerville Man Commits Suicide.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., June 3.—Samuel B. Tunison an old and respectable resident of Somerville committed suicide yesterday morning by strangulation. Mr. Tunison was 65 years of age and lived with his wife, a daughter and two sons on High street. There are two daughters and five sons living. Deceased was a prominent business man and was extensively engaged in the grocery trade on Main street. The cause of his death assigned is hereditary lunacy. One of his brothers became insane some years ago and later another brother wandered away from home in a fit of despondency and has not since been heard from. A son of the deceased is at present confined in the insane asylum at Trenton, and Josiah, the second son was but recently released from the Somerville jail, where he had been confined for some weeks past pending an examination as to his mental condition. About 35 years ago the deceased is said to have been slightly demented, but since that time he had lived a life of sobriety, no symptoms which marked his condition on the former occasion. ## WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

The Dog Scare.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—The communication in THE NEWS of the 28th inst., will, I trust, cause the City Council to pass an ordinance compelling owners of dogs to keep them on their premises where they belong. I cannot stop in your city, for I fear to walk in the streets, where one meets nearly as many dogs as people; and driving does not obviate the difficulty. On Sunday in the post office I encountered four huge creatures, one of which was thoroughly wet. As I am a comparatively recent comer, probably I notice the nuisance more readily than the old residents. It is a crying shame that parents should suffer anxiety for their children on account of the dogs. I wait to see if the ordinance requiring all dogs to be muzzled after the first of June, will be enforced.

Headquarters of the Salvationists.

The new headquarters of the Salvation army, in Toronto, has a frontage of 100 feet and a depth of 130. The auditorium seats 2,500 persons, and there are all the conveniences of the modern church. This "Salvation temple" as it is called, cost $40,000, which has been paid for by special subscriptions, collections, collections, and the like.

Not Improved by Chastening.

M. Gounod's disposition has not been improved by Mrs. Weldon's chastening. "There are three things," he declares, "which most people are ready to forgive; the evil that which you have done them; second, the evil which they have done you; third, the evil that they have not been able to do you."—Chicago Tribune.

Growth of the Pottery Industry.

The amount of capital invested in potteries in the country is now $6,000,000, and the value of last year's product was about the same. The growth of the industry has been materially increased by the manufacture of jars and pots for decoration by young women with the art-craze.

The Head of the Scottish Rite.

San Jacinto, Cal., has fifty-flowing artesian wells. The first well was put down a little over a year ago.

THE WEDDING PAST

Mr. Cleveland's Long-Talked-of Marriage Celebrated.

FIRST LADY OF THE LAND

Duly Installed at the White House as Social Director.

A Private Little Party of Near Relatives and Friends Witness the Ceremonies. After a Chatty Dinner, the Bride and Groom Depart for a Week's Stay at Deer Park.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—A notable event, the marriage of Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, occurred at 7 o'clock last night, and with it culminated what until a few days ago had for months previous been a matter of daily speculation and gossip throughout the entire land. It was a great event because of the exalted position of the groom, the chief magistrate of a nation of 60,000,000 people, and because it was the first wedding of the kind that has ever occurred under the roof of the executive mansion. Yet, notwithstanding the exalted station of the president, and that the opportunity and occasion almost demanded a great and brilliant state wedding, the affair, in all its preparations, appointments and surroundings, was a quiet, home-like wedding. This was in accordance with President Cleveland's wishes and in harmony with the democratic simplicity and natural modesty which have characterized Grover Cleveland's career, whenever and wherever he has filled public office—whether as mayor of a city, governor of the State or president of the United States.

The wedding day was ushered in with bright, balmy weather, and almost with the rising sun came the bride and her kinfolk to the executive mansion after the night journey from New York. The day at the White House was comparatively quiet one, when the importance of its closing events is considered. Of course, there was considerable bustle and excitement in the early hours upon whom devolved the duties of final preparation for the wedding. But it is safe to say the president, although as active and industrious as any about the house, was the least excited of any. He was early in the library transacting official business. He directed that three private pension bill we time be sent to congress, and a conference by appointment with Senator Van Wyck, saw Secretaries Lamar and Fairchild about some interior and treasury department matters, and had several interviews with Dr. Sunderland about the details of the marriage service, and found time in the afternoon to take a drive with Mrs. Jordan. About 6 o'clock the bustle and excitement of preparation for the event began to transform itself into realization.

The invited guests, cabinet officers and their wives who were not abiding in the mansion, then began to arrive. They were at once shown to the state dining room, where they removed their wraps and repaired to the Blue room, where Miss Cleveland and other relatives of the bride and groom, including Dr. Sunderland, were waiting to receive them. The assembled guests, standing on the eastern and western sides of the oval-shaped Blue room, where they were presented to Miss Nord a few minutes to wait, for promptly at 7 o'clock the pres dent, with Miss Folsom leaning on his arm, came down stairs and entered the east room from the south and advanced to the center of the room and stood facing the background of palms, ferns and flowers on the southern end of the room. Mr. Sunderland, followed by his assistant brother, Rev. William Cleveland, stood facing the bride and groom. The invited guests present, who witnessed the ceremony, were:

Mrs. Folsom, mother of the bride; Rev. W. N. Cleveland, the president's brother; Mrs. Cleveland; Mrs. Hoyt, sister of the bride; Thomas F. Bayard, secretary of state; Daniel Manning, secretary of the treasury; Mrs. Manning; Mr. William C. Endicott, secretary of war; Mrs. Endicott; William C. Whitney, secretary of the navy; Mrs. Whitney; William F. Vilas, postmaster general; Mrs. Vilas; L. Q. C. Lamar, secretary of the interior; Daniel S. Lamont, private secretary of the president; Mrs. Lamont; Benjamin Folsom, of Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, of Sewer's Falls, N. Y.; Mrs. Cadman and Miss Huddleston, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Harmon, of Boston, relatives of the bride; Mr. Thomas, of New York, and Mr. W. G. Bissell, of Buffalo, the president's former law partner.

Immediately after the entrance of the president and Miss Folsom, Dr. Sunderland advanced and proceeded with the ceremony as follows:

"For as much as we are assembled to observe the holy rite of marriage, it is needful that we should seek the blessing of the great God, our Father, whose institution it is, and Jesus Christ our Lord, who by his presence graced with his first miracle a wedding, and who has taught us by his apostle that marriage is honorable among all men; we therefore are to come reverently and discreetly and in the fear of God. Into this holy estate, this man and this woman come now to be joined. If any man can show just cause why they may not be lawfully united in marriage, let him now speak, or else hereafter forever hold his peace. If you desire to be united in marriage, you will signify the same by joining your right hands."

Here the president and Miss Folsom joined hands.

The clergyman then asked: "Grover, do you take this woman whom you hold by the hand to be your lawful wedded wife, to live together after the ordinance in the holy state of wedlock? Do you promise to love, cherish, comfort and keep her, in sickness and in health, in joy and sorrow, and forsaking all others keep you only to him so long as you both shall live?"

The lady responded: "I do."

"In token of the same," said Dr. Sunderland, "let the wedding ring be placed."

The president then placed the ring upon the bride's finger. Dr. Sunderland then pronounced the sanction, saying: "Forasmuch as Grover and Frances have mutually agreed and covenanted to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of wedlock, and have confirmed the same by giving and taking a wedding ring, now, therefore, in the presence of the company, in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, I pronounce and declare that they are husband and wife, and that God the Father has joined together let not man put asunder." Dr. Sunderland then concluded the ceremony with a benediction in the following words: "God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, bless keep and preserve you. The Lord mercifully fill you with all temporal and all spiritual blessings, and grant that you may live so in this world that in the world to come you may have life everlasting. Amen."

Congratulations were then in order, and Mrs. Folsom was the first to congratulate her daughter and son-in-law. Congratulations from other relatives and invited guests quickly followed, and the company, leading through the Green to the East room, engaged in pleasant social conversation for some time, and then repaired to the dining room, the president leading the way to the supper table. At supper the president occupied his usual place on the north side of the table, the bride seated at his left, and the guests disposed about the table in a manner best calculated to promote free and unrestrained social conversation. The menu was a very light one, in attendance at the mansion, and at proper intervals discoursed suitable strains. When the president and Miss Folsom came down stairs and passed into the dining room the marine band, stationed in the outer corridor, filled the mansion with sweet strains from Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" from "Midsummer Night's Dream," etc.

FLORAL DECORATIONS.

Magnificent Display at the Florists' Establishment of Bird & Dallas.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The decorations of the executive mansion, with the exception of the Blue room, where the marriage ceremony occurred, consisted of the usual ones used on occasions of state or private occasions.

The work of decoration was done under the direction of Col. Wilson, superintendent of public buildings and grounds.

The novel features of the floral decorations were confined to the Blue room. Here the florists of the city have exercised their taste. Thomas F. ### FLORAL DECORATIONS.

Magnificent Display at the Florists' Establishment of Bird & Dallas.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The decorations of the executive mansion, with the exception of the Blue room, where the marriage ceremony occurred, consisted of the usual ones used on occasions of state or private occasions.

The work of decoration was done under the direction of Col. Wilson, superintendent of public buildings and grounds.

The novel features of the floral decorations were confined to the Blue room. Here the florists of the city have exercised their taste. The windows at the southern and outer end of this oval shaped room were banked with stately palms and ferns, extending to the ceiling. On the inner side, forming the green 15 feet in height, and lower down, beautiful foliage plants were arranged, and at the base of this tower were banks of roses, white, yellow, pink and red, azaleas fuchsias, geranium and heliotropes all combined to make the bower a riotous mass of fragrance and beauty. On every side of the room the decorations were scarcely less elaborate. The mantls above the hearth on the east side of the room was a solid bank of roses, with various colors in which the date of the wedding, "June 2, 1886," was written in letters of white flowers, surrounded by black pansies. The mantel on the west side of the room formed a solid bank of roses, dark and rich colored in the centre, in which was the monogram "C. F.," in white roses and hybrid roses.

The two large mirrors above the mantels were draped and festooned with garlands of mixed roses. The doors leading to the adjoining rooms were festooned with heavy garlands of roses in different distinct colors, and above the corridor door was a scroll composed of white roses, in which was the "fleur de lis, or spurious unum," in immortelles. The main table decorations in the wedding supper room was a full-rigged ship, composed of white roses, with port holes of carnations, roses and pansies, bearing the name "Hymen." It rested upon a mirror representing a lake, which gave it the appearance of floating. The above were completed by different varieties of selaginellas and tiny pieces of corals, and the land was represented by a bank of fragrant roses.

The ship, a three-master, was flying on the center spar the colors of the United States, while the other two carried white flags, with the words "Bon Voyage" on them. At either end of the table were cut glass vases, resting upon mirrors, with long-stemmed hybrid roses.

The chandeliers were festooned with asparagus tenuissimus, interspersed with loose roses. The corners and windows of the room had four side-board were suitably decorated with the choicest foliage and flowering plants, with the mantel a solid bank of roses.

BRIDAL PRESENTS.

A Diamond Necklace the President's Present.

President Cleveland's gift to his bride was an elegant diamond necklace, the stones being set in gold and extending all around the neck.

A large number of presents have been received at the mansion, and as they arrived, however, they were quickly conveyed out of sight.

The members of the cabinet gave individual wedding presents, some of which were quite elaborate. But in accordance with the special desire of the president a list of the presents received will not be made public.

During the progress of the ceremony salutes were fired, bells were rung and Pre sident Whitlows played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" and other appropriate selection on the chimes of the Metropolitan church. A large number of people gathered in front of the executive mansion during the ceremony, and while the wedding party was at supper. No precautions were taken to prevent their entrance to the ground, and as they were quiet and orderly, no effort was made to exclude them from the premises.

Off for Deer Park.

Soon after partaking of their wedding supper the president and his bride were prepared, according to a prearranged plan, quietly entered a carriage at the south entrance to the mansion and were driven to the K street station of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, where a special train was in waiting for them. They at once entered President Garrett's boudoir car, "My Maryland," and the train at 9.30 p. m. moved off for Deer Park, where the president and his bride will remain for a week. During their stay at Deer Park they will occupy a cottage specially fitted up for their accommodation near the Deer Park hotel.

Garland Was Absent.

The only invited guests who could not be present at the wedding were Miss Bayard and Attorney General Garland.

Postmaster General Vilas, one of the president directed Col. Lamont to have all of the cut flowers used in decorating the mansion distributed among the city hospitals.

Victoria's Congratulations.

LONDON, June 3.—The queen has sent the following cablegram to President Cleveland: "Trust accept my sincere congratulations upon your marriage, and my best wishes for your happiness. VICTORIA."

THE PRESIDENT'S BRIDE.

Her Portrait from the Most Recent Photograph.

It is with pleasure that we present herewith the latest portrait of the president's bride. June is the month of all the year for weddings—the month of roses, and blue skies, and strawberries.

MISS FOLSOM.

The letter accepting those among whom she is thrown become with Miss Frankie the more they approve the president's selection. She is tall and graceful, with grave, steady blue eyes and dark brown hair. It will be the first time a president has been married in the White House. May Frankie be happy, and engage Grover to the satisfaction of the Democratic party! Her wedding dress is ivory white satin, made with a train.

Anti-Monopoly League Views.

NEW YORK, June 3.—At a meeting of the New York county anti-monopoly league it was resolved that the aldermanic bill now in the hands of the governor is in the interest of the reformed municipal government, and should receive executive approval; that the excise bill now in the hands of the governor is deserving of the severest condemnation, as it is calculated to perpetuate the influence of vicious elements in the management and control of elections, and that it should therefore receive executive disapproval. A resolution of sorrow over the death of Charles E. Lowe was adopted. It was further resolved that in the death of John Kelly the community has lost an honest, farsighted citizen, and the masses a friend whose sympathies were always with anti-monopoly principles.

Sure Death to Moths.

DETROIT, June 3.—James G. Douglas sprinkled five gallons of gasoline on the carpets and furniture, at his residence on Third street, yesterday morning, to kill moths. Shortly afterward, while sitting in the dining room with his wife and a domestic named Emma Dickens, an explosion of gasoline gas occurred, which shattered the house from cellar to attic and seriously burned Mr. and Mrs. Douglas and the servant. The house was damaged to the extent of $2,000.

Beer Blown Out of a Well.

AKRON, O., June 3.—A man named Beer, engaged in digging a well on the Winter farm just south of this city, placed a dynamite cartridge in the rock, lighted the fuse and called to the workmen below to hoist him up. The boy became excited and turned the windlass the wrong way. Meanwhile the fuse was consumed and the dynamite exploded and frightfully mangled Beer, who died shortly after being taken out of the well.

Punishing a Judge for Forgery.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 3.—Judge T. W. Hooper, of Yorkville, was yesterday in the penitentiary yesterday to serve out a two years' sentence for forgery. His speculations in the scrip of the county, and at last fraudulently issuing a large amount, forging the name of the clerk.

Commercial Traveler's Insurance.

BOSTON, June 3.—The New England Commercial Traveler's association will pay $5,000 apiece to the families of Charles E. Dodge, Charles Hall, Edwin E. Hayden, and C. F. Whittaker, the members of the association that were killed in the recent Deerfield railroad disaster.

Prolonging the Debate.

LONDON, June 3.—The opinion is prevalent in the lobbies that the Parnellite members will prolong the home rule debate several days, possibly bringing the division into the middle of next week, this action being taken in order to enable Mr. Gladstone to strengthen his position mean while.

The Sultan Alarmed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 3.—The extensive warlike preparations now in progress in Russia have filled the sultan with alarm. The porte has recently shown and is still showing a friendly disposition to Germany with a view of obtaining the moral and possibly the material support of that empire.

Brought Back From Canada.

CLEVELAND, June 3.—Martin O. Van Fleet, ex-treasurer of Huron county, O., who absconded with $60,000 of county funds about two years ago, has been extradited by the minister of justice at Ottawa, Ont., and will be returned to Norwalk, O., for trial.

A DIVIDED HOUSE,

WHICH, BY AN ANCIENT PROVERB, CANNOT STAND.

The Elections of Directors of the Knights of Labor Develops a Bitter Factional Contest which Augurs War in the Management of the Order.

CLEVELAND, June 3.—At the morning session of the assembly the report of the district 24 was read, and the order was recommitted, so as to make changes in the address to the trades unions. Immediately a motion was made to go into the election of assistants to the general executive board. It was determined to take an informal ballot and to vote on the two highest candidates. This was done. The first regular ballot was on A. A. Carlton, of Massachusetts, and James E. Quinn, of New York. According to all accounts the assembly then became a primary caucus. The members of the Home club and their allies, both on the general executive board and among the delegates, went about exhorting, pleading and bulldozing those whom they thought they could influence. The vote was then taken, and the first ballot was cast. Carlton had 66 votes and those opposed 65. James E. Quinn was declared elected.

The next ballot was on George A. Murray, of Detroit, who had 64, and William H. Mullen, of Richmond. The Home club supported Mullen, and he was elected. Joseph Buchanan, of Denver, and Hugh Cavanagh, of Cincinnati, were the next candidates, and again the Home club elected its man, Hugh Cavanagh. This closed the morning session.

The whole afternoon was spent in executive session, but no one else was elected. Carleton, Murray and Buchanan represented the pacific and conciliatory element, and the order has lost the services of three good men, good judgment and firm hands. The men themselves are not disgruntled over the result, and Buchanan expressed the sentiment of the others when he said: "I am better satisfied over my defeat than if I had been elected general master workman in the present state of affairs."

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE ELECTION.

The feeling over the election is intensely bitter, especially among the trades unionists and supporters of the general master workman. It is the new line drawn by the leaders to control the head of the order, and the members are adverse to trades unions. After the morning session many of the delegates expressed themselves in unmeasured terms. Said one:

The Home club of New York has again reared its reptile head, and now controls the executive board. Two of the men, Powderly and Turner, the secretary, John Hayes and William Bailey. Now there is added James E. Quinn, one of the originators of the club, a man that lives in Jones and Schwab's house in New York, a pupil of Victor Drury, the Anarchist and Communist. He is hand and glove with the Socialists, and will not hesitate at any means to secure his end. He is an ignorant man, whose range of knowledge on the labor question is bounded by a knowledge of Victor Drury and Schwab. He does not believe in open, above board warfare, because that would expose his smallness and methods. Ever since the Home club was launched in the fall in Cleveland they have lobbied for this position and against the unions. Where this is going to end I know not, but the existence of the order is jeopardized by the unions having such a man on the board. The other two men elected are small men and will be used as tools. Powderly has no backbone, no brains, and they will be overruled in their pacific measures. All the circulars of Powderly, all his influences will not be of any avail in stemming the tide of Anarchy.

Said another:

The delegates from the regions remote from New York, the unsophisticated men from the country, are the ones who were won by the attentions and clap-trap of the Home club delegates. They did not understand the machinations of the club, nor that its ultimate object was "down with labor." I tell you they do not love the general master workman, although they appear to do so. They hate him worse than ever. Most of the country delegates know nothing of trades unions or their history, and it has been represented to them that Carleton, Murray and Buchanan are trade unionists and opposed to the Knights of Labor, excepting as a tail to the trade unionists. The club has been the great card of the club and they have played it for all it is worth, but Richmond will have another tale to tell.

"ANARCHY WITHOUT THE NAME."

A delegate who has been a trades unionist since a boy and a Knight for eleven years, was sad at the result. He was earnest in denouncing the Home club and its tactics. He said:

I have serious apprehensions for the safety of the order. Proceedings such as I witnessed today will be repeated in the future, must bring about disruption. The club represents anarchy without the name. Every one who has the interests of the Knights of Labor and the welfare of trade unionism at heart must raise the signal flag to the order of its danger. If the system inaugurated by the followers of Drury prevails the distinction of trades will be begun. The "improved" Knights of Labor founded by this child of the New York slums can never be a success. Let the trades unionists are anxious for the safety of their organization, separate and distinct, they must see to it that other than political workers and hotheads are sent to Richmond. This is a measure of self-protection. I am distressed at seeing an organization which I have helped to build up, working night and day, passing into the control of such men. No institution can succeed with such elements inside.

DANGER OF DISRUPTION.

Still another prominent Knight from the vicinity of New York:

The election of the Home club's candidates means the disruption of the order unless all indications fail. Local assemblies will be decapitated. Distr ct Assembly 126 will secede and form a trade union and others will follow. The club which controls District Assembly 49 will secede and form a union in New York—64, 75, 85 and 91—as they have all along, and serious trouble will be the consequence.

Frederick Haller, one of the prominent members of the International Cigarmakers' union, of New York, said: "I regret the result. It means war upon trades unions. I regret it not only because of my union, but because it will place workmen at variance with each other. I had hoped for some expression of good feeling, but the vote on Quinn shows the controlling influence, and we have felt what that means in New York."

Buffalo Wants Bread.

BUFFALO, June 3.—There is a bread famine in this city, owing to the strike of the journeymen bakers. The estimated amount of bread baked in this city nightly is about 50,000 loaves, but last night the output did not exceed 2,000 loaves. No bread is delivered to any of the groceries. The strike is the main firm, and the outlook for bakers' bread is very poor.

AFRAID OF PAPER MONEY.

The United States of Columbia Adopting New Bank Notes.

PANAMA, June 3.—A feeling of alarm is felt at the decree of the government which is to force into circulation an immense amount paper money issued by the National Bank of Bogota. Those notes, by order of the government, have been put into circulation in other parts of the republic, but it is only now that Panama is to receive its share. The effect of this issue, it is thought, will simply mean ruin to commerce, already groaning under heavy burdens, and misery to the governmental employes. The taking of this irredeemable money is to be made compulsory, and if this be enforced the merchants and traders will increase the prices of their commodities to an extent that will be ruinous.

Another decree has been issued, providing that on account of the losses of the past war all debts, payable in American, English, or other foreign gold, shall, at the discretion of the debtor, be payable in the paper money to be put in circulation, and that whatever may be the stipulated amount of interest the maximum interest demandable shall be only 6 per cent. This decree takes effect on Dec. 25, 1884. The hope of Panama is that President Nunez will see the advisability of not enforcing these decrees as far as Panama is concerned, as the condition of things here differs entirely from other states and departments.

A CAR FALLS FROM A TRESTLE

Killing Five Men—A Shocking Accident Through Carelessness.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 3.—A shocking accident occurred at the Ohio river trestle, opposite Martin's Ferry, this morning at 6 o'clock. At 5 o'clock a handcar, bearing Section Boss Ed Faust and four hands, was passing over the trestle. Faust en-vavored to check the speed of the car as they went over, by pressing down the brakes, but losing his balance fell forward in front of the car. The wheels, striking his body, threw the car off the track into the almost dry bed of the creek, thirty-five feet below, carrying the five men with it. A crowd quickly gathered about the men. Martin Connors was found to be horribly crushed about the head, and died in a few minutes.

William Tucker and Nick Renner, were terribly cut about the head, and besides receiving fatal internal injuries, Fred Kindlberger also had three terrible gashes in his head, and died shortly after. Ed Faust, the boss, received internal injuries from the shock, and can live but a few hours.

MAXWELL'S DEFENSE.

HIS ATTORNEY MAKES HIM APPEAR IN A BAD LIGHT.

A Foolish and Vain Young Man, and Not a Premeditated Murderer—A Strong Argument Which is Likely to Influence the Jury.

ST. LOUIS, June 3.—Counselor Fauntleroy, of Maxwell's counsel, has finished his address to the jury. Mr. Fauntleroy is a young man well read in law and very much in earnest in this case. He will not make his fortune in the defense of Maxwell, and never had the nerve to kill anyone with malice aforethought. Mr Fauntleroy argued, was absurd to think of. That Brooks or Maxwell, as the prisoner foolishly called himself, told the truth when he testified that Preller died from the effects of chloroform administered with Preller's full consent, Mr. Fauntleroy insisted that the jury could not help believing. Then the counselor took up the evidence, and, with no little skill and impressiveness, urged with force the points. First, that Maxwell's actions, both before and after Preller's death, indicated nothing like premeditation; next, that Maxwell had no motive for committing the crime; and, last, that there had been shown to the jury corroborative proof of Maxwell's story, that he was performing an operation with a catheter on Preller when Preller died.

On the first point Mr Fauntleroy argued that if Maxwell had planned the murder and robbery of Preller, he would not have gone to a pawnbroker's two or three days before the death of Preller and attempted to get a loan and then have gone to the very same pawnbroker, right after Preller's death, and made purchases and shown a roll of bills; nor would he have gone to the man to whom he wanted to sell his sewing machines to raise money, two days after he thus tried to bargain, and bought articles, showing a roll of money. In both these cases, had he been a cool, calculating murderer and robber, he certainly would not have betrayed both his poverty and his riches. This, Mr. Fauntleroy insisted, indicated that whatever Maxwell may have done, there was nothing like premeditation indicated by his actions. One who murdered for the purpose of committing robbery, Mr. Fauntleroy argued, would certainly never have revealed his poverty one day and his riches the next to the same person.

Again Mr. Fauntleroy argued that Maxwell had no motive for committing the crime, because the evidence proved that Preller had agreed to pay his expenses to New Zealand. This, the counselor argued, was made apparent by the testimony of the druggist Mollier and the cigar dealer Castle, both of whom testified that on the Sunday of Preller's death he bought articles and had them sent to Maxwell's room. Mr. Fauntleroy reminded the jury that Druggist Mollier had heard on that Sunday afternoon that he heard Preller say to Maxwell, "We had better get all the things we need for our trip here for we may not have another good opportunity before we get to Auckland." But the point that Mr. Fauntleroy brought most forcibly to the jury was that the little blood spots on the sheets were the corroborative proofs of the truth of Maxwell's story. The experts on both sides have testified that the use of a catheter by an inexperienced person would be likely to produce bleeding. Mr. Fauntleroy said that those little blood spots were the silent witnesses of the truth of Maxwell's story, and that, while the jury might feel that the prisoner had carelessly and recklessly performed an operation, they could not find that murder was in his heart while so doing.

Mr. Fauntleroy's speech, the Republic says, is an able one by the lawyers who heard it, and some of them predicted a hung jury as a result of the trial.

Mr. Fauntleroy was followed by District Attorney McDonald of the prosecution.

A Magwump Party.

NEW YORK, June 3.—A mass meeting of citizens was held at the Academy of Music yesterday evening, for the purpose of organizing a new political party, having for its object the redemption of the city from misrula. Henry A. Otis presided, and after a brief address by ex-Lieutenant Governor Dorsheimer, who, in a speech of considerable length, strongly advocated home rule for New York city. After speeches had been made by Rev. D. McIlvaine, James W. Gerard and others, a long series of resolutions was adopted, which ended by appointing a committee of 100 to select and report proper candidates for all state and county officers.

New Vessel Burned.

LONG BRANCH, June 3.—The new side-wheel steamer The Pride of Barnegat, which was to ply during summer between Seaside Park and Tom's River, while lying on the ways at Seaside Park, awaiting the putting in of her machinery, caught fire and was consumed. She was owned and built by Franklyn Harris, whose loss is about $15,000.

Resolutions for Kelly.

NEW YORK, June 3.—At special meetings of the Tammany society and the Tammany Hall committee on organization, held last evening, appropriate resolutions of sympathy of the late John Kelly. Appropriate resolutions were also adopted. It is expected that the society will attend the funeral in a body.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to "Eighteen Dollars," per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and there is no liability of any assessment. There are no Membership Fees or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year. Policies are issued for $25 for a $10,000 policy, and the contract is backed by assets of over $600,000.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and its Insurance Fund now stands at $963,073 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to having substantial assets amounting to over $30,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $600,000. # WASHINGTON WOMEN.

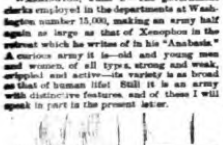
THEIR CHARACTER AND EFFICIENCY AS UNCLE SAM'S EMPLOYES.

Their Salaries and Work—A Romance of the Treasury—The Money Counters and the Openers of Dead Letters—Old Lady Clerks, Etc.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The government clerks employed in the departments at Washington number 15,000, making an army half again as large as that of Xenophon in the retreat which he writes of in his "Anabasis." A curious army it is—old and young men and women, of all types, strong and weak, crippled and active—its variety is as broad as that of human life! Still it is an army with distinctive features, and of these I will speak in part in the present letter.

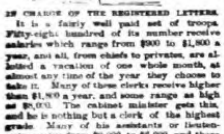


IN CHARGE OF THE REGISTERED LETTERS.

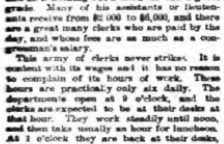
It is a fairly well paid set of troops. Fifty-eight hundred of its number receive salaries which range from $900 to $1,800 a year, and all, from chiefs to privates, are allotted a vacation of one whole month, at almost any time of the year they choose to take it. Many of these clerks receive higher than $1,800 a year, and some range as high as $6,000. The cabinet minister gets this, and he is nothing but a clerk of the highest grade. Many of his assistants or lieutenants receive from $2,000 to $6,000, and there are a great many clerks who are paid by the day, and whose fees are as much as a congressman's salary.

This army of clerks never strikes. It is content with its wages and it has no reason to complain of its hours of work. These hours are practically only six daily. The departments are open at 9 o'clock, and the clerks are expected to be at their desks at that hour. They work steadily until noon, and then take usually an hour for luncheon. At 1 o'clock they are back at their desks, and at 4 their day's work is done.

The treasury contains between 3,500 and 4,000 clerks. It is the largest department of the government, and the scene at its doors at 4 p. m. is one of the sights of Washington. At this moment four human streams pour forth from its various exits and the streets become crowded in a moment.



COUNTING THE MONEY.



LEAVING THE TREASURY BUILDING.

It is amusing to watch the characters. Here goes a dashing young lady with a lunch basket in it on her hand, dressed in the latest fashion, and with a new spring bonnet resting jauntily above her banged curls. Beside her is a gay young gallant in a Derby, who chats with her almost lovingly as they pass out together. In front of her is a shabby dressed old woman, who probably lives a family out of the $720 a year which she makes by copying papers all day long, and back of her is a long thin duck with a collar as big as a shirt cuff, and a pair of enormous ears. Further back, there is a widow in mourning, and as you look at her you remember that her husband was a soldier. In the same crowd there is a well-dressed man in eyeglasses, who has a pink face and hair as white as frosted silver. He might be a clergyman, if you met him anywhere else than in that crowd of clerks. But you know that he has been in the government service since the days of Jackson, and that he has had relatives for years among the statesmen of the land. Then there is the young man who is always reading a paper, and getting therefrom the gossip which he will vend about the hotels in the evening, and in the crowd behind is the stately looking old man in stock and old style hat, and the hard featured clerk, who was probably a political striker, and who has gotten his position through influence.

A COUPLE OF ELDERLY CLERKS.

There are 4,000 women in the government departments at Washington, and among the best looking and most intelligent belles of the capital are employed. They come, as a rule, from good families. Many of them are the widows of noted generals, the daughters of ex-governors and ex-congressmen, and now and then you will find the relative of a president or a cabinet minister. Many of them have traveled widely, and the great majority are educated and refined ladies. They do all kinds of work, and receive salaries ranging from $720 to $1,800 a year. As money counters they are much more expert than the men, and their rapidity with which they can count thousands upon thousands of dollars without making a mistake makes your brain whirl as you watch them. These money counters get about $75 a month, and they count millions of dollars every month. At one side of each one in the table is a wet sponge in front of her, she counts the bills like lightning, and, if the package is not right, she reports as to the chief, and the banks from which the bills came must stand the loss. The girls seldom make a mistake, and if they do so or pass a counterfeit without noting it, they must make up the mistake good, and the amount is taken out of their salary. They can tell, however, a bad bill simply by feeling it, and a bank cashier will make a hundred mistakes before they make one.

Not long ago one of these young lady counters was engaged upon a lot of $100 notes. She had been dipping the scraps on the floor beside her in a pile, after verifying the count. While she was counting a package she would lay the scrap, marked with the name of the bank which sent it, on the table beside her. At last she came to a package that contained only ninety-nine notes, and on looking for the scrap was terrified to find that it had fallen among the others. She was sure she knew the name of the bank, but she could not prove it. The bank was notified and it was soon acknowledge the mistake and the poor girl was forced to pay the $100.

Both sexes of clerks at Washington work in the same departments, and it is often the case that young men and young women have desks side by side. There is no restriction as to their social intercourse, and it is a matter of surprise to outsiders that so few marriages occur among the clerks. It is not that the girls are not good looking, nor that they are not genteel and intelligent. And it is not that the men are not noble and attractive. Washington living, however, is expensive, and it is contrary to the rules of the department that two members of the same family should hold positions under the government. The ladies in the departments are numerous enough to keep them respectably, and they do not care to marry a man who has no larger income than themselves and have in the end but as much poverty as before. Many of the marriages which do take place are with men outside of the departments, and it is not an uncommon thing here for a good looking girl to marry a congressman, a senator, or a newspaper correspondent. Mrs. Theaker, who is to be Stanley Matthews' wife, was a government clerk when she met and married Judge Theaker, a former commissioner of patents. Stephen A. Douglas married a department clerk, and Attorney General Brewsters' wife, although she was Robert J. Walker's daughter, was working in the departments when he fell in love with her.

I dont think women are justly treated in the departments. Men who do the same class of work often receive higher salaries than the women, and a $1,400 clerk and a $1,000 clerk are employed on the same work at times and side by side. The $1,000 woman does the most. It was in 1862 that women entered the service as copyists and counters at a salary of $720 per year. They were not eligible to clerkships. At the same time the men appointed to clerkships received $1,200 a year, and later, when the salary of such women was raised to $1,400, the salary of the same work were paid as high as $1,200 and $1,600 per annum. In 1870 women were made eligible to clerkships, and since then they have been promoted, until the top notch is $1,800 a year. But the high priced women clerks are very few, and men who do no good work receive as rub better pay and are more certain of holding their positions.

The young men in the departments, as a rule, have no more business there than I have, and if you ask them why they are not married, they will tell you that their salary is not large enough for them to support wives. Nearly half of the young men in the departments have others depending upon them. Many of them send their others or sisters to school, and many of them are widows, who in this way support and educate their families.

Some of the old lady clerks are very fine looking, and when they first appear in society before going into the department. One I know who had Jefferson for an associator, and another, perhaps the most beautiful of the white-haired ladies of the department, was the wife of an Ohio governor who was a great friend of Abraham Lincoln. Another woman, also of the first old ladies of the department, now a great-grandmother, is a Kansas pioneer, who was the first woman clerk ever elected by a legislative body in this country. These old lady clerks dress well, and among them are some of the most agreeable talkers in Washington society. They are young, though their hair is white, and they are almost as fascinating now as when the bloom of youth was on them and they were the belles of their native states.

OPENING DEAD LETTERS.

The women do the bulk of the dead letter office business, and it is wonderful how much this business amounts to. During the past year 4,930,000 letters were received at the dead letter office, making an average of 15,000 for every working day. Nearly 4,000,000 of these letters were never called for at the postoffices to which they were directed, and 113,000 of them were sent to hotels and reached there after the guests for whom they were intended had left. Women ladies of the dead letter office look over these 15,000 letters which come in daily. One set does nothing but open the letter, another reads and tears open, another assorts them and redirects them to the proper places. A great many of the letters are misdirected, 1,000 of this kind come to the office every day. Some misdirected letters are ciphered, if possible, without opening, and sent to the persons for whom they were intended. Women who understand foreign languages are engaged in this business, as many of the letters are written by foreigners. Many of the letters contain money, and last year there was $32,000 in cash among them, and more than $1,500,000 worth of drafts and money orders. Eighty-four thousand letters contained postage stamps, 38,000 photographs, and 28,000 articles of merchandise. All of this matter must be returned to the owner, or, if that is not possible, the money is deposited in the treasury and the merchandise is sold at auction.

In 1864 there were 37 male clerks in the dead letter office, and 94 female clerks. The annual pay roll of the male clerks was $37,400, an average of $4 41 per day. The annual pay roll of the 78 female clerks was $78,420, an average of $3 31 per day. The men did practically the same work as the women, but they received $1 more a day for it, and had the men's work been done by women the government would have saved $9,311. Had the men done all the work at the above rate, the pay roll would have had to be increased $25,155. It would seem that an equalization board ought to be appointed, and that Uncle Sam at least should give his above the same pay as his widowed sisters who they do the work.

Is the civil service of the government a good place for women?

It seems to me that it is. The hours of labor are short, the work is not such that it overtaxes the system, and the labor is honorable. The salaries are better than women can make in almost any other occupation, and the associations are what the women choose to make them. There used to be an idea that women in the departments were as liable to immoral influences; that they were indebted to politicians solely for their appointment, and that the appointments were often given in the way of a barter for the questionable favors with such congressmen. There may have been instances of this character, but they are by no means common, and the thirty-nine hundredths of the women in the departments to-day are as pure as any in the country. The civil service reform has remedied the chances for an evil which has always been exaggerated, and no woman who wishes to be honest need fear that she will be insulted without cause while working for the government.

The government clerks stand well in Washington city. They are far above the average of the intelligence of men doing the same character of work which they do throughout the country, and association with them can hardly be detrimental to women. Washington is a great place in which to live. It is expensive or cheap, as one wishes to make it, and it is to be in the future the great educational, artistic and literary center of the country. There is no reason why women should not undergo the civil service examination and partake of its advantages.

WOMEN DOCTORS ABROAD

Admitted to Practice in the Glasgow Infirmaries.

(Special Correspondence.)

LONDON, May 18.—Two women graduates of the New York Eclectic College of Medicine, Dr. Emma W. Higley and Dr. Chase, created something of a sensation in Glasgow recently, by being the first women doctors ever admitted to practice in the Glasgow Infirmaries. There are two colleges and three schools there, the Anderson College, connected with the university, and the Royal, the largest in Great Britain and over 100 years old. Dr. Higley got herself to the surgical wards, while Dr. Chase chose the medical wards. The chief surgeon of the Royal had never even seen a woman doctor, though he received, with his diploma, a gold medal. The gawky Scotch students were respectful, but dumb with amazement. In external applications the Glasgow doctors are believed by many to be far ahead of those in this land in internal treatment they haven't gravitated a great distance from the dark ages.

Dr. Higley was a resident of Cincinnati during the early part of the war, and Dr. Warren Higley, who was judge of the police court there. Less than three years ago the Higleys boarded in Chicago. The judge devoting himself to the law, while Mrs. Higley took up the study of medicine, and in two winters in college accomplished what usually takes a man four years, and spent two summers to acquire. She is now abroad, devoting herself to hospital practice, and in the coming autumn will open an office in New York for the regular practice of her profession.

She does this from love of the practice of medicine, not from necessity. It is a noticeable and significant fact that the women who are the growth of the present day, as it were, take very strongly to careers of activity in the professions. They are fond of laurels, and go honestly to work to win them. Positions are more propitiatory for them than ever before. Public sentiment is broadening, and every field of labor is opening to them. The long bans open only to the sex of bifurcated apparel. Let us take courage, the world moves. G. T. L.

OPENING DEAD LETTERS.

COME UP HERE, QUICK!

Along the coast men were stationed to look out for the British ships and give the alarm to the villagers. Beltnate had a coast guard, but he was away that afternoon—had gone inland to see his mother, who was very ill. He had left his fife and drum in the light house. It was with these that he was to give the alarm to the neighborhood in case a British ship should appear in the harbor. Hearing these the men thereabouts would seize their guns, pistols, knives and clubs, and rush to the coast, if an attempt was made to carry off one of their comrades.

"I wish the coast guard had not gone away," said Becky. "I'm afraid."

"I'm not," said Rebecca.

At that moment their father called them: "Abigail! Rebecca! Come here quick!"

They ran into the wind to do so.

"Look! look, girls! Isn't that a British frigate out in the offing? See the flag flying from her mastheadl My hand trembles so I can't hold the glass."

In a moment Rebecca seized the glass and swept the quiet harbor and the open ocean. "Yes! yes! I see it; it is, father; and see! that little speck to the left? Oh! it is shore, it is loaded with men, and I see the muskets glitter and shine."

"Oh!" groaned the keeper, "what shall we do, and the coast guard gone!"

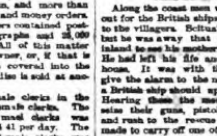
"Father," broke in little Abigail, all her fear gone, "Father, Becky and I will take the drum and fife, and get behind that great ot rocks and play, may be they will think we have some troops here——"

"But, child, how can you get down there without their seeing the drum! They have a glass, too"

"I know," broke in Becky, "we'll take the tablecloth and tie it up in that, and they will think it's nothing but a bundle. They won't mind two such little girls as we are."

"God bless you, children, it's a faint hope, but the only one, and you may try it. Don't begin to play till I hang out this white cloth from the window, then you will know they are near the shore."

They were off, the brave girls, their hearts beating like the drum itself in their excitement. Their father's heart thumped just the same, for he did not know what might happen to his darlings if the angry British sailors caught them. But it was the last desperate resort, and they must try it.



THE ARMY OF TWO.

The drum is untied, the fife is raised to Abby's lips, and soon the girls hear the rattle of the drum over the open ocean. Then from the tower flutters the white signal, and out on the still air rings the sharp rat-a-tat-tat of the drum and the shrill notes of the fife. It was the other side of the rocks and the startles the fishermen from their work on the mackerel fleet, while from the dwellings of the town, in eager alarm, the men in shirt-sleeves and their wives and their hands come running down to the shore.

And still the martial music rings out clear and shrill, with not a quiver in it, as it pause, and the boats crew hear it, too; their oars are suspended in air; a look of rage passes over the faces of the seamen as they see the deadly guns of the frigate, and the forces against the Yankee troops for balking them in their purpose, they turn and row swiftly back to the frigate.

Then when the village have reached the shore, and looking eagerly around for the coast guard, are amazed to see in place of the familiar figure the two daughters of Jared Beltnate, white faces, but determined air, still plying the drum sticks and blowing the fife.

"Why, girls, it isn't you that's saved us to-night from grief and maybe death?" broke out Capt. Folger, the leader of the company, as he stood thanked for your bravery and forethought."

All the rest of their lives, till they grew to be old women, the sisters were honored for what they did that day. The story will be told so long as the United States has a navy. When Abby died in March last veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic carried her to her grave, wearing their uniforms.

BOYS AND GIRLS

The Girl Soldiers.

It is one of the best stories you ever read. It was during the war of 1812. That war, you will learn in your history, broke out because American citizens were seized by British men-of-war and made to serve as seamen on their ships.

One afternoon in August, 1812, two little sisters, Abigail and Rebecca Bates, sat knitting. They were about 10 and 12 years old, the daughters of the lighthouse keeper at Scituate Beach, Mass., and they sat in the porch of the lighthouse. Above them in the tower was their father, cleaning and trimming his lamps.

The little girls had so many rounds to knit on the woolen stockings before they quit. They were talking of the war, indeed, there was much excitement then that the very dogs almost barked about it. British ships' boats put in anywhere and took men out of their gardens and fishing vessels, tied them and rowed off with them, and they and their neighbors could not help it.

COME UP HERE, QUICK!

Along the coast men were stationed to look out for the British ships and give the alarm to the villagers. Beltnate had a coast guard, but he was away that afternoon—had gone inland to see his mother, who was very ill. He had left his fife and drum in the light house. It was with these that he was to give the alarm to the neighborhood in case a British ship should appear in the harbor. Hearing these the men thereabouts would seize their guns, pistols, knives and clubs, and rush to the coast, if an attempt was made to carry off one of their comrades.

"I wish the coast guard had not gone away," said Becky. "I'm afraid."

"I'm not," said Rebecca.

At that moment their father called them: "Abigail! Rebecca! Come here quick!"

They ran into the wind to do so.

"Look! look, girls! Isn't that a British frigate out in the offing? See the flag flying from her mastheadl My hand trembles so I can't hold the glass."

In a moment Rebecca seized the glass and swept the quiet harbor and the open ocean. "Yes! yes! I see it; it is, father; and see! that little speck to the left? Oh! it is shore, it is loaded with men, and I see the muskets glitter and shine."

"Oh!" groaned the keeper, "what shall we do, and the coast guard gone!"

"Father," broke in little Abigail, all her fear gone, "Father, Becky and I will take the drum and fife, and get behind that great ot rocks and play, may be they will think we have some troops here——"

"But, child, how can you get down there without their seeing the drum! They have a glass, too"

"I know," broke in Becky, "we'll take the tablecloth and tie it up in that, and they will think it's nothing but a bundle. They won't mind two such little girls as we are."

"God bless you, children, it's a faint hope, but the only one, and you may try it. Don't begin to play till I hang out this white cloth from the window, then you will know they are near the shore."

They were off, the brave girls, their hearts beating like the drum itself in their excitement. Their father's heart thumped just the same, for he did not know what might happen to his darlings if the angry British sailors caught them. But it was the last desperate resort, and they must try it.

THE ARMY OF TWO.

The drum is untied, the fife is raised to Abby's lips, and soon the girls hear the rattle of the drum over the open ocean. Then from the tower flutters the white signal, and out on the still air rings the sharp rat-a-tat-tat of the drum and the shrill notes of the fife. It was the other side of the rocks and the startles the fishermen from their work on the mackerel fleet, while from the dwellings of the town, in eager alarm, the men in shirt-sleeves and their wives and their hands come running down to the shore.

And still the martial music rings out clear and shrill, with not a quiver in it, as it pause, and the boats crew hear it, too; their oars are suspended in air; a look of rage passes over the faces of the seamen as they see the deadly guns of the frigate, and the forces against the Yankee troops for balking them in their purpose, they turn and row swiftly back to the frigate.

Then when the village have reached the shore, and looking eagerly around for the coast guard, are amazed to see in place of the familiar figure the two daughters of Jared Beltnate, white faces, but determined air, still plying the drum sticks and blowing the fife.

"Why, girls, it isn't you that's saved us to-night from grief and maybe death?" broke out Capt. Folger, the leader of the company, as he stood thanked for your bravery and forethought."

All the rest of their lives, till they grew to be old women, the sisters were honored for what they did that day. The story will be told so long as the United States has a navy. When Abby died in March last veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic carried her to her grave, wearing their uniforms.

Anchor Lodge Entertains Invited Guests.

Upon invitation of Anchor Lodge, No. 160, F. & A. M., of this city, Damascus Commandery, Knights Templar of Newark and St. John's Commandery of Elizabeth visited this place last evening for the purpose of attending Ascension Day service in Grace church. The visiting delegates arrived here on the 7:04 p. m. train and were met at the station by Anchor Lodge and Winfield Scott Drum Corps. The various societies were placed in position in front of the depot and the procession was made up in the following order:

Vom' Fire Regiment Band of Newark, 20 pieces.

Damascus Commandery of Newark.
Winfield Scott Drum Corps.
St. John's Commandery of Elizabeth.
Anchor Lodge.

Starting from the depot the procession passed through Peace street to Front, to Central avenue. Here countermarch was made to Park avenue through Park avenue to Ninth street, through Ninth street to Franklin Place and LeGrande avenue, through LeGrande avenue and Seventh street to Sycamore street, thence to Grace church, arriving there at about eight o'clock.

The body of the church was well filled when the Rev. Cornelius L. Twing of Calvary church, Brooklyn, E. D., preached the Ascension Day sermon to the Knights. The regular church choir rendered excellent vocal selections. At the conclusion of service the line of march was again taken up through Sycamore street to Seventh, to Park avenue to Front street, West, to the rooms of Anchor Lodge where a banquet was afterward tendered the visitors. The party remained in full appearance along the line of march and were frequently applauded. The visitors were highly pleased by Anchor Lodge and after many rousing cheers, departed on the 11.16 p. m. train for their several homes, each one expressing himself as well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

The Somerville Suicide.

Samuel R. Tunison, the Somerville business man who committed suicide by strangulation on Wednesday, is said to have been financially embarrassed and this fact is said to have preyed so upon his mind as to cause temporary insanity. On Tuesday evening he went home and told his wife that detectives were after him and that he must hide away. Mrs. Tunison, his wife, tried to persuade him that he was mistaken and insisted upon his going to bed. He is supposed to have remained in a greenhouse on Cliff street during Tuesday night and early on the following morning wandered away to the place where his body was subsequently found by a farmer employed by James Birdsall.

Mr. Tunison had committed suicide by placing one end of a rail upon the ground and the other upon a fence about four and five feet high. He had tied a pocket handkerchief around his neck, put the rail through it, and then threw himself forward in a leaning position. Dr. Mathewson made an examination and found that death was caused by strangulation. The cuts in his arm were not deep enough to cause death.

The result of the examination failed to discover any evidences of foul play and an inquest was not deemed necessary.

Union County Courts.

In the Union county Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth yesterday, the greater part of the day was taken up with the case of Frederick DeGiue of Roselle, who was arraigned for seducing Miss Annie Lee of Miss Maude Long of that village, under the promise of marriage. Both of the parties in the case were well to do residents of Roselle. Several witnesses testified for the defence while the complainant and her mother were only witnesses put on the stand for the prosecution. The case was given to the jury in the afternoon and after a short deliberation returned a verdict of guilty.

The case of Edward Kelly, the City Hotel interloper in the Dunn row, came up for trial. The jury was drawn and one witness put on stand when the court adjourned over until this morning.

A Double Wedding.

At the residence of the Rev. Dean Rodman on East Second street, Wednesday evening, a double marriage ceremony was celebrated. Edward Kober of North Plainfield and Miss Mary Latour of this place were the first to present themselves. The contracting parties in the second ceremony were Caspar Shippher and Miss Annie Hammond, both of this place. Rev. Dean Rodman performed the double ceremony, after which the newly-married persons departed in joyous spirits.

PERSONAL.

The Class of '89 of Rutgers College were entertained at Netherwood last evening.

Mrs. Walter Scott of East Front street sailed for Europe on Saturday for the benefit of her health.

George Winnings of Washingtonville has returned from Jacksonville, Fla., where he has been for some time past. He is looking well and he is pleased with his trip.

At Grace church on Wednesday afternoon next at five o'clock will be a scene of gaiety on the occasion of the marriage of Miss Nellie DeGraff of First Place and Frank N. Doubleday.

Rev. Mr. Raymond will conduct a preparatory service in the Trinity Reformed church at eight o'clock this evening. On Sunday the sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered.

Word was received in this city on Wednesday of the death of Isaac Pruden, a former resident of this city, which occurred in the New York Hospital, where he had been for two weeks under treatment. He was about 65 years of age and left a widow and one child. Mr. Pruden was a son of the late Israel Pruden, and a brother of Theodore J. Pruden, the West Front street merchant. A little over a year ago deceased with his family moved from here to New York, where they have since been living. Deceased was 47 years of age and leaves a wife and five children. The body was brought to this city yesterday and the funeral took place from the home of his brother on East Second street this afternoon.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

A Plainfield Tourist Abroad.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May, 1886.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—We left Denver on the morning of the 19th ult. for the mountains, deserts and Salt Lake. At twelve o'clock we reached Lake Divide. This is a most beautiful artificial lake, being supplied with water through pipes from the mountains six miles away. A neat cottage has been erected here, making a fine watering place, and a place of resort for picnics, excursions, etc. At 12.30 p. m. we landed at Pueblo. The country along the route is rather poor, although fine crops are raised where irrigation can be obtained. But where this cannot be done but little use is made of the lands. Lines of canals can be seen extending for miles along the brink of the mountains, supplied from the melting snow, and many farms are seen in the valley below. These are tapped by smaller canals, and small channels that distribute through the plowed lands, meadows and pastures. There are many cattle ranches along the line, and some of them extend high up in the mountains. Really there is no end to the land to be had. Soddy Station, 12.45 p. m., was again taken up through Sycamore street to Seventh, to Park avenue to Front street, West, to the rooms of Anchor Lodge where a banquet was afterward tendered the visitors by Anchor Lodge and after many rousing cheers, departed on the 11.16 p. m. train for their several homes, each one expressing himself as well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

JOTTINGS.

—Prof. Hasbrouck on "Palestine" at Music Hall to-night.

—The City Council will meet in regular session in the Council chamber next Monday evening.

—Try 'Moxie,' the great nerve food, at Voorhees' soda fountain, only five cents a glass," is what Dr. Voorhees says.

—The second excursion of the season via the P. & R. railroad to Mauch Chunk and Glen Onoko takes place on Tuesday next.

—The regular monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Common Council will be held in the hall of the Hope Engine house at eight o'clock this evening.

—The inhabitants of Round Brook were greatly excited a few days ago by the appearance of a strange dog, which was supposed to have been mad. The dog was shot by Elisha Shepherd.

—There will be no service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church this evening, or to-morrow, on account of the session of the Seventh-Day Baptist Eastern Association now in progress at New Market.

—The second annual strawberry and ice cream festival given under the auspices of the Dunham Goodwill Choristers will take place on the corner of Park avenue and Second street, this and next Tuesday and Wednesday, June 8th and 9th.

—Schwed Bros., the clothiers are fitting up a handsome office at their store to accommodate their numerous friends and patrons. Their stock of clothing, they say, is larger than ever and the prices lower.

—If the people of this vicinity desire cheap land they should look at that offered for sale in the advertisement of Peter F. Rogers of Newark who is in quest of a site for a new Home and a State encampment to be erected by the government.

—The Board of Directors of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society will award the contract for enlarging the grand stand at the Waverly Park Fair Grounds to-morrow. The old stand will be enlarged 50 feet and the refreshments booths moved back. The contract will be awarded at the fair ground.

—Our sprightly Elizabeth cotemporaries in copying so liberally from these columns should at least show their appreciation by mentioning the fact. We are not particular, we would appreciate their compliments the more if they supplied the omission, which is of too frequent occurrence to be entirely due to oversight.

—John O'Brien's Metropolitan Circus and Menagerie will visit this place on Tuesday of next week, and two performances will be given, one in the afternoon at two o'clock and the other in the evening at eight o'clock. The circus has visited this city on former occasions and is said to have drawn liberally on the public patronage. The performances on former occasions was about up to the standard. A new departure has been made in the price of general admission, the fee now charged being but ten cents. A limited number of seats may be had at an advance of 25 cents.

—At a little before noon to-day a horse standing in front of the depot started to run away, and as the incident may be said to have called out for the animal to halt, and in so doing frightened a horse belonging to George Belcher, which suddenly revolved and started to run away. Attached to Mr. Belcher's horse was a two-seat phaeton and this created into a plumber's wagon with such force as to completely wreck the shafts and the entire set of wheels of the phaeton, while the other vehicle received no appreciable damage. The horses was captured before doing further damage.

Somerset County Courts.

Michael T. Krach, a Hungarian, who was arrested in Passaic City by officer Crow and taken to Somerville on the charge of assault and battery on John Azzard, also a Hungarian, was arraigned before the Special Sessions Thursday, Louis Kaszorowski acting as interpreter. The prisoner was found guilty on the charges preferred and Judge Bartine deferred sentence.

Wm. Besser was also arraigned for assault and battery on an Italian in Raritan, and after ward was remanded to jail for further hearing.

Mrs. Mary Ann Lapardus is well known in Plainfield and vicinity. For sixteen years she has been under guardianship because a jury found a verdict declaring her to be insane. For several years some of her lady friends have felt that she was perfectly sane, and that it was a great hardship that she should not have the control of her own property.

Corporation Counsel Marsh had an examination made by two Plainfield physicians, and from their report, which was unanimous, to have the verdict of the jury set aside, his client declared to be sane, her guardian discharged and her property restored to her. This he accomplished in the Court of Chancery yesterday. The witnesses were George W. Hubbard, M. D., Theodore Wells, M. D., Sarah L. Lapardus, Mary Pyatt, Epiram R. Drake, Clara T. Rogers, Francis F. Randolph for the petitioner and Abner S. Cordell for the guardian.

Borough Counsel Jackson represented the guardian, but declined to resist the motion, preferring that the court itself should determine as to the sanity.

The court decided the case immediately on the testimony being closed and signed the following order:

In Chancery of New Jersey. In the matter of the petition of Mary Ann Lapardus, an alleged lunatic to set aside a quisition and be restored to her property. On petition, etc.

Upon opening the matter this day to the court by Craig A. Marsh of counsel with said applicant, the petitioner, the court hearing heard witnesses produced for and against petition, and having heard John H. Jackson Esq., of counsel with the guardian of said petitioner, and the court being satisfied that the petition is restored to her reason and understanding, and is of sound mind. It is on this third day of June, eighteen hundred and eighty-six ordered that the said inquisition of January taken before Daniel B. Boice, Charles C. Morgan and Nelson Westfield eighty-six ordered that the said inquisition of January taken before Daniel B. Boice, Charles C. Morgan and Nelson Westfield eighty-six ordered that the 3rd day of September, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, by which among other things, the said Mary Ann Lapardus was declared to be a lunatic, be vacated, set aside and for nothing holden.

And it is further ordered, that Abner S. Cordell, the guardian appointed by the Orphan's Court of the said County of Middlesex, to take the charge and care of the person and estate of the said Mary Ann Lapardus, do deliver, pay over and restore unto the said Mary Ann Lapardus, all the estate, real and personal, which the said guardian received belonging to the said Mary Ann Lapardus, after deducting therefrom his necessary costs, charges and commissions in the execution of his trust.

Witness, Leopold Tuska, and
A. V. VANFLEET, Vice-Chancellor.

The Methodist Festival.

A joyous scene was that in the Methodist parlors last evening on the occasion of the strawberry and ice cream festival. Festive indeed were the decorations, being flowers of spring and decorations of much taste and variety and, above all festive people, without whom all else would not be of much account, made the scene becomingly cheerful.

The programme of music was presided over by Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Van Vliet, Miss Emma McGee and Miss Nellie Pangborn; the fruit table by Mrs. Henry McGee and Mrs. George Cornwall; the home-made confectionery by Mrs. Mitchell, Miss Lucinda Mitchell and Mrs. Keller; the refreshment tables and stands by Mrs. D. S. Roberts, Mrs. Langer, Mrs. Henry K. Carroll, Mrs. Mahlon Dickerson and Mrs. Keller; the lemonade by Mrs. J. P. Homan and Mrs. S. Craig; the flower table by Miss Addie McGee, Miss Carrie Jackson and Miss Cass, the first being attired in pink, the second in white, and the third in blue, each dress worn by a bower of evergreens, the bower covered and spotted with cotton and spangles, to represent the snow and glaze, as a finish, to a profusion of fresh spring flowers, forming a very pretty picture, the patriotic costumes of the young ladies adding the colors of the colors of our national flag.

Mrs. L. M. French and Mrs. R. R. Fairchild were general committees.

Mrs. J. L. Hurlbut presided over a table of Mount Holly Berkshire pig specialties, and Mrs. McNaughton had charge of a table for the sale of vines.

The strawberries and ice cream were bountifully supplied and partaken of.

The festival will continue this afternoon and evening.

Ascension Day.

Yesterday was Ascension Day and was appropriately observed in the Episcopal and Catholic churches of this city and the borough. In the Episcopal churches a morning service was held which was well attended. In the Catholic churches two Masses were celebrated, at half-past five and eight o'clock a. m. At both services a large number of the faithful received holy communion. This evening being the first Friday in the month, at seven o'clock Rosary and Benediction service will be held at eight o'clock, in St. Mary's church.

UNION VILLAGE.

Ex-Mayor Long of Newark will move up for the summer next week, and is expected to bring a number of city friends with him.

Farmers have been delayed in planting corn by the wet weather, but for several years past, but wheat, oats, grass, etc., look very encouraging.

A strawberry festival will be held on next Tuesday evening at the house of the Methodist church. Every preparation has been made for a large gathering and a good time is expected. If stormy the fair will be held the next evening.

An Alleged Lunatic Declared Sane.

Mrs. Mary Ann Lapardus is well known in Plainfield and vicinity. For sixteen years she has been under guardianship because a jury found a verdict declaring her to be insane. For several years some of her lady friends have felt that she was perfectly sane, and that it was a great hardship that she should not have the control of her own property.

Corporation Counsel Marsh had an examination made by two Plainfield physicians, and from their report, which was unanimous, to have the verdict of the jury set aside, his client declared to be sane, her guardian discharged and her property restored to her. This he accomplished in the Court of Chancery yesterday. The witnesses were George W. Hubbard, M. D., Theodore Wells, M. D., Sarah L. Lapardus, Mary Pyatt, Epiram R. Drake, Clara T. Rogers, Francis F. Randolph for the petitioner and Abner S. Cordell for the guardian.

Borough Counsel Jackson represented the guardian, but declined to resist the motion, preferring that the court itself should determine as to the sanity.

The court decided the case immediately on the testimony being closed and signed the following order:

In Chancery of New Jersey. In the matter of the petition of Mary Ann Lapardus, an alleged lunatic to set aside a quisition and be restored to her property. On petition, etc.

Upon opening the matter this day to the court by Craig A. Marsh of counsel with said applicant, the petitioner, the court hearing heard witnesses produced for and against petition, and having heard John H. Jackson Esq., of counsel with the guardian of said petitioner, and the court being satisfied that the petition is restored to her reason and understanding, and is of sound mind. It is on this third day of June, eighteen hundred and eighty-six ordered that the said inquisition of January taken before Daniel B. Boice, Charles C. Morgan and Nelson Westfield eighty-six ordered that the 3rd day of September, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, by which among other things, the said Mary Ann Lapardus was declared to be a lunatic, be vacated, set aside and for nothing holden.

And it is further ordered, that Abner S. Cordell, the guardian appointed by the Orphan's Court of the said County of Middlesex, to take the charge and care of the person and estate of the said Mary Ann Lapardus, do deliver, pay over and restore unto the said Mary Ann Lapardus, all the estate, real and personal, which the said guardian received belonging to the said Mary Ann Lapardus, after deducting therefrom his necessary costs, charges and commissions in the execution of his trust.

Witness, Leopold Tuska, and
A. V. VANFLEET, Vice-Chancellor.

The Methodist Festival.

A joyous scene was that in the Methodist parlors last evening on the occasion of the strawberry and ice cream festival. Festive indeed were the decorations, being flowers of spring and decorations of much taste and variety and, above all festive people, without whom all else would not be of much account, made the scene becomingly cheerful.

The programme of music was presided over by Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Van Vliet, Miss Emma McGee and Miss Nellie Pangborn; the fruit table by Mrs. Henry McGee and Mrs. George Cornwall; the home-made confectionery by Mrs. Mitchell, Miss Lucinda Mitchell and Mrs. Keller; the refreshment tables and stands by Mrs. D. ### WESTFIELD.

Miss M. Tarbox of New York has rented Mr. A. D. Bloodgood's house on Dudley avenue.

Every week seems to add to our list of wheelmen. W. E. VanFleet is the latest, with a 56-inch wheel.

Elm Lawn Tennis Club has put their grounds, on Elm street near Dudley avenue, in good order, and are now used nearly every day.

The delegation of Bellerophon Wheelmen that joined the Plainfield members on Decoration Day, on the run through Orange as far as Pine Brook, are very much pleased with their excursion. They had all sorts of roads and plenty of exercise for one day.

It seems hardly possible that in a town like this, with such an elegant free public school, including free books, that children should grow up without being able to read or write, but such cases do exist. The negligence of the parents ought to be looked after by our trustees or whose duty it is to do so, and not let the children run on the streets all day instead of sending them to school. +++

The Publishing of Law Books.

There is one branch or the publishing business that is under a serious cloud just now. It is the publishing of law books. I was told recently by a gentleman connected with a law-publishing house in this city that the demand for books of that character has fallen off most remarkably within the past few years. Publishers are very shy about bringing out new works, so soon finishing the undertaking profitable. The rush into the legal profession has greatly abated. There is not the money in sight now that there once was. Some old-established firms are able still to divide large fees, of course, but, taken as a body, the profession has had rather short picking for several years.

It has been the experience of the older members of the bar that there is a growing disinclination on the part of their clients to litigate. The marked tendency of the times is toward the settlement of differences by compromise. It has come to be generally understood that lawsuits are expensive, in time, in costs and in lawyers' fees. Many business men have come to believe that it is better to take half and settle amicably than to get or lose all at the end of a lawsuit. It is doubtful whether, for many years to come, if ever again, the legal profession will be as generously rewarded as it has been in the past.—Cor. Chicago Journal.

The Late Prince of Orange.

By the way, there is an amusing anecdote, which is not generally known, concerning the manner in which the prince of Orange, a grand viveur, a passionate frequenter of all-night restaurants, and the original of the immortal type in Daudet's "Sapho in Exile," got his name of Citron or Lemon. It is said that in the early days of his dissipation as prince, he was one night surprised by a host of brilliant and wen thy French gentlemen, they manifested a certain awe of his title to repeat and inheritance to a throne, and so rather than run the risk of addressing him; so that one night when they were a-supping in a tremendous dark hall he said to one of the jolly spirits of the French gay world, a gentleman who had inherited a glorious name and an immense fortune, "Tell me, what can we do not 'Prince' me so much. Give me a name that will be more familiar." Whereupon the gentleman lifting his glass of ice-cold champagne and with an accent of knightly years and family larity, "A la bonne, citron," and citron the poor prince of Orange became and remained, until his dead, alias had carried him out upon the unknown.—Paris Letter.

Wanted to Keep the Watch.

A man came into the store with a battered old watch which he wanted repaired. One of the clerks took it in hand and remarked that he was a model pocket piece.

"Yes," said the owner, "but I want to keep that watch. It was given to me by my brother's wife's mother-in-law, and I want to preserve it as a token of—"

LABOR INTERESTS.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR CONVENTION BROUGHT TO A CLOSE.

A Love Feast Between the Clashing Factions Winds Up with a Declaration that All Differences Have Been Settled—To Confer with Trades Unions.

CLEVELAND, June 4.—The Knights of Labor, in the afternoon session of the special convention, took up and adopted the report of the committee on the state of the order. The report embodies a lengthy circular to the trades unions, which asserts that the time has arrived when end and real power-ful organization is the only salvation for the laboring man, and advises the trades unions to commune with the Knights of Labor. If, however, the circular continues, the trades unions decided to retain their party organizations, the Knights promise a hearty co-operation in the common cause of labor and the amelioration of the toiling millions.

It also promises and asks co-operation in the matter of working cards, so that no discarded members of the order can become a Knight of Labor, and vice versa.

It also recommends the appointment of a committee of five to stand until the annual meeting of the K. of L. assembly, to confer with such trades unions as may desire a conference on any subject, and ends as follows:

We further believe that upon a demand for increase of wages or shorter hours of labor made by either organization, a conference should be held with the combined laborers employed in the establishment.

When the demand for increase of wages or reduction of hours is contemplated, action upon a proposed increase of wages or other difficulty to be agreed upon in like manner, and that in the settlement of any difficulties the committee representing the organization represented in the establishment shall be parties to the terms of settlement. Trusting that the method proposed herein will meet with your approval and that of all labor will move forward and onward in harmony of effort and interest, we are yours, fraternally.

It is stated that something has been done to stop indiscriminate striking and boycotting, but what are the methods to be used have not been made public.

The executive board on the subject of centralization as exemplified by the Home club's principles now stands seven against the Home club, three for it and one doubtful.

A circular was given to the public, stating that the object of the Home club was not to depose Powderly, and declaring that all charges that had been basically settled, and that the very best of feeling prevails among the delegates. The latter part of the afternoon session was given up to a veritable love feast, and at 5 o'clock the convention adjourned sine die, having in the ten days' session accomplished all that the call suggested and implied.

Many of the delegates left for their homes last evening. The executive board, however, will remain in the city a few days longer, getting things in shape for the coming convention at Richmond, Va.

IRON AND STEEL WORKERS

Not Very Likely to Consolidate With the K. of L.

PITTSBURG, June 4.—It seems that the proposition of the Knights of Labor to take in the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers is not meeting with the general approbation that was expected to be assembled in this city. Secretary Martin, in an interview, said: "It seems to me that the Amalgamated association will have one of the largest, if not the largest, combination, namely: The Knights of Labor are advocates of arbitration, a principal which the Amalgamated never favored. Their plan suggested is federation of trades without arbitration. The Knights of Labor have made us a very fair offer. We fully appreciate the courtesy, but from present indications it seems to me that the Amalgamated association will still remain an independent organization."

The committee appointed to arrange for the return of the nailers to the Amalgamated association held a lengthy meeting, at which the nailers' scale was discussed. At present all indications point to the early return of the nailers. Several points of difference, however, remain to be settled.

It now looks as though the general scale to be presented to the manufacturers will be advanced at least 10 per cent. above last year's prices.

The nailers were readmitted to the Amalgamated association after a three hours' debate, amid a scene of mutual congratulation.

W. N. Lynch, Stephen Ripley and R. J. Potter, of the nailers' committee, had been admitted to the floor to hear the debate on the question, on which the vote was to decision to readmit the wandering sheep was carried, was by a vote of 99 to 12, and then made unanimous, the delegates gathered round these three gentlemen and shook hands vigorously.

The question of indorsing the strike against a wooden ware factory in Logansport, Ind., has been in progress for a year, will be passed upon by the board of trustees of the Amalgamated association.

There is no doubt that the nailers will be sustained, and they claim that with the backing of the association the strike will soon be brought to a satisfactory conclusion. During the past year the Amalgamated peddlers have made iron for the non-union nailers, but with the nailers back in the association they will be sustained and the manufacturers given no alternative but to accept the nailers' terms or close their mills.

The Big Strike About Over.

NEW YORK, June 4.—A dozen young men, moody and silent, sat on the front steps of a tenement on the corner of Fourth avenue and Eighty-seventh street, where the 1,500 Italian strikers have had their headquarters, when a reporter called there last night, and another dozen or so were inside with it, playing pool, but nobody seemed able or willing to furnish any information concerning the present status of the strike. There seemed to be a sort of mournful air about everything, and to all questions as to whether the strike had been declared off or not, or how much money was in the treasury and when would be made with it, what would be done with the books and whether there would be an investigation, the answer was non-committal, evasive or not returned. One man said that the executive board had been busy all day paying off, but he had not the faintest idea as to what future action was contemplated.

Consummate Meanness.

BALTIMORE, June 4.—Jacob Rosenthal and Louis Goldstein have been on bad terms for several months. They occupied in the same house, Rosenthal sleeping on the third floor and Goldstein on the second. Rosenthal crept down stairs to Goldstein's room, and while the latter was sleeping, poured vitriol into his ear from a bottle. The darkness awoke the victim, and his piercing screams aroused the whole house. He is suffer ng horrible agony, and is on the verge of insanity. Rosenthal is in jail.

A DESPERATE PRISONER

Makes a Vicious Attack Upon a Watchman in the Jail.

NEW YORK, June 4.—James Downing, alias "Silver" Downing, made a desperate attempt to escape from the Essex county jail, Newark, Downing in a desperate man, and the bars of his cell door have been examined every day to ascertain whether he has tampered with them. Since his confinement every bar has been made one other attempt to escape, but after a long chase was brought back to the jail with a revolver pointed at each temple.

Watchman John Bobb entered the eastern hall and threw off the bars that held the cell doors shut, to let the hall men, who had been locked up, go out to attend to their duties. While stooping to raise the bar, he received a heavy blow on the head from some one who stood behind him, which knocked him down. The watchman realized that he had been attacked by a prisoner who hoped to get the jailers' keys and make his escape. He shouted for help, and Thomas Gilroy, one of the hall men, ran from his cell and saw Downing in the act of striking Bobb on the head with a heavy iron bar. Before the bar could descend, Gilroy grabbed Downing's arm and wrested the weapon from his grasp. Downing then turned and ran down the hall into the room. Bobb, blinded by the blood flowing from his cuts, followed and fired shots at him in quick succession, but did not hit him. Warden Johnson, Deputy Sheriff George Johnson, and Keeper Hughes, ran into the hall, armed with revolvers. Downing then walked out into the hall, and, finding no escape ahead, swore that he would kill the first man who approached him. After a short parley Deputy Johnson said sternly: "If you are not in your cell by the time I count three, I'll carry your dead body in." When the deputy had counted "two," Downing sullenly retreated into his cell.

The convict had pried two bars from his cell door in the night with a small steel saw, which was found in his possession. Bobb's injuries consisted of two ugly cuts on the head, a mashed finger and a badly crushed hand. His wounds are not dangerous.

THE DEAD CHIEFTAIN.

Mrs. Kelly Somewhat Recovered, Attended by Physicians.

NEW YORK, June 4.—But few people called at the house of the late John Kelly, on East Sixty-ninth street. Prompted by the gentlemanly, it was regret, the friends of the dead chief thought of the sorrowing widow, and the constant coming and going from the house of death which marked the early part of Wednesday night gave place to unbroken quiet until the true friends were permitted to view the remains. Late in the afternoon the remains, still encased in the ice coffin, were removed from the library to the back parlor on the floor below. A black pall, falling over the casket to the floor, concealed it from view. This was the way to either side at the head, exposing the face, so that such old friends as wished might look their last upon it. A white satin pillow is tastefully at the head, and a single lighted taper rested in the middle of the casket, above an ebony crucifix laid upon the pall.

From 3 until 11 o'clock last night, gravefaced men and women, singly and in pairs, passed through the hall into the death presence, gazed upon the pallid features as though each bore a sacred and kind act, some endearing trait of the man who lay there dead. Mrs. Kelly has recovered in a measure from the effects of the first grief, and is still far from well. Yesterday was Ascension Thursday, a day of prayer in the Catholic church, and the bereaved widow, in company with her children, went to early mass in the cathedral. Her two children, here sister and sister-in-law accompanied her, going on foot to and from the church.

BASEBALL FAILURE.

A Providence Club Given Up the Ghost from Lack of Patronage.

PROVIDENCE, June 4.—The new baseball nine including Charlie Robinson and Edgar Stewart, disbanded to-night after a half months' play. Schomberg, McCarthy and McKean, $840; Seward, $700; Corrigan, $500; McGeocher, Gettins, Heffer, Landis, O'Brien, Taylor and Whitin, at a salary of $100 per month, has disbanded. The entire salary list amounted to $9,500, the first salary day being in May. The association has been a failure from start to finish. Not a single game was ever played in Providence that would pay the gate money. The association was organized to disband the club at once. The players were authorized to sign wherever they chose, and will be helped out of the city. The association has a total debt of $2,500, which has now has but $9 60. It owes about $1,500, of which $35 is for poster printing.

Confederate Memorial Day.

NORFOLK, Va., June 4.—Confederate Memorial day was observed here yesterday, and was largely attended by Confederate camps, Confederate veterans. The parade was the largest seen here in years, about 600 ex-Union soldiers participating, including R. E. Lee camp, Confederate veterans of Richmond, Fourth Virginia regiment, sailors and marines from the navy yard and training squadron, fire department, Pickett Union Rifles, Old Fellows, Knights Templars and Farragut post, G. A. R. Capt. John S. Tucker, of Washington, delivered a memorial address, and Gen. Worthington, of this city, a beautiful poem.

The Maxwell Trial.

ST. LOUIS, June 4.—The Maxwell trial the day was taken up by Mr. McDonald for the prosecution and Mr. Martin for the defense. The latter will finish his speech today, and Mr. Glover will open for the prosecution. The probabilities now are that the case will go to the jury late to-day.

The Tailors Not Satisfied.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The 8,000 striking journeymen tailors have resolved not to accept the terms of compromise offered by the boss tailors at the meeting of the manufacturers. The men adopted resolutions condemning the "piece work" system, and declaring that they will hold out against it.

Wheels Lasting Horses.

NEW YORK, June 4.—In the race between Anderson, on horseback, and Brooks and Rosenthal, on bicycles, at Manhattan Beach, was: Anderson, 625 miles, 3 laps; Bicyclists, 642 miles, 5 laps. Anderson has injured his ankle by his horse falling.

Bogus Butter Taxed.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The house by a vote of 177 to 107 passed the bill, after amending, to put a tax of five cents per pound upon all forms of bogus butter.

GROWING PERSONAL.

MR. THOMAS POWER O'CONNOR DEFENDS MR. GLADSTONE.

He Says He Could a Tale Unfold That Would Startle the House by Exposing the Methods of Securing an Election. Appeal to the Liberals.

LONDON, June 3.—Mr. Thomas Power O'Connor, recalling the home rule debate in the house of commons, said he thought himself justified in asserting that the argument which assumed that Ireland would be satisfied with anything less than separation, or that the present bill involved or contemplated a separation, had vanished from the minds of all reasonable politicians. (Cries of dissent from the Whigs and Conservatives.) He contended that Mr. Chamberlain had insinuated that the premier was capable of cheating the house. He (Mr. Gladstone) could not cheat the house, and would not if he could.

As long as the five conditions laid down by Mr. Gladstone for executing the main principle of the bill were observed by the house, the government would fail to accept any other plan than the present one. If the present bill was defeated, a weak Tory government, having revolutionary views, immediately submit a home rule bill upon its own peculiar lines and, without expecting it to pass, make a bid for the suffrages of the electors who have been long to the Conservatives by their present course. Mr. O'Connor said that he himself, with many others, had tried at the last election to return a weak Conservative government, and if those efforts had been successful a home rule bill would have been introduced into the dead house of commons now. During the elections, he said, the meeting place of every branch of the National league in England was a Tory committee room. Conservative agents at Bolton had paid the expenses of printing and circulating Mr. Parnell's manifesto. Mr. Bridgeman, Conservative member for Bolton, said that he was not aware that this had been done. He thought it had not.

Mr. O'Connor said that honorable considerations restrained him, or he would startle the house by exposing the methods of rigging the election at Camberwell and the peculiar connection of Lord Randolph Churchill's friend, Mr. Blunt, therewith.

Lord Randolph Churchill said he would consider it a personal favor if Mr. O'Connor would relieve himself of restraint and proceed with his startling revelations.

Mr. O'Connor said he should require the permission of Mr. Blunt, who perhaps would, if requested, supply the gentleman with the medicum of information he lacked.

In conclusion Mr. O'Connor said the principles and traditions of liberalism required that the Liberals should give to Mr. Gladstone the support which he had sustained, their unanimous and hearty support.

Mr. Bradlaugh followed in support of the bill.

MORLEY'S HOT SHOT.

He Tells the House of Commons Some Plain Truths.

Mr. John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, replied to the remarks made by Sir Julian Goldsmid, member for St. Pancras, that members should arrive at an understanding with reference to the home rule bill similar to that obtained upon the land bill. He (Morley) would not object to this if the conditions were favorable, but a consensus of opinion was impossible now. Did Mr. Goldsmid, he asked, think a modus vivendi possible with an opposition advocating twenty years of coercion! (Cries of No! no! and hisses.)

"I will withdraw my expression concerning coercion if a single member on the opposition benches will disavow Lord Salisbury's speech," said Mr. Morley.

Members, he continued, had expressed their willingness to affirm the principle of home rule, and yet had decided to oppose the bill when defeating their own object. The crisis was very grave. The case of today is different, very different, from that of Daniel O'Connell's time, which Lord Hartington had referred to. There was no longer the ascendancy of an alien church; landlords were no long er in an absolute position, and the people were no longer serfs.

There had been much talk of dismemberment of the empire and the dispersion of the Irish across the sea. For many years there was a real dismemberment in regard to local government in Ireland, which many members of parliament were disposed to treat as a matter of course. Their own object, it was impossible to ignore the advantage of a large central authority. Ireland, Mr. Morley said, had had a large experience in local administration, which had left it that trials by jury were as fair and impartial there as in England. How could members talk of governing Ireland when the whole people were against them?

Regarding the suggestion that Mr. Parnell be made chief secretary for Ireland, Mr. Morley declared that Mr. Parnell and many of his colleagues would accept the office. If they did they would soon lose their influence in the existing state of things. What they wanted was to get a bill upon their paper who were desirous of carrying on a regular and orderly method of government. Had the country spent upon Ireland half the money and energy which it had spent upon Egypt and other foreign countries, Ireland would now be a support to England instead of a load.

We have taught Ireland to be mendicant instead of self-reliant by alternative bribes and subsidies and by bolstering up the worst land system ever seen.

It would be absurd to compare Ireland to Scotland.

The government, Mr. Morley said, had chosen to proceed with a bill instead of a resolution, because it felt that it ought to be prepared with a plan. It had never expected to carry the scheme by a rush.

In conclusion he said: "Let us put the opponents of the bill imagine for a moment that by driving the government from the stage they could carry out the last scene of the fifth and final act of the Irish question. If the house refuses the solution of the question now offered, it may re y upon it that no other, unless compelled by the force of this measure, will carry the solution a single effective stage further."

On motion of Mr. Illing worth the debate was adjourned.

Mrs. Garfield Thankfully Sued.

CLEVELAND, June 4.—The case of Thankful Tanner vs. Lucretia R. Garfield, widow of the late President Garfield, was begun in common pleas court. Thankful, who is a notorious woman of the town, sues Mrs. Garfield for $25,000 damages for slight injuries received by being knocked down by Mrs. Garfield's carriage on December, 1884. It is believed that Tanner women purposely ran against the carriage.

THE MASONIC LODGE.

New York Grand Lodge Adjourns—Their Hall Debt.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The session of the Masonic grand lodge for the year 1886 closed yesterday afternoon. The report of the committee on hall and asylum building to the effect that the present debt of the fraternity was read by Past Grand Master William A. Brodie. It recommended that the grand lodge suitably recognize the efforts made by Grand Master Lawrence to reduce the debt on the temple, and referred, with full power, to the grand masters and trustees of the hall and asylum fund the matter of the repayment of the first mortgage bonds now outstanding. The committee recommended the adoption of amendments to the constitution providing that when the present indebtedness of the hall and asylum shall be paid the annual tax of fifty cents now imposed upon every member of the fraternity of the state and every lodge which shall pay at the rate of $6 per head for each of its members shall be relieved from any further payment of the fifty cents tax; that all taxes already paid or to be in the future paid by any lodge towards the payment of the debt, shall be deemed payments on account of the per capita sum of $6, and on specific to each lodge. The committee also recommended legislation providing that no new tax shall hereafter be imposed upon the lodges for the benefit of the hall and asylum fund except by an amendment to the constitution, which shall not be valid until it shall have been submitted to and adopted by a majority of all the lodges in the state and that the proposed amendment be not laid over for action until next year, but be at once submitted to the lodges for their approval.

The grand master and other officers contributed their salaries, amounting to $1,000, to the hall debt fund.

AN OYSTERMAN'S CATCH.

A Wealthy Bride Kissed the Members of a Band.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., June 4.—This village is greatly disturbed over the elopement of Miss Carrie Hicks, aged 17, with William Underhill, aged 21, who is an oysterman in summer and a stage driver in winter, and is, therefore, supposed to occupy a lower social station than the Hicks family. The father-in-law of ex-Assemblyman W. J. Youngs, and whose family have plenty of money and associate with the Roosevelts and other New York people who come to lagos here. The couple went to Cold Spring and were married by the Episcopal rector. On returning, the lady notified her sister, Mrs. Young, who is also a bride. Mrs. Mason, both of whom immediately fainted. It seems that it was young Underhill's fine baritone voice that first impressed Miss Mason, as she heard it in the church, where he was a member of the choir. The Mason ladies have an elegant residence on Fifth avenue, in New York, but live here most of the time, Mr. Mason being dead.

The villagers seem much pleased that the handsome and stalwart young stage driver should have married the rich girl, and bonfires were lighted in the streets last night to celebrate the event, and the brass band serenaded the happy couple, whereupon Mrs. Underhill made herself solid with the community by publicly kissing each member of the band.

A HORSE TRADE.

Minnie Cummings Sues Edward Throckmorton for Cheating Her.

LONG BRANCH, June 3.—A few days ago Minnie Cummings, actress, traded her famous horse, Black Diamond, for Throckmorton's mare and $100 to boot, the other party in the trade being Edward Throckmorton, of this place. She found that the horse had the glanders and sued Throckmorton, who demanded back Black Diamond, but the old horse had died. To sell a horse affected with the glanders is a penal offense under the statutes of New Jersey. The actress has brought suit against Throckmorton for cheating her in the trade, and will further prosecute him on the criminal charge of selling a glandered horse. Miss Cummings also had L. S. Bennett, editor of The Record, arrested on the charge of criminal libel for saying in his paper that Black Diamond's owner had "a propensity for beating people." Editor Bennett gave bail, pending the action of the grand jury.

Millionaire Casey Dead.

ERIE, June 4.—The Hon. James Casey, a millionaire railroad and coal contractor, died here after a short illness. He was prominently known in his later days by his liberal gifts to the Catholic church in Pittsburg and its beneficiaries, in addition to the testimonials which he contributed to the church and charity, he gave a son and daughter to the service. Thomas J. Casey, now vicar general of this diocese, and Sister Mary Inez, mother superior of the Pittsburg convent. Mr. Casey and his brother Patrick were the builders of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago and Rock Island, from Grinnell to Omaha. He was a prominent figure in the Father Mathew Temperance society.

THE HONEYMOON.

DRIVING AND WALKING IN THE BLUE MOUNTAINS.

Guarded by Twelve Detectives, the Bride and Groom Enjoy Their Rest from the Cares of Official and Social Life—The Wedding Presents.

DEER PARK, MD., June 4.—The presidential party arrived here yesterday morning and are snugly domiciled in a cottage. The entire second flat there is untenanted save by Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland and one servant for each, their meals being sent from the hotel near at hand. After a consultation the happy pair took a long drive over the mountains, the president declining with some irritation to be driven by four horses. After dinner they strolled about in the grounds on the mountain side, returning home before dark and declaring that they had spent a delightful day.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad people have secured the services of twelve detectives, who are picketed about the grounds of the president's cottage. The president, however, declares that there is no need of their services. Few people from the cities are yet occupying the cottages in their neighborhood, and the only manifestation of curiosity of the people about the countryside and the unobtrusive presence of a corps of newspaper correspondents, the president and Mrs. Cleveland follow their own inclinations without observation.

ROSE KNEW IT WAS COMING.

Notes and Gossip at the Deserted White House.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The president is not expected to return for at least a week. Before going away he sent word to the executive officers of congress that he did not wish the usual reception to him for two days. The decorations were permitted to remain, and several photographers were given an opportunity to make pictures. Col. Lamont was through the bags of the last of congratulatory dispatches received, but which he had not time to open. It is expected that the president, when he returns, will give a reception in honor of Mrs. Cleveland. To this reception will be invited all of the officials of Washington. The diplomatic people called upon Secretary Bayard for the purpose of attending through him their congratulations to the president. They will be given an opportunity to present their congratulations in person at the reception.

Secretary and Mr. Whitney gave a spray of diamonds, Mr. and Mrs. Vilas' present was a bowl of Hermican gold, with filigree edge, surrounded by a circle of diamonds. Mrs. Endicott gave four silver candlesticks. Secretary Lamar's present to the bride was a vinaigrette of Bohemian glass, with ends of gold, studded with diamonds, rubies and sapphires.

Miss Cleveland, in the regrets of the cabinet circle that the marriage of the president must dissolve their old relations, replied that she acquiesced cordially in the new arrangement, as it would remain only for two years, she said, and had known for more than a year that it was settled. She added: "If you have observed carefully during the year when you must have noticed many things on my part looking towards the change. I have tried to prepare the way for a coming mistress of the mansion." In wiping away her tears, after greeting her new sister, she said bravely: "I believe I am the only foolish one here." She declared she would remain till after the president's return, then she will go home to Holland Patent and give herself up to literary work.

Mrs. Folsom's Washington home will be the country house just purchased by the president.

When the president first consented to have a ring for the bride, he asked if he could not put it on her hand before coming down stairs. He thought it hardly a legitimate feature of an orthodox Presbyterian marriage service. He said to a gentleman who called on him the day before the wedding to congratulate him, that he had been so busy all the week he had forgotten he was to be married next day. On going away he told members of his cabinet that he might perhaps get homesick and come back before the week was over.

Secretary and Mrs. Manning will start for Warm Springs, in the western part of Virginia, on Saturday. They will go by special car. They will remain three weeks or more, and on returning here will remain only a few days before going north.

Almost all telegrams congratulating the president on his marriage have been received at the White House. They include messages from ex-President Arthur, Mrs. Grant, Ministers Pendleton and Phelps, and many public men throughout the country.

Drink and Domestic Trouble.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The people living in the tenement house No. 214 Ridge street, were startled about 6:30 a. m. to-day, by the report of pistol shots in the rear. It proved that the shots were fired by Joseph Leppert, occupying apartments on the second floor, in an attempt to take his life. He had inflicted two wounds, one over his heart on the left breast, about an inch to right of the nipple, and another on the right side of the forehead. He will probably die. Drink and domestic troubles are the causes assigned for the act.

BEADING FORECLOSURE.

Bondholders Giving Evidence Before the Court in the Case.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—The Reading railroad foreclosure examination was commenced yesterday before Master Pollock. Treasurer Church, of the railroad company, testified that only one formal demand had been made on him in January, 1885, for payment of interest on the general mortgage. This was by the Farmers and Mechanics' bank, which presented coupons on $100,000 bonds.

James W. Paul, of Drexel, Morgan & Co., declined to answer Mr. Gowen's question as to how many general mortgage bonds had been deposited with the firm under the syndicate reorganization plan. John A. Wright, a member of the general mortgage bondholders' committee, stated his objections to the plan, but said that with all its unfairness in certain particulars it was better than none at all.

William M. Robinson, of New York, the plaintiff in the foreclosure suit, testified that he was the holder of $5,000 of the general mortgage bonds, which he bought in December, 1884, through Drexel, Morgan & Co., at 71. He knew the company was in receiver's hands. He gave an order soon after to Drexel, Morgan & Co. to buy for him. He did so partly at the suggestion of his stockbroker, Mr. Wright, of the firm of Drexel & Co.

E. S. Whelen, chairman of the Whelen committee, said that his committee had never approved the reorganization plan. His principal objection to it was that the incomes and first series 5s were placed on the same footing, and preferred stock came between them and the general mortgage. His family holds $57,000 of general mortgage bonds, but his only holding of stock is fifteen shares of preferred.

IN THE CRIMEA.

A Large Army in Waiting for a Chance to Fight.

LONDON, June 4.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that the porte is contemplating the possibility of sending to the powers a protest against the extraordinary armaments of Russia. From this it would appear that the porte has just awakened to the fact that the objective point of Russia's activity in the Crimea is nothing less than Turkey. There is great activity in the foundries and dock yards at Odessa and Sebastopol.

Two powerful war vessels, the Techesme and the Catharine II, have lately been launched at Sebastopol, and no time is lost by active service. The whole line of defences around the coast of the Crimea has been thoroughly inspected and repaired or rebuilt wherever it was found necessary.

An army of more than 120,000 men is concentrated in the Crimea, or adjacent to it, in Southern Russia, and the whole Black sea fleet is in commission. With such an army and navy, and with the reenforcements which are ready in Bessarabia to be hurled against Turkey, there is little doubt that Russia would be victorious if the war were allowed to be fought out between herself and Turkey. The sultan himself, at least in his chief advisers, are well aware of this fact, and this accounts for the proposed protest to the powers.

The porte has, during the past six months, sought in every way to strengthen the alliance with England, Germany, Austria and Italy, and it is upon those powers that she would chiefly rely for direct or indirect aid in case of an attack by Russia.

Stove Monopoly Threatened.

CLEVELAND, June 4.—Some of the stove manufacturers here are excited at President Smyser's proposition for absolute monopoly, although there is a universal desire among the delegates to raise prices. The smaller dealers look upon it as a scheme to crush them out, though they admit that they cannot help themselves. Twelve of the 100,000 to locate here have already been subscribed. It is evident that the monopolists were largely in the majority.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—For the districts bordering on the Atlantic, fair weather, with stationary temperature, may be expected.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

The New York Stock Market Feverish and Fluctuating.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Stock Exchange sales, $1,834,430. Governments firm; currency, 6s, 121 bid; 4½s coup., 110½; 4s do., 120 bid.

The stock market opened weak and fractionally lower this morning, but after the first few transactions a decided reaction set in, and several other leaders resulted in an advance of ¼ to 1 per cent. by the final call. Toward the last a pool on Louisville and Nashville, together with the covering of shorts, gave to the latter that because of the heavy loss in earnings the road would be placed in the hands of a receiver, resulted in a break of prices that affected the entire list of railroads. At the time of closing the market was feverish, with Louisville and Nashville 3 per cent. lower. In the speculative Richmond and Danville was the feature, advancing 10 per cent.

Rates Reduced.
The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to
per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly specified to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an assessment, or upon the uncertainty of life or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy. Every dollar of the tract is backed by assets of over $600,000.
The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in the year 1876, and has remained in operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has a reserve fund of $562,152.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be made readily apparent by the statement that in addition to its having satisfactorily settled claims to over $600,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. ### To Destroy the Codling Moth.

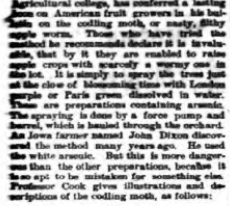
Professor A. J. Cook, of the Michigan Agricultural college, has conferred a lasting favor on American fruit growers in his bulletin on the codling moth, or cauly, filthy apple worm. After a long series of trials he considers he recommends declare it is invaluable, that by it they are enabled to raise apple crops with scarcely a worm or one in a hundred. It simply consists in the spraying at the close of blossoming time with London purple or Paris green dissolved in water. These are preparations containing arsenic. The sprayer is a force pump and barrel, which is hauled through the orchard. As Iowa farmer named John Dixon discovered the method many years ago. He used the white arsenic. But this is more dangerous than the other preparations, because it is so apt to be mistaken for something else. Professor Cook gives illustrations and descriptions of the codling moth, as follows:



CODLING MOTH AND WORM.

The moth, F and G, is accurately represented in the picture in form and size. The main color is gray flecked with darker dots and lines, with the characteristic copper colored spot at the end of its front wings. This spot will always enable one to distinguish this moth. Every apple grower should get several apples and open the nest and examine them, that there may be no doubt about the species. In May, about two weeks after the blossoms appear, the female moth commences to lay eggs in the calyx of the blossoms. B. These soon hatch, when the minute larva shown full grown, E eats into the apple and feeds upon the pulp about the core, filling the space with its fecal filth.

These spring moths continue to come from cellar or apple house till July. I have found much moths left on the screen of my cellar window. The whitish larva attain their full growth in about four weeks. This period will be lengthened by cold and shortened by heat. When mature the larva leaves the apple, which may have fallen to the ground, and seeks a secluded place in which to spin its cocoon. (I) and pupa, or chrysalis (D) is much like those of other moths. The pupa of the June and July larvae are found in the cocoons soon after the latter are formed, while the pupe of the autumn larvae do not pupate till spring, but past the winter as larvae in the cocoons. The eggs of the second brood are laid in July, August and September. The larvae feed in autumn, and often till mid-winter, while as just stated they do not pupate till spring.

Professor Cook prefers London purple to Paris green on account of its greater ease to mix in the water. The mixture is as follows: I mix the powder one pound to fifty gallons of water. It is best to wet the powder thoroughly and make a paste before putting it into the vessel of water, that it may all mix, and not form lumps. For a few trees we may use a pail and Whiteman's fountain pump, always keeping the liquid well stirred. One common pail of the liquid will suffice for the largest tree. A teaspoon full of the poison is enough for a pailful of water. For a large orchard common barrels should be used, drawn in a wagon. I prefer to have the barrels stand on end with a close removable floor with two holes through it, one for the pipe or hose from the pump and the other for a stirrer. If very large orchards are to be treated a good force pump should be fastened to the barrel. In western New York the handle of the pump is attached to the wagon wheel, so that no hand power is required other than to drive the team and manage the pipe which carries the spray. The spray may be caused by a fine perforated nozzle or a sprinkler. The finer the spray the more will be required. The important thing is to scatter the spray on all the fruit, and get it as little on as possible. The larva is killed by eating the poison, and we find that the faintest trace suffices for the purpose. Again, the poison should be applied early. By the time the fruit is the size of a small pea. I have found one such application to be work wonders. There is no doubt but that the first application, followed by one or two others at intervals of two or three weeks, would be more thorough, yet I have found one application, made early, so effective that I have wondered whether it is best or necessary to make more than one application. I do think, however, that it must be early. In May and June the calyx of the apple is open, and a sufficient quantity of poison will long to kill most all of the insects.

One more count in favor of this treatment is the further good we receive by killing the several broods of canker worms. The young foliage of the apple at this early period when defoliation is so harmful. Thus the terrible combination, the several destructive pests suffers which even eat out the very buds, and that old pest, the tent caterpillar, are all made to bite the sod. Very likely, too, the plum gouger, which so defaces the apple in Wisconsin, may also find in this remedy its death warrant.

The danger from this practice I have proved to be nothing at all. The microscope and chemical analysis have both shown that all the poison has been removed long before the wild fruit, the fruit which we eat, is ripe. Than the rain helps to effect this removal, as I have shown by putting the poison on plants shelter from the rain. Of course one should not turn stock into an orchard till a heavy rain has washed the poison from all foliage under the trees.

Where one treatment did not feel able to afford the pump several might buy one in partnership and use it turn about. Spraying once a week for a month, beginning just as the apples go out of bloom, will cure the worst orchard that grows, not only of the codling moth, but also of the caterpillar and canker worm. I am sure that such method affect that where one side of a tree has been sprayed and the other side left, as an experiment, the sprayed side bore sound apples, the other side wormy ones.

Homemade Cheese.

The following plain and simple method of making cheese is given by The American Agriculturist in a late number: The pan containing the milk must be placed in another pan holding water, to prevent scorching the milk, and heat must be put into the mass of milk in the tub, until all reaches 86 degs. Add sufficient prepared rennet to coagulate the milk in about forty minutes. When the mass readily splits apart by pressing the finger in it, cut into blocks with the curd knife. Let it rest for fifteen minutes. Now carefully break the curd by gradually lifting it with the hands, fingers apart, to the surface of the whey, and when well broken let it rest fifteen minutes. Now dip off a portion of the whey into pans on the stove, and continue breaking the curds until size of chestnuts, and continue pouring in the warm whey, until the mass reaches 96 degs. Let it rest for half an hour, when it must be stirred slowly until the curds show a firm consistency. Then, some together in the hand, and when pressed, if it readily falls to pieces, it is ready for draining. Throw a cloth strainer over the tub, and dip out of the whey down to the curd; then put the strainer on a willow clothes basket, and dip the curd into it to drain. Break up the curds with the hands, and when pretty dry, salt at the rate of four ounces of salt to ten pounds of curd; mix it thoroughly and put to press. After the cheese has been four hours in the press, turn and press again, leaving it in over night, when it may be removed to the shelf. Rub with butter, and turn daily until ripe. Small cheese need no bandage and little pressure.

Drains to Clay Soils.

Water soaks down very thoroughly, especially when it has been cultivated thoroughly. If underdrains are run in clay fields there is danger that at the upper end, if considerable water flows in, it will carry with it sediment and thus close up the tile. To prevent this sink a well at the head of the ditch, two or three feet deeper than the bottom of the outlet. This will hold the dirt, and by clearing out once a year the drain will keep in order forever. Where the drains run through clays the well will sink down to the frost, better after the frosts of a few winters have opened the soil.

Preserving Eggs.

The very low price of eggs has this year come unusually early, and it is now so much lower than it has averaged of late years that the chances are rather for an advance than a fall. Certainly eggs at present rates are cheap food, and whoever will preserve them until winter will be pretty sure of a profit. Dipping the eggs in strong lime water and then packing in salt is a safe way to preserve them. They should be in a tight box, which should be turned over every two or three days to prevent the yolk from settling down so as to touch the shell.

For Potato Bugs.

Paris green or London purple, to destroy the potato bug, is more economically applied with plaster or ground gypsum than with water, and the effect is better. Mix one part of poison with one hundred parts, by weight, of plaster. Too much of the poison injures the foliage. If sufficient care is used in the thorough mixture of the substance, Paris green can be used in the proportion of one to one hundred and fifty.

Cause of Bad Butter.

One cause of much of the bad butter in market is the unclean condition of many farmers' cows. Decaying vegetables taint the air, and their odors are absorbed by the milk, to reappear in whatever is made from it. If the meat barrel becomes at all tainted it should be at once removed. In fact, wherever milk and cream are kept in cellars they should be in different rooms from the pork barrel.

Things to Do and to Know.

More than 1,000,000 trees were planted in Nebraska on Arbor day.

A little feed at milking time will make a cow give down her milk.

Three valuable implements on the farm are the Climax disk harrow, the Acme harrow and the McCalm pulverizer.

An Iowa farmer says that he succeeds well with wire fence for hogs. He runs wire with posts a rod apart. He puts the first four wires only four inches apart at the bottom.

Apple Tree Bark or Scale Louse.

Professor Cook recommends a remedy for this. He writes of it: The apple scale, or bark louse, is very common and destructive. It is often called the oyster shell bark louse and is known in science as mytilaspis pomorum boucha.

The illustration shows at the top how the bark looks with the scales upon it. The scales appear from August to June. Underneath them are millions of infinitesimal white eggs. To the eye they look like fine white powder. Magnified they look like the egg seen to the right of the pieces of bark in the picture. In June they hatch as yellowish lice. These spread all over the tree and suck its juices. By August they in turn are enveloped fully, secrete the bark louse scale and lay eggs under it. They often destroy whole large trees.

Professor Cook's Remedy.

The old remedy, soft soap, or a strong solution of the same, will surely vanquish this enemy if it is applied in early June and again in the autumn before I have proved the efficacy of this treatment over and over again. The trees at once put on new vigor, and in a short time only dead lice could be found. To apply this specific I know of no better way than to use a cloth and scrub by hand. To be sure we can, if dainty, use a brush like a shoe brush, but I like to go at it with a good cloth, which leaves rolled up, and make pretty sure that no louse escapes.

For the past few years I have changed the substance for killing, crude petroleum, which I think improves it, especially if but one application is to be made; and we know that at this busy season the second application is apt to be neglected.

I heat to the boiling point one quart of soft soap to two gallons of water, and while still hot thoroughly stir in one pint of crude petroleum. Let the heat and power it into the mass of milk in the tub, until all reaches 86 degs. Add sufficient prepared rennet to coagulate the milk in about forty minutes. When the mass readily splits apart by pressing the finger in it, cut into blocks with the curd knife. Let it rest for fifteen minutes. Now carefully break the curd by gradually lifting it with the hands, fingers apart, to the surface of the whey, and when well broken let it rest fifteen minutes. Now dip off a portion of the whey into pans on the stove, and continue breaking the curds until size of chestnuts, and

The Brush Electric Works.

The Brush electric light, in name at least, is familiar to most of our readers. Most of them, too, have seen the dazzling, moon-like lights that are fixed at elevations here and there in the streets of Cleveland. This is the arc electric light, and the type of it is that made at Cleveland, O., in the factory named for Charles F. Brush, the inventor. The works are very large, covering seven acres of ground. This is one-fifth as large as the Krupp gun factory in Germany.

BRUSH ELECTRIC WORKS.

"The Brush factory makes arcs, armatures, dynamos, motors and other machinery employed in the utilization of electricity for power as well as illumination. There is being made here at this time the largest dynamo in the world.

A dynamo is a machine for generating electricity. This one will be 13 feet long, 6½ wide, and weigh ten tons—four times the size and ability of the "Jumbo" machine exhibited by Edison at the Philadelphia exposition in 1884. Five hundred horse power will be required to drive it, and the current will furnish incandescent lights of about 10,000-candle power. There is a furnish power for the Cowles Aluminum company, a firm that extracts the metal aluminum from clay.

GENERAL MACHINE ROOM.

The five great chimneys seen in the picture are each 125 feet high. The main machine shop is 265 feet long and 122 wide. Four hundred workmen are employed in the shops. A view of the interior of the lamp factory would drive an old-fashioned man crazy. Ben Franklin never dreamed when he drew electricity from that cloud during a thunder storm what his discovery would result in.

The power department is run by an engine of 450 horse power. The machinery for making the carbons used in the arc light is among the most interesting. Retort coke is crushed first to egg size. Another crushing brings it to the size of buckwheat. Then it runs through burrs and bolting cloths, like so much wheat for flour, and comes out the finest kind of powder. Then it is shaped in molds for use, and the pressure on each small mold is 300 pounds. After that the carbons are dried in ovens for a week. Then they are inspected, plated with copper and packed for shipping. Of these carbons for electric lighting 50,000 a day are made.

In a small room on the grounds the inventor, Charles J. Brush, is experimenting constantly—thinking out improvements and new devices. The capital stock of the company is $10,000,000, and they are the sole owners of all the Brush patents.

The winding of the wires upon magnets and armatures occupies another department that is full of interest. The wire has to be drawn so carefully and closely that no speck of a foreign substance can get into its body. Such a foreign speck is called a "nigger" in electric manufacturing parlance. The smallest nigger stopping the passage of the lightning current would burn the wire in two. The length of the wire that winds the magnets and armature must be exact to one-thousandth of an inch. Electric lighting apparatus from the Brush factory is in use in every country in the civilized world. Storage batteries for holding electricity and retaining it so that it can be carried from one place to another are among the things manufactured. But these do not seem to have yet been a distinguished success anywhere.

The Planets Were Suns.

There seems reason to believe that every orb in space passes through stages of orb life which may be described by the terms fiery sun, the sunlike, the earthlike and the moonlike—and, therefore, we must recognize in the past history of our earth a time when her energies were far more active than those she now has. We cannot infer her power of ejecting matter from her interior, when she was in the sunlike stage, by the kind which she possesses now when she is in the middle of the life bearing portion of her career. When she was a sun she was a very small sun, as seen through the eyes of Stock and Chili, of Sicily, Naples, Spain and Iceland have taught us—that the earth's eruptive energies are even now in no sense contemptible.

Chimneys Without Corners.

It often happens that chimneys are now built round, without corners to retard the draught. This is done by inserting in the chimney, as the building progresses, cores consisting of iron pipes cast in sections, or tile pipes, of a size smaller than left between the core of the chimney and the outer wall, and of course the air in this space becomes heated to a high temperature. It is quite practicable, and in fact easy, to put a flue in each corner, but is found desirable. The air spaces being closed at the top, and openings being made to the open air at the base of the chimney, the piping is connected with the spaces for conducting the heat to different parts of the factory. Of course this method is not designed for heating the stories nearest the ground, as the current of air in ascending the roof had sufficient segment to become heated until it has reached the third or fourth story of the building.

In the long stone, in building a chimney for boilers, the chimney was built round, and then without corners to retard the draught. The brick were cut wedge shape, and a flue, used in sections, was set in for a core, and a space of six inches left for an air space, open to the air outside the chimney. The air spaces were closed at the top of the chimney, sixteen inch tin piping being laid from the third story of the factory to the air space. Notwithstanding the assertions to the contrary that draught would be spoiled the third story and part of the fourth in that factory are now warmed from the air space in the chimney.—Power.

Old and Young Sleeping Together.

A common and most grievous mistake is to have children sleep upon spring beds. A straw pallet on the floor would be far better. During the nutritive regeneration of the tissues, which takes place during sleep in all persons, the child should be the heavy loser, if lying in sleep close to a person of declining years. Instances are not lacking to prove the truth of this statement. One may take a right to rob a child of the birthright of sound health to gratify the selfish whims of aged persons, who are often to blame for urging children to their course.

As far as can be done, children should have separate beds, even if two are in the same room. It is both better for health and more conducive to sound, refreshing sleep, which is much the same thing. Parents, as they regard the lives of the young under their care, should see to it that they do not suffer during the important period of early life that is given to sleep.

Electrical Inventions.

The greatest number of inventions on any one subject in 1885 are those relating to electricity, the number last year being 1,358, or 5.75 per cent of the whole number, which was 23,330. The number of the last patent issued in 1885 was 325,495; of these about 205,672 are now in force (perhaps a few more than that number), which is about the number that was granted in the last seventeen years up to the first of last January.

Facts of Interest.

A New York physician has interesting the doctors and others by eating glass as a boy would a pie.

Owing to the labors of the United States fish commission there is a great increase in the shad take.

A new company has been formed for the extension by submarine cables of telegraphic communication on the west coast of Africa.

An international maritime exhibition will be held in Havre, May 1 of next year, to be devoted to all kinds of sailing or steam ships, engines, life-saving contrivances, fisheries, and the products of the French colonies. Application for exhibit must be made to the Direction de l'Exposition Maritime Internationale, 118 Rue de Paris, Havre.

BEARING THE MEMENTOES OF HARD-FOUGHT CONFLICTS.

Dancing with a Wooden Leg—The Itching of an Absent Toe—One-Legged Men on a March—A Change in the Elevation.

"One of the most remarkable things to me," said a physician of prominence, "is that the old soldiers of the war bear the mementoes of hot conflicts, the remembrances of days or weeks or months of suffering and misery with such cheerful unconcern. Most men who wear wooden legs or cork legs do it in a way to create the impression that the limbs lost in battle are still a part of themselves. The other night at a dance one of the most graceful dancers on the floor was a man who had lost his leg at New Hope Church, and yet there was probably not a lady in the room who thought for a moment that she danced with a wooden-legged man.

"There are other remembrances of various conflicts that can not escape observation. A man has a scar on his face, a crooked nose, a broken jaw, or a distorted chin are not the sort of things to make any man cheerful, and yet I never heard any soldier thus disfigured complain or grumble in public, and I have known cases in which the bearer of such disfigurement was accused of carrying his mark through some disgraceful brawl, rather than as a memorial of the struggle in which he played the part of the hero.

THE ITCHING OF AN ABSENT TOE.

"There is one man in the city who, in the second year of the war, had the tip of his nose and his middle toe carried away by one shot. He had thrown himself down for rest on a side hill just before the skirmish line, when a stray rebel bullet took him lengthwise, as it were, went through his cap brim, clipped an eighth of an inch off his shaggy brow, went through the end of the nose, cutting off squarely his middle toe. His nose is all right now except a persistently pale spot on the end, but the missing toe comes back like a ghost to make him nearly frantic at times.

"I have seen him jump from his chair in the office, unbutton his shoe, look at his high as the ceiling, and then kneel down like a madman. People who did not know the story of the missing toe are very apt to jump to the conclusion that my friend is erratic as well as eccentric, and it is not very often that he makes an explanation. He says it is bad enough to have a finger or toe itch when you can get at it, but when a toe has an itching spell and know that it isn't there and that you can't get at it even if you could reach 400 miles, and to have it keep up that irritating, tantalizing sensation for days at a time, or fifteen minutes and to have no chance of getting at it is too much for human nature."

ONE-LEGGED MEN ON A MARCH.

"The Comrades' Rest, in the Louisiana," said a one-armed stalwart, "is to see a lot of one-legged fellows on a march. Not long ago at a regimental reunion a squad of veterans, each of whom had lost a leg or a part of a leg, determined to march in the procession. They had all sorts of appliances, and each one was provided with his own substitute for the leg that nature had given him. When the band struck up one of the old marching tunes we were on level ground, and all those tanned veterans kept step as well as any corps as if they had never been wounded. I rejoiced greatly in the thought that they would demonstrate that cork legs and wooden stubs answered all the purposes of the original.

"But there came a change in the elevation of the street and my one-legged squad were in disorder at once. In going up the incline more than half the motion of the appliances got out of order, and the spectacle of these old fellows trying to keep time was ludicrous enough to make any man laugh and pitiful enough to make some men cry. Finally they joked and laughed, dropped out for a minute, adjusted their wooden legs, and were again in the ranks. I only really believed that they could march as well as anybody could, and I note that most of the older boys, now gray-headed and rheumatic, can keep their pegs going fifteen or twenty miles at a stretch without fatigue. At all events whenever a physician offers they attempt an exploit of the kind and make believe that the sickness that follows is caused by the weather."—Inter Ocean "Curbstone Crayons."

JOTTINGS.

—The social gathering announced for Monday evening as the last of the Y. M. C. A., free course of entertainments has been postpone for the present.

—Just read every line to-day of the Dunham Choristers' Festival, and dwell particularly on each new and added attraction referred to therein, added to-day.

—A large stock of bedding and other greenhouse plants are being sold very cheap at Denton's. So has a few choice bedding lots which he offers in another column.

—The Methodist festival closed last evening with most gratifying success. There was a large attendance in attendance and a enjoyable time was passed by those present.

—A game of ball was yesterday played between the North Plainfield Stars, jr., and the Nationals of this city which resulted in a defeat of the latter club by a score of 42 to 24.

—The M. E. Church at Rossiln has been undergoing extensive repairs, and will be re-opened to-morrow. Several of the former pastors are expected to be present and address the meeting.

—Borough Marshals Weaver and Becker went to a well-established tramp rendezvous in the rear of Chas. Hyde's residence on East Front street, yesterday afternoon and "started" four of those itinerant vandas.

—This afternoon there will be a meeting of the Directors of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society on the Waverly grounds for the purpose of giving out the contract for the enlargement of the grand stand.

—The two prisoners, Peterson and Dixon, who were serving out a sentence in the Union county jail at Elizabeth for an assault on a Pennsylvania railroad conductor, escaped from the jail on Tuesday by scaling a ten foot wall.

—The following-named have been elected managers to fill vacancies in the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Dime Savings Institution: F. H. Gardner, T. F. French, Geo. W. Hockhalow, J. F. Hubbard and J. W. Murray.

—A meeting of the Y. W. C. T. U. will be held in the Congregational church on Monday afternoon, June 7, at 4 o'clock. It has been suggested that each member of the Union invite a young lady friend to attend the meeting.

—The adjourned annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A., for the election of officers and Board of Directors and other business will take place on Thursday evening, 10th inst., at eight o'clock. It is hoped that every member will make an effort to be present at this important meeting.

—Nothing but praise could be heard on all sides about Prof. Hasbrouck's beautifully illustrated lecture last evening at Stillman Music Hall, on Palestine, with which he finished the course begun under most unfavorable circumstances a few weeks ago. Many hope that he will revisit Plainfield again, when he will probably, it is at least hoped, be more fortunate.

—On complaint of Margaret Bunworth, special policeman W. R. Mattox at about half-past one o'clock this morning arrested a young man named Keller on Front street, boarding at Mrs. Mary Geoghan's on East Fourth street, charging him with having entered complainant's room and taking improper liberties with her. This morning the accused was arraigned before the City Judge when in his own behalf he claimed to have been under the influence of liquor and got into complainant's room through mistake. The Judge suspended sentence until this afternoon.

Taken to Trenton.

Sheriff George W. Stiles on Thursday took to the State Prison at Trenton the largest number of prisoners ever taken from Union county at any one time in one term. There were seven in all as follows: Andrew White, arson, five years; Michael Egan, rape one year; Henry Wood, sodomy, one year; William Burrough, robbery, one year; Andrew Wiggins, burglary, three years; Frank LeForge, larceny, one year; Frank Ratner, larceny, one year.

Borough Council Meeting.

The North Plainfield Borough Council met in regular session in Warren Engine Company's parlor at eight o'clock last evening, at which time there were present in the absence of Mayor VanWinkle, Councilmen Arnold, McCutchen, Riker, Slater, Thickston and Weaver.

The clerk called the meeting to order after which Councilman Weaver was elected chairman pro. tem.

The clerk called the roll and read the minutes of the last previous meeting, which were approved as read.

A petition signed by J. S. Henry and others was read respecting an alleged nuisance said to have been tolerated in a barn occupied by Lothian & Hunter at the corner of Somerset street and Linden avenue, in which it was claimed said firm used the barn for slaughtering purposes. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health and was subsequently taken up and action thereon deferred.

A communication from the New York State Water Works firm was received and placed on "file."

The following bills were presented, ordered to the Auditing Committee and subsequently paid by warrants drawn thereafter:

|---|---|
| D. B. Roberts | $ 5.00 |
| Peter Wooden | 20.00 |
| Jas. Q. Bliss | 2.50 |
| Jas. Q. Bliss | 7.40 |

The following license petitions were presented and granted:

Peddlers'—Atlantic Tea Co., J. C. Voorhees, Chas. Grasdor, Jr., Jewell (mat) Manufacturing Company, Newark; J. Ball.

Carmen's—Wm. Minor, J. D. Smith, Geo. Conover, Samuel White, Samuel Moore.

The clerk's monthly report was read, received and ordered filed. It showed that $47 50 had been collected for licenses and $5 for fines; there had been disbursed $73.17, leaving a balance on hand June 1st of $294.05.

Corporation Counsel Jacobus reported on the formation of a Board of Health. He said that the Supreme Court had recently decided that the laws governing the organization and the maintenance of Boards of Health were so intricate as to require a revision, and that a committee had been appointed to revise the laws and present a corrected report to the Legislature. In view of this decision he advised the Board of the Council to wait and see what disposition the Legislature had make of the committee's report.

Mr. Riker from Fire, Water and Lamps Committee, offered resolution of George B. Simpson & Co. relative to irrigation in connection with a system of water works. A long debate followed in which all the councilmen took part. The resolution was finally amended that the resolution be referred to a committee to ascertain whether Mr. Norman Company would accept Hamilton as a sewage system, if in the judgment of the Mayor and Council at any time in the future the same should be found to be necessary.

Mr. Slater from Committee on Streets and Public Health reported that the committee had considered the petition of the Committee on Marshals reported that the marshals had been diligent in the discharge of their duties, and that "cases of whooli were trumps; five dogs had been incarcerated in the pound, one of which had been redeemed." The report was received and ordered spread on the minutes.

Mr. Slater from Committee on Streets and Public Health reported that the committee had considered the petition of Mr. Arnold and others and offered a resolution that the Mayor and Council be empowered to draw an ely such amount as seems to be necessary to complete the road committee. Adopted.

Mr. Slater from same committee submitted report of bids to secure profile and establish grade within the borough. The firm of Earl & Jacques, who were at present interested in laying down the curbing, had been communicated with and had refused to bid on the work. F. A. Dunham's bid was opened and he agreed to establish a grade in the district west of and including Somerset street for $185, and for that district east of Somerset street for $138, making in the aggregate $310.

Mr. Thickston made a motion that the bid of F. A. Dunham be accepted and the contract awarded.

Mr. Slater offered an amendment that the committee prepare a contract subject to the approval of the Mayor and Council, and the motion was carried as amended.

Mr. McCutchen from Street Committee, said that notices had been sent to property owners along Watchung avenue and Prospect Place to lay sidewalks in front of their residences, and with but one exception the notices had been complied with. Mr. McCamp at Chester, N. J., with reference to flagging in front of his vacant lot on Craig Place but no attention had been paid to the notice.

Mr. Arnold said that Chas. Wann of the Plainfield Electric Light Company had presented a bill to George Brown for damages sustained by the removal of the electric wires from the garage of Mr. Brown's house along Grove street. He thought that something should be done to obviate the matter, and suggested that the Council be asked to grant a franchise to the Electric Light Company, but had only granted said company permission for a street railway to erect poles and string wires thereon for the purposes of experimenting. Mr. Brown should have been granted permission to remove his building.

Mr. Thickston, from Committee on Printing and Supplies, reported that the blanks had been incurred by repairs on look-up.

"An ordinance to amend an ordinance for the construction, laying and repair of sidewalks in the borough of North Plainfield" was taken from the table and passed to its third reading, when it was adopted as amended and ordered to be printed and posted, and to go into effect on June 20 next.

The following bills were then table "An ordinance to regulate the excavating of the public streets of the borough for the laying of pipes, etc., etc.," was read by sections and adopted as a whole and ordered engrossed and printed preparatory to its going into effect on June 20th.

The Council then adjourned.

A Supposed Thief Escapes.

Between three and four o'clock yesterday afternoon Borough Marshal Weaver detected a tramp in the appearance of a burglar on Pearl street, just east of Somerset street in the act of exchanging a ragged suit of clothes which he wore for an apparently new suit. The officer approached the man when he suddenly started and ran through Somerset street to Front and into an alleyway adjoining Voehl's bakery, where he was lost sight of. The Marshal gave chase, but the man could not run him, and although an alarm was given no person offered to interfere or head off the supposed burglar. The man in his sudden exit left a ragged coat and "jumper" behind him, which officials were taken charge of by the authorities. He is thought to be one of a gang of tramp thieves who for some weeks past have been plying their vocations among the residents of the borough, and has subsequently been identified the community would have been rid of at least one of those obnoxious intruders.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketchum and others will address the meeting to-morrow evening at Reform Hall.

At the morning service at the First Baptist church the Rev. Dr. Yerkes will extend the hand of fellowship to a number to be following. Rev. Dr. Lorimer will preach the sermon. Service of song and short sermon by the pastor in the evening.

At the Methodist Episcopal church the pastor, Rev. Dr. Bliss, will preach in the morning at 10.30 and in the evening at 7.45. The evening discourse will be addressed to young men. Subject: "The Word of God a Young Man's Safe Guide."

There will be a service of praise at Warren Union Chapel, beginning at 7.45 to-morrow evening. Led by Marvin Dunham and the Dunham Choristers, and followed by Bible study led by Corydon Tyler. The Mission, under the supervision of Mayor Job Male and Jeremiah Manning, broaks ground for a new building for its Mission extension to the main room of the Mission.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their regular union Gospel services in Reform Hall at four P. M. Christian workers regardless of denominational preferences are earnestly invited to participate in the exercises by prayer and brief testimonial remarks of experience. The new converts of the recent revival meetings are especially invited to be present. Mrs. Dr. Griffen, of Rossiln, The Dunham Choristers will sing some new songs from the new book—the Gospel Choir. All are welcome.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Ratter of Crescent avenue have taken up their residence at Long Branch for the summer.

Mrs. Mary Weidknecht of Easton, Pa., is visiting at the residence of Borough Marshal P. V. Weaver on Grove street.

Walter Scott, of Scott Bros works, returned a few days ago, after a two weeks' absence from the city on business.

John A. Laing of Quakertown, Hunterdon county, arrived in this city this morning, and is the guest of relatives on West Fourth street.

Miss Genevieve Daniel and Master Hugh Potts are this afternoon conducting a children's party at the residence of Mayor Male and Plainfield avenue, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the "Fresh Air Fund."

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Farley of Park avenue are receiving the congratulations of their friends upon the arrival of a young daughter. The little stranger made her appearance a few days ago and is rapidly gaining in weight and strength.

The wife of Deacon Manning Stelle died at her home on Central avenue at about seven o'clock this morning, aged seventy years. Deceased had been ailing for a long time, and although a permanent recovery was not expected, her death was not anticipated by her immediate family. By her death Mr. Stelle leaves a husband, who is at present confined to the house, a son and two daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Edgar Anthony of Seventh street, were on Thursday evening the recipients of an exquisite souvenir presented by participants in the recent entertainment in aid of the Church of the Heavenly Rest. Fred S. Green made the presentation speech in his usual felicitous vein, and was only cut short by the hilarity and applause of those present. The occasion was Mrs. Anthony's birch-day celebration, and the memento was intended as an expression of the appreciation of the donors for her earnest efforts in behalf of the late entertainment, the success of the details of which was largely due to her.

The funeral of Culver Barcalow, the prominent Somerset county politician and business man, who died at his home in Somerville on Tuesday, took place yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. Prominent among the so present were Senator Sewell Secretary of State Henry C. Kelsey and Comptroller Anderson. Rev. Mr. Reed delivered the funeral sermon, assisted by the Rev. Messrs. Searle and Horr. The floral tributes were numerous and costly. During the service the Somerville stores were closed and business suspended. The remains were interred in the beautiful cemetery on the banks of the Raritan at that place.

Thursday afternoon an old man came shipping up stairs, two steps at a time, to our office to see the editor. He was nimble, smiling and jolly, with keen, bright black eyes and a white hair. So sprightly was he that I be excited him curiously, and we learned that he was James Mulford Cory Smith, who was born at Elizabeth August 11, 1817, locating in Plainfield in 1840, and marrying Miss Percy Payne, daughter of a Revolutionary soldier, who had served under General Washington. Miss Percy Cory Smith, their daughter, is an only child. Mr. Smith engaged in the hardware business in 1840, starting a few doors north of the First National Bank, and a few years later on the site of that institution. In 1872 his place of business was destroyed by fire, and he then bought a farm of forty-three acres on Greenbrook road, between Washington Rock and Dunellen, and has since resided there. His wife, who is over seventy years of age, is even more sprightly. She was born at Elizabeth, and was quite old, and with one exception is the only living Revolutionary child here, the other case known being that of William Stansbury of Scotch Plains, the son-in-law of Abram Runyon of this city, father of Honorable Theodore Runyon, the governor of New Jersey lawyers, the commander of the New Jersey troops at the outbreak of the rebellion, and at present the Chancellor of this State.

Union County Courts.

Edward Kelly, the city hotel bartender, was put on trial in the Union County Court of Special Sessions on Thursday for the day for perjury. It was charged that Kelly sold liquor in the hotel on a Sunday, over a year ago, and having brought up before Ex-City Judge to testify on the trial of his employer for the offense, swore he did not sell any. Considerable time for a jury trial, and a part of the afternoon, a number of witnesses testifying both in behalf of the prosecution and the defendant. The case was given to the jury about three o'clock in the afternoon when a verdict of "not guilty" was promptly rendered.

The second trial of Samuel Tice of Rahway, for indecent assault on his step-daughter was also given over until to-day, he having been found guilty at the first trial when Tice was acquitted and bailed out for his appearance at the second trial which was to have come up yesterday he made provision for the removal of his step-daughter, and not until Thursday were the authorities acquainted as to her whereabouts. On that day the chief of police of Rahway found the girl secreted in the house per of Mr. Meeker, where she had been sent and brought her on to Elizabeth where she is now detained as an important witness.

The counsel for Frederick DuGoe of Rahway, convicted of accomplishing the ruin of Miss Minnie Long under promise of marriage, has entered a motion before Circuit Judge McCormick set down next Thursday as the date upon which the court would hear arguments.

At the close of the session yesterday court adjourned over until Tuesday morning next at ten o'clock.

WESTFIELD.

The fireman on the local freight had one of his hands caught in the bumpers yesterday afternoon while coupling cars. The conductor was obliged to send a man back to Scotch Plains to have the hand dressed. He afterward went down on the 2.35 train.

Abner M. Ross, a former townsman died on Thursday morning at his home in Greenpoint, aged sixty-three years. Mr. Ross is a brother to Joseph Ross who lives in this place. He leaves a wife and three children. The funeral service will take place on Sunday at the late residence in Greenpoint, and interment will be in Fairview cemetery, this place.

New Dramatic Organization.

The amateurs who scored such a success at Stillman Music Hall on the evening of the 27th of May are about organizing for further dramatic presentations, and already the plays are being selected by those identified with the recent affair.

It is proposed that the Muhlenberg Hospital, of which progressive charity no resident of Plainfield can fail to feel proud, is to be the next point for our young friends' generous kind efforts.

Notwithstanding the disappointment, not only the auditors but the participants feel at the failure of the orchestra in properly performing its part at the recent entertainment, we have heard only hearty and cordial praise for those participating. When these young people next appear, pleasure and profit is assured them, and the same hearty support the people gave them by frequent, spontaneous and prolonged applause on the 27th of May.

The length of the program, to which we called attention in our issue of the 26th of May, is a subject to which care must be given, and doubtless will be.

The participants are well, yet moderately, pleased at their joint success, and are full of thanks to every one. Plainfield is to be congratulated in that we now have in our midst a number of talented amateurs, who, we are sure, contribute not only to the entertainment of our citizens, but as well to the support of many deserving home charities.

Samuel J. Tilden's Vocal Trouble.

In the course of testimony taken in a suit in new York, in which named J. Tilden is interested, Mr. Tilden said that it was painful for him to speak. "I have an affection of the larynx which impairs the quality of what are called the vocal chords so that they will not come together; the air passes through without their helping to form words, and so reduce me to a whisper. There is no surgical operation for ease, but only a loss of elasticity, so that it makes me talk with great difficulty and generally in a whisper. Sometimes I have a cold, under which the chords approach each other better."—Chicago Journal

A New Concrete for Building Purposes.

A kind of concrete, hard and solid, is now being used for building purposes in Paris. It is composed of eight parts of sand, gravel and pebbles, one part powdered cinders, and one and a half parts unslacked hydraulic lime. These materials are thoroughly incorporated, their mixture giving a concrete which sets almost immediately, and becomes in a few days extremely hard and solid, which property may be still further increased by adding to it a small quantity, say one part, of cement.—Chicago Journal.

Decline of the Drama at Paris.

The decline of the drama at Paris is attributed to several causes, the most curious of which is a lack of country residents. M. Sarcey says that railways have done great harm to the theatre Francais, because playwrights and actors now spend in Paris in great numbers and destroy the influence of the elite in matters of art. Actors win applause with little effort from this uncultivated audience.—N. O. Times Democrat.

Extent of Oregon's Salmon Fisheries.

An idea of the extent of one of Oregon's salmon fisheries may be had from these statistics, which the Salem (Or.) Asterian puts forth: Over 10,000 boxes of tin have or are being worked up into cans for the coming salmon season in Portland. Over 2,000 worth of twine has been sold to the Columbia river canners for use in the season. In the next day or week the Portland canners will engage will be put in use for the fishing season of 1886.—New York Sun.

Difference Between Cotton and Linen.

Cotton is not a fiber, but a plant hair. It holds to be spun into a thread because of peculiar twist on each hair. Known under the microscope, especially in polarized light, linen thread may be spun because the flax fibers have certain roughnesses on their surfaces, which enable them to cling together.—Boston Budget.

While the tomato is a native of South America it takes its name from a Portuguese word.

MANNING RESIGNS.

The Secretary of the Treasury Decides to Retire.

THE PRESIDENT DECLINES,

But Urges a Leave of Absence Instead,

Hoping That Improved Health May Lead the Secretary to Change His Mind—Urged to Wait Until October Before He Finally Decides the Matter. The Letters in the Case.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The following correspondence explains itself:

WASHINGTON, May 30, 1886.

My Dear Sir: I have decided to place in your hands my resignation of the office which you did me the honor to ask me to accept fifteen months ago. My reasons for this decision are both public and personal. Since the partial recovery of my health he permitted me to reflect upon the demands of the public service, and I find I had given, per haps too freely, all my strength, and upon the conditions of resuming my labors at your side, I have not for a moment questioned what must be my present duty. The full recovery of my health is pronounced to be an affair of time, and a longer period of rest, especially during the hot months, is prescribed, or, at least, advised, as a prudent regimen therefore.

Compliance with this advice would not be practicable were I to resume now the general direction of the treasury department, even if abating something of the energy and assiduity required to expend in the first year of my work. Supervision at a distance would be more a hindrance than a help to the acting secretary. But it is not this thing that a department of the government, so difficult and so important, should be administered by a convalescent, studious of carrying daily exertions, nor that I should be control of its enormous influence or the direction of its fiscal policies, even under your wise lead, should be attempted by one not concerned about by handing his strength.

The reforms in our fiscal policy which you have maintained and which have been legalized in part by the action of the legislative branch are reforms necessary to our safety, binding in honor, obligatory in the traditions of the party set down with the opinion in our statute book. Our present tariff laws are a needless oppression, instead of an easy burden. Our currency is a chaos, into which we pour from the purchases of one out of the precious metals, a mechanical increment, under a coinage law so ill judged and untimely, that it hinders the opening of our mints to the free coinage of both metals, and the free expansion of our gold and silver coin along with the growing needs of an increasing people.

All our needful customs revenue might be collected by strictly revenue duties upon a few source articles, instead of by extravagant or prohibitory duties upon more than 4,000 articles. The mere machinery of administration, by its own mass and complexity, breaks down and crushes out the enterprise it assumes to protect.

A better currency than elsewhere exists might be had by a few lines of repealing and enacting legislation, and the issue by two or three years of capable administration of the treasury, and joined with the present sagacious conduct of our foreign policy by the state department.

Under the operation of currency laws and tariff laws now in force, which you and the forty-ninth congress were elected by the people to change, the burdens of the business industries of our country are plunging heavily along a miry road toward recession charged with the duty of a strict vigilance respective share of disaster instead of knocking off our self-imposed fetters and realizing a general prosperity.

This is not, in my deliberate judgment, a time when the president can delay to provide, or afford to dispense with, an actual as well as a titular head of the treasury department. The financial policy of the federal government in respect to a debt so large, taxation so pervasive, and a currency which is universal in its touch, is a matter of chief factor in national and individual wellbeing. Your own duty to which you have addressed yourself with such clear and unflinching purpose, to the administration of the business and the laws which may yet be enacted for the guidance of the treasury department will require that you be assisted in their administration by an officer capable of full efficiency and unwearied circumspection.

Permit me, therefore, without hesitation to accept my resignation, that you may be free to summon to stand aside and make way for one immediately capable of fulfilling every requirement of the public service. Very respectfully yours, DANIEL MANNING.

To the President.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, June 1, 1886.

My Dear Mr. Manning: I have received your letter in which your resignation is tendered as secretary of the treasury. Your reasons for wishing to retire are entirely in keeping with the devotion to public duty and the loyalty to the interests of the government which have characterized your long and faithful administration. I am not surprised, though much impressed, by the concern which you evince for the interests of the administration and the inauguration of the reforms to which in your letter you allude and which have been so often topics of our anxious consultations.

I have hoped that a day or two at hand when the party to which we belong, influenced largely by faith and confidence in you and your colleagues, would so far recover its quickened in the sense of responsibility and led to more harmonious action upon the important questions with which you have had to deal, as to relieve you of your personal responsibility. I should be strongly inclined by my personal regard and friendship and by the value of your services to the country to beg you to sit once and more calmly standing you inclinating to relinquish your post of arduous duty. But I am convinced that I should not be acting in the kindest way by you and I assure I have much at heart your welfare and safety.

You have placed your resignation in my hands. My responsibility have begun; and I know that the responsibility will be met and the wishes of the people of the land fully answered when I ask you to postpone for a while any insistence upon the acceptance of your resignation, and that your final conclusion thereon may be delayed until the official care upon your condition may be better tested. I, therefore, earnestly request you to accept leave of absence until the first day of October next, when, if you desire it, the question of your resignation may be resumed with perhaps better reasons of judging all the facts and possibilities which should be considered in its determination.

Hoping that you will consent to this suggestion, and trusting that your encouraging progress toward restoration to health may continue, I am faithfully your friend,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Hon. Daniel Manning,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Secretary Manning, acquiescing in the president's request to lay aside the treasury portfolio and the cares of office for several months, left here Wednesday afternoon for Warm Springs, Bath county, Va., remaining there for a week or two. He will probably spend the greater part of the summer farther north.

WOMEN BLOCKADE THE TRACK.

A New Kind of Obstruction to Prevent Moving Freight.

CHICAGO, June 5.—An engine of the Rock Island road was sent to Cumpington yesterday to attempt to move the four cars loaded with nails by the new men. The removal was prevented in a peculiar way. Women and children, to the number of 200, the wives and families of former employes, assembled around the terminus of the railroad track. When the engine approached there was a shout, and the locomotive and cars were standing. The mothers grouped their little ones along the track, some distance ahead of the first freight car, and packed them according to the number of the children, the youngest toward the approaching engine, the mothers and grown-up daughters taking position to the rear. The engineer, seeing that he had a short distance, but seeing the living, breathing obstacle on the track, reversed and returned to South Chicago. Then the women dispersed, and their return jeered and abused the representatives of the company at the nail works gate, calling them the most opprobrious names, the police, by their orders, making no attempt to the infliction of violence by the infuriated women. The Rock Island switching crew refused to handle the cars, and on their return to South Chicago were promptly discharged. This is expected to lead to a general strike of the switchmen of the Rock Island road.

The engine will be employed again, fully 2,000 women and children were throng ing the tracks, and apparently as determined as before. Sixty policemen from Hyde park will assist company officials.

The women, feeling sure they would not be clubbed, refused to move, or moved very slowly when told to do so, and closed up again in the rear of the engine as it moved back by the officers. For some time great excitement prevailed. The police finally succeeded in getting the women away from the tracks without resorting to harsh measures, but the attempt to move the cars was abandoned.

More o the same kind of trouble is expected.

YALE STUDENTS WARNED.

The Faculty Likely to Set Down on Collegiate Sports.

NEW HAVEN, June 5.—President Porter has announced to the students in Bethel chapel, that owing to the disturbances made on the commencing last, in consequence of Yale's victory at Princeton, he felt that it was his duty to warn them that if they repeated their ungentlemanly conduct further participation in the inter-collegiate athletics would be prohibited. President Porter said that he spoke on his own authority, but he knew that he voiced the opinion of the other members of the faculty. Professor Franklin B. Dexter, secretary of the corporation, said that he would add that he was present at Powell's against allowing Yale to take part in inter-collegiate games next year. Professor E. L. Richards, who has always taken great interest in college athletics, expressed the opinion that the welfare of the college demanded that after this year all inter collegiate baseball games be prohibited. The president of the baseball nine has secured President Porter that extraordinary efforts will be made to prevent a repetition of Wednesday's disturbances. this evening after the game with Princeton.

AN EXPRESS ROBBERY.

Money Removed and the Seals Restored.

VANWERT, O., June 5.—A package supposed to contain $10 000 was sent by the United States Express company by the Union National bank of Cincinnati, consigned to the Van Wert National bank, during the night. The package when found to contain nothing but pasteboard, cotton and a lot of Bee line excursion bills, but no money. The package was delayed about nine hours, and no clue to the perpetrators of the robbery or where it was committed. The officers of the express company refuse to give any information in respect to the robbery and are pushing an investigation of the matter and are hopeful of apprehending the thief. The robbery took place after the arrival of the package at this place and the seals on the package show that they have been removed and have been replaced by sticking them on with wax of a different color from the original.

A Jury Reprimanded.

PHILADELPHIA, June 5.—In the case of Abraham Bernstein, the theatrical manager convicted of assault and battery with intent to kill Actor George Herbert Leonard, Judge Allison, on a motion for a new trial to set aside the verdict, this morning directed the defendant on his own recognizance to appear when wanted. The judge said the jury had not given proper heed to the weight they did, when it was flatly contradicted by all the other witnesses. Taking the testimony of Mr. Havelin and the other witnesses for the defense, the jury had not going very far to say that Leonard's statement was the true one. It would be taking the testimony of a drunken man in preference to that of sober witnesses. He also thought, with the threats made by a man who was infuriated, who beat Erlanger once and kicked him in New York and who occurred at the hotel here, that Erlanger would have been justified even if he had killed his assailant.

Anderson Gaining on the Wheelmen.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The spectators last night at the horse-bicycle race in Madison square garden were treated to a contest of unusual interest. Anderson continued to out down the lead, and at 11 o'clock it was only 4 miles and 2 laps. Then Anderson began to lose ground. At 10:48 the scores of the wheelmen aggregated 774 miles and 1 lap. The race was resumed one hour earlier to-day, so as not to encroach upon Sunday. The scores at noon were: Wheelman, 803 miles; Anderson, 795 miles.

Buffalo Has Bread.

BUFFALO, June 5.—The strike of the journeymen bakers still continues, but fears of a famine are dispelled by the action of the bosses, who have united and are baking bread in one or two of the largest bakeries. They turned out 20,000 loaves, which, with an additional 10,000 loaves from four union shops which are running, is sufficient to do away with any serious inconvenience. The boss bakers expect to keep up the supply in this way, and are firm in their refusal of their employes' demands.

POWDERLY SATISFIED.

HE REGARDS THE CLEVELAND MEETING A SUCCESS.

An Effective Check Put Upon the Tendency to Inaugurate Such Disastrous Strikes as the Southwest Has Lately Passed Through—The Executive Board.

PITTSBURG, June 5.—General Master Workman Powderly was asked by your representative last evening about the alleged comment in the order to oust him and his supporters from office.

"So far as I can discover anything in the Home Rule meeting, it is simply a little circle of men in the order who are more intimate with one another than with other members. These men claim that their object is to build a fence for each of the members, and they have between $3,000 and $4,000 in their treasury."

"Would not your order's advocacy of arbitration, to which the amalgamated association is opposed, form a barrier in the way of that association joining you?"

"Not at all. We simply recommend arbitration, but we do not believe in compulsory arbitration. I don't think federal interference in arbitration is a good thing. Congress would be in a fair way to get ahead of the manner of conducting strikes. It would be quite enough for congress to pass a resolution in favor of arbitration. When we have a thoroughly organization we can do without legislation. The scale conference of the iron manufacturers and workers are a form of arbitration we advocate."

"Are you satisfied with the work of the Cleveland convention?"

"Yes. They have granted the powers I wanted and passed laws limiting the indiscriminate use of the strike and boycott. Such a strike as that in the southwest cannot occur again. Under present laws, when trouble occurs, the general executive board will telegraph one of the six nearest assistants to the place, instructing him to gather and take testimony. The assistant will then report to the general board for it's decision. Without an order from the board a strike or boycott will not be legal. The statement that the board has been abolished by the members is incorrect. It still has only five members, the six men newly appointed being only assistants."

IRON AND STEEL WORKERS.

T. V. Powderly Addresses the Convention in Favor of Union.

PITTSBURG, June 5.—At the afternoon session of the Amalgamated association little business was transacted outside of the adoption of a resolution which tendered a vote of thanks to Martin A. Foran, congressman from the Twenty-second district of Ohio, for his opposition in congress to the arbitration bill. The rest of the afternoon, until after 4 o'clock, was taken up with a speech delivered by Terence V. Powderly, general master workman of the Knights of Labor, in which he advised the amalgamated Association and Steel Workers to join the Knights of Labor.

His address was very brief. He said: "The day is coming when all branches of labor will come together as brothers, one and one another. I am here for the purpose of conveying to this convention the friendly greetings and the personal feelings of the delegates who recently attended the Knights of Labor convention in Cleveland. I can assure you that as far as I am concerned, and I think I voice the general sentiment of our body, that whether the Amalgamated association came into our order or not, the hand of sympathy and encouragement will be extended to you whenever needed. There has been no step made, and none will be made, to force the association to join the Knights of Labor. The matter of joining us is entirely an option with yourselves. If, however, your organization should conclude to form an alliance with the order I represent, I promise you that your rights and privileges will be fully guarded by your own business and retain your identity, but you will have the sympathy and support of every branch of labor in the land. I close up the great order of the Knights of Labor."

Mr. Powderly's address was received with enthusiasm by the delegates, and at its close the speaker enjoyed an ovation of handshaking for several minutes.

Mr. Powderly will attend the Amalgamated picnic at Beaver to-day. The principal topic of conversation among the delegates was the choice of candidates for general officers. A movement is on foot, and is heartily supported by a majority of the delegates, to bring to the union of T. P. Kenny, formerly president of the trades assembly, as president of the Amalgamated association, and Hugh Cunningham, of Beaver, as secretary. On this state, which is being pushed with vigor, James Tynon will retain his position as assistant secretary.

The Third Avenue Strike.

NEW YORK, June 5.—About a dozen of the drivers who were employed to take the places of the strikers on the Third avenue road, with a few conductors, deserted their cars at different points along the road yesterday without giving any reason. They are supposed to have been intimidated by the strikers. At Ninety-fifth street three men sprung upon a car, pulled out the coupling pin, jerked the driver from the driver's hand, and turned the horses loose. They are at once arrested. In their possession were found mysterious slips of paper which they refused to explain, and which the executive board of the Empire Protective association, to circulate among the new drivers and conductors, with the object of again tying up the road, for the purpose of intimidation and apprehension among the officials of the road for a time.

A Woman and a Gun.

LITCHFIELD, Ill., June 5.—Mrs. C. Stephenson and Mrs. Archibald Strauss had a quarrel when their husbands were away. On Strauss returning at noon his wife told him that she had been insulted by Mrs. Stephenson. Strauss went across the street and insulted Mrs. Stephenson. Mrs. Stephenson ordered him off her premises, and then started into her house, saying, "I'll shoot you." A moment later she appeared with a gun, and as Strauss was leaving the gate she raised the weapon and fired, the charge entered Strauss' brain. She was arrested and committed to jail. The result of the affair grew out of jealousy on the part of Mrs. Stephenson, who suspected her husband of intimacy with Mrs. Strauss.

A Family Quarrel.

READING, June 5.—Frank Zahls, aged 19, shot his brother Charles, aged 21, three times this night, inflicting fatal wounds. He then shot himself in the head, and will also die. The quarrel was about a statement by Frank that Charles had interfered in his affairs.

Ex-Mayor Kendrick Sentenced to Jail.

NEW HAVEN, June 5.—Orrenz Kendrick, ex-mayor of Waterbury, was convicted of not supporting his wife and sentenced to 60 days in the county jail. The ex-mayor appealed and furnished bonds for his appearance before the July term of the superior court.

AN APPEAL TO THE CODE.

One Carolinian Brave Enough to Enforce It.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 5.—For some time past there has been a bitter feeling in this section over the probable result of the Pearson-McAden difficulty. McAden lives in Charlotte and Pearson has been present and his shrewdness have made many a justice of the peace. Even since the former's card was published, reflecting upon Mr. Pearson's courage, the deepest excitement has been manifested and many rumors have been in circulation. It seems from correspondence in The Daily Advance that Pearson went to the South Carolina line and sent McAden a challenge. McAden in his reply refuses to accept the challenge on the ground that Pearson being his physical equal ought not to invite him to fight a duel, and upon that further grounds that he is opposed to the code. It has been reported, and was for a while believed, that the parties had fought a duel on the South Carolina line, and that McAden had received a serious wound. The publication of the entire correspondence will create a sensation. McAden and Pearson are two of the shrewdest Raleigh, and afterward published a card which was calculated to provoke a challenge. It was thought he would accept the challenge if he was not afraid to fight. Pearson's loss his refusal to accept in strong terms. In McAden's letters refusing to fight, he asks: "Why challenge me to fight a duel to fight physically? Is my character worse than my inferior physically?" In his reply Mr. Pearson intimates that McAden seems to endeavor himself behind the law which he did not hesitate to violate in the case of which the mean advantage of the first shot or of a blow without warning settles nothing but the brutality of the parties. Mr. McAden says that he will have ever done Mr. McAden has been the expression of my purpose to ignore him, and to this purpose I shall henceforth scrupulously adhere."

THE MAXWELL JURY OUT.

The General Impression is That the Jury Will Disagree.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—At 11 o'clock last night the Maxwell case went to the jury. The state, has so far, occupied two days and the defense two days in the argument. Col. Martin's speech was one of the most pathetic and emotional rather than argumentative, and he used much of his time in denouncing the prosecution for their management of the case, especially in the employment of detectives to worm a confession from Maxwell. There seems to be an impression that the jury will disagree. Maxwell said that he was tired of so much talking, and that he was satisfied that the jury were, too. The little prisoner seemed quite cheerful, and by turns talked with Sheriff Furlong or his wife who think he told the truth when he testified that he accidentally killed Preller.

It had been reported that the prosecution expected to close the case to-day, but the word came from the jury room that the jury stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal, Maxwell said that was precisely what he expected.

As there was no hope of an agreement, the judge adjourned the court until this morning.

FANATICAL MORMONS,

Whose Consciences Compel Them to Violate the Laws.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 5.—The latest cases of sentence for unlawful cohabitation are those of John Hansen and Peter Olsen. Mr. Hansen, in reply to a question as to his intention in respect to obeying the law, said he would obey just so far as his conscience would permit him to do so. The maximum penalty of the law. Wood, already under sentence of five years' imprisonment for polygamy, was convicted last month of marrying a fifteen year old girl last January.

He was very defiant, interrupting the court from time to time. In reply to the usual question as to whether he would be a future obey the law, he said: "No, sir. It is my intention to obey the law of God, though I be imprisoned for life. I know I'm in the right, and I will never obey the law of man, prison or no prison, life or death."

Americans Fired At.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 5.—The Canadian police schooner Houlette has chased several American fishermen out of Canso strait. She was the fast sailing vessel of them. She fired a gun, but it is not known whether it was loaded or not. The American crews treated the whole thing as a huge joke. They tied fog horns to the swinging booms as they scudded along and made all the noise they could for the edification of the crowd on the shore. Later the Houlette chased a Gloucester schooner away from Port Hawkins over nearly the same course, and was again outsailed. There was something on the Gloucester's deck which looked like a cannon and the Houlette did not fire her gun. The shore people openly sympathize with the American fishermen. They are angry with the authorities for spoiling their bait trade.

Had "Hearn De Boss Was Dar."

DEER PARK, Md., June 5.—An amusing incident occurred at an early hour last morning. A negro was on his way to work on to the cottage from the woods back of the house, and was about to approach it when one of the Baltimore and Ohio officers called him. Instead of stopping he broke off with a pair of nippers in his hand, scared the negro half to death. He begged for mercy, and declared he only wanted to see "de president," as he had "hearn de boss was dat house." Upon pledging himself to quit the premises he was released and quickly made off.

John Yeomedye's Claim.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—A very curious claim has been received at the treasury department in the shape of a certificate of indebtedness of the government to John Yeomedye, of Philadelphia, dated Feb. 14, 1793, signed by Joseph Nourse, register, and bearing interest at 6 per cent from Dec. 30, 1791. Although the claim is now 93 years old, with the interest due on it amounts to $110.25, making the amount of the claim $127.75. First Comptroller Durham is looking into the matter and will be glad to hear from any one who can help to Yesterday's heirs.

AN ORANGE RIOT.

TWO THOUSAND MEN ATTACK A HUNDRED CATHOLIC NAVVIES.

One Dead Body Is Recovered From the Water, and Thirty or More Were Seriously Injured—Catholics are Gathering and a Bloody Riot Is Threatened.

BELFAST, June 5.—A large body of Orangemen employed in the Queen's Island ship yards, at this place, made an attack yesterday upon a comparatively small gang of navvies in the employ of the Belfast harbor commissioners. The navvies fought desperately in self-defense, but were overpowered by superior numbers and driven into the water. Many of them were severely beaten, six of them being injured so seriously that they were taken to the hospital. One of the navvies is missing, and, it is believed, was drowned. The cause of the assault, if any, is not known, but the Orangemen allege that the navvies had previously attacked Orangemen without provocation, and say the attack was made in retaliation.

CATHOLICS GATHERING.

Soldiers and Police on the Alert to Prevent Bloodshed.

BELFAST, June 5.—There is a general feeling of indignation against the Orangemen who made the cowardly and unprovoked assault upon a body of Catholics. There were 2,000 men in the attacking party and only 100 in the party attacked. The excitement among the Catholics in the city is very great. Hundreds of Catholics living in towns and villages near Belfast are flocking here, and the streets are filled with angry and excited men. The police, armed to the teeth, are patroling the streets, and the military are confined in their barracks ready to answer the first call that may be made upon them. Everybody seems impressed with the fear that a repetition of the historical Belfast riots is imminent. Thirty constables were injured in the fight, twelve of whom were taken to the hospital. The dead body of the missing Catholic has been recovered. It was taken from the water near the scene of the riot, and identified as that of James Curran, a young man of twenty years of age, and the sole support of a widowed mother.

The News in London.

LONDON, June 5.—The news of the Belfast riot created considerable excitement here, and as further details are received the cowardly conduct of the Orangemen excites general disgust, even among their religious brethren.

GLADSTONE AT WORK.

Seeking to Call Back His Wavering Colleagues.

LONDON, June 5.—Mr. Gladstone, in reply to an inquiry by Mr. Henry Boulton, member for North St. Pancras, writes that he holds it to be indisputable, indeed elementary, that voting a second reading of the home rule bill affirms only the principle of an Irish legislature, to transact Irish as distinct from imperial affairs.

The government, he says, will consider and lay before Parliament the most appropriate proposals submitted to them previous to the beginning of the autumn session which shall be consistent with the five main conditions, which they have laid down as the solution of the Irish question, including the matter of the attendance of Irish members in the house of commons to transact imperial business.

The government, Mr. Gladstone says, is not only at liberty but is in duty bound to consider any such amendments that may be offered.

This declaration will undoubtedly decide the course of a considerable number of waverers and probably secure the second reading of the bill.

AFTER MR. BLAINE.

The Marquis of Salisbury Takes up the Glove.

LONDON, June 5.—In the house of lords the Marquis of Salisbury denounced in plain and vigorous terms the language used by Mr. James G. Blaine in his recent speech on home rule, which he said, was repugnant for the exalted position of president of the United States. In reference to emigration Mr. Blaine had entirely misquoted him. It was not Lord Salisbury said, an admitted truth that assisting people to emigrate from a country where employment was scarce and wages low to a country where they might improve their condition was doing a beneficent act.

"There was nothing in my suggestion approaching an insult to the Irish people. I don't mind Mr. Blaine's abusing me if that will improve his prospects, but I do hope that in the future he will quote me correctly, if he quotes at all."

Earl Kimberley, replying to Lord Salisbury, said he thought the language of his lordship's speech, which Mr. Blaine had quoted, quite capable of the construction put upon it by both Mr. Blaine and Mr. Morley.

A Lord's Assets and Liabilities.

LONDON, June 5.—The liabilities of Lord Headley, the Irish baron, whose embarrassment was recently reported, are found to be £30,000, while his assets are represented in the schedule by a cipher.

A DOG BUTCHERER.

Cruelly Experimenting on the Effects of Broken Spines.

JERSEY CITY, June 5.—Dr. B. A. Watson, a prominent Jersey City physician and an expert employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad company in suits for damages resulting from injuries received in railroad wrecks, was arrested yesterday, charged with cruelty to animals. The officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals were the informers. They say the charge on which the doctor was arrested is that he used an infernal machine in killing canines. A search warrant issued by Justice Lane brought to light the machine which lasted the dog to the roof of the barn and dropped it through a trap door, a 40-foot fall, probably thirty feet. The animal would fall upon its back and its spine would be broken. It was then taken to another room and kept until it died, generally ten days. On this point, the doctor said, to make experiments as to the effect of a broken spine on the nervous system. The society claims that the method of making the experiments is brutal, and that no benefit to science can possibly be derived from them.

The doctor says the dogs are all picked under an ana-thetic before being subjected to the fall, and are kept under its influence until they are dead, so they do not feel any pain. Dr. Arrowsmith, of the S. P. C. A., is of the same opinion, and it is not thought that Dr. Watson will be convicted.

Another Strike to the Order Register.

PITTSBURG, June 5.—The coke syndicate has notified the Miners' Amalgamated association that their demands for another advance in wages will not be granted. The syndicate will confer with a committee of miners at Everson on Monday, and if the men insist upon the increase the operators say they will withdraw the recent voluntary advance of 10 per cent. In that event another strike throughout the Connellsville region is quite probable.

Fishermen's Bulletin.

PORTLAND, Me., June 5.—The following dispatch was received by a leading firm here from a member of congress:

"There is absolutely no hope of the government helping the fishing interest. Secretary Bayard is absolutely committed to the Morrison bill, free fish and reciprocity. He seems to be unconcerned about the fate of the New England fishing interest."

This was posted up outside the firm's door and caused a general outburst of indignation.

An American Too Rash.

PORTLAND, Me., June 5.—The following is a good indication of the feeling here:

To the Editor of The Argus:

About one year since my schooner, the Montera, arrived at Boston from Westport, N. S., with a cargo of lobsters. The captain had ignorantly procured a manifest, and it cost me $55, while it only cost the owners of the Sisters $1.75 for the same offense; but I am an American citizen, you know.

YOURS, WILLIAM S. TREFETHEN.

The National League.

CORK, June 5.—The Cork branch of the National league has refused to contribute to the re-election of two retiring members of the harbor board, who are Catholics, and a married brother a President, on the ground that they are not members of the league. Another retiring official saved his seat by joining the league at the eleventh hour, thus entering the support of the members of that body.

Strikers Sue Their Association.

LOUISVILLE, June 5.—A short time ago the Journeymen Painters' association ordered a strike, and only five of the strikers who went out sued the association for the full amount of wages they would have earned had they continued working. The case will be tried on Monday next.

Senator Evarts to Speak.

NEW HAVEN, June 5.—It is announced that Senator William M. Evarts will deliver an address on the occasion of the inauguration of President elect Timothy Dwight, of Yale college, on July 1.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—For New England and middle Atlantic states, generally fair and warmer weather, with rain on the Florida coast.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Money 2½ per cent. Exchange quiet at $4.84@4.86. Government firm; 6s, comp., 128 bid; 4½s, comp., 113¾ bid; currency 6s, 127¾ bid, etc.

The market exhibited strong traits by late bidder, but almost immediately the bears began to raid the list, and to the end of the day the tone was low. Toward it quieter the bull stigmas in Canada and the northwestern stocks began bidding up, and a good deal of the whole list showed advances at midday; with next slight relapse. Sugar rose 1½ per cent. The market at the time of closing was firm, at slight reaction.

THE ROSE INSTITUTE.

VIEWS OF THE POLYTECHNIC SCHOOL, TERRE HAUTE, IND.

The Munificent Gift of an Old Bachelor to His Fellow Townsmen—Chauncey Rose—The School Supplies—What the United States Most Needs.

Chauncey Rose was a Connecticut youth who roamed to the shores of the Wabash early in the century. He made money by sawmilling, by turning farm lands into city lots, and by railroad enterprise, till he became known as a millionaire. He lived a bachelor and died one, at the good old age of 80. But he made up for his shortcomings in this line by providing liberally for the wives and children whom other men left to the charities of a cold world. He helped many young women educate themselves for teachers. He founded a home for

CHAUNCEY ROSE.

"aged females" and other men's orphans. He, more than any one else, brought about the development of the railroad system of Western Indiana. He did many other liberal things which go to show that he was a man with a broad head, such as you see in the picture.

But his greatest and best achievement was the Rose Polytechnic Institute at Terre Haute, Ind. He saw, more clearly than many of our alleged college professors do, that the great need of America is advancement in the industrial arts. Our people have plenty of brains. When they have what is needed, and scientific, and industrial arts, as these are taught in Europe, they will be able to stand up against the world. It is not Latin and Greek we want, or the history of the twelve gods of Olympus. We want scientific silk makers, and mining engineers, and adept chemists. We want expert draughtsmen, and map makers, and machinists. When we have men who know how to build railroads properly, then we shall not have our Indies lumped out of us every time we take a railroad journey of a thousand miles.

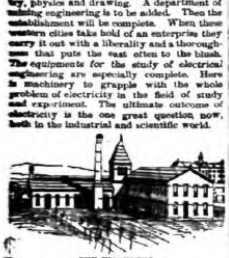
To supply these wants the broad-minded and far-seeing Chauncey Rose founded the institution which his grateful fellow townsmen insisted on naming for him, willy nilly. In all he gave away in ro than $1,000,000 for beneficent purposes.

ROSE POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE.

The Rose Polytechnic institute has an independent endowment fund of $500,000. What is more to the purpose, it has thoroughly equipped buildings and grounds. It is said to be as well fitted up in all the requirements of a scientific school as any of the older polytechnic institutions of the eastern states.

It contains a library of 5,000 volumes of choice scientific works. Many of these were the gift of Andrew Kelley, Esq., president of the board of managers.

To be exact, the institute is a school of engineering. It gives instruction in mechanical engineering, civil engineering, chemistry, physics and drawing. A department of mining engineering is to be added. Then the establishment will be complete. When the western cities take hold of an enterprise they carry it out with a liberality and a thoroughness that puts the east often to the blush. The equipments for the study of electrical engineering are especially complete. Here is machinery to grapple with the whole problem of electricity in the flesh of study and real work. The whole subject-volume of electricity is the one great question now, both in the industrial and scientific world.



THE WORKSHOP.

The foundation plan of instruction is the combination of manual labor with book study and experiment. The young man who graduates here will be able, not only to manage and draft things and "boss" other workmen, but will be fitted to actually take hold with their own hands and perform the labor of their trade if required. In this respect the Rose institute is equal to any in the world. There are a woodworking shop, machine and blacksmith shops, brass foundry, chemical laboratory, etc. The mechanical engineering department has already invented and put upon the market several screw-cutting turret lathes and other pieces of iron-working machinery.

The course of instruction lasts four years. To be admitted, a boy must be 16 years old, of good moral habits, and to pass an examination in grammar, geography, history of the United States, arithmetic, and algebra to quadratics. The next examination will be June 24. Then a fine young citizen of six son will be prepared to give the world the benefit of their trained brains, eyes and fingers. The difference between them and the ordinary mechanic will be, that while he is good for nothing outside of one little narrow line, they will be flexible resources, and equal to all lines of their particular business.

MACHINE SHOP INTERIOR.

They will be fitted to take responsible places in machine shops and factories and in the construction of railroads and as mechanical draftsmen.

In chemistry there is a large amount of laboratory practice. In mathematics the course includes the calculus. Sanitary engineering is another feature to which especial attention is paid. Wherever the Rose graduates go to build bridges we may hope that typhoid fever will not be sucked up through the kitchen sinks of their handiwork.

The first president of the institute was the lamented Charles O. Thompson. He was an enthusiast, and gave his whole soul to the work of putting the institute on its feet. But he died a year ago. The venerated founder of the school did not live to see the blossom of his work. He died in 1877, and the institute was honored in the year 1883.

It is said that an economical young man can attend the Rose institute for $300 a year. Tuition is free to residents of the county in which Terre Haute is situated.

ANOTHER ARCTIC EXPLORER.

A Journalist Who Intends to Reach the North Pole.

Early in June Col. W. H. Gilder, an author and journalist, intends to leave New Bedford on a whaler for Hudson's bay. In a recent interview the colonel said:

"I expect to return in 1890, or after an absence of about four years. My New Bedford whaler will take me up to Cape Sabine in 78 degs. 45 min., where Greely and his party were rescued. I will then go by some Scotch whaler, which I expect to find in these latitudes in Smith's sound, and which will carry me as much further north as we can find open water. But at any rate there is plenty of animal food in the vicinity of Baird inlet, just to southward of Cape Sabine; and if necessary, instead of making a coast journey on the western side of Smith's sound and Kane basin, I can pass inland and reach Fort Conger in latitude 80 degs. 45 min. north, where there are plenty of supplies left by Lieut. Greely and which will be ample for the very polar object I have in view.

COL. W. H. GILDER.

"How long will it take you to reach this point?"

"About a year; and there I shall winter. Then I shall push my way to a northeasterly direction and seek to make my point of departure at the spot where Lieut. Lockwood was forced to turn back west, or at latitude 83 degs. 24 mins., or within 396 miles of the North Pole, the journey to which will require less than thirty days more travel, and I shall be made every endeavor subsidiary to this one effort, for therein lies the mystery of the circumpolar world."

Mr. Gilder undertakes this expedition in almost the same manner that Stanley undertook his great ecastorial journey across Africa, which ended in 1878 by his discovery of the source of the Congo, and his descent of that great African stream to its debouchment in the Atlantic ocean. Stanley was well equipped scientifically, and had already been known as an African traveler. His did not undertake the greatest land journey of modern times without some knowledge of the enterprise he was about to embark in, nor did Col. Gilder go to the north without an experience, a sound judgment and adequate nerve. His walk across Siberia, his sledge journey with Schwatka from North Hudson's bay to King William's land and return, including a summer search over King William's land, is the longest on record, covering a distance of 3,250 miles in eleven months and twenty days.

Col. Gilder is a man of stocky physique, amiable disposition, self-confident without egotism, and of a poised vertical axis of the I-am-he about him. His constitution has stood every shock that can visit a journalist, explorer and student of the world, and his temperament every onslaught that makes dyspeptics of some and tedious narrators of others. He goes about his present undertaking without enthusiasm or solicitude, just as if it were an every-day affair.

Gen. Durbin Ward.

This gentleman, who died recently at his home in Ohio, was a Democrat of almost national reputation. In the political world he could come nearer getting a thing and then just miss it than any one public man known. He was to have been put forward for the nomination for vice-president on the Hancock ticket, but at the last moment his own state weakened on him and he was left.

GEN. DURBIN WARD.

He was a candidate for congress four times and was beaten each time. He was defeated for attorney general of Ohio as far back as 1868. In 1883 he was a candidate for the nomination for governor of Ohio, but Judge Handley, who was elected, beat him before the convention. Twice he was the defeated candidate for governor. Once more, two years ago, he sought office at the hands of his party, asking for the United States senatorship. Henry R. Payne defeated him. Again, and for the fourth time, Democratical Cleveland was elected. Ward desired to be appointed to a small second-class foreign mission, but even that he could not get.

He was a lawyer by profession and a good one. In y uth he was the law partner of Tom Corwin. But he died a poor man. Had he worked at his profession as faithfully as he did for his party his children would have been crowned with honors and wealth.

One of the Many Dodges.

Henry Conkle, of Cranston, Ia., thinks hog cholera is cured by feeding garlic. A little bunch of garlic is put in the hog's mouth, causing fever, and if the teeth are pulled the hog will get well. He thinks it so strongly that he guarantees the cure. If it fails to cure, he says he will refund. He claims that he never fails. The editor of The Homestead scribner at Cassville and his tooth pulling machine like this: Hog owners will find that they will find that their own stomachs are badly out of order their teeth will be black. This gentleman is doing a thriving business and has kept back out of the teeth out of our hogs last summer for fifteen cents per head. The editor of Scribner thinks his price too cents. He pulled the teeth out of one of our neighbor's hogs at that figure. They all died.

"Why do we notice such foolishness as this? Simply because the state is chuck full and running over with just such worthless bosh and nonsense. Half the farmers in the state think that if they will drive their hogs when they have the cholera they will get well. Others believe they will get well if they salt and sulphur them. Others copperas, carbolic acid, walnut hulls, or walnut bark tea, sulphuric acid, nitric acid, etc. One of these remedies for cholera is just as good as another. Right here is a paying business they are all good if your hogs don't have the cholera. But if they have the genuine cholera, and you can be taught by experience them, the best cure is a club on all pigs under six months. With proper diet and food about half the old sows will get well.—Country Home.

Geraniums.

The usual custom is to set the plants in the open ground in spring, and on the approach of frost take up and put in the most approved manner. In the course of a few days the leaves turn yellow and die, leaving your plants in a sickly condition, from which they do not die outright. Those that survive in the course of time begin to grow from the end of branches, and very few flowers are produced.

My flower loving friends, if you would have nice, symmetrical plants and plenty of bloom, follow the advice given, and begin operations now. Take cuttings of all varieties intended for winter flowering at once. Pot as soon as rooted in small florist's pots, and repot as soon as roots become matted around the ball of earth within the pot. Care must be taken to stop the hole in the bottom of the pot. As soon as the danger from frost is over plunge the pots in the open ground and repot as often as necessary. Remove the flower buds as often as they appear until the middle of August, and when cool weather approaches set them in the window and your plants will receive no check and plenty of bloom will reward you for your trouble. If roses any cause you desire to have any of those planted out in the open ground the plants must be pruned back severely. Water once thoroughly and then sparingly until growth begins. Also keep in a cool place.

This treatment, given for geraniums, is suitable for roses, chrysanthemums, heliotrope, etc. In fact, it is almost impossible to lift a hot-house and keep alive.

You will also need some soil for next winter's use, and now is the proper time to begin its preparation. Take rich soils from some old pasture or meadow, pile up and mix with some manure, and give the heap the benefit of your soap suds on wash days, and if turned occasionally you will have a soil suitable for all kinds of plants.

The following are excellent varieties of the double geraniums: Ann Gray, color salmon; Mrs. E. G. Hill, white tinged pink; Remarkable, violet crimson, very fine; Richard Brett, orange scarlet; Zenobia, cherry, and Gen. Grant, immense trusses of light scarlet.—Orange County Farmer.

Fancy Poultry.

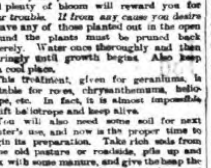
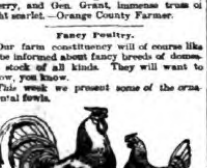
Our farm constituency will of course like to be informed about fancy breeds of domestic stock of all kinds. They will want to know, you know.

This week we present some of the ornamental fowls.



SILVER-SPANGLED HAMBURGS.

These several varieties of the Hamburgs. They are among the showiest of chickens. They have flat rose combs, set on horizontally instead of up and down. The Silver-spangled breed are in color partly white and partly black spangled with white. They are good layers and hardy, but they are not of large enough size to be profitable for market.



BROWN-RED GAMES.

Here we have the best-known of all varieties of poultry flesh, the Game, good only for fighting. The cock is as plucky as a bulldog, and will fight as long as there is a piece left. He will fight to the death. Put another in the yard along with him. The lion lays only a moderate number of eggs, which are richly flavored, and the hen is a persistent layer. The Games have been bred till there is not much meat left on them. Their long, sharp legs and beaks are very prominent.

Inoculating for Hog Cholera.

The Oskaloosa Herald says: Dr. Schermerhorn, of Jefferson, ia., a very worthy man and one who is said to be considerable of a practical way, thinks that he has discovered a cure for hog cholera. He has followed out Pasteur's theory as applied to hydrophobia in human beings, and prevents the disease from spreading by inoculation. It is said that out of a herd of 109 which he has recently treated, fifty were treated by inoculation and fifty were not so treated. Of the former but one died, while in the latter the cholera ran its course.

Rutabagas No Good.

A farmer of Michigan tells how he found out that rutabagas were worth but little as fattening food. He had a lot of feeding bullocks and two pasture milking cows for the purpose of fattening. For two months he fed good hay, corn meal, middlings and cut roasting a bushel of rutabagas for the rest of the rations. The bullocks fed on meal were pretty poor beasts; about two cents per bushel it would be.

This reminds us of the remark of that dry old joker, Charley R. Beach, of Wheeling some rutabagas as much as he did in former years, explain "Why, I have a wind mill now, and it answers the same purpose."—American Dairyman.

The Profits.

Profit in farming is in raising the most of your land to grass and stock; in making large quantities of manure, and applying it to a small portion of cultivated land, giving high cultivation; in growing more grain than you sell, be raised one year with another than can be raised on the whole farm by the usual skimming and half cultivating process. There is no use in a nation of farmers growing and selling what they can't feed.

Profit in stock raising comes from giving the best care and feed to the best animals. Improving in breeding use only thoroughbred males; half-breds produce only mongrels and scrubs. One pound of sulphur and a pound of salt will cause sheep to eat and keep your animals healthy. Always salt the hay in the mow. One is apt to neglect giving salt in winter. Add sulphur, as it prevents hay from molding and keeps it sweet.

They Always Come.

The manner of calling swine is as varied as the number of owners. The Pennsylvanian requests the presence of his herd with "Pig-pig, pig, pig-pig, sic-pig-ic." The North Carolinian hallows, "Pig, pig, pig," dwelling on the "i" each time. The Kentuckian says, "Whoo-oo, whoo-oo," and his pigs come on the jump from every direction. A Buckeye farmer resorts to the big, easy-going, well-fed method, and exactingly calls, "Soo, soo—soo, soo, soo." The Kentucky farmer causes the hills to reverberate with his hearty bass voice, "Pooks, pooks." A Dakotian brings in his pigs with a shrill whistle. And thus each state has its own peculiar manner of calling the swine.

How to Hang a Grindstone.

To hang a grindstone on its axle and to keep it from wabbling from side to side requires great skill. The hole should be at least three-eighths or one-half inch larger than the axle, and both axle and hole square; the axle should project about half of the four sides of the square, all alike, and this enough so that one wedge from each side will run it clear through the hole. Drive the wedges from each side. If the hole thus made is the size is true, the wedges will tighten the stone true; if the hole is not at right angles to the sides of the stone, the hole made or the wedge must be correspondingly altered in the taper to meet the irregularity of the hole.

Horses.

The Toronto Mail says: Horses, the result of eating too much green clover in pasture, is easily prevented. Have a good straw stack accessible to cattle, and they will always eat a sufficient of the dry stuff to neutralize the evil effect of clover. If one has no stack then give a small ration of dry hay or straw each day. If the trouble appears, administer to the affected animal, as soon as discovered, five or six tablespoonfuls of spirits of turpentine. Unless the subject is too far gone to stand, this will give relief.

Queen Bee.

It is a well-known fact that a colony cannot long exist without a queen, and she must be such a one as can meet a drone and become fertilized in order to lay eggs that will produce working bees; these are essential to the welfare of the whole colony. The queen, if prolific, is capable of laying 3,000 or 4,000 eggs daily during the honey harvest. Just in the same ratio as the eggs are deposited in the cell by the queen, so they will hatch out into bees. Mrs. E. G. Hill, White Hall, Ill.

Remarkable, violet crimson, very fine; Richard Brett, orange scarlet; Zenobia, cherry, and Gen. Grant, immense trusses of light scarlet.—Orange County Farmer.

Hard Struggle to Obtain a Hearing.

It is useless for any one to deny that writers in behalf of temperance have a hard struggle at first to obtain a hearing. Still, I believe that any one who has a story worth telling or original ideas worth re-stating—no matter on what subject—in an evening's find some public ear with sufficient discernment to recognize the fact. In literature, as in everything else, merit will have its reward—sure to find their level sooner or later. I think the plan I used frequently to follow is a good one for all young writers anxious to have their productions seen in print, viz.: When I first aspired to write for something more substantial than love or glory, I made out a list of 20 papers, more or less, and commencing with what I considered the best, and going by regular gradations to the poorest. If I wrote a story I would send it to all of these papers in succession, beginning with the first, in the order of their refusal. Let any young writer do this, and, my word for it, if his story is worth anything, he will find ere over it will not be rejected by the entire list.—George W. Cable.

The Use of Stoves in Servia.

In Servia it is the custom to build the partition walls of houses quite thick, and to make in the middle of each room a stove that they do duty in warming two rooms. The stove has no opening in either room, but is managed through an aperture in the wall.—Saturday Night Club.

The New and Ingenious "Hot Pen."

By means of the new an l ingenious little instrument known as the hyalotypotypos, or hot pen, drawings can be made on glass or glazed earthenware, by the process of fusion, which is said and somewhat heat at ordinary temperatures. The pen is so contrived that it can be heated either by gas or by an alcohol lamp, and the heat necessary to fuse easily from the heated pen, nothing to quickly on the glass that cross-hatching can be easily done. The result is a drawing perfectly pen and ink, without risk of blocking up the angles; corrections, too, can be made with the greatest ease by means of a pen-knife, which does not injure the glass, except intact. After the drawing has been made, the plate is etched by fluoric acid, and when enough is it is rinsed in water, dried, turpentined, and dried, or applied to any purpose for which engraved surfaces are required.—New York Sun.

What Pats Hate in a Woman's Heart.

"By the way, John," said a Philadelphia wife to her husband before leaving for the office in the morning, "I wish you would tell Mr. Stuckup to inform his wife that I won't be home this afternoon."

"Where are you going?"

"I? I'm not going out, but I hear that she has a week's vacation, and I don't want her spending it here before me. We let a dog stay for two days or so—there's no night, and I don't want to go there with my heart filled with hate."—Philadelphia Chronicle-Herald.

FIGHT AT A FUNERAL.

ORANGEMEN AND CATHOLICS CUT AND SHOOT AT EACH OTHER.

A Disgraceful Scene at the Burial of the Victim of Last Friday's Orange Riot at Belfast—The Police on the Alert to Prevent Further Trouble.

BELFAST, June 7.—The funeral of young James Curran, who was drowned on Friday, when the Orangemen employed in the Queen's Island ship yards attacked a crowd of Catholic workmen, assembled and drove them into the water, took place to-day. Twenty thousand persons marched in the procession, which was entirely orderly until a mob of Orangemen suddenly charged upon the moving body of Catholics, when a desperate and bloody fight ensued. The Catholics, taken unawares, were confused for a moment, but they soon rallied and scattered the Orangemen in every direction. Several shots were fired during the melee, and a number of persons were injured, many were cut severely about the head and face. The Orangemen collected their scattered numbers and returned to the scene, but the police, meanwhile re-enforced, succeeded in preventing a renewal of the conflict, and the funeral proceeded in perfect order. The Catholics smashed the windows of the Broadway Linen factory and several other buildings. Later there were several minor disturbances, and the police are patrolling the streets, fearing another and greater collision between the opposing factions, who are excited to a high degree.

Philip Rice, a driller, and John Beattie and Alexander Stewart, steam fitters, employed in the ship yards, were arrested for participating in the riot on Friday and charged in the police court with Arson Curtis. These men were foremost among the Orangemen who made the attack on the harbor commissioners. Nawries and several of the Catholics who were attacked are positive in their identification of these as the persons who threw stones on board. Michael MacMurry, a Catholic, was also arrested charged with having fired a pistol from the funeral procession.

EUROPEAN COMPLICATIONS.

Ominous Love Making Between Germany and Russia.

LONDON, June 7.—A dispatch from Vienna states that there is much curiosity and speculation in military and court circles over the love making which is becoming obvious between Germany and Russia. The czar recently sent a handsome casket which was received by the day when he completed the spring review of the Berlin garrison, and it was designed to signalize that event. The aged kaiser was much impressed with this incident, for the casket is one of which he is so proud as his splendid troops and his ability to review them. He immediately wrote a most affectionate letter, which he sent by the hand of his own head, and forwarded it to the czar by an imperial messenger. More recently he has received the Russian ambassador, Count Paul Schouvaloff, at his family table. But, to crown all, comes the announcement that the czar and kaiser are making arrangements for a three days' visit, probably at one of German spas next autumn. Austria realizes that this conference, comprising, as it does, the monarchs of two out of the three powers forming the "dreibund," will be the public announcement of the final extinction of that alliance. This does not exactly suit the Austrian emperor, who would rather see that his country might be dropped from the alliance with at least a greater show of deliberation.

To this end the Austrian Emperor had, some months ago, arranged for a meeting of the crown princes of the three empires next fall to take place in Austria, ostensibly an annual meeting of their fathers. Such a meeting would be farcical for the purpose of settling any of the grave problems of Europe, for the czarewitz, among others, that the Russian crown princes is only a boy of 18. The proposal, however, was accepted by Germany and Russia, and it was supposed that this gathering would speedily knock all the belief in the moribund triple alliance. The news that the czar and kaiser propose to meet by themselves causes much surprise, and no little fear lest they may agree upon the czar's most earnest wish—war in the Balkans. The Austrians, it is said, do not as though they were certain that war would be declared at once. All leaves of absence except sick leaves have been countermanded, and the military are kept in constant touch with officers. They say they believe that the Russians are fully ready to attack old Bulgaria by the end of June, and they would be intercepted and routed with great slaughter as soon as they had got far enough into Roumania to make them worth attacking. This is said to be the true reason why leaves of absence are refused, but is shared to some extent by veteran generals.

This is illustrated by an incident in one of the clubs. A dashing young captain said to a grizzled veteran: "Well, general, are we going to have war this time?" "You mustn't believe," the general answered, "all you hear my boy, but this is a good time for Austria to look after her big field guns and to keep her powder dry."

Maine Banks Are Prosperous.

PORTLAND, June 7.—State Bank Examiner Richard Wells has returned from a journey west to investigate the character and value of certain securities offered to Maine banks as investments.

He has completed his semi-annual examination of the fifty-four savings banks of this state, and finds that the aggregate deposits are $40,000,000, which is an increase during the six months of $1,181,984.91.

The excess of a note over actual liabilities is $4 903,178.76, an increase during the year of $1,000,000. In the above figures, the surplus fund does not include the interest which is quickly on the glass that cross-hatching can be easily done. The result is a drawing perfectly pen and ink, without risk of blocking up the angles; corrections, too, can be made with the greatest ease by means of a pen-knife, which does not injure the glass, except intact. After the drawing has been made, the plate is etched by fluoric acid, and when enough is it is rinsed in water, dried, turpentined, and dried, or applied to any purpose for which engraved surfaces are required.—New York Sun.

Two People Drowned at Lowell.

LOWELL, Mass., June 7.—While John G. Gordon and five other young men were sailing on the Merrimac river the boat was upset, and all except the above were drowning, who did not come to the surface. He was 22 years old, a woodturner and a native of Pictou, N. S. Search parties are still looking for Gordon's body, Allie Weatherhead, aged 14, son of a well-known dry goods dealer, fell from a sail boat and was drowned.

A Woman's Mad Work.

MALDEN, Mass., June 7.—Nine Twombly was driven from her home by her daughter Bessie, who threatened to kill him with a hatchet. He summoned two officers and by the attached them with a hatchet, cutting a deep gash in Officer Thornton's head. She was finally secured and locked up. Father and daughter each claim that the other is insane.

MAXWELL'S PLANS UPSET.

He Must Reconstruct to Pay Back the Money He Stole.

St. Louis, June 7.—Hugh N. Brooks, alias Maxwell, the self-confessed murderer of Charles Arthur Preller at the Southern hotel, in April, 1885, lests my gauge of confidence in the force of the police. He does and stone it. His first action after the jury returned a verdict declaring him guilty of murder in the first degree was to telegraph his cigarette girl, Miss Libbie Hall, to come and, mechanically roll a cigarette while one of his attorneys whispered to him to keep up his courage. The attorney's suggestion was unnecessary, for beyond a slight pallor on his face there was nothing to show that the prisoner was in a surprise to that he feared it in the least. Maxwell spent Sunday in his new quarters in Murderers' row. His old cell on the ground floor was easy of access to visitors, and he was consequently overrun. Now he will not be annoyed by visitors. It is said that the principal grounds for the motion for a new trial which will be presented to the judge this afternoon are the errors in the instructions, the bringing in of a lot of improper and incompetent evidence, the misconduct of the Municipal bulletin, and it is said, was a monstrous error. Hundreds of exceptions have been taken, and the case will go into the supreme court on the same grounds that took the Burns case there, the unconstitutionality of the law allowing the date fifteen challenges in the city instead of eight, as in the country.

Maxwell, when visited was lying on his bed in his cell, seemingly enjoying the "Old Curiosity Shop," which he was reading. When asked how the verdict struck him he held out his arm and showed that there was not a tremor in it from the shoulder to the finger-ends. "The only thing this verdict has done for me," he said, "is to upset all my plans for the future. I expected finally to be acquitted and had my mind made up that I should be free to do as I pleased when the confounded trial was over. I would have gone on the lecture stage or taken an engagement in one of the dime museums, as I had fascinating offers to do, but I would have continued such a career only long enough to get sufficient money to pay back Preller's heir the sum that I took from Preller's body the day after I killed him. I intended to enter a partnership with my brother. This verdict though, has upset me, and now I shall be obliged to put off my plans for a while until this trouble is settled."

The general feeling is that he will not get a new trial.

A WOMAN IN TROUSERS.

Picking Pockets and Stealing Various Articles of Value.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Lizzie Leonard, the young woman who put on trousers and jacket that she might the more ably pick pocket, spent yesterday in a cell at police headquarters. To-day she will be taken for examination before Judge Barrett, sitting in the supreme court, chamber, on the writ of habeas corpus, and if Mr. John McCoffry of Hartford, who watch she gathered in at the Academy of Music on Friday night, is not produced, there is a large chance of her getting off.

The detectives said yesterday that on Nov. 15, 1884, the girl went into George Falk's jewelry store, Brooklyn, dressed in boy's clothes, and, engaging Mr. Falk's attention, succeeded in stealing a gold watch and chain. Young Falk saw her in a theatre that night and had her arrested. She said her name was Albert Leonard, but her sex was soon discovered. She was jailed for six months for her theft.

On July 3, 1884, she and Joseph Shaw, a professional thief, were arrested for robbing William Shaw of Hoboken, of a lot of women's clothing that time, and called herself Lizzie Mullen. Shaw was convicted of the robbery, but Lizzie was discharged.

SAFES BLOWN OPEN.

Bold Robbers Get in Their Work and Escape.

BROOKLYN, June 7.—A great crash was heard in the store of Johnson Bros., about 2:30 last night, and the police, in fear of an explosion. Mr. Clark, a cigar dealer, saw three men run up DeKalb avenue. He gave a police alarm, but the men escaped several blocks away. Meanwhile, another was making his way through a back office. The door of the safe was found blown completely off, and lying near it was $100 and a watch taken from the safe, but in the hurry of the moment the burglars left their tools behind them. Evidently the force of the explosion set off the lights in the safe door had frightened the men away. Fulton street at this point and at the door of the robbery was thronged with people early in the morning, and a large crowd was collected by the explosion.

Burglars broke into the grocery store of Charles A. Dyer, on Fulton street and Bedford avenue, yesterday morning and stole about $50 in money from the safe, which they broke open.

A LITTLE CHICAGO.

Bohemian Socialists Attack Mr. Murray With Clubs and Pistols.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Shortly after 9 o'clock last night a party of twenty Bohemian Socialists, who had attended a picnic at Adlerhorst, Weehawken, Hudson county, crowded into the Weehawken depot of the Long Island railroad to take the train to Long Island City. They were very noisy and boisterous and drinking freely, and soon wanted to fight. Ex-Alderman Murray of Long Island City was in the depot, and, without any provocation, five of the Bohemians assaulted him with clubs and beat him about the head until he was insensible. Employes of the railroad came to his assistance, and a fight followed. A dozen or more of the Socialists were badly cut. Detectives Mahoney, Cody and Foley arrested four of the participants, who were taken to the Long Island City station. They were Anto Knuth, John Serk, John Klitan and Victor Klar. Dr. Michael acted up six large wounds in Alderman Murray's head. Socialistic pamphlets were found on the prisoners.

Bear Went Boating.

BALTIMORE, June 7.—In South Baltimore, Sunday, a number of young men, accompanied by two kegs of beer, went out for a sail on the Patapsco river. Before nightfall the party had become drunk, and the captain got to skylarking in the boat, which did not and until James Hickey, aged 19, fell overboard and was drowned. The body has not been recovered.

Drew a Lottery Prize.

LOUISVILLE, June 7.—The sale of the Lottery of Kentucky, in the office of this city, has been robbed of $1,500 in cash and $500 worth of jewelry. The robbers gained their entrance by a rear door. Their thefts were discovered by the clerks this morning. The safe was broken open, and threw the combination by inserting a wire. Scott Glore, manager, is the principal loser.

A CONDUCTOR'S PISTOL

USED IN SELF-DEFENSE AGAINST AN ATTACK BY STRIKERS.

A Third Avenue Driver Thrown Over the Dashboard and His Assailant Knocked Insensible—The Latter Shoved Flight—The Strike Short Lived.

NEW YORK, June 7.—A general tie-up on the surface roads of New York, Brooklyn and Long Island City was ordered by the Executive Board of District Assembly No. 49, one of the branches of the Knights of Labor, and went into effect at 4 o'clock Saturday morning. No grievance was presented by the striking men. The only cause suggested for the strike was the discharge of the Third Avenue car company and its former employes.

A few minutes before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon Superintendent Murray received word from all the roads to discontinue. He reported it meant that the tie-up was over and there was not further need of extra police. The superintendent had no record of the order given to the men to resume work when they stopped on Saturday. Inspector Steen, who was to leave for the Pacific coast on a special train, had been requested by the strike, will start Wednesday morning.

A lively romp occurred at Ninety-seventh street and Third avenue yesterday afternoon. A driver named Thomas Foon-tain was urging forward the jaded horses attached to car No. 297, four men sprang upon the front platform and lifting him up threw him over the dashboard. Driver Fountain gushed forth a stream of expletives which speedily brought Conductor Feller to the front platform. Taking in the situation at a glance Feller drew a pistol and drawing a revolver, fur-lished him by the company, discharged several times at his assailant. The policeman at the corner with praiseworthy promptness of mind, ran in the opposite direction. Feller was heard from, however, last night, when he was arrested. James O'Brien and John O'Brien in Fox's barroom. The bartender was also arrested for violating the excise law. The O'Briens were held in $200 bail.

After a protracted session of the executive committee of the Empire Protective association, which began on Saturday morning and ended on Monday morning, it was decided to declare the street car strike off, and word to that effect was sent to the headquarters of the different lines. It is understood that the general result of the conference of the Empire Protective association say that they ordered the strike to show that railroad companies that they were still well disciplined, and could order a general tie-up at any moment. William S. Boyle who, it is claimed, was one of the men that set off the strike, was arrested for conspiracy, and was held for trial. Other arrests are expected.

In Brooklyn all the street cars began running about 6 o'clock, and conductors and drivers (many) pleased to be back at work again. They had no reason to give for the tie-up except that they wanted to show their strength.

THE LONG WAR ENDED.

Reported Compromise Between the Third Avenue People.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The government Knight of Labor said late last night:

"The strike on the Third Avenue railroad has been declared off. The strike committee of the Knights of Labor met with a committee of the company and arrangements were made which will be satisfactory to both sides. The men were assured that the company here would not discharge them.

The informant said that the strike would be formally declared at an end to-day, and that all the men would resume. The reporter asked the Knight if the Third Avenue people had offered any reasons for ordering the general tie up of Saturday.

"Yes," he replied, "and very good reasons, too. First, the association learned on indisputable authority that the roads of New York and Brooklyn were contributing to the support of the men employed on the Third Avenue company. That was one reason. The other was that they were hiring and breaking in new men and sending them on the Third Avenue road. Another was this: You remember that the last general tie up was confined to New York. The Empire association concluded this time that if the roads in other cities were tied up, the owners of them would bring such a pressure to bear on the Third Avenue company that they would compel it to make terms with its old employes."

PENSIONS PASSED.

The Senate Piling Up Bills for the President to Examine.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The senate is piling up work for the president in the shape of veto material. It passed Saturday 280 pension bills, which the examiner carefully within 4 days from the time they reach his hands. This alone will give him twenty-two bills a day to examine and there will be another large batch to-day. The number of others placed on the top of this pile.

Among other bills passed on Saturday was one to grant a pension of $50 a month to the widow of the late Gen. Gabriel R. Paul, who died in Washington a few weeks ago. Another gives $40 a month to the widow of the late Col. D. T. Burgshardt of the regular corps, who was the daughter of the late general and ex-member of congress from Michigan, Alpheus S. Williams. This bill has already passed the house and needs only the president's signature to become a law.

Another bill, which had already passed the house, grants a pension of $30 a month to the four orphan children of the late Surgeon Alfred M. Owen, who died of yellow fever during the epidemic at Pensacola in 1882. Surgeon Owen and his wife not only nursed the sick at the navy yard, where he was stationed, but in the city of Pensacola as well, and both died. The pension of Mrs. T. A. Rowley was increased to $50 a month, and that of Maria A. Birny, widow of the late Gen. David B. Birny, to a similar amount.

A Girl Burglar.

CONNY, Pa., June 7.—A few days ago Hannah Nichens, a girl of 17, came to this city from Jamestown, N. Y. She procured a boarding house and rendered the landlady's baggagemaster, alone which nothing has been seen or heard of her, although officers have been diligently searching for her. Yesterday a dispatch was received from the city of George Fenton, of Jamestown, during the past two weeks.

The dispatch claims that she has stolen household goods and silverware to the value of $75. Her photograph hangs in the Rogues' gallery at Buffalo with the legend: "Alias Hannah Nichens, Jamestown." She is fatally discharged from Auburn prison, after serving a two years' term for burglary.

The Sun Dimm.

MILES CITY, M. T., June 7.—The Cheyennes have all gone to Tongue river, where, at the mouth of Cook creek, they are engaged in the barbarous and bloody orgies of the sun dance, in which novitiates become warriors and braves by the ordeal of torture.

A Jury's Report.

Every Citizen Has Shown Himself a Grand Democrat.

SEATTLE, W. T., June 7.—The United States grand jury has found a report in spades of the conduct of the recent anti-Chinese riots in this city. The jury report an extraordinary document. It says: "The Knights of Labor have been told before the grand jury sufficient to convince them that there exists throughout the country a treasonable organization known as the "Red Internationale Workingmen's Association." This organization is described at great length. Among other things the report says: "While the Knights of Labor, as an organization, is essentially anarchist in theory and practice. The main articles of its creed are arson, robbery and murder. Its proclaimed purpose is the overthrow of our government, and the erection upon its ruin of a so-called socialist commonwealth. The policy pursued by this association is to secure control of all labor organizations, and particularly of the Knights of Labor; to use to it that the officers of all labor organizations are chosen from the scientific Socialists; to control the press by the purchase of interest among the people and to stir up on all occasions and at all times as much strife and agitation as possible.

"Morgan Bros. strike on the Pacific coast was selected as the most favorable ground on which to start a movement for the subversion of our government. Last fall delegates of this organization were established at Seattle, Tacoma, Olympia and other points on Puget sound. The agitation of the Chinese question was to be made at once the principal point. Secret meetings were duly perfected, and three lines of action upon the part of the band of scientific Socialists. The labor organizations were, although secret in their character, by the members, systematically worked to promote the treasonable objects and purposes of the scientific Socialists. All the distributed literature of Puget sound for the last three months, relating nominally from the agitation of the Chinese question, were really issued, incited, gotten up and printed by this infernal association, whose real objects and designs have been studiously kept from the knowledge of the real workingmen of labor organizations.

"The Socialists of the Red American International Workingmen's association are, as shown by unmistakable documentary evidence before us, secretly inculcating the doctrine of murder and arson, and had followers in the means of practically applying dynamite; how to seize armories and military stores; how to prevent the departure of troops from concentrating points; how to preserve order in centers of insurrection; how to imprison and destroy wives of property and leading citizens. To publish this and the association instructs its members to be particularly active in labor organizations. This redhanded body of anarchists settled upon our portion of the Union as the first point of attack. They say in their secret circulars: The Pacific coast particularly, by reason of its peculiar population, is the most favorable for our purposes; in such that a few determined men could isolate it from the balance of the world for months of time, and the agitation already started over the whole of the Pacific coast will be the first to lead off in the active work when the time for that work shall have come."

THE WHITE MOUNTAINS.

Will the President Take Them in on His Way?

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Edward Sands, traveling passenger agent of the Boston and Lowell railroad, is in Washington. He is on route to Deer Park, Md., where he will make arrangements for the trip of the president and his wife to the mountains. This trip has been fully determined upon, and Mr. Sands thinks that the party will include the president and Col. Lamont, who went to Deer Park in regard to the details. Who will comprise the party is as yet somewhat indefinite. It is thought that it will consist of more, and will include two or three members of the cabinet. The date of the departure does not vary. It is said, as it will not be till after the adjournment of congress.

The party will go to the Adirondacks, taking at Swanton the Vermont division of the Central Vermont railroad. From there to Bethlehem and thence to the Profile house, Fabyan house, the summit of Mount Washington and the Crawford house, making brief stops at these points. Thence through Crawford Notch and to Boston by the way of the Fabyan over the Boston and Lowell road.

It is probable they will visit some of the seaside resorts, and it is strongly hinted that the route may take in Bar Harbor for a call on Mr. Blaine. It is thought the party will be absent about three weeks. The private car of the president of the Boston and Lowell, which Mr. Sands says is a good enough for anybody, will be placed at the disposal of Mr. Cleveland and his bride, and everything possible will be done to insure the comfort of executive and his fellow pseudo members of beautiful recreation.

THE GREEN CLOTH'S CHARM

Proves Too Much for Albert Flower to Withstand.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 7.—Albert Flower, a son of Abner Flower, who is said to have passed a forged check amounting to $45 on Hoffman, Ludwig & Co., Wood street merchants, has been given a hearing. Flower's wife and his aged mother were present and wept bitterly.

According to Flower's statement, he had been employed for nine years by a mercantile house, and had accumulated $600 and presented him with a house, but the habit of gambling grew upon him so that he spent every dollar he made. He lost his house, and even borrowed $400 from his employer, which went the same way. From his next employer he borrowed $300. It was also lost over the green cloth. Last night he consented to a stay of proceedings for one month upon Flower taking an oath to abstain from gambling and drink for one year.

DETERMINED TO DIE.

A Young Wife Driven to Despair by Want.

PERRYVILLE, Md., June 7.—Mrs. Louise Taylor, a young married woman, committed suicide by swallowing strychnine and laudanum, at the home of her father in Charlestown. She had been on a visit to her sister at Phoenixville, and at Northeast purchased the poison, and on reaching home, ended her life. Despondency over her husband's drunkenness is given as the cause. Her husband did not provide for her, and for his wife was a hell on earth. After swallowing the strychnine she told her father she had done so, and asked him what she could do to relieve her pain. Her father gave her a mustard emetic and a large portion of the poison. The dose to the child proved an overwhelming one for the mustard emetic, and after suffering intensely for three months, during which time the doctors were powerless to relieve her pain, she died. Mrs. Taylor was 25 years old.

His Head Between the Bumpers.

SOMERVILLE, Mass., June 7.—While Dudley Chapman, aged 10, and three other boys of equal age were playing coupling on the rear platform of the Fitchburg train, Dudley's head was caught between the bumpers and his head crushed. He died shortly after.

A REAL LIVE PRINCE

ENTERS THE HARBOR OF NEW YORK UPON A MAN-OF-WAR.

A Salute Fired Which Made the City People Think Canada Had Chosen a Fighting Schooner Into Port With Wicked Intent.

NEW YORK, June 7.—There is a real prince in town. He came on the Brazilian man-of-war Almirante de Barroso. He is Don Augusto Leopoldo Filippe Maris Miguel Gabriel Raphael Gonzague, Duke of Saxe.

The prince is the grandson of Don Pedro II, the lazy emperor of Brazil, who visited us in a friendly way in the seventies. His mother was Leopoldina, the youngest of the emperor's five daughters. She is now dead. His father, like himself, is the Duke of Saxe, and admiral in the Brazilian navy.

The prince is a sensible and quiet young gentleman. He does not want to have things fit at first. For he did fight on this town with a boom. Sailing up toward the Battery, the big man-of-war brought the fleet off twenty-one guns, or rather twenty-one shots from her eight long, wicked guns. The salute was a shorter, and it was meant to say:

"United States, I salute you. There's a prince aboard. Have you got any guns? Where are they?"

We didn't know any time, but promptly let loose any amount of powder from our old rickety Castle William, and we raised a rumpus that ought to have filled the heart of any prince with grandeur. We fired off twenty-one charges of powder also, and a little while after that a naval officer went to represent Rear Admiral Jouett came down from the flagship Tennessee and boarded the Brazilian. In honor o' this event, eleven guns were fired from the Almirante, and the Tennessee far up the river boomed back three more.

Mr. Salvador de Mendonca, the Brazilian consul-general, who is a brick in the glorious cause of the word, ale dinner on board the man-of-war. When he came away he brought the prince and Capt. Don Luiz Felippe de Saldanha da Gama, who is commandant of the ship, and whose name is a very old and noble one on the sea.

Late in the evening the prince was visited at Mr. Mendonca's house. He has inherited the square jaw of the Guelphs, it is true, and does not look like a South American. His hair and eyebrows are very golden, and what mustache he has is of the same color. He is a strapping, well built young fellow, tall and slender, with manners that do credit to his bringing up, and generally attractive. He wears a plain gray suit of the tropics of the right pattern, which escaped from here some time ago.

A reporter asked him in French in which language he wished to speak, and he replied amiably in English: "Oh, your choice."

"He speaks all languages," said Capt. da Gama.

The young prince said that he liked the United States. In New Orleans, where he stopped before going to Cuba, whence he has just come, he had a big time. The town turned out to receive him, and at the exposition he umpired a mule race, which he seemed to think was great. The price is not at all high for fun to be had on the ground by any means. He is simply a midshipman on board the Barroso, and like his imperial grandfather's orders are that he shall be nothing else aboard. He attended the naval school at Rio de Janeiro, where he was born, in 1867, and is now one of a class of twenty-nine middys on board the ship. He has been at sea in business. The brokers apparent to the throne of Brazil is his aunt Isabella, Don Pedro's eldest daughter, who married Gaston d'Orleans, Comte d'Eu. She has three children, who are next in the line of succession, and then comes the prince.

How long he will stay here or what he is going to do he does not know.

The Almirante lies off Bedloe's Island. She is a bark rigged cruiser of about 2,000 tons, carrying two rifled guns, two Gatling and Hotchkiss guns, and a crew of 307 officers and men.

The President at Church.

DEER PARK, Md., June 7.—The president and party, including the "private secretary" and the reporters, attended church at Oakland yesterday. The president walked to the villagers to look upon a real live president, and they availed themselves of the opportunity. The church was filled and a child was baptized, which was named Frances in honor of Mrs. Cleveland. The president put a $5 note on the plate and Col. Lamont dropped in $1. A Methodist minister, who is also postmaster at Oakland, offered prayer and asked that the president should be continued in the office. Considerable comment was caused by the Methodist minister making himself too officious to suit the Presbyterians in appointing himself a committee of one to escort the party to their pew.

Confirmation for Convicts.

JOLIET, Ill., June 7.—In the Joliet penitentiary 117 convicts were confirmed by Archbishop Feehan, of Chicago. Some of them were among the worst criminals in the west.

BRIEF MENTION.

The mayor of Providence was stricken with paralysis.

Mr. Blaine will engage in agitating the rights of American fishermen.

Another New Haven ave subscribing to pay Herr Most's fine of $500.

Two men were killed at Nashville, Pa., by falling of roof rock in a coal mine.

The district attorney will not sue on the bone rule bill is announced for to-day.

From Charlotte, N. C., comes a terrible story of double murder, robbery and arson.

The body of Miss Kelly Stevens, who was accompanied by her private secretary, Henry M. Brooks, alias Maxwell, was found guilty of murder in the first degree at St. Louis.

The board of visitors began the annual inspection of naval cadets at Annapolis academy.

Mendel is wanted over the exhibition of a very effective panorama representing the "Crucifixion."

Geronimo and his band confirm their murderous raids. A band of rangers has started in pursuit.

The body of a man was found in the woods near Bennington, Vt., where he had fallen and broken his leg. He died before help could be obtained.

The first regular Saturday half holiday of this year in New York liberated many thousands of clerks and workingmen and women, and the fine weather gave them an opportunity for relaxation.

The Anarchists indicted for murder in Chicago were arraigned yesterday and pleaded not guilty. The grand jury in their presentment found that the riot and bomb throwing were the result of premeditated conspiracy.

The delegates of the defunct Dime Savings bank of East Brooklyn, N. J., will receive their first dividend, Chancellor Runyon having ordered the payment of 30 per cent. of the deposits to be made to them from the assets left by Ogilby, the banker who caused the failure by defalcation.

PIRATES AT LONG BRANCH.

Lobster Pots Robbed by New York Sloopers.

LONG BRANCH, June 7.—The simpleton actions of a few boats were noticed at the Brighton hotel yesterday, and as the lobster pots of T. C. Lloyd were near the spot, Mr. Cooper secured a spy-glass and watched the fun from the shore. There were a crowd of perhaps 100 men on the tug, and also that they were fitting Lloyd's lobster pot-rows with gaff hooks and taking out their contents and distributing the catch among themselves. Cooper's son also saw the robbery and hastened to acquaint Lloyd of the discovery. The tug put off in a small boat to the side of the tug, which proved to be the William H. Beach, of New York, and Lloyd, who does not crowd but rubbed him of at least sixty pounds of lobsters. He was greeted with cries of derision, and mockingly asked to come on board if he wanted his lobsters.

"I did not dare to go on the tug," said Lloyd, after the William H. Beach had reported finally for New York. "For there were a crowd of ruffians would-be gentlemen bodily here, but I dared the whole pack of 'em ashore. By the gale, I'd made some on 'em eat sand if they had come on me. Now, just think of it! I make my living out of them, and only yesterday took out $15 worth. Takes the first time they've stolen my lobsters, either, and I'm going to appeal to the government for protection. If I don't get it that way, by the Lord Harry, I'll dynamite them pots. You hear me?"

The fish pound keepers were quite incensed when the outrage was reported to them, and their sympathy for Lloyd is all exhibited itself in a terrible rocking of the tug when it came down New York if they repeat the exploit. It is believed by Lloyd that the gang on the William H. Beach got away with fully seventy pounds of lobsters.

AMERICAN MINERS IN MEXICO.

Capital Rapidly Invested in Gold Bearing Lands.

EL PASO, TEX., June 7.—American capital is moving into the Mexican mining districts in greater volume than at any time since the advance of the railroad. But only two mines have been purchased from wealthy Mexicans, but the property even of Mexicans specially coveted have changed in a number of instances.

The state of Zacatecas has so far absorbed American wealth than any other mining state, and Americans now own, in whole or in part, some of the best mines near the large city of the same name. The most recent purchase is that of one-half of the Providencia, in the Fresnillo district. The purchasers were Michigan men. The gold queen is the Guadalupe district, in that state, is also engaging much attention from Americans, and heavy properties have passed from Mexican hands. The men who are developing this district are experienced mining men from the mining states.

FARMERS FIGHT A DUEL.

Fatal Ending of an Old Quarrel About a Horse Trade.

OAKLAND, Ills., June 7.—Ben Mason and George Scott met in the public road one mile north of Ryneboro and opened fire on each other with revolvers. Both were in wagons. Mason fired first, but missed. Scott fired three times, each shot taking effect. The first penetrated Mason's right arm, fracturing it so he dropped the revolver; the second struck in the right side, and the third cut off the left ear and the third entered the stomach, ranging down ward. Scott went to Tuscola and gave himself up. Mason was taken to a neighbor's, where all the bullet but the one in the stomach were probed out. From this latter wound he will surely die. Both men are prominent citizens of Douglass county. Mason is worth $97,000. Some time last fall they traded horses, in which Mason claimed he was cheated. Bad feeling ensued. Each had threatened the other, and the neighborhood, though excited, was not surprised at the fatal end of the quarrel.

Mr. Hale a Yonsar Graduate.

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 7.—Edward Everett Hale, of Boston, has been elected an honorary member of the Yonsar class of '86 and has accepted the election. He is the first honorary member of any class at Vassar, and as such identifies himself with the graduates of 1886, and promises to be present at their commencement and to be one with them on all occasions where his other duties in Boston will permit. The accession of Mr. Hale to Vassar's already long list of friends is calculated to promote her influence throughout the New England states, in some parts of which there seems to have existed a feeling of jealousy towards her.

GEN. F. E. SPINNER.

Gen. Old "Watch Dog" of the United States Treasury.

The news of the resignation of ex-United States Treasurer Spinner brought regret to all who have ever known the veteran. He is a man of the people, and he was a straightforward business man and a genial friend and companion. But none will feel more sincere sorrow over the news of his ill health than the employes of the treasury department, and in fact of the whole government. For it was Gen. Spinner who broke down the barrier which prevented the performance of clerical work by the gentler sex. This occurred during the war when the regular clerks were disappearing to enlist in the army, and it was found that women could do as much work as men ought to go around. Then it was that the chivalric Gen. Spinner stepped to President Lincoln that an opportunity be given to women to show what they were capable of doing. It is astonishing when we look at it to think of the opposition this idea met with. But Spinner gained his point, and the entrance of women into the government service may be looked upon as a "war measure" just as Ben Butler's suggestion to make the "darkies" contrabands.

Gen. Spinner was born in New York state in 1802. His father was a clergyman and the cashier of the Mohawk Valley bank for twenty years. He gave his son a splendid education. He learned several trades and then embarked as a merchant. He was appointed and held responsible positions in the New York state treasury from 1841 to 1848. He was elected to the Thirty-fourth congress as an anti-slavery Democrat, and re-elected to the Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth congresses, which by the way were the first ones as a Republican. On March 16, 1861, President Lincoln appointed him treasurer of the United States, soon after which his wonderful executive and money business ability became a welcome visitor in the households of the land. This signature, which we reproduce in facsimile, will always remain one of the curiosities of chirography. Since the general's sojourn in Florida during the past two years, it was rumored that the affairs of the treasury, of which he was the head, were not to be determined, until one day a large "gator" was noticed crawling out on the bank of a bayou where the general was, as was his custom, sunning himself, with his cane in the soft mud. The alligator stopped when he came to the signature, and after it is a recognized fact that it then dashed back into the bayou as if the mysterious hieroglyphics portended some terrible calamity for him, at least this is the story.

Gen. Spinner retired to private life July 1, 1875. When he did so all the wealth in the United States treasury till had to be counted. Then it was found that the money disappeared amounting to one cent. To account for this a most remarkable accounting took place requiring days upon days, until the scheme was found out that a cent had been stolen from the treasury, leaving balanced books.

The Canadian Cardinal.

ARCHBISHOP TASCHEREAU.

On the receipt recently of the announcement that Archbishop Taschereau had been elevated to the honors of a place in the college of cardinals, the people of Quebec celebrated the event by spectacular displays. Here as elsewhere throughout the country the Roman Catholic people hold in the Catholic churches to show their appreciation of their old prelate. The reason for it all is that this trinity old man has been a priest and shepherd among them, given his time, talents and even offered his life to their behalf. One of the first acts after his elevation to the archbishopric was to give his services to the sick and dying at the hospitals of Grosse Isle. It was there that the ship fever of 1847-48 broke in its most aggravated form broke out among the emigrants and they were dying by the hundreds daily. Archbishop Taschereau, the young Father Taschereau begged to be allowed to minister to them. His wish was granted, and he himself contracted the awful malady. His whole life has been a struggle, in order to many times since to the service of the needy. Father Taschereau's self-sacrifice was of the more commendable from the fact of his being of a family renowned for its wealth. He was from the Patent family, and his own estate is one of the most distinguished in Canada. His father was a leading member of parliament. His brother, Jean Thomas Taschereau, was on the supreme court bench of Canada. His nephew Ernest is at present a member of the house of commons, another nephew, Henri T., being a judge of the superior court of Quebec, and a third, Lindsay, is a member of the Canadian commons.

Cardinal Taschereau was born near Quebec. He is now in his 69th year. He was ordained a priest at the age of 23. He was professor of the philosophical science of moral philosophy, director of studies and superior of the theological seminary of Quebec. He was made a doctor of canon law at Laval university in 1858, and administrator of the diocese in 1862. He was consecrated archbishop of Quebec March 12, 1871. He stands high in the church, and his elevation to the cardinalate carries about June 30, and is the official instigation of the privilege which he once had of voting for or even becoming the successor of Leo XIII as pope.

CINCINNATI EVENTS.

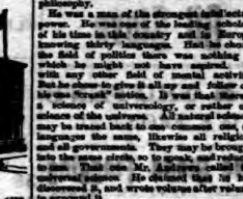
THE NEW LINCOLN CLUB HOUSE AND THE ART MUSEUM.

Two May Bothersomes, One to Politics, the Other to Attack Rich and Prosperous Revolution Clubs Make Inked of Dodge.

Whatever other cities may be or claim, Cincinnati certainly has had the most publicity-spirited wealthy citizens of any place in the United States. During the month of May two buildings, for the purpose of being completed and dedicated there, which never would have been constructed only for the liberality of Cincinnati citizens.

One of these is the new Lincoln club house, the finest political club building in the country outside of New York city. The history of the club is a history of heroism. It is the most influential Republican organization in Ohio. It has supplied from its members four governors, one lieutenant governor, one state secretary, as well as two United States senators. At every election crowds of citizens assemble in front of its walls to get returns. There will be all night rallies. Every branch is rushed to the throng as fast as it comes in. When the returns are all in, if it is a Republican victory, a salvo of cannon in the club rotunda cuts open the balcony doors and the band plays a march to the throng, who cheer themselves hoarse. Then a band plays, and people go off and refresh themselves.



NEW LINCOLN CLUB HOUSE.

The club was founded in February, 1876. They rented what had been a commodious private residence, at the corner of Race and Eighth streets, and made it quite the fad. Then they bought it and the lot for $61,000. By that time, however, the famous club had outgrown its quarters, and the purchase of a lot for the erection of new paying accommodations. The rear of the house and the Race street front were torn down, and the work of reconstruction began.

The club is a wealthy one, and had a considerable sum of money lying idle. Subscriptions were given to the amount of $100,000, become life members and stockholders on payment of $250. One hundred and thirty-four gentlemen availed themselves of the privilege at once, and $33,500 more of the money was raised. When the remodeled club house was dedicated this May, there was not a dollar of debt hanging over the organization.

The building is of ground brick and Amherst stone. Plenty of outlay of artistic genius is used in the windows and doorways, allied to the massive walls. The grounds on the front and sides are ample for retreat when sometimes those windows are open. The internal arrangements—billiard room, bowling alley, reception room, library, etc., are of the most elegant description. There is, however, no electric lighting. Much beautiful marble, gilding, tiling and exquisite woodwork are to be seen throughout the building. It took two months' exposure to Cincinnati's soot remains to be seen. The club has a membership of some 600. The large hall will seat 1,000 persons.

The Cincinnati art museum is of national interest. It is almost the two exceptions of the kind in the country, and is one of the most interesting and extensive of its kind. The school of design has been in existence many years. The museum is properly an outcome of the efforts of a number of Cincinnati women.

Its location is unsurpassed. Situated upon a high knoll of Eden park, far above the pall of Cincinnati smoke, it has a magnificent river view, which itself inspires a love of the beautiful.

Six years ago the first move was made toward constructing the building. C. J. Wolf, a gourmet and wealthy butcher, subscribed $150,000 for it on condition that other citizens of Cincinnati would contribute a like sum. They did so, and more, too. Then Cincinnatians are ever ready for anything from a mob to a May musical festival.

ARMORY ROOM.

Then Mr. Wolf gave another $150,000 to the museum fund, and Reuben Springer, $50,000 to that and another. David Sinton, $25,000, and so on. The museum has been endowed with a fund of nearly $400,000, beside $75,000 in ready cash. Altogether, counting in art treasures and other belongings, this museum as an institution is worth not less than $1,125,000. A healthy beginning that for a young art school.

The armory room gives only a faint idea of the museum's beautiful and costly treasures. As far as its goods go, it is a complete duplicate of the armory in the Tower of London museum at London. For many years there has been a steady and wholesome art growth in Cincinnati in wood carving, in pottery, in glass and pottery. Before you go out, An art pottery, Rookwood, was founded, and is carried on by a wealthy woman, Mrs. Longworth, one of the social queens of Cincinnati society. Rookwood pottery is world-famed. Probably in Mrs. Longworth's father, the late Joseph Longworth, was the founder of the School of Design. Before he died he gave to it the finest private collection of fine pottery Longworth's works is to be found anywhere.

The city donated the beautiful spot in Eden park for the site of the museum. For the money to erect buildings and purchase art works Cincinnati is indebted to Charles W. Wolf, Joseph Longworth and Reuben Springer.

DEATH OF THE ONLY PANTARCH.

Sketch of Stephen Pearl Andrews, the Scholar, Writer and Philosopher.

Stephen Pearl Andrews was widely known, more widely twenty years ago than at the time of his death. The world at large knew him as a philosopher, as the author of a work or the founder of a great system of philosophy.

He was a man of the strongest intellectual power. He was one of the leading scholars of his time in this country and in Europe, knowing thirty languages. Had he chosen the field of politics he was adapted to which he might not have excelled. But with any other field of mental activity. But he chose to give it all up and follow out the bent of his own mind. He was a man of strong convictions. He looked upon life as a science of universology, or rather one science of the universe. All natural sciences may be traced back to one, and all the sciences may be traced to the universe all religions and all governments. They may be brought into the same circle, so to speak, and reduced to one law. This was the theory which he advanced before the world in his book, "The Science of Society," and wrote volumes after volumes to expound it.

He had a noble, heroic head and face, not unlike that of Charles Darwin. He was English, and was educated in a most liberal manner, by which all sectarian might controversial, and to care more for humanity in the state he would be a citizen of the world. He was a professor in the building of the Tower of Babel. Mr. Andrews called his language "Alvesgen." On his visit to this university and his Alvesgen he studied fifty years without interruption. He left his great book at the last unfinished, but in such a forward state that other scholars may take it up and complete it. He spoken was called yesterday.

STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS.

Mr. Andrews was born in Templeton, Mass., in 1812, the son of a Baptist preacher. He graduated from Brown university and studied law, in the practice of his profession he went to New Orleans. He married a Creole girl and became a planter. He was a powerful lawyer. He it was who first introduced the celebrated lawsuits of Myra Clarke Gaines to the courts. But in New Orleans also slavery revolted him to the very ground. Also that he became a burning Abolitionist. Texas was then an independent republic. Andrews went to Texas, organized all the powers of his intellect to prevent it being a slave-holding state. He failed. Then he went to England to try to induce it to buy of the Texans, and get the British government to interfere for freedom. This aroused the attention of the United States government, and President Tyler and Secretary of State Daniel Webster sent Andrews secretly to Texas to defeat it. This in turn originated the Mexican war. Stephen Pearl Andrews sought to put a stop to it.

He was a lawyer in New York city at the residence of his son. He had made and lost several fortunes. He was an advocate of the single tax. He was a leading spirit in the writings on Woodhull & Claflin's Weekly during the existence of that sheet. He is also believed to have written the bulletins addressed by Mrs. Woodhull. Mr. Andrews was a Spiritualist.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Fire Commissioners will be held in the City Court room at eight o'clock this evening, when it is thought that the committee appointed at the last meeting to purchase a new steamer will make its final report.

—On Sunday morning about nine o'clock as a horse attached to a buggy was being driven from Pine's livery stable, the animal became unmanageable and commenced backing and before it could be stopped had succeeded in wrecking the buggy by coming in contact with a building.

—The following are the officers of the Industrial School whose thirteenth annual entertainment was held in Warren Mission Chapel on Saturday afternoon last: Mrs. F. H. Gardner, superintendent; Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, assistant superintendent; Miss Lizzie Hedman, secretary; Mrs. F. C. Boss, inspector.

—We have received an extended description of the Butterfly entertainment for the benefit of the Children's Home, but have no room for it to-day in the crowded state of our columns. Suffice it to say that it is to be an extraordinary affair, and worthy of one of the most deserving of charities—the Children's Home.

—Attention! members of the Senior Society, Boys' Branch, Y. M. C. A., Mr. S. P. Dudley, chairman of the boys' work committee of the N. Y. city Young Men's Christian Association, and one of the most successful men in the boys' work in this country, will meet with the Senior Society in the Association hall this evening at eight o'clock Every member is urged to be present.

—Thomas, a young son of Patrick Day, was leading a horse with a halter along Park avenue about half past six o'clock yesterday evening, when the animal became unruly and commenced kicking. During his pranks he kicked the little fellow several times about the body, knocking him down. The boy was carried into the house. It was found that no bones were broken.

—The second excursion of the season to Manch Chunk and Glen Onoko via Philadelphia and Reading railroad will take place to-morrow. The excursion train will leave Plainfield at 9.10 a. m. and returning will leave the Glen at 5 p. m., and Manch Chunk at 5.30 p. m., arriving in this city a little before 9 o'clock at night. The fare for the round trip will be $1.75, with 50 cents additional for a trip over the "Switchback."

—Since the new dog ordinance authorizing the authorities to capture all unmuzzled dogs found running at large through the streets of the borough, a week ago, eight of these unfortunate canines have been incarcerated in the pound. Of this number one has been redeemed, four were on Saturday night shot and three are as yet unredeemed. One of these animals is a pet black-and-tan and will probably be claimed by its owner.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

ELEVENTH MEETING.

The regular meeting of the City Council for the month of June was held in the Council chamber West Front street last evening, commencing at a little after eight o'clock. On the roll call there were present Councilmen Bowers, Cox, Cuthbert, Dunham, Goddard, Marsh and Simpson—7.

The absent members were President Tell A. Begueln, who is abroad with his wife, and Councilmen James Johnson, Gallup and Voorhees—4.

Mr. Goddard nominated Councilmen Cox as President pro tem, which nomination was confirmed.

The President upon taking the chair called for the reading of the minutes of the two previous meetings, the first of which the clerk read and on motion of Mr. Marsh consented reading the second.

A petition from R. C. Fisher to erect a frame dwelling on W. West Fourth street was read and referred to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee.

The clerk read a petition signed by A. J. Wuckler, L. A. Huemmer, J. A. Powlison and others for permission to erect a frame shed to the rear of the Congregational Chapel on West Seventh street, such shed to be used for the protection of horses and vehicles. It was referred to the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps with power.

A similar petition from J. Smith Garretson signed by himself and others and dated at the corner of Central avenue and Third street was referred to the same committee.

A petition signed by A. J. Wuckler in behalf of the Plainfield District Messenger Service was granted. The petition asked for the location of two poles—one on Richmond street near Third street, and the other on Third street near Richmond street.

The following report, signed by the president and secretary of the Public Library, was presented and referred filed:

REPORT OF PUBLIC LIBRARY.

To the Common Council of the city of Plainfield:

The Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library, organized pursuant to and under the requirements of the act of the Legislature entitled "An act to establish free public libraries and reading rooms," passed March 27, 1884, and established, hereby making this, their annual report, pursuant to the direction of their trust on the first day of June, 1886.

The year ending June 1, 1886, will be ever memorable in the history of the organization for in that year it received accessions which entitle it to the name and rank of a library.

The Hon. Job Male, in fulfillment of a purpose long since expressed by him, has donated to the Board of Directors the parcel of land at the southeast corner of Park avenue and West Eighth street, one hundred feet in width on Park avenue and in the rear, and one hundred and twenty feet in depth, with the appurtenances and commodious building thereon designed for a free public library and reading room, and an art gallery and museum; and in addition to this valuable gift, it finally made up of library and works of art and other articles suitable for use in connection with the library and Art Gallery, to the aggregate amount in value of $30,271 has been raised and donated by other persons. In furtherance of the object for which this fund was raised, a part of the moneys included in it were expended in the erection of a suitable and commodious building thereon designed for a free public library and reading room, and an art gallery and museum; and in addition to this valuable gift, it finally made up of library and works of art and other articles suitable for use in connection with the

SOME WESTERN POETS.

A FEW OF THE LYRICAL LITERATI OF WISCONSIN.

The Dangers of Firing Guns in the Northwest—Pegasus on a Broad and Beautiful Month—Poets Who Are Fond of Other Poets.

Special Correspondence.

MILWAUKEE, May 31.—It is said that one cannot fire a gun in the state of Wisconsin without hitting a poet; that women take their hands from the dough to write sonnets of true classic form and spirit; that they compose epics while doing the family darning, that men turn from the cut of an office, from the poring and plodding of travel by land and sea, from the dull writing of briefs and the duller writing of sermons to construct the stately chant royal or the dainty ballade or rondeau.

One unappreciative mortal hearing the first statement, declared that he wished it were true—there would be more cases of "didn't know it was loaded."

It is further said that these same writers have formed themselves into a mutual admiration society, and spend the time not given to rhyme making in plaiting wreaths of laurel for each other's brows, so to speak. Neither of these statements is strictly correct. True it is that the glorious northwest has poets galore, but they do not go about the streets in droves, with eyes in fine frenzy rolling, manuscripts [illegible] hand; and, though they love each other dearly as brothers and sisters should, they have been known to write each other down as well as up. Neither one nor the other makes much difference with the public. It makes up its own mind. It likes or dislikes or is indifferent without much regard to the opinion of any one individual.

But the public likes personalities. It likes to know how poets, romancers and the like look, act, talk. What their likes and habits are, where they live and how; and if they do not care for an opinion upon the merits of their work they like to know of its methods. Some of these I am going to tell.

At the head of the list Mr. Eugene Field's name one-half of those who read it will probably begin to hum "Three Graves Among the Gold," while the other half will assert that he "Wrote Little Boy Blue." Mr. Rexford wrote the words of these two very popular songs, thereby securing a through ticket to immortality, via the hearts of the people. He lives in Sidcotta, Wis.

Here he writes verses, cultivates flowers, writes articles upon their culture for half a dozen magazines, was recently appointed and performs the duties of postmaster. By appointing him to that office the government shows that it bears no ill will to the bards. He is a bachelor and, what is most unreasonable and aggravating, a contented, happy one. The world which "loves a lover" has had him for many years. Whether he married, or true to a "memory," many times, but there seems to be nothing in facts to bear out the suspicion. He seems unromantically content with his single estate. He has no talent for general society. While he enjoys a good play, lecture, concert, he is not tempted by the gilded temptation of the church social. A Whittier-like shyness has been attributed to him. It has been said that he ran away from an editorial party last summer. Close friends of the shyness set afloat the idea of being afraid of any editorial gang; says he has seen too many literary folk to stand in any awe of them. Which shows what a mistaken impression is, or else what reckless bravery is his! Mr. Rexford openly and unhesitatingly declares that he is not a woman hater. If he has indeed the divine madness, he has the poetic gifts and the excellent characteristics of manner and good sense. His admirers, however, are many and great but far more than the critics, which is a happier fate than falls to every poet. His writings are in good demand. He makes such an income from his literary labors as enables him to own a home, a horse and a wife. He admits are expensive, and to lay aside something each year for the proverbial rainy day. It should be added that Mr. Rexford is a very good looking man. And who needs the advantage of good looks more than a poet?

Mrs. Sarah H. Hobart lives on a farm near Fall River, Wis. A generous prosperity makes it possible for her to have all the pleasures of country life, with few of its cares and labors. It is not said of her that she has ever written a treatise upon agricultural pursuits, or taken a prize as a fair for the traditional golden butter, though there isn't a doubt but she could do either of the two. She has a passion for flowers and is what is called a lucky hand in their cultivation. A broomstick set in the earth by her would feel it is duty to leaf and bloom. Mrs. Hobart is the soul and center of a happy home. Among young people she is a favorite, at once companion and mentor. She has the rare power of making wisdom lure enthusiastic friends; men admire and reverence her. In conversation she is earnest, stimulating, and yet restful. There is an atmosphere of steadfastness and sincerity about her that inspires confidence. Personally she is fair to see, with something of that indescribable look that poets imagine poets should have. Tall, with fair, pale complexion, blue eyes, chestnut hair that ripples from a white forehead to the back of a small, well-shaped head. She writes short stories and beautiful poems, excelling in the descriptive, but she has a surplus of that divine discontent which urges her across the torrent and the salvation of the poet.

Carlotta Perry is of medium height and slender figure, with beautiful hand eyes and an abundance of soft, brown hair, with which she too poorly covers a fine forehead. Her features are irregular, the beauty of her face lies chiefly in its varying expression, which is by turns thoughtful, tender, sparkling and inspiring. She is a curious mixture of frankness and reticence, of shyness and self-possession. She has fine conversational powers, and writes with a happy faculty for getting at the heart of things. One of her literary friends says of her, "She always puts me in tune for labor and better work." The basis of her character is sincerity; the hearts of her friends may safely trust in her.

She is not so fond of society as society is of her. Wealth and position do not affect her estimate of people. She likes them for what they are, and is faithful in her attachments, wherever the weight of friends may blow.

Miss Perry stands in the front rank of western poets, writing fearlessly, intensely and consistently. She is also a true artist's delight in her work. Her contributions appear everywhere. She is represented in various collections of prose and verse, from school books to "Miss Edgeworth's Wit and Humor of Women." She is in constant receipt of letters congratulatory, appreciative and autograph-soliciting from admiring strangers. Her home is in Madison.

In another letter, in the near future, I shall have more to say about the poets, and a word or two about the writers of poems who dwell on Wisconsin soil. A dwelling like ours of literary talent can be made up within the borders of our own beloved state.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to

per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an assessment. There are no Mutuality Plans, or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy, and the contract is backed by assets of over $600,000. The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876, and the loss in its accident operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its surplus, and Reserve Fund was $342,192.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company is bound to be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over $600,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. ## YALE'S NEW PRESIDENT.

Professor Timothy Dwight, Who Succeeds Noah Porter.

Professor Timothy Dwight, who was recently elected to succeed Noah Porter as president of Yale, is the grandson and namesake of a president of Yale, himself a graduate and successively a tutor and professor of the college. Thus is he identified by inheritance and by long service with its history, its traditions, its growth, its fame, its weaknesses and needs. He has been associated with most of the successful endeavors to enrich the equipment and the treasury of the institution, and has a perfect understanding of its financial requirements.

TIMOTHY DWIGHT.

Dr. Dwight is 58 years old, and is the son of James Dwight, who married Susan Breese, accumulated a fortune in business and sent his son to Yale with the ease that was graduated in 1849. Entering the theological school in 1851 he was honored to preach in 1855, and in 1856 he went to Europe and continued his studies at the universities of Bonn and Berlin. Returning to the United States in 1858 he was appointed Buckingham professor of sacred literature in the Yale theological department. In 1861 he was ordained to the ministry, and in 1869 he received the degree of D. D. from the Chicago theological seminary. He was a member of the committee for the revision of the English version of the Bible in 1873 and 1874, and since 1880 he has been associate editor of The Independent, to which he contributed a paper in 1871 on "The True Ideal of an American University for the future of Yale College."

Professor Dwight is a believer in the elective system, and is expected to be liberal in his ideas of a university course. He is popular among the students and is favorably known as a speaker, though the man much sought after at banquets. His means being ample, his salary as a professor has been given regularly to the theological school.

In 1880 Professor Dwight married Jane W. Skinner, of New Haven. Their two children are Helen Root, born in 1882, and Winthrop Edwards, born in 1874.

CAREER OF A COUNTRY BOY.

What Energy, Industry and Integrity Can Accomplish in One Day.

One of the very best examples of the possibilities within the reach of a young man is found in the brief life of a country boy, whose career is attracting the admiration of those among whom he has risen. It proves that a man of integrity can attain a fortune through honest hard work. In this week's Harper's Weekly says Mr Maurice Bonnett Flynn will not be 40 years of age until two years from Nov. 3 next. He certainly intended to. Flynn was born of poor children here to Patrick and Mary Flynn in the little village of Malden, Columbia county, in that state, and when, at the age of 17, he arrived in New York city his total capital consisted of $37. These facts make the statement that his fortune is estimated at from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 of considerable interest. With the exception of a "year's schooling" at a Catholic school in Troy, such education as young Flynn had at the time of his arrival in New York had been picked up by his own unaided efforts.

MAURICE B. FLYNN.

Upon his arrival in New York he took the first employment he could find, which proved to be in a grocery store in Williamsburg. He subsequently became "timekeeper" at the Novelty Iron works, and then learning that a firm of iron manufacturers were in need of a book keeper, he boldly applied for the situation, and although he knew scarcely anything of the requirements of the position, succeeded in obtaining and holding the place at a salary of $8 a week. Within a very short time his salary had been nearly doubled. His executive ability was speedily recognized, and when, in 1867, the junior member of the firm died, the sole management of the details of the business was intrusted to young Flynn. Two years later he was given a small interest in the firm, and on May 1, 1870, was admitted to the firm as an equal partner.

During all these years he had been assiduous in his studies. He lived in Brooklyn, but regularly for several years at attended the night school at Cooper Union, and being quick to learn, readily acquired a fair knowledge of the French, German and Spanish languages, which he has since materially improved by devoting himself to the study of mechanical drawing and execution. In 1878, Mr. Flynn, three days before election, declared himself to be a candidate for the assembly on the Democratic side of politics and was elected to represent the Thirteenth and Fourteenth wards of Brooklyn, defeating the regular Democratic nominee by a large plurality. At the conclusion of his term he was re-elected.

It cannot be seen that Mr. Flynn's entrance into politics affected his business in any way. It is at least not suspected. He has proved himself to be a man of such remarkable executive ability that he can attend to many and varied interests with unusual ease. He is now looked upon as one of the leading contractors of New York. On a recent trip abroad, Mr. Flynn carried among other letters of introduction ones from President Cleveland to President Grevy, of France. Three years ago Mr. Flynn married the daughter of Treasurer Moss, of Wallack's theatre. If his health is spared, his future career will be worth watching.

THE DANISH CURE

AND THE LADY WHO INTRODUCED IT INTO THIS COUNTRY.

How a Foreign Lady of the Nobility Made a Career for Herself in New York. Madame Schott and Her Manipulation of Muscles.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, June 1.—This city is famous as a place for the development of talent—not simply the talent that takes to the beaten track, but the talent of taste. New York furnishes a field of activity for every gift under the sun, if the possessor do but know how to reach the market. I have noticed this more in the case of women than men. The latter have the entire range of professional, industrial and commercial pursuits to turn to for a livelihood; but women have only a few avenues open, paved by precedent. This makes it awkward for the uninspired, but furnishes a fine chance to the inventive to turn some peculiar gift, taste or acquirement to practical account.

And they do turn these things to account. I could name nearly a dozen women who earn honest and often enviable incomes by means never before adopted by man or woman. These are the starters of new industries, for what one woman does successfully others imitate, and so every new thing becomes in time a recognized profession, business or industry—one of the things that impoverished men turn over to their minds in perplexity and fear when they face the greatest of all problems, "What shall I do to be saved from want?"

One day, when in a car with a friend, a handsome carriage, drawn by two spirited ponies and engineered by the most dignified of coachmen, stopped before the door. Somebody said, "Here comes Mme. Schott. I know you will be interested in her."

Then, in response to my look of inquiry, the lady went on to explain that Mme. Schott was a wonderful woman; that she was a practicing physician, who did great things without medicine; that she had introduced the "Danish cure" into this country, and that she had made herself rich, honored, and somewhat famous. "Yes," she continued, "and she possesses the faculty that all the schools haven't been able to acquire—the faculty of making and keeping clients. Withal, she is an interesting character and pleasing lady."

A few minutes later a lady entered the parlor with a spring step and a carriage that was poetry itself. Her motions were quick and graceful, like those of a delicate bird, yet by no means undignified. She had the grace and vivacity of youth, a face that, although not lineless, had no look of age about it, and a form like a girl of 20. She was Mme. Schott. She began to chat in a voice as bird-like as her movements, and so deliciously Danish in accent that I could only understand a word here and there.

Later I became well acquainted with her and learned her history, a brief sketch of which I give that it may encourage other women to look within themselves for something they can turn to substantial account when a vocation is needed.

Mme. Schott's Christian name is Wilhelmine, is the daughter of Danish parents of the highest nobility of Denmark. She early gave evidence of the self-sufficient spirit which has won for an honorable place in life by objecting to certain matrimonial plans which had been formed for her by those in authority. Determined to be something on her own account, she left her home and went to her uncle in Copenhagen, Dr. Emile Frisch, who was physician to King Christian IX. He was known from his close relations to the king and queen, who were so much interested in her beauty and spirit that they offered to be father and mother to her.

Having a taste for medicine, she took up the study of the mechanism of the human body, and a natural desire to cure diseases, she devoted herself to the thorough study of anatomy and physiology. While her young ladies of her rank amused themselves with social pleasures. Under her uncle's tuition she became practical student of a physician, with no very strong hope of ever turning her knowledge to account. There, while visiting an institution for the treatment of the sick, she first saw the Danish cure" practiced. She was strongly impressed by its workings and, eager to become a practitioner, was instructed in this science of manipulation, which has been an important branch of medical science in Germany and Denmark since the Fifteenth century. In Denmark the study of anatomy is taught, not as here, in the dissecting room alone. After the usual course of study the student enters a department devoted entirely to studying the action of the muscles of the parts in living subjects.

A practitioner of the Danish cure must be able to detect instantly, upon examination by the hands alone, a displacement, contraction or abnormal condition of any muscle or cord in the body.

Meeting an American lady and hearing much of the beautiful new land across the sea, soon after finishing her study of the "Danish cure," Mme. Schott was stricken with the American fever, that insidious disease that has led so many young Europeans farther into the hills and mountains of Denmark, Sweden and Norway and carries away the young and strong, leaving the parents childless and old. She came alone with her new friend, thirty-two years ago, and here in the land of which she had long thought and dreamed she has lived the most useful part of her life.

All her plans of finding a vocation were disarranged soon after her arrival by the intense experience of falling in love and marrying. Her husband, now deceased, had been an editor in Copenhagen. In 1848 he became a political exile. He came to America, and his wife and mother were was robbed by a friend. When he died Mme. Schott found herself thrown on her own resources. She had taken to fine embroidery, not realizing that her medical acquirements were a valuable capital to operate with. One day, at the house of a friend, she saw a lady afflicted with spinal disease, who was so ill as he couldn't walk. Fryingly she took him in her arms and rubbed his back. Every time he saw her afterward he begged to be taken up and rubbed. After each manipulation he was much better. His mother begged Mme. Schott to come daily and rub her son. She did, and cured him without a drop medicine, though she refused to take any pay for it. This incident seemed to be the turning point in her career. She saw a field

JOTTINGS.

—Cherries and other early fruits are beginning to ripen.

—Masons are engaged "pointing" the erections in the walls of the First Baptist church.

—A regular meeting of the Somerset county Board of Freeholders was held in Somerville yesterday.

—About four car loads of people composed the Manch Chunk excursion which left the city this morning.

—Number Two Engine Company have decided to "excuse" to Eureka Grove on the Bigelson dirt day.

—Five dogs are to be executed at the North Plainfield Lockup to-night, one of which is a fine bird dog.

—Counterfeit silver dollars of the date of 1885 are in circulation at present. They are light in weight and a trifle thicker than the genuine coin.

—A pet house dog belonging to Mrs. Monsell of Grove street is supposed to have gone mad during yesterday and was shot before biting any other animals.

—Special Policeman Marsh shot, but failed to kill, an unmuzzled dog at the corner of Third street and Plainfield avenue about half-past six o'clock last evening.

—The Messrs Carney Bros. have filled a long felt want by placing in front of their establishment on Somerset street a substantial iron trough for the watering of horses, through which a stream of cool water continually flows.

—John O'Brien's circus in this city yesterday had large attendance at both the afternoon and evening performances. The earning was fair and about the same as seen in all similar shows. The circus left this city at an early hour this morning for Elizabeth where it is "billed" for to-day.

—John Cameron says that he was not indicted to buy Mellbourn's insurance policy, but has been currently said by acquaintances and on their authority reported in THE NEWS in an article last Monday. He denies having had any interest in that policy at any time, and hence is not the victim other's use supposed.

—At a meeting of the Union County Board of Agriculture, to be held early next in Elizabeth, it was decided to hold a picnic, probably on the 23d inst. Most of those present favored the Waverly fair grounds. It was thought best to hold another meeting to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock, when the secretary will distribute Stelle Board's report.

—Some time ago Mr. J. A. Brown of Baltimore avenue sailed for Europe leaving in charge of Mr. J. H. Van Deventer of Woodland avenue a valuable cow and a large dog of the mastiff species, the latter being valued at $100. A few days ago the dog died under mysterious circumstances and a physician made an examination of the body and found secreted in the stomach a quantity of quick silver supposed to have been administered by some person unknown.

—Some days ago a medium sized yellow colored dog, showing symptoms of the rabies severely bit a little pet black terrier dog belonging to Mr. John Van Deventer, and he hired man in pursuit of the maddened canine, who succeeded in shooting it. Since that time Mr. VanDeventer's dog has been garroted and closely watched, but as yet has showed no signs of the rabies. Mr. VanDeventer says that should the stricken loose a cow than to part with the dog, so strong has been the attachment formed.

At Law Over a Dog.

Special policeman Randolph Marsh last evening detected an unmuzzled dog running at large on the Boulevard and he forthwith shot at the animal. The ball entered the dogs left hind leg, failed to produce the desired effect and he wandered off to die alone and among strangers. The dog was the property of Michael Burke of Plainfield avenue and was considered by Mr. Burke to be valuable during the hunting season. He claims that the animal had been unjustly been taken from the animal and that he (Burke) and his son accompanied the dog when the shooting occurred. This morning Mr. Burke sought legal advice and will settle the matter in the Courts.

FIRE BOARD MEETING.

Fire Tax to be 30 Cents on the $100—Commissioner Cutter Resigns—New Engine Ordered.

The Board of Fire Commissioners for the city of Plainfield met in regular session at eight o'clock last evening in the city court room, at which time there were present President Grover and Commissioners Brower, Knowland and Livingston—4.

The absent members were Messrs. Cutter and McClure—2.

The minutes of the two previous meetings were approved as read.

Mr. Knowland, from Special Committee appointed to purchase a new steamer, made a verbal report in which he said that said committee had made a contract with the Amoskeag works for a new steamer for No. 2 Company and that it was now being built; it was thought probable that the engine would be here by July 4th, but possibly not before July 12th, as the track of the engine had to be changed to conform in width with the New Jersey track, which is sixty-two inches in width. The report was accepted.

The treasurer's report was read, showing the total amount of assessable property in this place and the borough to be $5,270,920.

Of this amount the perishable property was estimated to be worth $2,587,550. At a ratio of 30 cents on the $100 would be the amount of tax raised for the coming year; at 30 cents on each $100, $10,762 would equal the amount to be raised. The rate last year was 21 cents on each $100.

Mr. Livingston made a motion which was carried that the books of the Assessor be accepted as correct.

Mr. Brower offered a resolution that the rate of assessment for the coming year be 30 cents on each $100 worth of perishable property in the five districts. Adopted.

A motion to omit the payment of bills was made and carried.

The name of J. Frank Mundy for member of Oakville Engine Co., No. 1, was taken up. He was unanimously elected.

The following appointments were reported from Warren Engine Co., No. 3: L. Wright, R. Coleman, Geo. Keller, Hugh O'Donnell, Harry Hunt, Chas. Sellen (said every), Jacob Harding, Wm. Murphy, F. Becker and J. Untinger. Some of the above were for non-delivery of dues and some on account of absences from the city. In each case the action of the company was confirmed.

Fifty-one members comprising the names of B. R. Haines and E. A. Vanderhoof for non-payment of dues, were presented as expelled and the company's action was confirmed.

A communication from Engine Co., No. 2, stating that Chas. Sellen had been expelled from said company, was laid over on the secretary instructed to notify Mr. Daly of company's action.

William H. Sebring, from the Alert Hose Company, asked for exemption papers, having served twenty years in the department. The secretary was instructed to examine the record and if found to be correct to grant the exemption papers.

The president offered a communication from Mr. J. S. Cutter, tendering his resignation as Fire Commissioner and asking that such resignation take effect immediately.

Mr. Livingston moved that the communication of Mr. Cutter be received and placed on file and that the resignation be accepted. So ordered.

The treasurer's monthly statement was read, received and ordered on file.

Mr. Brower reported that iron rods had been placed in Warren 3's house and also that the flooring in stable had been repaired. He also reported on repairs in the Oak-ile house.

Mr. Brower offered a communication from the Warren Company stating that the rules and policies on the various houses had run out, and Mr. Livingston made a motion that the Friends act and Treasurer look into the matter and revise the insurance policies and report at the next regular meeting of the Board. Carried.

The Chief's quarterly report was read, detailing the equipment in the various houses. The report was received and filed.

Chief Salaman reported that one of the horses on the first door of No. 2's house had been bitten by a dog and the Committee on Supplies be authorized to make the necessary repairs.

Mr. Brower called the attention of the Board to the necessary arrangements for the Fourth of July, and the Chief was instructed to act in conjunction with the chief in making the necessary arrangements.

The matter of locating a circuit of fire alarm boxes was referred to the president of the Board with power.

Mr. Brower moved that the Committee on Supplies be authorized to purchase a suitable flag for the use of the treasurer, and it was so ordered.

The same commissioner nominated Geo. P. Sphon as engineer of Engine Co. No. 2. The nomination was confirmed—all voting aye.

Mr. Brower made a motion that the company's meeting night be changed to the city court room on Monday, July 13th, between the hours of two and six p. m. for the purpose of hearing all grievances which may arise. Carried, and the Board adjourned.

Held in Bonds to Appear in Court.

On Monday evening Louis Kuntz of North Plainfield called at the residence of Mr. J. H. Van Deventer of this place for the purpose of paying Mr. Hand some money, the balance due on a debt. Mrs. Hand, who is said to be not on the best of terms with Mr. Kuntz, appeared on the scene and, it is alleged, without provocation, began to abuse him by striking him on the head with a stone and felling him to the ground unconscious. Mr. Kuntz later appeared before Justice Mattison and swore out a warrant for Mrs. Hand's arrest, charging her with atrocious assault. She put in an appearance in court for a hearing on Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Immediately thereafter Mrs. Hand appeared on the scene and, in the absence of Mr. Kuntz, charging him with assault and battery. Charles Grieder became surety for his appearance on Friday.

T. H. C. A. NOTES.

The large number of boys present at the Young Men's meeting Monday evening were greatly blessed, the leader, Mr. C. T. Kinsey, taking for the subject "What is Christ to Me?" Many testified and at the close three young men asked for prayers for themselves. The meeting was a great help and will be a special feature hereafter. All men who sing are cordially invited and help in that line.

THE SEMINARY COMMENCEMENT.

Miss Edith Clark and Miss Mary Brunson Graduate With High Honors—The Exercises.

A scene of grandeur pervades the entrance to the Seminary. This is due largely as Horsance is his play of the "Mighty Dollar," puts it to the H. O. T. (high old trees) that stand like stately sentinels, in uniform of emerald green, to guard the entrance to the treasure trove, the guards suggesting by the magnificence of their proportions that there is something within the sacred portals of the Ladies' Seminary well worth guarding which the Misses's three little maids from school "chum ken." And there was, The old song says that "In days of old, when knights were bold and barons held their sway" and the knights they were bold and did it necessary for such treasures as these. We meekly entered the outer gates of iron, and saw shadowy knights in swallow-tails approaching the brilliantly lighted mansion. Its banners from Japan clung like flies upon honey, and festooned the stars and stripes festooned, and entwining evergreens, had more of a marital than a martial aspect. The beleaguered Gnibbsites women of the twelfth century, we are told, were penalized in surrendering their besieged castle to take as much as they could carry of whatever they most highly valued, and such is the astonishment of the Guelphs carried on her back a man. But this order of things was reversed last evening, for the walls-scaled knights each had on his arm a woman in white or in other summery material, and instead of going from, proceeded into the mansion, home of the stately and graceful Seminary where all old-time welcome beyond. Now and then there were young men not thus provided, but prepared for conquest, not as the Sabines, who carried off for love the Roman maidens while their protectors were absent, but in the most approved custom.

We heard the old guards whisper, and "The Chestnut" they were guilty of, satisfied us that they were green indeed. A torch light in the grand night has not belonged to them. We did not care to dispute the matter with such big fellows, but quietly availed ourself of the light to find a seat, though it were, and likewise flashing in every direction, with no apparent purpose but to enlighten the dark to favor. Above us the stars blinked, but the moon had not yet appeared to mock the scene with his smiles. Up the spacious stairs we climbed to the vestibule, and their beauty and fashion and gallants numerous gracefully led unto the hall where the commencement exercises were later held, according to the following

After the performance Miss Kenyon held a reception and later dancing was indulged in, the evening's entertainment and rendering the seventeenth commencement at Miss Kenyon's Seminary.

The Dunham Choristers' Second Annual Ice-Cream and Strawberry Festival.

When the NEWS scribe entered Warren Mission Chapel last evening the place was well filled by a merry throng of young men and maidens and elderly people and children, the hum of whose voices filled the room and was as sweet music to the ear as the musical swell of old Ocean roaring up his chorus. It was an animated scene, full of the vivacity and spirit of this month of roses. The surroundings were in harmony with all. Christmas lanterns were suspended from the ceiling in the room, while bunting and the star-spangled banner with potted plants made up a picture that readily caught the eye and held it. The genial spirit of the occasion—President Dunham of the Choristers bearing all good cheer which may arise. Carried, and the Board adjourned.

Held in Bonds to Appear in Court.

On Monday evening Louis Kuntz of North Plainfield called at the residence of Mr. J. H. Van Deventer of this place for the purpose of paying Mr. Hand some money, the balance due on a debt. Mrs. Hand, who is said to be not on the best of terms with Mr. Kuntz, appeared on the scene and, it is alleged, without provocation, began to abuse him by striking him on the head with a stone and felling him to the ground unconscious. Mr. Kuntz later appeared before Justice Mattison and swore out a warrant for Mrs. Hand's arrest, charging her with atrocious assault. She put in an appearance in court for a hearing on Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Immediately thereafter Mrs. Hand appeared on the scene and, in the absence of Mr. Kuntz, charging him with assault and battery. Charles Grieder became surety for his appearance on Friday.

Three Little Boys from School.

On Monday afternoon three little boys, ranging in age from five to eight years, entered a number of the stores in the city for the purpose of getting a $10 bill changed. Police Officer Lynch found the boys emerging from Freeholder Vanderbilt's store on Park avenue, where they had been trying to change the bill. He questioned them and learned that the bearer of the bill was a son of the well-known Margaret Bunworth and the names of his companions were Sullivan and Sanderson. The latter boy informed the officer that his mother had sent him to town for the purpose of changing the bill, while the boys are known to have sought the purchase of a bat and ball. The storekeeper refusing to sell to them on account of their tender age. The officer confiscated the money and turned it over to Chief Bodd, who still retains it. The boys are thought to have found or stolen the bill. Although Mrs. Sun worth claims the ownership of the money, but on account of her unsavory reputation the police will hold it pending an investigation.

PERSONAL.

Mr. W. J. Talbot of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is a guest at Laing's Hotel.

The wife of Editor Wm. J. Leonard of The Central Times is confined to the house from an attack of rheumatism.

After a tedious illness covering some months Thomas Hines of Dunellen died about five o'clock yesterday afternoon from consumption, aged 75 years.

Mrs. Nugent and sister, Miss Lizzie Lawler, of Port Richmond, Philadelphia, are visiting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Grogan on West Front street.

In Grace Church this afternoon at five o'clock by the rector, Rev. Dean Rodman, Miss Nellie DeGraff of First Place and Frank N. Doubleday will be united in marriage.

A fisherman of this city is said to have recently gone to Bound Brook on a fishing tour, and when arriving at that place found to his chagrin that he had left his rod and reel at home.

A delegation from Jerusalem Lodge of this place paid a fraternal visit to Atlas Lodge of Westfield, on Monday evening, at which time the M. M. Degree was conferred on Mr. Wm. E. Hart.

Mrs. Electa M. Pennington, wife of Mr. C. M. Pennington, died at her home on West Fourth street at a little after ten o'clock last evening Deceased had been a sufferer for about six months from Bright's disease, which subsequently resulted in her death.

Mrs. Mary P. Hale a former resident of Evona, died at the residence of her son-in-law, Jersey City, yesterday morning, from asthma, aged 74 years. Messrs. A. M. Runyon & Son of this place were communicated with and went to Jersey City and took charge of the remains, from which place they will be buried in this place to-morrow.

On Thursday of last week at Muhlenberg Hospital, Dr. Hedges assisted by the associate physicians of the hospital performed a most delicate operation on Mrs Joseph Noel of this place. The patient had been ailing for about ten years past from a complication of abdominal disorders, but since November she has been continually growing worse. The operation performed was considered very successful, and the patient is expected to be out next week.

The funeral of Nellie, the twelve-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Flanagan of Leland avenue, took place from the Catholic church at ten o'clock this morning. A High Mass of Requiem was celebrated by Rev. P. E. Smyth for the repose of her soul. Miss Nellie Horan, Miss Allie Quinn, Miss Celia Kelly, Miss Mary Kilroy, Miss Katie Reed and Miss Mamie McGinley, girls from the St. Mary's dedality, a society of which deceased was a member acted as pall bearers. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

In the spring of 1877 Mrs. James McGee was visiting a lady stopping on West Fourth street, when a poor colored woman came to beg company her and another lady on a mission of charity. They went to a cottage near the southern limit of the city, and found three little boys, whose mother had died, and whose father had deserted them, while next door neighbors, including the poor colored woman, were caring for the little ones as best they could. Mrs. McGee immediately became interested and with other Christian women, had the waifs placed in a comfortable home, supported by voluntary contributions, and organized what is now known as the Children's Home, with Mrs. Horace Kimball, President, Miss Maggie Coon, Vice-President, Miss Lizzie Miller, Treasurer, and Mrs. F. H. Gardner as Secretary. The three children referred to were the first to be taken care of, and are now grown to manhood and are prominent bankers of Columbus, Mo., doing well, and the third graduated with high honors from the High School at Perth Amboy in this State last June. By the work thus begun the Children's Home has been established, and nearly 100 children have been since reached and provided with good homes. To-night at the rink the object of the butterfly entertainment to-morrow evening which a number of Plainfield ladies, headed by Mrs. Charles D. Wadsworth and Miss Kenyon, projected to this end.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 1886.

A Little Tale Told by the Poet of the Sierras—Mexico's Poverty.

I have in my possession a story with a strangely beautiful little rosebud girl of about 7 years, who stood always on the floor of the car conversing all went out, and would rise, for there was little room aboard and crowded still! But for my fashionable friend, the day, after it had gotten a little on in age, I made the prize 5 cents. Would You should have seen those shining black eyes. You should have seen the dimples in the cheeks of them. And the color of delight that came to her tawny little face would have made the fortune of any father in the world who could have caught it. I remembered her then as I think that, sick or well, rich or shaky, she should surely and certainly by way and should wear a crown of roses so long as I remained and had a 5-cent silver piece to buy with. That crowned her upon the throne of every act and trifles here.

I told some in her about that pretty and patient child, and she has shoes and stockings now. She has also a neat little calico dress, and has had her ghastly shock of hair thinned out and completely combed. But I regret to say that the only dress that this child has to wear is the one which she sold me the flowers for! I sent was simply an old gunny bag with a hole cut in the end for the head and the arms cut naked.

And this little one, after having had gathered the coarse garment about her as decently as had always shown so shyly modest, I say, after having had put on my pushing back her tangled, heavy hair with her left hand as she hugged my roses with the right, I had really never had known quite what to do with a 5-cent piece. And this is simply owing to the fact that she is only one of those ills. There is so much poverty in Mexico, so much of it is almost driving, hopeless, and dismal poverty. At the same time I am clearly convinced that there is much more happiness in the middle class here than in New York, Washington, or any other American city in the United States.—Joaquin Miller's Mexican Letter.

Where Only Farmers Are Born.

As a thin crescent, which very shortly shall be thinned to the point of extinction, we shall have the cars back and emitting furnaces to fall back upon, and iron cars will at last become a necessity, their cheapness and durability will be recognized, and the weary walking of their many engines will be relieved by their powerful aid. But we are sorry to say that both coal and ashes rates must take their time, which is not yet.—National Gazetteer.

RADICAL DISSIDENTS

TO ORGANIZE A NEW SCHEME FOR LOCAL GOVERNMENT

ORANGE RIOTS AT BELFAST.

A Proposition Contemplated Giving England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland Power to Attend to Local Matters With an Imperial Parliament.

BELFAST, June 9.—Rioting was renewed in this city yesterday, the Orangemen being, as upon the two previous occasions, the aggressors. Many houses of Catholics were pelted by Catholics, smashing the windows with stones, and in some cases completely wrecking the buildings. The police attempted to disperse the rioters, when the latter turned upon them and drove them off the streets. Several policemen were seriously injured. Re-enforments arrived, and the riot act was read. This had no effect upon the infuriated Orangemen, and the police fired upon them. The mob returned the fire with revolvers and the fighting became desperate. The police finally overpowered the rioters and compelled them to disperse. Many of the police and a large number of the rioters were more or less injured. Last night several of the houses rude hill has embolished the Orangemen, and a repetition of yesterday's scenes is feared. The police are exercising extraordinary vigilance to prevent a renewal of the disorder. The Catholics were in no way responsible for the rioting and took no part in the disturbance.

CHAMBERLAIN AND O'KELLY.

What the Latter Said to a New York Paper.

LONDON, June 9.—The Radical dissidents intend to organize a National union, with headquarters at Birmingham. Their programme includes a scheme for a large extension of local government to England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland. The imperial parliament to exercise supreme control. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain is to be president, Mr. Jesse Collins secretary, and fourteen members of Radical members of the house of commons will act as vice-presidents.

Mr. Chamberlain, on May 31, wrote to Mr. James O'Kelly, member for Roscommon and correspondent of a New York morning paper, as follows:

"You wrote to a New York paper, dating your letter from the house of commons, that I had publicly described Mr. Gladstone in language which is usually observed for drawing room; and all such for publication. You also wrote that I go among Radical and Liberal members, saying to them privately: 'Why should we concede home rule to Mr. Parnell? The Irishmen are on his track, and sooner or later will kill him.'

"Both of these statements are absolutely and entirely untrue, and I demand your authority there'or, or that you publicly withdraw them."

Mr. O'Kelly replied: "The statements you refer to were made to me by English members of the house of commons, and not intended for publication. I accept the responsibility for publishing them, and decline to withdraw them, because confidential information in my possession convinces me that you have used expressions, with reference to Mr. Gladstone, similar to those I imputed to you."

Mr. Chamberlain rejoined that he would have the public to appreciate Mr. O'Kelly's character and motives.

DISSOLUTION DECIDED UPON.

Chaotic State of Affairs in the British Parliament.

LONDON, June 9.—Mr. Chamberlain and his followers will hold a conference, probably on Thursday, and an election manifesto will immediately follow.

The Tory chiefs virtually decide to nominate a candidate in opposition to Mr. Gladstone in Midlothian. The list of government candidates is almost complete. The cabinet at the council was at first divided between resignation and dissolution, but Mr. Gladstone was emphatic in his determination to dissolve parliament, and the cabinet unanimously agreed upon that course.

Mr. Schnadhorst's National Liberal Federation council will meet on Thursday.

Mr. Gladstone was in frequent telegraphic communication with the queen, and sent to her majesty the full package containing lengthy dispatches.

Mr. John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, in a speech at the Eighty club last evening, declared that the Tory victory should resign. He believed that despite the defeat of the bill it would become a law in a very short time. Certain constituencies, he said, would never consent to coercion, which meant misery in Ireland and disorder in Westminster.

Recently, Mr. Morley said, respected Lord Hartington and his followers, but the other Liberal recreants would have to answer to the country for their conduct, which he assured his hearers would not be forgotten in case of a new election. In conclusion he warned his friends that unless the Liberal majority of eighty-six fell, the Parnellites would have complete control of parliament.

WHAT THE PAPERS SAY.

Home Rule Not Dead But Delayed—Adverse Comment.

DUBLIN, June 9.—The Freeman's Journal says the cause of home rule is not for the moment defeated, but not killed. The bill is lost, but home rule will triumph.

CORK, June 9.—The Cork Herald counsels moderation and patience. The English democracy, it says, will rally and scatter the false Liberals to the winds.

The Irish World says: The progress of Irish nationality is checked, but it has reached a point which five years ago seemed impossible.

The Pall Mall Gazette announces its expectation that the next parliamentary elections will result in a reverse to Mr. Gladstone, and predicts that a second election will be necessary before the Irish question is settled. Probably there may be more coercion in Ireland before home rule is granted to that country. The Standard says: The Tory government, but if the Irish people will be patient the question of self-government will settle itself within a year or two.

The St. James Gazette says: The great "aye" or "no" of the electors must be spoken before the home rule flood is entirely squelched. But the Irish people and Mr. Gladstone are both politically dead past resurrection.

Italy Visited by Cholera.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The marine hospital bureau has received information from Venice, under date of June 6, to the effect that during the last fourteen days there has been a daily average of 41 cases and 22 deaths from cholera. The aggregate number of cases being 61, with 30 deaths. The sanitary bureau has also received information from Florence, Italy, dated June 3, that two Italians had returned there from cholera, and more expected.

CONNECTICUT EPISCOPALIANS

Hold Their Diocesan Convention at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, June 9.—St. Paul's church as filled at the opening service of the annual diocesan convention of the Protestant Episcopal church in Connecticut. Williams, Rev. S. Williamson Smith, D. D., L. L. D., president of Trinity college, the Rev. Dr. Harwood and Vibbert and Rev. Mr. Haines of St. Paul's conducted the services. The sermon was by Dr. Smith. His theme was the gospel as the ward of life, and the sermon treated of the work the gospel has done in the world. He argued and declared fully equal to all demands made upon it, and capable of settling all questions that its agents had been called upon to settle. He spoke of the duty of the ministers toward their congregations. The sermon was listened to with great interest. Delegates to the convention came on the trains and were entertained as usual by the people of the different parishes. The business session was held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Bishop Williams presided and his annual address. The present number of clergy in the diocese is 194. During the year four clergymen have died and four new churches have been consecrated.

At the evening session the business of the Missionary society of the diocese was transacted, and reports were presented by the secretary and treasurer and by secretaries of the Arch deaconries. The committee on the bishop's fund reported the fund judiciously invested. Several years ago the diocese voted to add $50,000 to the fund, thus increasing it to $90,000, the income from which is applied to the bishop's salary of $5,000. Since then $46,000 has been raised. The standing committee was selected by ballot as follows:

The convention assembled this morning at 9 o'clock, and elected delegates to the general convention, to be held at Chicago, in October.

Sunday School Workers.

BUFFALO, June 9.—The thirty-first annual convention of the Sunday School association is in session at the Central Presbyterian church in this city. Chairman Duncan, of Syracuse, presiding. All counties of the state, except five sparsely populated, are represented, and it is evident that good and efficient work will be done before final adjournment.

BRAYTON HOLDS THE FORT.

Unsuccessful Effort to Remove an Objectionable Constable.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 9.—The state legislature was postponed this morning. The action of the legislature in electing Charles R. Brayton as chief of the state police to enforce the prohibitory law was brought up again. A large number of petitions were presented, representing thousands of people, asking for a repeal of the constabulary clause of the law or the removal of Brayton from office. A resolution to this effect was introduced providing for a repeal of that part of the law. Strong efforts were made to defer the matter to the next session by having it committee and by adjournment, but these motions were finally withdrawn and the bill put on its passage. An aye and nay vote was called for to put upon record on the question. The motion was lost, 56 to 13, and four absent, and the constabulary clause stands. Mr. Brayton is safe, and has received the congratulations of his friends.

Lady Teachers in Peril.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 9.—An excursion party of about sixty students of Wells college, accompanied by Professor French, of that institution, who had been visiting Cornell university, left here on a small steam yacht for Sheldrake, at the head of the lake, and struck by a terrific squall. The pilot and engineer became panic stricken with fright and deserted their posts. The high waves dashed into the pilot house, frightening the terror-stricken ladies and partly extinguishing the fires. Professor French took the wheel and finally succeeded in righting the vessel and landing the entire party safely. There were no life preservers on the yacht.

A Journalist's Premonition.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—Thomas M. Jackson, associate editor of The Philadelphia Sunday Transcript, has died of cancer of the throat. Mr. Jackson was prominent among the best editorial writers of this city, and was also an enterprising and clever general reporter, a leading dramatic critic. A peculiar fact in connection with his death is that it had been locked forward to and its time closely predicted for Mr. Jackson for many years past, owing to the fact that his grandfather, his father and seven other blood relatives of his died of the same disease, and all between their 49th and 51st year.

A Verdict for Mrs. Garfield.

CLEVELAND, June 9.—The $25,000 damage suit of ex-Senator Thankful Tanner against Mrs. Garfield attracted large crowds in court yesterday. Mrs. Garfield, who shuns publicity, was not present. The jury were out but a few moments, when they returned and rendered a verdict for Mrs. Garfield, greatly to the anger of Mrs. Tanner. She was able to recover, but by the quaint Scotch saying is adorned with broken dishes, and is a veritable curiosity shop. The woman was slightly injured by Mrs. Garfield's carriage a few days ago, and the accident resulted in this suit.

A Pension Amendment.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The house committee on invalid pensions has amended the Blair pension bill which passed the senate last week by striking out the provisions which gave to soldiers who have by accident or disease, in no wise their own fault, become totally helpless, a pension from $4 to $24 a month (according to disability), and inserted a uniform pension of $12 per month to all soldiers unable to support themselves on account of disability, and of those dependent upon their own exertions for support.

Americans Are Not Figs.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Assistant Secretary Fairchild has directed the New York Chicago to remit the fine of $500 imposed upon the Canadian vessel Spingone, which failed to enter properly. It was shown that the vessel was leaking badly, and if she had stopped at the outward port to enter as required she would probably have sank.

A Young Man's Peculiarities.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—John Donaldson, a young man, has pleaded guilty, before Judge Hanna, to forging a $2,000 tax property of the Queen Fire Insurance company, by whom he was employed as bookkeeper. The peculations covered a period of three years. He was sentenced to the Eastern penitentiary for two years.

Three Cheers for Blaine.

WATERVILLE, Me., June 9.—Congressman Seth L. Milliken was renominated by the third district Republicans without opposition. The convention adjourned with three cheers for Blaine.

THE TYPESETTERS.

THE INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION ELECT OFFICERS—A GIFT.

George W. Childs and Rr. Drexel Make a Handsome Donation—The Next Meeting to be Held at Omaha—The Matter of Eaton Discouraged.

PITTSBURG, June 9.—The second day's session of the thirty-fourth annual convention of the International Typographical Union was called to order promptly at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The committee on credentials of delegates, Mr. Smith, reported. The president then appointed the standing committees. The major portion of the time of the morning session was consumed by an interesting speech by Hon. J. M. Farquhar, of Buffalo, and congressman from the thirty-second district, New York state. Mr. Farquhar is an old type. He was a shiver in the stick, and a federation of trades unions. He also earnestly opposed, with many reasons, the swallowing up of the typographical union by the Knights of Labor. At the close of Mr. Farquhar's address, on motion the order of business was suspended, and the convention proceeded to the nomination and election of a president. Messrs. Charles R. Stivers and William Amison were nominated. The roll call showed 60 votes for Mr. Amison and 49 for Mr. Stivers. Mr. Amison had been elected two years ago the diocese voted to add $50,000 to the fund, thus increasing it to $90,000, the income from which is applied to the bishop's salary of $5,000. Since then $46,000 has been raised. The standing committee was selected by ballot as follows:

The convention assembled this morning at 9 o'clock, and elected delegates to the general convention, to be held at Chicago, in October.

Sunday School Workers.

BUFFALO, June 9.—The thirty-first annual convention of the Sunday School association is in session at the Central Presbyterian church in this city. Chairman Duncan, of Syracuse, presiding. All counties of the state, except five sparsely populated, are represented, and it is evident that good and efficient work will be done before final adjournment.

BRAYTON HOLDS THE FORT.

Unsuccessful Effort to Remove an Objectionable Constable.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 9.—The state legislature was postponed this morning. The action of the legislature in electing Charles R. Brayton as chief of the state police to enforce the prohibitory law was brought up again. A large number of petitions were presented, representing thousands of people, asking for a repeal of the constabulary clause of the law or the removal of Brayton from office. A resolution to this effect was introduced providing for a repeal of that part of the law. Strong efforts were made to defer the matter to the next session by having it committee and by adjournment, but these motions were finally withdrawn and the bill put on its passage. An aye and nay vote was called for to put upon record on the question. The motion was lost, 56 to 13, and four absent, and the constabulary clause stands. Mr. Brayton is safe, and has received the congratulations of his friends.

Lady Teachers in Peril.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 9.—An excursion party of about sixty students of Wells college, accompanied by Professor French, of that institution, who had been visiting Cornell university, left here on a small steam yacht for Sheldrake, at the head of the lake, and struck by a terrific squall. The pilot and engineer became panic stricken with fright and deserted their posts. The high waves dashed into the pilot house, frightening the terror-stricken ladies and partly extinguishing the fires. Professor French took the wheel and finally succeeded in righting the vessel and landing the entire party safely. There were no life preservers on the yacht.

A Journalist's Premonition.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—Thomas M. Jackson, associate editor of The Philadelphia Sunday Transcript, has died of cancer of the throat. Mr. Jackson was prominent among the best editorial writers of this city, and was also an enterprising and clever general reporter, a leading dramatic critic. A peculiar fact in connection with his death is that it had been locked forward to and its time closely predicted for Mr. Jackson for many years past, owing to the fact that his grandfather, his father and seven other blood relatives of his died of the same disease, and all between their 49th and 51st year.

A Verdict for Mrs. Garfield.

CLEVELAND, June 9.—The $25,000 damage suit of ex-Senator Thankful Tanner against Mrs. Garfield attracted large crowds in court yesterday. Mrs. Garfield, who shuns publicity, was not present. The jury were out but a few moments, when they returned and rendered a verdict for Mrs. Garfield, greatly to the anger of Mrs. Tanner. She was able to recover, but by the quaint Scotch saying is adorned with broken dishes, and is a veritable curiosity shop. The woman was slightly injured by Mrs. Garfield's carriage a few days ago, and the accident resulted in this suit.

A Pension Amendment.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The house committee on invalid pensions has amended the Blair pension bill which passed the senate last week by striking out the provisions which gave to soldiers who have by accident or disease, in no wise their own fault, become totally helpless, a pension from $4 to $24 a month (according to disability), and inserted a uniform pension of $12 per month to all soldiers unable to support themselves on account of disability, and of those dependent upon their own exertions for support.

Americans Are Not Figs.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Assistant Secretary Fairchild has directed the New York Chicago to remit the fine of $500 imposed upon the Canadian vessel Spingone, which failed to enter properly. It was shown that the vessel was leaking badly, and if she had stopped at the outward port to enter as required she would probably have sank.

A Young Man's Peculiarities.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—John Donaldson, a young man, has pleaded guilty, before Judge Hanna, to forging a $2,000 tax property of the Queen Fire Insurance company, by whom he was employed as bookkeeper. The peculations covered a period of three years. He was sentenced to the Eastern penitentiary for two years.

Three Cheers for Blaine.

WATERVILLE, Me., June 9.—Congressman Seth L. Milliken was renominated by the third district Republicans without opposition. The convention adjourned with three cheers for Blaine.

HANLAN DEFEATED.

Lee Pulls a Winning Boat at the Regatta.

TORONTO, Ont., June 9.—There was a big crowd on the island yesterday afternoon to witness the conclusion of the regatta. The weather was most favorable. It was close upon 5 o'clock before Conly, Hanlan, Hosmer and Lee were ready at the starting point for the final heat in the single scull race of three miles. A good start was effected, and at the turning of the lower buoy there was a close contest between the men; Hanlan first, Lee second, Conly third and Hosmer fourth. About half way back to the starting point Lee had a splendid spurt and passed Hanlan in turning in first. Hanlan second, Conly third and Hosmer fourth. There was now half of the race to be rowed, and it was seen that Hosmer was hopelessly out of the race, and that Conly would remain third. Lee and Hanlan turned the buoy almost together. Lee, however, had the advantage, and was pulling with a long, graceful sweep, and continued to more than retain his slight lead to the end, winning by about half a length. Hanlan seemed to make a spurt toward the finish, but could not catch up to Lee, who was loudly cheered. The prizes are $500 to the first, $300 to the second, $100 to the third, and $50 to fourth.

The time was 17 minutes 31 seconds. About 5:30 a start was made in the consolation race between McKay, Ritz, Hamm and Plaisted. The distance was one mile and a half. Plaisted rushed off with the lead, but was quickly collared and passed by Hamm, who turned the buoy considerably ahead of the others. Plaisted and Ritz turning almost together, with McKay close up on them. Hamm continued increasing his lead, and won by about 400 yards. Ritz was second, and there was a grand struggle between Plaisted and McKay for third, Plaisted winning by a few feet. McKay was too late to take part in the spurt. Time, 9 minutes 23 seconds.

COL. INGERSOLL AND ETERNITY.

The Great Unbeliever Taken to Task in Court.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The case for the plaintiff in Gen. Farnsworth's $2,000,000 suit against the Western Union Telegraph company, for cutting the Bankers' and Merchants' Telegraph company's wires, was closed yesterday. The case has been on trial before Judge Lawrence for nearly three weeks.

Mr. Dwight Townsend, secretary and director of the United Lines company, which purchased the property of the Bankers' and Merchants' company, was asked by Choate on cross-examination, what were the monthly earnings of the United Lines company.

"I protest, in the interests of time and eternity," said Col. Bob Ingersoll.

"I am astounded," said Mr. Choate. "I didn't know the learned counsel took any interest in eternity."

"At a time," remarked Judge Lawrence, "I think honors are easy between the counsel on either side."

The witness said that the Bankers' and Merchants' never paid expenses. The raid of July 10 so completely destroyed the value of the property that he was unable to raise a dollar on it.

"Have you any interest in this suit?" asked Mr. Choate.

"I have the satisfaction of trying to bring the greatest monopolist criminals of the day before twelve good men to see if such outrages cannot be punished," retorted the witness.

"Then," said Mr. Choate, "you regard this as a moral trial, do you?"

"Something like it," smiled Mr. Townsend.

Connecticut Humane Society.

NEW HAVEN, June 9.—The Connecticut Humane society held a meeting in the Center church, in this city, at which President Porter, of Yale college, presided. He introduced Mr. Henry Bergh, of New York, as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Bergh talked for an hour on cruelty to animals. He criticised severely Mr. Cleveland for going trout fishing saying that it was not right to take the life of even a fish for mere sport. He wanted more legislation to protect dumb animals. Rev. Dr. Bacon, of the Humane society, told of some of the cases to which his attention had been called, and in which the society had succeeded in doing good.

Carrying Off the Honors.

ANNAPOLIS, June 9.—A New York man, Frederick N. Kress, carries off the honors at the Naval academy this year. He is the son of Maj. Kress, of the United States army, and was born in Illinois. He was appointed from Elmira, N. Y., in 1882, where an uncle resided. Cadet Kress is next to the youngest man in the class of 1886, and is slight in stripling in appearance. He is, however, a manly and unostentatious youth, who has kept the first place in his class almost from his entrance into the academy. Cadet Kress is 19½ years old.

New Jersey's Gambling Law.

TRENTON, June 9.—Arguments have been read before the supreme court on the writ of error from the Monmouth county quarter sessions in the case of Thomas De Lacey, who was fined $300 for selling pools at Monmouth park. His counsel contended that a law passed in 1880 repeals, by implication, the old law against gambling, and that it at agricultural fairs, etc. A decision is expected before the racing season begins.

A Competitive Drill.

GALVESTON, Tex., June 9.—The board of managers having charge of the interstate drill, to be held in this city from the 5th to 10, inclusive, announces prizes aggregating $12,000. All the leading military companies in the south, and several from the north, will attend the drill.

THE THIRD AVENUE STRIKERS SET UP FOR THEMSELVES.

No Money in the Treasury to Pay the Expenses of the Unemployed—Dissatisfied With the Executive Committee—An Appeal for Further Aid.

NEW YORK, June 9.—A secret meeting of District Assembly 75, Knights of Labor, was held last night. A great many delegates of the Broadway railroad were present. It was said that an offer had been submitted by District Assembly 49 to District Assembly 75 to support the Third avenue strikers, and put them on their feet, if they would stand with the No. 75 and join No. 49. The actions of the executive board were also a matter for consideration. The Brooklyn men said this morning that the Third avenue men will join District 49 without asking leave of District 75.

The executive board of the Empire Protective association did not get around to the headquarters until 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. They were confronted there by a dozen angry strikers, who had been sent up from Columbia hall by the other strikers in waiting there.

"There are about 300 men in Columbia hall and more coming," an angry striker said. "They have been waiting there since 7 o'clock this morning."

The dozen strikers followed the executive committee upstairs, and in about half an hour they came down again with Andrew D. Best and J. F. Conyee. The latter carried two cigar boxes, in which there was supposed to be money. They went up to Columbia hall and paid out a little of it. Only about a dozen men and half a dozen women got any. The highest sum paid to any one was $5. Two of the men got $4 each, and the others only $3. Then the committeemen picked up the cigar boxes and started to go away. The other strikers followed them into the hallway and demanded their last week's pay.

The members of the committee said that they had to go up to the Harlem police court to be present at the examination of James F. Graham, and would return shortly. They did not return at all to Columbia hall. They went to Military hall.

Committeeman Rowan said last night: "Best was in error when he said to the reporters that there was $6,000 in the treasury. Why, there is scarcely $800, and it was settled on Monday afternoon that only the most needy of the men should receive any money at present. We don't want to let the treasury run dry. The members of the executive committee have been busy all day going over the books. No money is coming in now."

The Third avenue local assembly has reorganized itself, and issued this notice:

"In order to correct a misstatement in the newspapers, we, the Third avenue, namely, that the strike has been declared off on the Third avenue by its late employes, we wish the public and more especially the organizations of this city and Brooklyn, to understand that we have not in any form so ordered. At a regular meeting of Labor Assembly 4,168, Irving Dourlay in the chair, we hereby elect a new executive board to carry on our business, as the former board has signally failed to do so. And we hereby appeal to town boards to aid us in our just endeavors to gain the rights of which we have been of late defrauded.

"James Regan, chairman; Dennis Kavanagh, secretary; Irving Gourley, John Scanlon, Francis English, executive board."

Gus McDevitt, the head starter of the Grand street line, was informed that he might go back to work. Joseph Whalen, of the Dry Dock company, told the committee of the men who came to him in the morning to ask for McDevitt's reinstatement that McDevitt had been discharged without his knowledge and would be reinstated at once.

The examination of Knights of Labor James F. Graham, William H. Boyle, charged with conspiring to prevent the Third avenue road from running its cars on Friday last, has been postponed until Friday, as the Rutgers Park, at 59th street, the contractor, who hauled Boyle's henchman to $2,500 on Sunday, became frightened and surrendered him. Michael Darcy, Graham's bodyguard, has also vanished, and Boyle will waive examination, if he can, at this stage of the proceedings.

PUNISHING THE STRIKERS.

Many Men Lose Their Cars Through the Tie Up.

BROOKLYN, June 9.—All the conductors and drivers of the Brooklyn City Railroad company who did not report for duty at the regular hour on Sunday morning lost their cars, or have been put on the extra list. No consideration will be shown them by the company. President Richard said:

"No man who lost his car by not being on hand on Sunday morning will get it again with my consent. The men who tied up on Saturday night and quit work were strangers from this company. The understanding with the employes made some time ago is no longer binding. It was broken by the men on Saturday. The members of the agreement that I consider just will continue in force, but there are other parts that I have always said I would not sign, and, therefore, only the first part remains in force."

Thomas Cooper, Patrick Rourke and James Waldron are members of the executive committee of District Assembly 75, Knights of Labor, are employes of this company. The directors of this company will meet today for the purpose of considering whether these men could be retained in the service of the company. The executive committee will, it is said, recommend their discharge. The employes of the other Brooklyn railroads will also have to suffer for the late tie up, and it is even said, that all the active Knights will be systematically dropped and their places supplied with non-union men. Many of the drivers and conductors are in favor of addressing a communication to the various railroad presidents, expressing their regret for their action on Saturday.

THE COST OF STRIKES.

Large Sums of Money Kept Out of Circulation.

NEW YORK, June 9.—"We are glad that the strikers are busy," said a Wall street broker last night, "for the gentlemen here who live on the Third avenue line of travel, comprise some of the best customers we have. If they do not purchase stylish seats and tenderloins, they consume great quantities of coarser meats, besides fish and vegetables. The long strike kept nearly every one of them away from the market."

On Saturday night the general tie-up was a loss to the market of nearly $200,000. Women could not get down town to buy, and the small fish carry link that usually brings them to market was broken.

A member of the Every Street Business Men's association was of the opinion that the loss of custom to the street and market owing to the strikes would figure up about $4,000,000.

The Line Was Reversed.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 9.—At two-day A. Sisk, a regular day laborer on the garage grounds at South Framingham, the captain ordered the company to center the Stockham street railroad cars for a two mile ride to the Indian and Maple Hill district. One half of the company refused, saying that they belonged to the Knights of Labor, and that organization had placed a boycott upon that street railroad. Some of them walked the two miles, and others chartered trains and barges.

Iron Workers' Wages.

PITTSBURG, June 9.—Two weeks of the afternoon and evening session of the Amalgamated association of iron workers was devoted to the consideration of the question of wages. There was a strong party in favor of demanding a minimum of $3 per turn, but after an exciting debate it was decided to demand the same wages that have been paid since June 1, 1885, viz: $3 per ton for puddling and $3 per ton for the nine hours system, as given up the first, and the strike has been declared off. The men will apply for reinstatement. The strike affected some 300 mechanics and 5,000 heavy drivers throughout the city. Three hundred men employed at the Greenwich coal wharves on the Hudson river in this city struck for an increase of 10 cents per cent in wages. The advance was conceded and the men resumed work.

BACK TO HIS DESK.

The President Resumes Work After Six Days' Rest.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The special train, with the president, Mrs. Cleveland, Col. and Mrs. Lamont, Dr. Bryant, Secretary Whitney and Commodore Rodgers, arrived here at 7:25 p. m. The run from Harper's Ferry to Washington was without incident of interest. When the train reached the K street crossing, out toward the suburbs, some distance from the main depot, a large crowd of people, many of them ladies, had gathered to get a glimpse of the president and his bride. But they were disappointed, as the train merely slackened speed at the crossing, and then moved rapidly into the Central Baltimore and Ohio depot. Here perhaps 400 or 500 people, more fortunate than those at the K street crossing, crowded outside the depot the arrival of the president. When the train came to a stop the president was the first of the quartet to alight, and he helped Mrs. Cleveland followed, and assisted by the president, stepped nimbly from the car. Col. Lamont and his wife came through a moment later, and the party entered carriages in a few minutes from the time of arrival, and briskly out through the depot to the front of the building, where the presidential and brown and his carriage, with Albert Hawkins, whip in hand, were within. It receipted only a few seconds time for the party to enter the carriage, and they were off for the White House—home after an absence of six days.

Professor Wright Goes to Johns Hopkins.

BALTIMORE, June 9.—The trustees of the Johns Hopkins university have appointed Professor J. H. Wright, of Dartmouth college, to the chair made vacant by the death of Professor Morris. Mr. Wright will be professor of classical philology, and at the same time dean of the board of collegiate advisers.

Boutelle Will Return.

BANGOR, Me., June 9.—Hon. C. A. Boutelle was renominated for congress by the Republicans at the district convention held here. There was no opposition.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—For Wednesday, generally fair weather will prevail throughout the eastern middle Atlantic states.

Rates Reduced.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance from $25 weekly indemnity, from $24 to per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policy issued by this Company! The assets of this old and well managed company are $2,000,000, and does not deem it necessary to go outside of its assets to secure business. Out of nearly $1,000,000 paid for accidents, not one dollar has been disputed or compromised at a short time. Insure for a year for a $5,000 policy, or for $25 a week indemnity, and if you are injured you will receive it weekly, and not have to wait for it. The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876, and has been doing business ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has more than a million dollars surplus. Its Guarantee Fund was $245,188.72 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business is more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having established assets amounting to over $30,000, it has paid claims to the amount of nearly one million to over $700,000. ## WOMAN AND HOME.

SOME OF THE SELF-MADE WOMEN OF OUR COUNTRY.

French "as She Is Spoke" in Cookery—Death on Flies—House Cleaning—To the Married—The Parisienne—A Singer —No Page—Notes.

The sweet poetess, Lucy Larcom, was a mill-hand.

Adelaide Phillippa, the singer, now dead, was a treasury girl, and so for a time was Mary Jewett, the actress.

Pretty Maude Granger, with the gold-brown eyes and shapely form, first earned her livelihood by running a sewing-machine.

Minnie Hauk's father was a German and a shoemaker, in the most straitened circumstances. Her voice early attracted the attentions of one of New York's richest men, who had it cultivated, and thus opened the way to fame for her.

Charlotte Cushman was the daughter of poor people, who, however, gave her an excellent education in the public schools. In order to maintain herself she aspired to become an opera singer, but accidentally losing her voice, became an actress instead.

The mother of Clara Louise Kellogg strained every nerve to give Clara a musical education, and at one time was a profess ional pupil of Meschin. Miss Kellogg failed three times. Each time she retired, not discouraged, but to devote herself to the still further improvement of her voice, and then took the public by storm. Her first failures were her last.

The lady doctors and lawyers have had the hardest time to enter professional ranks. Nevertheless, they have made great headway since Elizabeth Blackwell vainly applied for admission to the medical colleges in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia. She was finally admitted as a student in the medical college of Geneva, N. Y., after much the usual struggle, hardship, discouragement, and restricted means.

Edmonia Lewis, the sculptor, is colored. Overcoming the prejudice against her sex and color, and self-educated, Miss Lewis is now successfully pursuing her profession in Italy. Only one colored woman ever gained distinction in the fine arts, that was the singer who called herself "The Black Swan," and who flourished about forty years ago. There has never been an actoress or actress of color beyond the merest tyro, but no one can predict what the future may hold for colored people.

We have had two great female astronomers, Miss Herschell and Miss Mitchell. Both were single women, and both took up the study of astronomy in order to assist their brothers. Miss Herschell's pathway to fame was over a smooth road, but Miss Maria Mitchell had everything to battle with. She was the daughter of a small farmer in Nantucket who was obliged to shoot his income by teaching school at $2 a week. Maria was constantly occupied in household duties, and she describes her childhood as "endless washing of dishes."

It is a curious fact that so many of our celebrated literary women were the daughters of farmers and began their life work by performing household drudgery, acquiring fame and affluence by writing. Take the Cary sisters to begin with, and Mrs. Lydia Sigourney, the poetess, before them, then Grace Greenwood, and lastly Ella Wheeler. Ella Wheeler never taught school, but her parents were poor farm people in the west. The first poem she ever wrote she sent to Mrs. Mattie Leslie, who saw enough merit in it to accept it. Ella has bought her parents a home out of her own earnings, and is in every respect a most excellent daughter.

Clara Morris' mother was a cook in a restaurant in Cleveland when Clara was a mere girl of 4 years of age. Manager John Ellsler advertised for some extra girls for the ballet in a pantomime he was getting up. Clara applied for a place in the extra ballet. She appeared in a faded calico dress, much too short for her long legs, a thin shawl, and a ragged woolen scarf wrapped around her head. Of course the extra girls were no longer required Clara was retained for small parts. That was the beginning of the career of the great emotional actress.

Frances Hodgson, by the way, is of English, not American, birth.

Anna Dickinson began life as a school teacher. Wearying of this, she went to Mrs. John Drew, manageress of the Arch Street theatre, Philadelphia, and entreated her to give her an opportunity to appear on the stage. Mrs. Drew heard her recite, told her that she had a very bad accent, that she did not think she would ever make an actress, and advised her to go back to the school teaching. The war broke out soon afterward, giving Miss Dickinson an opportunity to emerge from obscurity. One still secretly-harbored histrionic aspirations, but years were destined to elapse before she was enabled to test whether Mrs. Drew had been a true prophet or not. —Della Logan in Chicago News.

French "As She Is Spoke" in Cookery.

Aspic—Savory jelly for cold dishes.

Au gratin—Dishes prepared with sauce and crumbs and baked.

Bonchees—Nery tiny patties or cakes, as name indicates—mouthfuls.

Baba—A peculiar, sweet French yeast cake.

Bechamel—A rich, white sauce made with cream.

Bisque—A white soup made of shell fish.

To Blanch—To place any article on the fire till it boils, then plunge it in cold water, as with poultry; or vegetables, etc. To remove the skin by immersing in boiling water.

Bouillon—A clear soup, stronger than broth, yet not so strong as consomme, which is "reduced" soup.

Braise—Meat cooked in a closely-covered stew-pan, so that it retains its own juice and those of the vegetables and flavorings put with it.

Brioche—A very rich, unsweetened French cake made with yeast.

Canaion—Stuffed rolled-up meat.

Consomme—Clear soup of bouillon boiled down till it is all in solution.

Croquettes—A savory mince of fish or fowl, made with sauce into shapes and fried.

Croutadoes—Fried forms of bread to serve salmon or other fish on.

Entree—A small dish, usually served between courses at dinner.

Fondue—A light preparation of melted cheese.

Fondant—Sugar boiled, and beaten to a creamy paste.

Hollandaise Sauce—A rich sauce, something like hot mayonnaise.

Matelote—A rich fish stew, with wine.

Mayonnaise—A rich salad dressing.

Meringue—Sugar and whites of egg beaten to sauce.

Marmade—A liquor of spices, vinegar, etc., in which fish meats are steeped before cooking.

Miroton —Cold meat warmed in various ways, and dished in circular form.

Puree—To make to a pulp by forcing very much the ingredients for thickening which have been rubbed through a sieve.

Poulette Sauce—A bechamel sauce, to which white wine and sometimes eggs are added.

Ragout—A rich, brown stew, with mushrooms, truffles, etc.

Piquante—A sauce of several flavors, and predominating.

Quenelles—Forcemeat with bread, yolk of eggs, highly seasoned, and formed with a spoon to an oval shape, then poached and used either as a dish by themselves, or to garnish.

Remoulade—A salad dressing differing from mayonnaise, in that the eggs are hard boiled and rubbed in a morter with mustard, herbs, etc.

Rissole—Rich mince of meat or fish, rolled in thin pastry and fried.

Roux—A cooked mixture of butter and flour, for thickening soups and stews.

Salmis—A rich stew of game, cut up and dressed, when half roasted.

Sauter—To toss meat, etc., over the fire, in a little fat.

Souffle—A very light, much-chipped up pudding or omelette.

Timbale—A sort of pie in a mold.

Vol au vents—Patties of very light puff paste, made without a dish or mold, and filled with meat, game, or fish, etc.—Catherine Owen in Good Housekeeping.

To Get Rid of the Flies.

To us, in extremity, drifted a newspaper scrap which was neither official nor judicial. Somebody picked it up somewhere. A driveling man would have caught at it, as did we, had it bobbed at him from the crest of a wave. It was not quite explicit in the directions it conveyed, but we got at the meaning of the extract and put it into practice as follows: We had Persian insect powder in the house, also the implement, in shape like a lumber watch, with a small pipe let into one side, with which we had projected the yellow dust into corners where might lurk the eggs or pupae of moths. This we charged to the maids. That night kitchen and dining-room were cleared of such small articles as would have to be washed if the powder fell on them; windows and doors were made fast, and an operator, standing in the middle of the floor, worked the spring-top of the rounded case that expelled the powder, throwing it upward at an angle of forty-five degrees toward every corner and side of the apartment. We used a bottle of the powder, about half as much on each succeeding occasion. The rooms were not entered again until morning.

We declared that she swept up "a full pint of the little beasts." The waitress did not measure her trophies, but reported that floor and furniture were strewn with bodies. It was a combination of the destruction of Sennacherib by an unseen agent. To make sure that our foes were like his army, all dead, we consigned them next day to the crematory.

This was done Saturday night, and inexpressible peace reigned over our Sunday breakfast.

Towards evening the vanquished leaders sent in scouts, few in number and weary, to reconnoitre the battlefield. A repetition of the experiment of the preceding evening left not one to carry the tale.

If I have told it lightly it is because the infliction was not grievous and the deliverance welcome beyond expression. Since then we have held our own successfully in the height of "fly-time." In very hot weather the powder is used every night for a week or two at a time. In ordinary circumstances, and by observing common precaution to keep doors and windows and darkened rooms, twice or three times a week suffices to keep the premises clear. While the remedy leaves no trace of its repellent presence to sight or smell after the floor is swept and the furniture dusted, we have not thought it prudent to use it in bed chambers. But we have learned that kitchen and dining-room are Satan's headquarters, and that heroic measures here cut off supplies from the upper part of the house.—Marion Harland's Letter.

Various House-Cleaning Hints.

In this season of general up-turning and house-cleaning it may not be amiss to remember that ammonia in water cleanses glass and paint much better than soap does, that it sometimes costs less to have a badly soiled room papered than to wash it, the use of the mop and brush, than it does to have it scrubbed and scoured, to say nothing of the expenditure of strength; that salt and vinegar brighten brasses as well as any more modern and expensive potions; that a small bag of charcoal hung in a rain-water barrel purifies it perfectly; that pipe-clay tints and statuette may be cleaned, when it is not desired to paint them, by dipping them into thick liquid starch and drying, and when the starch is brushed off the dirt is brushed off with it; that it is a good plan to go over the bedsteads before beginning any of the cleaning, as delay in these days when bed-bugs become dreadful is apt to increase the trouble there; that it is wise to open the campaign at the top of the house and in the unused rooms, and so give less confusion and prominence to the affair; that, on reaching their breeding haunts at the bottom of the house, powdered borax mixed with a little sugar and flour and scattered about in spots will prove certain death to cockroaches and to ants, and if that is not handy, a few drops of spirits of turpentine sprinkled here and there will be as effective in the case of these nuisances as it is in the case of moths.—Chicago Tribune.

Married People Would Be Happier

If home troubles were never told to neighbors.

If expenses were proportioned to receipts.

If they tried to be as agreeable as in courtship days.

If each remembered that the other was a human being, and not an angel.

If fuel and provisions were laid in during the high tide of summer wages.

If both parties remembered that they married for worse as well as for better.

If masculine bills for Havanas and feminine bills for new dresses were limited by the general fund until such time as they could be incurred without risk.

If each remembered that a woman can not be always smiling who has to cook the dinner, answer the door bell half a dozen times, and get rid of a neighbor who has dropped in to stay all day, and who can cut finer of a 2-year-old, tie up the head of a 5-year-old on scales, and get an 8-year-old ready for school in a rainy morning, sweeping, dusting, etc. A woman with all this to contend with may claim it as a privilege to look and feel a little tired sometimes, and a word of sympathy would be one too much to expect from the man who, during the honeymoon, would not let her carry as much as a sunshade.—Western Plowman.

When Marriage Is Contemplated.

One world-wide trouble is the coming together of two persons who are as unlike as it is possible for them to be. A girl who is fond of theatres, dances and amusements generally marries a man who cares nothing for such things, but would rather sit by his own hearthstone, reading and conversing with his wife upon the current topics of the day, or deeper things which she cares nothing about, but would rather talk theatre, the latest "star," etc., or fancy work. Depend upon it, where two such persons marry love soon walks out at the door.

Would it not, then, be wise to teach our young people to be perfectly honest and candid spoken when marriage is contemplated, and to learn to judge of how much they will be able to give up and live happily in each other, that they can not give up all their natures in part and be happy or make others happy? This, I think, all will have to be true in spite of the sentimentalism of the day in regard to love's sacrifice for its loved object.—Cor. Inter Ocean.

For Pretty She Will Be.

An English woman is beautiful by nature or not beautiful, and that is the end of the matter. A Parisienne can rarely compete with the beautiful English or American women in feature or complexion and purity of skin, but she has such an effort of will in making herself fascinating that she often surpasses her rival in spite of natural disadvantages. Rachel, for instance. Nature gave her a thin face with a large and prominent forehead, deep-set eyes, a sunken mouth, a pointed chin, a large figure and a look out of keeping with natural materials, the little Jewess, by dint of genius, will, passion, love, and gold spent on beautiful objects, made the Rachel that men will ever remember as the Venus of Corinth or of Syracuse, with the caressing gesture of a statue by Coysevox, the intensity of a Greek color by Ingwarl, lips that always reflected the light, and in her somber eyes the subtle flame of intelligence.

In the Parisienne, from the shop girl to the great lady, there seems to be an infinite culte of her person, a respect of her flesh, a pride in her silhouette and bearing, and withal a constant effort to refashion herself in accordance with a more marvelous ideal of beauty, grace, elegance and youth; to take from antiquity, from the art of the day, from the natural world which has constituted their peculiar elegances, and then to reduce those elements of elegance to the Parisian formula. Every Parisienne is a work of art, and the chief product of a mysterious collaboration of surroundings.—Paris Cor. London World.

The Singer and Her Baby.

At a small Parisian cafe chantant one evening recently, as the prima donna was commencing her concert in the second quadrilly of the period, her strains were interrupted by the cries of a baby. As a matter of course there was an uproar, and cries of "Turn it out!" "Put it in the pigsty!" Her pa pard, who was holding the infant in his arms, and who tried in vain to quiet it, stood up and expostulated. But the prima donna left him no time. "Ladies and gentlemen," she said, interrupting her song, "I had better tell you that baby is mine. If I do not sing it its angry, it will continue to cry." Stepping down from the platform she took the child in her arms; then, while it was enjoying its meal, she came back, made a sign to the pigsty, and resumed her song as if nothing had happened.—Chicago Tribune.

London Not Yet Recognized.

The fame of the divided skirt has at last reached Paris, and one of the papers there devotes to its readers on the programme of the "National Dress Association" and its president, "Miss la Vicomtesse Huberson." The French critic very justly defends the wearing of stays, and waxes indignant over the insults heaped on "the poor little corset, so useful in sustaining the feeble, restraining the stout, and rallying the straglers." And for the divided skirt, if women really wish to dress up like sonaves, well, they can do it. But what makes her most indignant is the idea of England venturing to take the lead in any question of costume. "London is not yet recognised as the capital of the world of taste, nor has she yet had the power of elegance which she has held for so long."—Chicago Tribune.

There Are Two Kinds of Girls.

One is the kind that appears best abroad—the girls that are good at parties, rides, visits, balls, etc., and whose chief delight is in such things. The other is the kind that appears best at home—the kind that are useful and cheerful in the dining-room, sickroom and all the precincts of home. They differ widely in character. One is often a torment at home, the other a blessing; one is a moth, consuming everything about her, the other is a ministering angel, shedding the light and gladness all around her pathway. To which of these classes do you belong?—Chicago Tribune.

"Like the Venus de Medici."

In Paris the fashionable lady is hence forth to be called, as Louis XV. termed it, one in her carriage, and at the theatre, but not for walking or dancing. She is informed that the waist of fashionable women is now twenty-seven inches in circumference, like that of the "Venus de Medici," instead of twenty or twenty-one inches, as is too often the case with young French women, and she is invited to convince herself of the requirements of nature in this respect by going and looking at some of the statues in the Louvre by some of the old Italian masters.—Chicago Herald.

No Page at Their Weddings.

American brides take not kindly to the pictures the little page at their weddings. Either little boys are objects to be long dressed up, or his sister is afraid to entrust her precious train to his tender mercy, for in this particular the English wedding has no followers here. Children are a favorite decoration in these hymenial functions in England, and seem to be especially gotten up to complete the gala show surrounding. It can't be those small Britishers have better than Young America? No, that must not be said!—Boston Herald.

Spills Wine on Her Dress.

Society gossip tells of a belle, much addicted to extravagant dinner toilets, who intensely desires to spill wine on her dress, contrives to make somebody else do it, in order that it shall be known that she wears it to one dinner only. A gill of claret spattered over the delicate front of a robe ruined it beyond redemption, and so she could not be suspected of having the stuff made over. The dissipated gentleman first chosen for the deed, but eventually came to be understood as premeditated.—Uncle Bill's New York Letter.

A Lot of Married Folks Present.

It was remarked at the opera one night "what a lot of married people there are here to-night." "How can you tell they are married?" was the query. "Don't you see?" was the reply. "They don't do any talking, and there's hardly a corsage bouquet among the women."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Measured by the Same Standard.

Were we dreaming, or did a little bird whisper to us that a prominent woman was about to be formed called the Daughters of Purity, in which rules are to be measured by the same standard that they apply to the character of women?—Western Plowman.

Occupying a University Chair.

Dr. Sophie Kawalewski, who has been appointed to a mathematical chair in the University of Stockholm, Sweden, is said to be the first woman who ever attained a recognized academic position as professor of mathematics in Europe.

A woman 82 years of age recently made final proof on a quarter section of Kansas land.

THE PRESIDENT'S HOME.

The Pleasant Cottage Reserved for Him at the Soldier's Home.

A few miles from Washington, in the northern part of the District of Columbia, is the cottage shown in our illustration. It is located within the grounds attached to the Soldier's Home, which is reserved as a summer home for the presidents. It is a delightful retreat, and has been occupied during the summer time by Presidents Pierce, Buchanan and Lincoln. Presidents Hayes and Arthur also spent a portion of the warm weather there. The house is beautifully situated.

SUMMER RESIDENCE OF THE PRESIDENTS.

This estate is open to the public and is a favorite place of resort in the summer season. For this reason it is said that President Cleveland will not, when married, take his bride to a home of his own, where he can obtain the privacy and rest that would scarcely be possible at the Soldiers' Home.

The president-elect has many of the fine estates on the outskirts of Washington with the view of purchasing one, and rumor has it that he has already selected a home to which he will take his bride-elect as soon as married. Through the death of Col. John B. Folsom, Miss Folsom, his pet grandchild, inherits a handsome fortune, and it is expected that her home in Washington will be a handsome one.

The Episcopal Archbishop of New York.

The recent pastoral letter of Bishop Potter, of New York, on the labor troubles, has attracted universal attention. New York is justly proud of Bishop Potter. He is just 51 years of age, was ordained a priest at the age of 23, and was consecrated bishop in 1883. He was formerly rector of Grace church. Of his letter, The New York Sun says:

BISHOP HENRY C. POTTER.

It is Dr. Potter's firm conviction and deliberate affirmance that society must be reorganized until it reflects the lessons of the Sermon on the Mount far more faithfully than now. He recognizes and declares that this cannot be done by almsgiving. He is in the representatives of organized capital that the fundamental principles of their political economy have been tested by the touchstone of Christ's teachings and found wanting, and that their vaunted principle of supply and demand must be radically modified before its relentless gyves are immovably fastened upon the lives and hopes of men.

But for the fundamental changes in the relations of employers and employed, which he pronounces indispensable to the safety of the state, Dr. Potter would recall the pulpit to its duty and all public influences to their mission; he would set in motion every influence by which opinion can be leavened throughout the land by the spirit of all-penetrating benignity and brotherhood which ought to animate every honest follower of Christ. With public opinion thus inspired, no revolution will be needed to bring about a welcome change in the distribution of equality in agrarian, economical and social conditions. Legislation would speedily obey the impulse of sympathy and kindness.

Candidate for Governor of Georgia.

GEN. JOHN B. GORDON

The most conspicuous figure next to that of Mr. Jefferson Davis in the recent demonstration at the laying of the corner stone of the state capitol at Atlanta, Georgia, was Gen. John B. Gordon. Judging from the ovation he received on that occasion, he is a very popular man. The people seem to receive him as the type of Confederate soldier. A gallant soldier he was, too. He rose from the rank of captain to that of major general, was wounded eight times during the war, and followed the fortunes of the southern cause all the way to Appomattox, where he was in command of the wing of Lee's army. Although a commander of less importance, historically, than Gen. Longstreet, who was present at Atlanta to fall Confederate uniform, Gordon carried off the honors of the recent occasion so far as the military were concerned.

Gen. Gordon is a born Georgian and a graduate of the state university. Early in the war he joined the Confederate army and rose through the various grades to that of lieutenant general. In 1868 he was the Democratic candidate for the governorship of his native state, but was defeated. In 1870 he was elected to the United States senate, but resigned six years ago to make way for his friend Gen. Colquitt Brown. Now the time has given his time to the management of the railroads and other business interests of the south. He has been spoken of for the position of secretary of the interior, but himself a candidate for the governorship.

—George Dwyer, aged 50 years, a track walker on the P. & R railroad met with a fatal accident at the lower crossing in Bound Brook on Monday night. He was walking on a side track and did not notice a lot of freight cars being backed in the siding, when he was run over and mangled in a shocking manner. Deceased leaves a family.

That $10 Bill.

Margaret Bunworth, the mother of the seven-year-old Andrew Bunworth, from whom the police arrested a $10 bill on Monday afternoon which the little fellow was trying to get changed, still claims that the money in question from Miss Sim says by her inborn she has managed to save up some $72, and this bill with another of a like denomination was secreted between some bedding in her apartments. The mother of the boy says that on a former occasion he stole a one dollar bill from her with which he purchased candy and other dainties. In the meantime the bill remains in the $10 bill and are awaiting further developments which they say bid fair to land the boy in the Reform School.

Firemen's Relief Association.

At the annual meeting of the Firemen's Relief Association held last evening the treasurer reported the receipts for the year from all sources to be $1,934.72. That he had paid out to the sick and disabled fire men during the year $727.50. The association now hold in bonds and mortgages the sum of $6,250.

The Long and Short of a Hender.

Gen. Eli Long of North Plainfield entered the service of the United States at the outbreak of the rebellion, and for gallant conduct was promoted step by step until he attained by special act of Congress to the rank of Brevet Brigadier-General in the regular army, upon which rank, on account of wounds received in battle, he was retired at the close of the war on half pay. His disability consisted of a wound from a bullet which traversed the top of his head, carrying off a portion of his skull. That the General was a good soldier goes without the saying, and he is besides a good fisherman. A few days ago he was fishing in the Raritan river at Bound Brook, and concluded that the conventional ways of holding on the end of a stick with a string to it was not a military way of catching fish. There was not strategy enough in the worm at the end of the line to tempt the wary fish to eat it. Any school boy could fish that way. The General held a council of war with himself and evidently concluded that the best method to catch fish was to dive for them. He was seen to stand up in the boat and go into the water head foremost. Thereby General Long became a general short of breathes he arose, spattering, to the surface which, however, the coveted fish. The General says he was only fooling for the anchor—and the fish drank. The significant glances of the General indicates that he will flank those fish yet, if he has to occupy the entire time of the year over the waters of New Jersey, and "right it out on that line if it takes all summer." But said line for the present, it is said, is long for them hereafter to give the General a wide berth, and especially when he again takes it into his head to go fishing for anchors, they will be wise to get from under. The idea has not yet been patented.

Somerset County Freeholders.

The Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders met in Somerville on Tuesday afternoon among other business which come up before the Board was the bond of County Collector Gaston, in $50,000, with himself and John Vosselier, John V. Stoll-well, John VanVest and Peter E. Cramer as sureties, was approved.

A petition, signed by 100 prominent taxpayers of Raritan and Somerville, asking for a wider bridge at Raritan, was presented. Their prayer that it be 15 feet wide, instead of 16. The estimated difference in the cost of the wider bridge was $1,500.

A committee was appointed to ascertain the exact cost, and if it does not exceed $1,500 they will proceed to make new contracts, provided the former contractors do not object.

The Collector was authorized to borrow $5,000 to meet the bills of the year. The total amount of bills ordered paid was $4,735.48.

Somerset County Courts.

Before Judge Vosseller in Somerville Tuesday afternoon the case of Hoppock vs. Poulhower, an action instituted to recover $200 for horse sold by the plaintiff to the plaintiff. The facts in the case are that defendant hired plaintiff's horse to drive from Somerville to Pluckamin and return; when within a mile of Somerville on the return trip the horse was taken suddenly ill, and died within 15 minutes thereafter, and it was for the value of the horse that the suit was brought. The case was given to the jury during the afternoon, and late at night they rendered a verdict unable to agree. If for the defendant and two for the plaintiff. The Judge then discharged them. Mr. W. R. Cole, counsel of the city represented the defendant and Prosecutor Stelle of Somerville appeared for the plaintiff.

PERSONAL.

Editor and Mrs. A. M. Powell will sail for Europe per steamer "Wisconsin" on Tuesday next. He will be absent from the city several weeks.

Mr. E. W. Titsworth of this city was on Tuesday elected a director of the Plainfield Building Loan Association to fill the vacancy declared by the ineligibility of Mr. Chamberlain.

Hugh M. Gaston, Esq., of Somerville, is named as the sole executor of the will of the late Culver Barcalow, who died suddenly at his home in that place on Tuesday of last week.

William Equier of North Plainfield has recently disposed of his well-known Russian setter dog, "Dock," to George Anderson of Somerville, who will take the dog with him to Florida next winter to hunt for game.

Charles Turner, the seventeen year-old son of Mr. M. W. Turner, a New York coal merchant, was drowned in the Rahway river at Rahway on Tuesday afternoon while bath ing. The family recently removed to Rahway from Brooklyn.

The funeral of the late Thomas Hines of Dunellen, who died at an early hour on Tuesday morning from consumption, took place from the late home of the deceased at three o'clock this afternoon. Interment was made in Evergreen cemetery.

Edward Cosgrove, the well-known temperance advocate, will lecture at the Reform Club meeting to-night. Mr. Cosgrove is said, upon good authority, to be destined to equal, if not eclipse, all previous orators in the cause of temperance. All are cordially invited to be present.

A book has been recently published by a prominent Boston firm, under the title, "Female Patriotism." The author is known under the nom-de-plume of "Piccolo." Plainfield is to be congratulated on her literary talent. "Piccolo" is a name of late heard very much of in literary circles. But why the nom-de-plume?

A happy event took place in Grace church at five o'clock last evening the occasion being the marriage of Miss Nellie DeGraff of First Place to Mr. F. N. Doubleday. The contracting parties entered the beautiful little church as the appointed hour to the rendition of a wedding march and proceeded to the chancel, where the Rev. Dean Rodman, rector of the church, to be assisted by the Rev. Dr. Banerott of Brooklyn, were in waiting to perform the marriage ceremony. At the conclusion of the ceremony the newly-married couple, followed by the relatives and immediate friends of such, repaired to the home of the bride, where an informal reception was held, at the conclusion of which the happy couple started shortly after six o'clock on their wedding tour.

School Census for 1886.

PLAINFIELD

Assessor J. A. Hubbard, to-day, at noon completed the work of taking the school census for the city of Plainfield. The result is as follows:

|---|---|
| Males | 1,188 |
| Females | 1,167 |
| Total | 2,355 |

Last year the total was 2,356, so that the number this year is one less. In 1884 the total was 2,250, this year being 105 more.

NORTH PLAINFIELD.

The following is the census for North Plainfield as taken by Mr. F. H. Gardner, and shows a gain or 24over last year:

Whole number of scholars for 1886 between the ages of five and eighteen years..... 853

Union County Courts.

At the opening of the Union County Court of Special Sessions in Elizabeth on Tuesday morning, the case of Herman Steadman for keeping a disorderly house at Linden was called. This was the second trial. The first trial resulted in a disagreement, but the Prosecutor was determined to convict Steadman, and put the case on for a second trial. The case was given to the jury late in the afternoon, and after remaining out all night came into court yesterday morning and stated that they could not agree, whereupon Judge McCormick discharged them. This second disagreement will probably end the matter.

The second trial of Samuel Tree of Rahway for criminal assault upon his fifteen-year-old step-daughter Anna Klutch was put on the docket this morning and early morning. The case occupied the entire day, and was still on when court adjourned over until this morning. Tree's counsel, who is the leading witness for the prosecution, is held as $1,000 each. The case is one of the most revolting of the day, and utterly unfit for publication.

LATER.—The case was given to the jury at eleven o'clock this morning, after two hours' deliberation they returned a verdict of guilty "with a recommendation to mercy." Judge McCormack said he was the nastiest case ever before him. The court adjourned to Monday, June 28th.

Union County Not Affected.

County Attorney Marsh recently gave us his opinion that the recent decision by the Supreme Court in the act of 1884 establishing a salary for County Clerks in lieu of fees has no application to this county. The law provides that in all counties of this State as to which it is now or shall hereafter be provided by law that the compensation of the Sheriff be by salary, in this county it has never been provided by law that a salary should be paid. The counties having salaries are Hudson and Mercer and they are the counties affected by the decision.

Music Hall Organization.

The Board of Directors of the Music Hall Association met on Tuesday evening and organized with the following officials: President—S. Rockhill Potts; Treasurer—Dr. Ellis T. Waring; Secretary—Craig A. Marsh. Executive Committee—Messrs. Dumont, Gilbert, Marsh, Tweedy and President Potts Reception Committee—Messrs. Committee—Messrs. Gilbert, Tweedy and Marsh.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

"Honor all Men."

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—The unusually interesting and timely remarks by Dr. Ketcham and Judge Harper on Monday evening last at Reform Hall, also by Dr. Freedom French, are deserving of the highest commendation, and were most highly appreciated by the large audience present. Could the wisdom which prompted these remarks be allowed to guide all organizations and workers in the temperance cause would we find time as "strugglers" of the army to extirpate the contentious tastes nor offended dignity in attacks upon persons or organizations whose object is the demolition of the rum power. Malicious rumors and small talk, where one might reasonably look for better things, would not exist. As was shown by those specimens we are warning foe of principle. Ours is a specific work. Too much dickering of the machinery will render it inoperative. Nothing is so temporary as that such and all should learn others to the pursuit of their object in their own way without denunciation or unfriendly criticism or interference. An intolerant spirit is not the one to be encouraged in regard to an organization as Catholic in spirit, so unsectarian in its organization and non-partisan in conviction as is the Reform Club.

It is hardly be safe to rate our pursuit of the enemy (rum) to give place to criminal folly. Let us not be driven for from our line to assumptions of infallibility, or pharisaical perfection of view.

Would have any of us that we "did not receive." Better consider ourselves as in process of education, and exercise care that we give no occasion for "just criticism, for pardoning our words aright."

Let the members of the club double their diligence, and the friends of the cause counsel and not let all remember the Scripture injunction to "honor all men."

The Butterfly's carnival, operation of the W. C. T. U., the Y. M. C. A., each under their own banner but united in the grand army marching to the music of the Union, for the overthrow of this crime of crimes.

WESTFIELD.

Miss Anna Siebold of Newark is stopping with Mrs. T. Wittke of Broad street.

Mr. J. N. Wilcox has received the contract to repave the township safe to its location on Elm street.

Augustus Dobler, son of Erastus M. Dobler, died on Monday, after a prolonged illness of 22 years. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon.

Robert Woodruff, jr., gave the stores-keepers a trial trip of his sprinkler last night, and some of the merchants subscribed, and say that all will join in so as to make it by him.

Mr. F. F. Randolph of South avenue started on Tuesday for his summer trip through the far West. He will be joined by his wife with him, but the rest of the family will make their home until his return at Morrisania.

STATE NOTES.

Deacon Enoch Allen, promin-nt in the Baptist Church of the State, died at Hightstown on Sunday in his 88th year.

On Monday the head of a child was caught in a shad net at a fishery in Gloucester county. The case is under investigation.

In Newark there are over 1,200 licensed hotels and saloons, an average of less than twenty-five voters to each drinking place.

All but two of the harness making firms of Newark have come to an understanding with their men and have resumed work. One large firm, that of N. J. Dumont & Co. has decided to remove its works to some other city.

The body of the man who committed suicide on Sunday at Somerville, by shooting himself through the heart a day or two ago, was identified yesterday as that of J. Daniels, who came to Somerville City from Yonkers in search of work, recently but was unable to find any.

Mrs. Rebecca Needham of a wealthy New York druggist, was committed to jail by Recorder McDonough of Hoboken yesterday, for thirty days for drunkenness. Two years ago, after a quarrel over a Spanish silk dress she had visited the house, she threw her husband's trunk out of a window. He afterward began proceedings for divorce

A Ton of Executive Officers.

An anecdote is that the president and his cabinet are nearly even would seem at first appearance rather a startling one, but it is not so far from the fact. The talk about the president's weight is common. He himself brings out the fact that he weighed at the time of his attack 320 pounds. He had gained over 25 pounds since he came into the White House. At that time the president is not much behind him in weight. They are very much alike in figure, height, and general physical proportions. Four others are several of the cabinet members who must weigh nearly 200 pounds each. Secretary Lamar is tall, broad shouldered, and well developed physically, and must tip the beam at about that figure. Garland is a big man, very tall and muscular. He is not far behind him. Postmaster General Vilas and Whitney must average about 175 pounds each. But the eight men—the president and the cabinet—would be solid, and you will find they do not fall many hundred weight below a ton.—Washington Cor. Cincinnati Times-Star.

Mission of the Peach Blow Vase.

The "mission" of the peach blow vase. What a lesson in it when rightly considered! Its rarity, coupled with its delicate beauty, commanded for the pottery first the sum of $15,000. And yet the cause of the clay and the color did not enter into it. All the rest was for the secret of the combination. It acknowledge made to the common potter of two centuries ago. If it was not lost pearls blow vases would not command a higher price than pearls which are common and some toy or ornament. If the secret is gone there is left for the thoughtful workman a thing almost as precious—the striking experience of how much of the highest efforts may acquire in the world of art. The peach blow was the realization of the dignity of labor.—Cor. Kansas City Journal.

Key to the Maya Hieroglyphics.

Mr. Maudslay, the Central America explorer, has been thoroughly exploring the ruins of the city of Copan, in Guatemala. He reports that those ruins are identical in their characteristics with the remains in Yucatan. He made the important discovery that there is an initial column common to all the inscriptions, which furnishes the possible key of the Maya hieroglyphics.—Frank Leslie's Illustrated.

Conducted on Commercial Principles.

Pilgrimage in the Greek church would seem to be conducted on sound commercial principles. Very Rev. Archpriest Hatherly, who is about to make his third pilgrimage to Jerusalem, offers to procure water direct from the River Jordan at 5 shillings per bottle, pay able in advance.—Chicago Times.

Gen. Hancock used to say that Sheridan was "a whirlwind with spurs."

ORANGE RIOTS.

Wild Orgies in the Streets of Belfast.

MANY RIOTERS SHOT DOWN.

The Police Unequal to Control the Drunken Populace.

Houses Pillaged and Burned to the Ground—Whisky Poured Into the Streets—Women Take Part in the Excitement and Goad the Men On. Clergymen Not Heeded.

BELFAST, June 10.—The riotous demonstrations of the Orange men in this city were renewed last evening. The rioters began with the manifest determination of completing the devastation of the houses of Catholics. The police were promptly on hand and summoned the mob to disperse. No heed was paid to the summons, and the riot act was read, with as little effect as its reading had produced twenty-four hours before. The mob, during the closing of the act, continued their work of destruction, sending showers of stones through the windows and doors of houses occupied by Catholics, battering down doors, raiding the houses, etc., when suddenly the order was given to the police to fire. A volley was fired into the mob and three of the rioters fell dead, while a dozen others lay upon the ground bleeding from wounds, some of which will prove fatal. The mob returned the fire, and a brisk fusillade was kept up for several minutes, soldiers being on duty parading the streets to assist the police in case of necessity.

The mob outnumbers a force of 150 policemen into the barracks, and then attacked the buildings, firing revolvers and throwing stones at the doors and windows. The police fired, and a number reported dead and dying persons. Several Protestant clergymen tried to disperse the mob, but their efforts were unavailing. One of the persons killed was a widow with two children.

Orangemen wrecked 100 houses in the city, two of which they burned. The rioters broke into several, which stores and dwellings, and threw out the contents. Members of the men fell into the gutters drunk and laid there. Others, made desperate or maudlin by drink, prowled about the streets firing out, "To — with the pope!"

A mob of Orangemen made an attack upon the tavern kept by a Catholic named Duffy. The assault was accompanied with the most determined resistance on the part of the inmates, and after a stubborn contest, during which they used their carbines, drove the mob away in disorder. The rioters reassembled with increased strength, and attacked Duffy's, this time overpowering the police and driving them from the place. In the first assault Chief of Police Carr was wounded. He was carried away, and is in a critical condition.

When the Orangemen returned to the fight they were joined in large numbers by a large number of factory girls, who goaded and shamed the men on to battle and formed a most dangerous element. When the officers abandoned Duffy's, the mob in a body took possession of the tavern. It was at once thoroughly sacked. All the taps and spiggots were set running, and everybody was invited to help himself according to his taste.

All the barrels of liquor found in stock were carried into the street, and the high sheriff, who had been stationed to protect railway stations and river subways, and to watch the town and other places, and all strangers are narrowly questioned as to opinion, said that a Fenian outbreak or plot is hatching, as the outcome of the recent political events.

The Cholera at Work.

ROME, June 10.—There were 30 new cases of cholera and 10 deaths at Venice on the 5th inst. There were 40 cases and 18 deaths at Padua that day; 41 new cases and 13 deaths at Venice on the 6th. There is no unusual prevalence of disease in the city. The cases at Florence are not known to be cholera, but some similar affection caused by bad drinking water.

Police for Belfast.

DUBLIN, June 10.—A detachment of police, 150 strong, have left Dublin to reinforce the Belfast police. The Unionists have selected Mr. Russell, a conspicuous Irish temperance orator, to oppose Mr. William O Brien in the contest for the parliamentary seat for the southern division of Tyrone.

KILLED HIS FATHER-IN-LAW.

A North Carolina Tragedy—A Case of Self-Defense.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., June 10.—Yesterday afternoon, between 2 and 4 o'clock, the startling report of a pistol was heard near the public square. A few moments after it was learned that H. C. Long had killed W. F. Cuthbertson, his father-in-law. The tragedy is the result of Cuthbertson's threats against the life of Long. When Long married Miss Cuthbertson her father was very much enraged, and at the time had to be put under bonds to keep the peace. Sunday last Mrs. Cuthbertson went to see her daughter and grandchild. When she returned home her husband nearly killed her with a buggy whip, and would have killed her if she had not thrown the cartridges out doors before he could load his pistol. Afterward he sent word to Long that he intended to kill him and his (Longs) wife. Long is out on bail, and will have a trial very soon. The popular verdict is in favor of Long, and it is considered a clear case of self-defense.

The President Hand Shaking.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The president shook hands at his public reception with over 400 people. He appeared fresh, and wore his permanent smile. Among the visitors was the St. Vincent de Paul convention now in session here. Ex-Senator Tom Grady, of New York, a member of the convention, took Mr. Cleveland, as governor, asked Mr. John Kelly not to allow her to be returned to Albany, and whom, it will be remembered, opposed Mr. Cleveland at Chicago and afterwards bolted Tammany and supported Blaine, was out of the vicinity of Mr. Cleveland recognized him, while Grady shook his hand and withdrew as quickly as possible. Mr. Cleveland followed him until he vanished from sight.

A Clever Escape.

COLUMBUS, O., June 10.—Charles Lewis, an Ashtabula county man sent to the penitentiary for seven years on a charge of shooting to kill, has escaped by stealing and donning a suit of clothes belonging to one of the guards. In the coat pocket was found a pass, and the prisoner had no difficulty in passing out. His success was due to the presence of new guards.

THE QUEEN CONSENTS

To the Dissolution of the Present Parliament.

LONDON, June 9.—Scores of provincial Tory and Liberal election agents are in London, consulting with the whips of their respective parties in regard to plans for the coming parliamentary elections. Mr. Gladstone insists that every constituency shall be provided with a home rule candidate, and relies upon the Radical workingmen and the Radical clubs and societies to supply zealous volunteers as workers during the campaign and at the polls.

The government will endeavor to dissolve parliament on June 24, or sooner if the necessary business now before the house can be disposed of, although it is not desired by the government to interfere with harvest work by precipitating an election campaign during the height of that industry.

The queen telegraphed to Mr. Gladstone her consent to the dissolution of parliament, after conferring with Lord Hartington, whom she asked whether he was willing to form a ministry. Lord Hartington advised dissolution, informing her majesty that he himself would regard dissolution as desirable at this time should he form a government.

Earl Rosebery started for Balmoral by last night's mail train. It is understood that his visit to her majesty has no reference to the political situation, but is simply made in the capacity of minister in attendance.

The Liberal clubs have split, like the party. The Reform and Devonshire clubs support the dissidents, and the National and Liberal uphold Mr. Gladstone.

At the headquarters of Mr. Schnadhorst, the head of the National Liberal federation, that gentleman boasted that not a single Liberal association had swerved from its allegiance to Mr. Gladstone.

A deputation of the Irish Loyal and Patriotic union has started upon a stumping campaign in Lancashire.

Female Orange lodges are being formed in England in view of the coming elections, and it is the intention of the promoters of the organizations that their members shall lend their personal influence at the polls to secure votes for Tory candidates. The movement was started at a meeting which took place at the house of Mrs. Sanderson, Conservative member for Armagh, and the plans arranged at the meeting were immediately carried into effect.

LONDON EXCITED.

A Fenian Outbreak Said to Be Hatching.

LONDON, June 10.—The excesses of the Orangemen in Belfast and other places in Ulster have unquestionably disgusted the average Briton, but the Unionists maintain that the riotous demonstrations have done no harm to their cause, but rather have been productive of good, as they prove the utter madness of subjecting Ulster to the rule of the Nationalists. Precisely how they reconcile this statement with the fact that the Orangemen in every case of violence thus far reported have been the aggressors, is not quite clear.

Extraordinary police precautions have been taken at the east end, where disorders are feared, the Irish of Rotherhithe, Bermondsey and Wapping having long been greatly excited. A full supply of rifles has been stationed to protect railway stations and river subways, and to watch the tower and other places, and all strangers are narrowly questioned as to opinion. It is said that a Fenian outbreak or plot is hatching, as the outcome of the recent political events.

THE CIVIL SERVICE

CAUSES A FLURRY IN THE HOUSE. COUNTER ARRAIGNMENTS.

Butterworth Endorses New York's Governor, and Says the President is Committed to Civil Service Reform—Mr. Randall Speaks His Mind.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The time of the house was spent on the civil service amendment to the legislative bill, and, with scarcely an exception, the routine partisan rhetoric was indulged in.

Mr. Springer referred to the vast patronage now held by Republicans, and called this administration the most non-partisan since the days of Washington.

Mr. Butterworth (O.) said the president had come into power under a promise, expressed and not implied, that he would observe in the matter not merely the letter but the spirit of civil service law. He read with expressions of commendation the civil service message of the president, and declared that the majority in the house was undermining to overthrow the president and induce him to break the pledge he had given to the people. There might be a difference of opinion as to the propriety of the law, but if so why did not the Democrats come forward in a manly way and repeal it? They did not do so, but while talking with the voice of Jacob they reached out with the hand of Esau to seize the spoils. (Laughter.) He then referred to the message of Governor Hill in favor of civil service reform. While he had criticised Governor Hill's methods, he wanted to applaud him to the echo for the utterances there. Governor Hill was like a stalwart, like a man of experience, like a man who sought to secure honest government for the state and for New York. He wanted Hill to fight be the Democratic candidate for the presidency, but he supposed that the Democratic party would not support him unless his utterances upon civil service reform were expunged.

Mr. Randall closed the debate with a ringing attack on the present law. Speaking of the arbitrary class of men including

THE LINES DRAWN.

A RULING OF THE CANADIANS CAUSES CONSTERNATION.

Determined to Drive American Fishermen from Canadian Waters—Affidavits Being Prepared for the State Department—Mackerel Fishing Cut Off.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., June 10.—The dispatches from the provinces bearing on the exclusion of American fishing vessels from waters within three miles of a line drawn from headland to headland causes consternation here. Fishermen say that this construction will practically cut off our mackerel fishery, and they threaten to take the law into their own hands unless the government does something to help them. Said a fisherman: "Where is the American squadron, when the whole British North American squadron is in and about provincial waters? If the Americans are to be shut out from headland to headland, in many cases it will cut off the whole mackerel fishery."

In an interview President Steele of the American Fishery union said: "There appears to be a better feeling in Washington. As fast as the skippers of American vessels who have been excluded from commercial privileges and those who have been ordered out from the large bays arrive their affidavits will be taken before a notary public, and these affidavits will be forwarded to the authorities at Washington. Then they will have something to work upon that is substantial. Newspaper reports are not evidence."

President Steele forwarded the affidavits of the skipper of the Ady M. Jordan, who had a permit to trade, and Secretary Bayard has replied to it. And what the answer is a secret, but as far as can be learned something to be done regarding the commercial rights of Americans.

THE BRITISH BETTER BEWARE.

Yankee Fishermen Getting Ready to Blow Them From the Sea.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., June 10.—The Boston Globe correspondent was told by a successful and reliable fisherman that the fishermen are organizing to take the law into their own hands, and defend their property and business by force of arms, unless the government speedily does something for their protection. Seventy-five sail are reported to have banded together at Block Island the other day, and at Wickford Haven over 100 sail have organized. They purpose, if the government dallies too long, to arm and drive the Canadian fishing vessels coming to the United States with fish, meeting them on the high seas and destroying their fish. They have decided to give the provinces to notify them when fish are to be shipped by rail, and means will be taken to stop their importation. The fishermen are the Knights of Labor, and it is further reported that the Knights will have a hand in the matter. Said The Globe informant: "We will carry sixpounders and three schooner cast carry as high as an eighteen-pounder. They will fish on the high seas, keeping three miles from shore, but they propose to protect their rights and they will not hesitate to blow their cutters out of the water. Already the fishermen are said to have sent in their orders for guns and ammunition."

Yankees Know Too Much.

DUBUY, N. S., June 10.—The schooner Tarvel Bird, which had a British detective since her officers have heard about the Yankees hovering near, and put out after seeing her. They have taken down their colors, disrobed their crew and tugged them up in rock maple suits, pretending they are south shore fishermen. An old fisherman remarked that they looked like regular polish craft. "Look there, boys, Yankee fishermen know too much to play for or be caught with that kind of bait."

Typographical Doings.

PITTSBURG, June 10.—At the afternoon session of the International Typographical convention a large number of memorials were presented, among others amendments to make the term of the joint office of secretary and treasurer two years; providing for district conventions; to abolish the office of chief organizer, his duties to be performed by the president, with a stated salary attached; creating the executive officers to give bonds in the sum of $10,000. Five hundred dollars was appropriated for Jacksonville, Fla., where the union is meeting with opposition. The following additional appropriations were ordered: Topeka, Kas., $200; New Haven, Conn., $200, and San Antonio, Tex., $200. The convention then adjourned in order to allow the committees an opportunity to make reports.

Labor Matters.

ST. LOUIS, June 10.—In Union, Franklin county, H. D. Davis, master workman of the local assembly Knights of Labor, has been sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for obstructing the railroad track on March 24.

The master builders of this city, employing about 1,000 men, have decided to notify their employees—carpenters, masons, bricklayers, etc.—on and after June 1 they would be required to work ten hours, and that if they refused men from other cities will be employed. The men who have been working eight hours after May 1 say they will not return to the old plan.

AMENDING THE RULES.

The American Association Enforcing Decided Discipline.

COLUMBUS, June 9.—The special meeting of the American Baseball association, called to take action on the failure of the St. Louis club to pay certain fines assessed against Capt. Comiskey for umpiring, and also to investigate the charges against Bushong and Latham for their conduct on the Baltimore grounds on the 4th inst., is in progress here. Von der Ahe, president of the club, is before the meeting convened, paid the fines assessed against Comiskey, amounting to $200. A resolution was adopted directing President Wikoff to notify Bushong and Latham an opportunity to submit affidavits in their behalf, after which he will inflict such punishment as he may deem proper. Several minor matters were disposed of, and then the meeting adjourned sine die. Secretary Phelps is still willing to be taxed for the state of the sovereign and of the heir to the throne, but not for the support of the royal relatives, whose existence is a burden to the nation and can never be a benefit.

On the whole, the fate of these ladies, born in a palace, but destined to palatial funerals, is far from enviable. None of them possess natural gifts or attractions sufficient to compensate for the lack of wealth and influence. Not one is eminent in their place or confer a personal distinction. None will make names or careers like those of the famous princesses of history who shone in the light of the throne, but have none of its lustre. They are set up on a pinnacle without qualities or even circumstances to attract the admiration which their position demands, and without which royal rank, especially for a woman, is only an exposure and a mockery. Conspicuous without charms, prominent without power, lofty without importance, they pay the penalty of greatness and hardly receive the prize.—Gen. Adam Badeau's Letter.

Game Fowls in the Canary Isles.

In one of our walks about the town we stumbled on a fine collection of game cocks. Quite a large house seemed to be appropriated for their use, and on the ground in the street in front of it were standing thirty or forty latticed bottomless boxes or coops, each one containing a game cock, and looking through the open doors we saw that there were plenty more in the house. They were brought out evidently for sun and air, and also for the pleasures of conversation, for they were crowing and cock-a-doodling together in a most vigorous and instructive manner. A man took them out one by one in his hands inspecting them carefully, whose business it was evidently finding them all right, and others he took to another man who was straddling a bench under the shade of a wall.

The second man seemed to be a professor. He minutely examined the game cock submitted to him, much as a phrenologist feels of a cadet's head, critically inspecting the legs and spurs, and thrusting his nose against its body up among the feathers and smelling it all over. The tail feathers of each bird were pulled from the plumage of the body by about an inch of space, from which the down had been pulled out, and the bare, red skin shone like a scarlet ring. If any down or fuzz appeared in this zone he plucked it out either with his fingers or with some tweezers. Then he turned his attention to the comb, and with a keen pair of scissors trimmed it off close to the head, as a barber cuts a man's hair. The bird seemed to be quite unconscious of suffering during all this close attention, and offered no objection either by outcry or struggling; and when replaced in the coop strutted and crowed as though proud of the excellence of its looks. With fowls as scrupulously cared for and to my unskilled eyes the collection seemed to be a fine one.—Tenerife Cor. Detroit Free Press.

The Daughters of Queen Victoria.

All these ladies lead very dull and humdrum lives. They are too high to find equals in society; they must be surrounded with a certain degree of state and ceremony; they have their people in waiting, every body courteous or footow to them. But this is for the sake of their grandeur. Their incomes are not to be compared with the revenues of the nobility; their jewels and toilets are inferior to the trappings of many of the ladies they meet; they themselves have no great estates, or mansions even, but must put up with apartments in some half-furnished palace, and the spectacle they present of impoverished royalty is pitiable rather than dignified. The nation grudges them their allowance and threatens not to support their Cabinet's demand for a dowry is fought by the Radicals at each successive marriage, and the more obscure they remain the fette the chance of their getting husbands. The English perhaps are still willing to be taxed for the state of the sovereign and of the heir to the throne, but not for the support of the royal relatives, whose existence is a burden to the nation and can never be a benefit.

On the whole, the fate of these ladies, born in a palace, but destined to palatial funerals, is far from enviable. None of them possess natural gifts or attractions sufficient to compensate for the lack of wealth and influence. Not one is eminent in their place or confer a personal distinction. None will make names or careers like those of the famous princesses of history who shone in the light of the throne, but have none of its lustre. They are set up on a pinnacle without qualities or even circumstances to attract the admiration which their position demands, and without which royal rank, especially for a woman, is only an exposure and a mockery. Conspicuous without charms, prominent without power, lofty without importance, they pay the penalty of greatness and hardly receive the prize.—Gen. Adam Badeau's Letter.

Game Fowls in the Canary Isles.

In one of our walks about the town we stumbled on a fine collection of game cocks. Quite a large house seemed to be appropriated for their use, and on the ground in the street in front of it were standing thirty or forty latticed bottomless boxes or coops, each one containing a game cock, and looking through the open doors we saw that there were plenty more in the house. They were brought out evidently for sun and air, and also for the pleasures of conversation, for they were crowing and cock-a-dooing together in a most vigorous and instructive manner. A man took them out one by one in his hands inspecting them carefully, whose business it was evidently finding them all right, and others he took to another man who was straddling a bench under the shade of a wall.

The second man seemed to be a professor. He minutely examined the game cock submitted to him, much as a phrenologist feels of a cadet's head, critically inspecting the legs and spurs, and thrusting his nose against its body up among the feathers and smelling it all over. The tail feathers of each bird were pulled from the plumage of the body by about an inch of space, from which the down had been pulled out, and the bare, red skin shone like a scarlet ring. If any down or fuzz appeared in this zone he plucked it out either with his fingers or with some tweezers. Then he turned his attention to the comb, and with a keen pair of scissors trimmed it off close to the head, as a barber cuts a man's hair. The bird seemed to be quite unconscious of suffering during all this close attention, and offered no objection either by outcry or struggling; and when replaced in the coop strutted and crowed as though proud of the excellence of its looks. With fowls as scrupulously cared for and to my unskilled eyes the collection seemed to be a fine one.—Tenerife Cor. Detroit Free Press.

Rates Reduced.
The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to
per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an investment of profits, as in Mutual Benefit Plans, or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy. Every contract is backed by assets of over $600,000.
The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876, and has been successful in operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has always been prompt in adjusting claims. Reserve Fund was $365,182.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The premium is very low, and we think will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over $600,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. ### A Hydraulic Ram.

This is a cheap and useful device for raising water. Two hundred feet is about the height it may be expected to lift water. Its principle is as follows. Suppose a spring upon a hill or hillside. Let a straight, smooth pipe convey water from it down the hill. This is called the feed pipe. Connected with it at the bottom have another pipe rising in the air or leading to the elevated spot to which you wish water to be conveyed. At the bottom of the feed pipe have a machine which will suddenly cut off the flow of water from the feed pipe, and then suddenly let it run again, by spurts. It will flow with added force when it does come, and that will raise the water in the upright pipe. The machine that provides the cut-off and starter is the HYDRAULIC RAM.

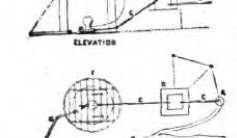
It has a chamber as its head or hammer which strikes the feed pipe a sudden blow in stopping the water. Hence its name, hydraulic ram. Another part is the escape valve, shaped like a raised head. The machine is automatic, itself giving the alternate hammer blows which it requires by water in the rushing pipe. It is worked by the flow of the water.

There is sufficient knowledge of mechanical principles and appurtenances. This appears at the top of the illustration. It is marked "Elevation." Below is the ground plan of the same. It is the view that would present itself to a bird flying over the ram machinery. In the lettering of the ground plan A is the spring. B is the feed box where the water collects. C the pipe leading from it to the ram.

ELEVATION



GROUND PLAN

Observe now the upper part of the picture, marked "Elevation." F is the ram house, with the ram inside. J is the pipe for raising the water, which is forced up through it. With each blow of the ram out flies the water in a spurt in J. The more fall there is from the spring to the ram, the better, of course. There need never be one less than four feet. In order to get enough fall for the working of the machine there must be from the spring a flow of no less than two and one-half gallons of water a minute. You will run a small ram on a smaller speed of flow, but a three-quarter inch pipe. The heavier the fall and the greater the quantity of flow, the higher and larger a column of water that can be raised. A double ram has been invented which the water of three ordinary rams can be used to raise pure water from a spring without mixing the two.

The hydraulic ram has been used for raising water in this country a little more than forty years. A writer on the subject says:

"There is no other machine so well fitted for raising water than by the hydraulic ram, nor is there any machine which requires less attention. The first cost and also the cost of maintenance are less than in any other arrangement. There are very few working parts, and hence very little cause for repairs. It does not even require oil. The friction of the small amount of oil can lightly to the efficiency and durability of the hydraulic ram.

The Ghee Lunatic Village.

A writer in Scribner's says: The Ghee colony is certainly well known on the other side of the Atlantic, and is a colony for lunatics, where the non-restraint system is the only one used. The insane, instead of being shut up in cells or asylums, are committed to the care of the inhabitants of the country, with whom they live, as would sane persons, for a very modest payment. This system is a very old one, and while it is unique in the world, the inhabitants being trained to keeping the insane, and living with them, for many centuries, it would, no doubt, not seem to be very good, at least for a large proportion of insane who do not require to be shut up, and to whom all in the open air seems to be very beneficial. The Belgian government has decided to try and create a second Ghee, and has chosen Lierneux, wishing to have a Ghee where French is spoken, for the benefit of the part of Belgium where French is the only language understood, as Ghee is in the Walloon district. This will entail very much inconvenient for French-speaking insane. This plan seems to meet with success, and Lierneux is already provided with a number of patients, and with a committee for inspection and surveillance. We hope that Lierneux will thrive as well as Ghee has and does. I visited Ghee two years ago, and convinced myself that the insane are under happier and in healthier conditions than in asylums, and that if they are well looked after by the authorities, they are well nursed and cared for. I may add, that, when a system has outlived some centuries, there must be some good in it.

Not a Grain in It.

"Give me a quarter of a pound of black pepper," said a customer to an uptown grocer recently as he threw down a quarter. The grocer took down a little package done up in tin foil and adorned with a yellow label, bearing the words "Pure Black Pepper." "This is what sell for black pepper, but you may know you pretty well I don't mind telling you there's not a grain of black pepper in it. I worked for five years in the milling room of a spice mill, and I'm on to the business from end to end. Now, this particular spice is made by taking three eighty-six pounds of finely-ground bran mixed with pulverized charcoal—the last to represent the black hull of the pepper grain, then add fifteen pounds of ground mustard seed and then you have 100 pounds of pure black pepper.

"It's the same way with mustard," the grocer continued. "Fifteen to twenty pounds of cayenne pepper, the balance of cheap wheat flour colored yellow, makes 100 pounds of genuine mustard. The higher grades, which aren't often retailed, contain as much as one-half of real mustard. But cream of tartar is the biggest swindle. A fifteen pound can of the low grade contains one pound of tartaric acid and fourteen of terra alba. The terra alba is a mild alkali and neutralizes the effects of the acid. Higher grades of the mixture contain a trifle more tartaric acid.

"You probably think you're eaten some cinnamon in your time," the grocer went on. "Well, you haven't. I don't suppose there's ten pounds of cinnamon bark in the United States. The bark comes from the inside of the bark of the cassia tree. The article is also mixed with peas and road bran. I need not tell you about ginger. Of course you know it's ground root. Pepper, very likely you've been fooled on that, too, and wrong. It is in circles, it must come. There are signs that the nutrition is already approaching."

Partition of Patagonia.

Patagonia has disappeared from political geography. The Panama Star and Herald announces the result of the agreement in regard to this region, by which it and the Argentine Republic, who have absorbed it. To Chili has been assigned all the western slope of the Cordilleras to the east and crest of the continental divide, the Straits of Magellan and all the islands off that coast. The eastern slope of the range and the vast pampas extending to the Atlantic are now the property of the Argentine Republic, and the Straits of Magellan is declared neutral and free to all nations. The chief island of Terra del Fuego is parcelled equally between the two republics, while all the other islands, including that of Cape H

Electric Regulating Valve.

An electric pneumatic valve, for the regulation of heat and pressure, has been invented by Professor W. S. Johnson, of Milwaukee. The apparatus is said to work perfectly, and will be placed in many buildings in Milwaukee and elsewhere. Its effect on the general health in securing even temperature and pure heated air in rooms, but air will make this one of the most valuable inventions of the age.

Facts of Interest.

A species of rats has developed itself in some parts of New York city.

A new disease is noted, called tobacco blindness. It is produced by the excessive use of tobacco.

William L. Silver, an Indiana youth, discovered and utilized the system of telegraphing by induction before Edison got hold of it.

The level of Lake Ontario is subject to sudden depressions and elevations, as much as thirty inches, which is doubtless due to the winds blowing with a hurricane force.

In establishing Cornell university its founder declared that he would found an institution where any person could receive instruction in any study.

In England the average working life of a man is 40 years, in Russia only 21. The Russian life is of heroism disabled at 50, the Englishman not till 65. This is due to the healthier mode of living in England.

A LITTLE LECTURE ON FACES.

What Noses Mean and What Chins Indicate—Eyes and Lips.

"If Cleopatra's nose had been a quarter of an inch shorter it would have changed the face of the whole earth," said Edmund Russell to the other night, quoting a French writer. "Of course, the expression of nose changes in the blackboard the moment the projecting angle is changed, but the effect of that small change is not confined to the nose. It affects the whole face. Some people say that it is impossible to read character in a line, indicating mobility in the course of two years, or it may drop and soften and project, indicating sensuality. A handful of potatoes from row to higher types the features develop their special expression. In low types the nose is flat like that of the animal, and the face broad; in high types the face reaches up into the spiritual and elongates.

All expression starts from the mental and what is mistaken for expression. A man who habitually diverges from this normal becomes one sided. The mouth emphasizes character more than any other feature. Great poets, great artists and great lovers never lose their childlike expression of wonder. Mental expression is essentially physiognomical. Socrates, Kant, Bacon, says that "the thinking man turns himself into a two-edged sword to cut, while the receptive man turns himself into a four-cornered basket, to catch." Brooklyn Eagle.

The Mahogany Desks of the Senate.

The mahogany desks used by the members of the United States senate are, with few exceptions, seventy-five years old. They were built away back in 1810. At the time they have improved with age and are apparently as strong and durable as when first placed in position. Capt. Bassett, who has been in charge of the senate furniture for half a century is the only person living who can point out the desks used by the great men of the past and he, it is unnecessary to say, is not now to be found. If he did not the roll-hunters would chop them to pieces within a month.

When Mr Talbot, of Colorado, was a member of the senate he endeavored to learn the history of his desk, but Capt. Bassett declined to gratify his curiosity. Talbot said: "I'll get it out of you, never mind. I'll at least leave my mark upon it, so that posterity may remember me by that, is nothing else." He wore at that time a large gold eleven dollar piece with a large solitaire diamond setting in the center. With these he gradually made two indentations in the front of the desk, and doubtless declared himself satisfied with the notch. But the latter as soon as Mr. Talbot retired from the senate plugged up the holes so deftly that no trace of their existence remains.—Washington Cor Chicago News.

An Invigorating Morning Drink.

Koumiss, properly made, is the best and most delicious drink that has ever been invented. It is at once so thing and invigorating, and in my practice I frequently find it extremely useful, agreeable to and capable of being retained by the most delicate stomach. It is simply milk subjected to alcoholic fermentation, and if once it became known it would assuredly take the place at the present system of drinking whisky in the morning.—Physician in Globe-Democrat.

The Old and New Jersey Cow.

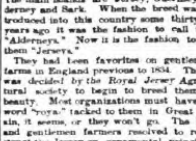
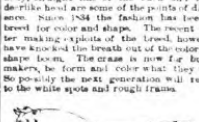
What breeding will do for animals is seen in the following interesting picture. They show the change that has taken place during the development of the Jersey. Since hundreds of years the little cows from the Channel islands have been famous butter makers. The main islands are Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney and Sark. When the breed was introduced into this country some thirty-five years ago it was the fashion to call them "Alderneys." Now it is the fashion to call them "Jerseys."

They had been favorites on gentlemen's farms in England previous to 1834. That was decided by the Royal Jersey Agricultural society to begin to breed them for beauty. Most organizations must have the word "royal" tacked to them in Great Britain, it seems, or they won't go. The lords and gentlemen farmers resolved to reconstruct the Jersey on ornamental principles, so that she would be a decoration on high-priced lawns and pastures. They undertook to give her more graceful, finer shape, and to have her of solid color, which means all of one color. Previously the breed had been spotted and pied, like ordinary cattle.



JERSEY COW OF THEN AND NOW.

The fashionable colors were solid fawn, silver gray and pale lemon fawn. In 1834 two typical cows were sent to Ireland from, as showing nearest perfection of that shape and color desired to be reproduced. Paintings were made of the two animals. One of them was the cow whose picture is here given. The other animal is the most famous fashionable butter maker of those days, Mary Anne, of St. Lawrence. The longer body, straight line of the back and more deerlike head are some of the points of difference. Since 1834 the fashion has been to breed for color and shape. The finest butter making exploits of the breed, however, have knocked the breath out of the color and shape boom. The cream now for butter makers, by form and color what they will, so possibly the next generation will revert to the white spots and rough frame.



OLD AND NEW JERSEY BULL.

The greatest difference has been made in the bull, for the butter factory is breeding for form and color. The butchers of our time use bad words over the visible admixture of every blood in the herd. Another story from the Jerseys are small and slim. The portrait of the bull of fifty years ago shows that he was a better beef animal than his slimshanked successor of today. Observe the depth of brisket and shoulder. The fashionable developers have been breeding the meat off instead of on the Jerseys. Now that the cream is setting another story, perhaps these favorite cattle may increase in weight and return to their beef-making qualities, so they will indeed be the breed of the multitude. Why not breed for size, too? Then we can say: This is the cow I long have sought.

German Kainit.

In the south and New England especially, where commercial fertilizers must be so generally used, anything that will give the much needed potash will be of unusual value. Quite a number know that German kainit is the best fertilizer, but this knowledge is not possessed by the great mass who stand in need of it.

German kainit is a natural product dug from the earth—in Germany, as its name indicates. It can be easily and cheaply mined and prepared for market. The mine in a position to know say that it can be put in our Atlantic seaports at a cost of not above $6 per ton. The supply is considered inexhaustible. The chemical composition of kainit is: Sulphate of potash, 25; sulphate of magnesia, 1%; chloride of magnesia, 12; chloride of sodium, 32; moisture, 14; insoluble, 2.

It is at once apparent that kainit would be a most valuable constituent of a mixture of fertilizers for many of our farm and garden crops. It is an established fact that white clover contains a larger amount of nitrogen than a most any other crop grown on the farm, it does not seem to be for nitrogenous manures. Potash and lime are the elements it must needs. It is well known that the best way in which to supply the lime is by applying it to the soil. Then can there be a doubt that the most feasible means of providing the potash is afforded by German kainit? Potash are another crop frequently greatly benefited by a dressing of potash, and where commercial fertilizers only are used on this crop, it is reasonably certain that kainit will be one of them.

The composition of a complete economical manure for cotton is an important problem, as commercial manures must at present, at least, be relied on all-gether to make profitable yield. of this king of southern crops. Kainit is the most valuable source of the lime of cotton are nitrogen, lime, potash, phosphoric acid and magnesia, the percentage of potash and magnesia, as compared with other crops, being large. Superphosphate will give the phosph ric acid; gypsum, the lime and nitrogen (the last element gathered by it, not contained in it); but until the use of kainit was suggested to supply the potash in sufficient quantities was impossible, consistent with economy. Kainit, however, gives both the potash and magnesia, completing the special fertilizer for cotton.

It is advisable to suggest the use of kainit upon tobacco. This crop needs potash so urgently and largely that kainit is the very fertilizer for it.

Girdling Fruit Trees.

Professor J. L. Budd, of the Iowa Agricultural college, writes: Mr. J. R. Spalding, of Springfield, Ills., has practiced ringing for the last twenty years. His plan at first was to girdle every other tree in thickly planted young orchards, but he now rings all the trees. He rings the trees in the latter part of April, when they are with us in the central district of Iowa would be from the 10th to the 15th of May. He takes off a ring of bark from the stem one half inch in width entirely around the tree, taking care not to injure the cambium layer under the bark. He says: "If hard winters will kill the trees, so much the more necessity for getting them to bear when young, hence I begin to girdle when the trees are but six years old. So far I have found no harm resulting from the process. It sets them to bearing at once, and they bear full, too."

With thickly planted orchards, where the alternate trees will soon have to be removed, Mr. Spalding girdles only the lower limbs. To illustrate its working on thrifty young trees: Two years ago, on the 10th of May, I was looking at some vigorous Tetofsky trees, on rich soil, which had set a heavy crop of fine apples, though over four inches in diameter of stem. I recommended ringing, and at once the owner pulled out his knife and went at them, taking off a strip of bark one inch in width. Of course this did not check the ascent of water and nutriment from the roots in the newer wood, and it did not prevent the perfect flow of the sap in the leaves. Yet it prevented—measurably—the formation of new deposits of wood growth below the ring, and the sap was forced in the top to that ripened state of wood which favors blossoming and fruiting.

The next spring these trees were white with blossoms, and they held a fine crop of fruit.

Rough Feed Wanted.

All domestic animals need rough feed or "stover" mixed along with the fine food, hogs as well as the rest. In the case of the ruminating animals, it is doubtful if grain or meal fed alone goes to the first stomach at all. A large majority of the experiments made to determine this point clearly show that fine foods do not, to any material extent, go to the first stomach when fed to cattle alone, and if food does not go to the first stomach it can be only very imperfectly digested, since it escapes the macerating process of the rumen, and being remasticated and mixed with the saliva. How true this is every large feeder of cattle, in the west at least, must know. A large proportion of the kernels of corn eaten by the animals is found in their droppings, some whole, others broken, but all unfigured. If they had passed into the first stomach they would have been razed and remasticated, and certainly would not have escaped. This process scarcely broken. So it is when meal is fed. It passes into the third and fourth stomachs, a mass of dough into which the gastric juices cannot penetrate. It is true that the muscular contractions of the stomach will give a gentle motion to the dough; but this will make it more compact rather than of a character that the gastric juices will operate freely upon it. If, however, we mix this meal with cut straw or hay the mixture will go to the first stomach, and will, of course, be remasticated, while the fine bits of straw or hay will allow the gastric juice to circulate through the mass and insure complete digestion.

In June.

Those who have orchard grass and clover in some of their fields and that they may begin the hay harvest by cutting these long before timothy and red top meadows are ready for the mowing machines. The grass is a great deal of worry and when the timothy is ripe it may be cut out of proper calculations have been made. As to the age when timothy should be cut, it is well to bear in mind that for one a own use it can hardly be cut too green after the heads are well out, but for sale for city feeding it is preferred as old as it can be without much shelling of from the heads. It is used not so much as nutriment as for bulky food with oats or ground feed.

To destroy the currant worm, and as soon as the leaves appear ragged apply white hellebore—a tablespoonful to the pail of water—by means of a syringe. Repeat in about a week.

Market chickens may be pushed to advantage by frequent feeding, besides having a free run. If possible, while they are growing and before they are put up to fatten. After ducks have passed the delicate stage, and have their feathers, they may be given freequent feeds of food to get them rapid growth and size. The earlier they are sold after they become marketable the greater will be the profit.

The curculio attacks the plums soon after the fruit is set. Jarring the trees and catching the fallen insects upon sheets spread upon the ground will help greatly to save them. If one bud on a graft takes the start of all the others stop it by pinching. If shoots appear upon grapevines where they are not wanted remove them.—American Agriculturist.

Things to Do and to Know.

Don't cut the lawn grass too short.

Mow the roadsides and keep down the nasty weeds.

Plant celery from the middle of June to the middle of July.

Sow cucumbers for pickles in June. Make the plants rather close together in the rows.

The United States crop report shows wheat to be in excellent condition at the end of May.

Plant anybody ever tried spraying with Paris green or London purple for the plum curculio?

Encourage toads in your bottled and garden and they will destroy more than their weight in insects.

Dust melon vines with Paris green or London purple to keep off the bug. Dust with one part of the powder to twenty-five parts flour.

Sweet lemons are a favorite Mexican dainty. They are the shape, color and size of the lemons of commerce, but are sweeter than the banana.

Thousands of acres of the best cotton and rice lands in South Carolina have been devastated by the flood there. Hundreds of head of live stock were drowned.

Once more we permit ourselves to remark that Paris green or London purple bag-a-worm. Dust it on with the pepper-box like can that is provided to go with it.

Freight Discrimination in England.

Talk about discrimination in freights in this country. An English paper states that shipments over the line of the Liverpool, Lancashire, England, can buy sugar in London, send it to New York, via Liverpool, order it back to Bacup, again via Liverpool, at ten cents a ton less than they can get it over the railroad from London to Bacup direct.—Chicago Herald.

JOTTINGS.

—Next Monday will be "Fitzgiun Monday," a holiday generally observed among the German population.

—The next meeting of the New Jersey State Historical Society will be held at Schooley's Mountain in September.

—A case of defamation of character has been brought by Miss Schneiderwind vs. D. S. Cole. The matter will be contested in the higher courts.

—About sixty of the "Plymouth Brethren" first to attend are holding afternoon and evening meetings in a tent erected on the premises at the foot of Water street.

—Rev. Mr. Raymond, pastor, will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion at the anniversary exercises of the Ladies' Christian Work Society at the Trinity Reformed church on Sunday evening.

—Next Sunday will be Children's Day in the Dunellen M. E. church when services befitting the occasion will be held both afternoon and evening. On the following Sunday the day will be observed in a like manner in the Presbyterian church in that place.

—John Quick, an employe of a West Front street establishment, which apparently believes in getting even its signs done abroad, yet expects local patronage, was arrested in the borough on Tuesday for alleged peddling without a license. He was fined five dollars, which he paid, a license to be taken out, but the matter refused to accept it, and the matter will be tried before the mayor in a few days. If there is any case in which there should be no favors shown it should be one of these!

—The hearing in the case of the ten-year-old son of William Price of North Plainfield, who was struck by a Somerville boy Michael Weaver on Wednesday for breaking and entering on Sunday night, and which was to have taken place before Judge Bartine in Somerville yesterday, was postponed until next week. It is the intention of the authorities to have the boy sent to the Reform School, and for that purpose a number of persons were subpœnaed to testify as to the boy's character.

—Louis Callman, the busy little bee, says that he has got a shirt. This will serve to distinguish him from savages not thus encumbered, and will be of use to his friends. Not that they wish to imply that he is very much in need of one, but because they notice that he takes as much pride in it as though he were the only man alive who wore one, and really goes so far as to advertise his prize, saying in the "Pride Shirt," that it is of the best Utica muslin, felt seams, reinforced front, patent back and the very latest linen bosom, and possessed of other virtues too numerous to mention but to be seen at the Bee Hive.

—A two-year-old colt belonging to Mr. J. M. Smith, of Dunellen yesterday after noon received injuries by coming in contact with a barbed wire fence which it is thought will result in the animal's death. The horse was pasturing in a field adjoining Mr. Smith's residence and the supposition is that the animal tried to jump the wire fence separating Mr. Smith's farm from the adjoining property. The colt is at present in the stable of his neighbor, Poole Voorhees, when he became entangled in the barbed wire inflicting a flesh wound three inches long by about two inches in depth. Mr. Smith came to Plainfield and secured the services of Veterinary surgeon, but it is improbable that the horse can be saved.

—What must it take to the sea-shore or mountains, is a question which Oliver Dittson and Co. answer by the announcement of the following attractive publications: "Bonny Wee Thing," a collection of Robert Burns' characteristic ballad, "Bonny Wee Thing." Forman Smith's Dance of the Nymphs," a sparkling composition for the piano or organ; each thirty-five cents. Wheeler's brilliant waltz-a, "Happy Winter Nights," forty cents and Grand March, "Gulding Star," thirty cents. Besides these, are Folk Song, Romances, Lullaby, Hunting Song, Little Snowdrop's Funeral and Bright Morning; captivating short and not difficult piano pieces at twenty-five cents each, by the eminent composer, Carl Weber.

Titania, or the Butterflies' Carnival

Nets Nearly $100 for the Children's Home.

The idea of butterflies holding a carnival for sweet charity sake is certainly unique, and was, we understand, largely due to the thoughtfulness of the wife of ex-Councilman Wadsworth, who while enjoying the performance as previously presented a few days ago, remembered the Children's Home, and hit upon the idea of having the delightful carnival repeated to aid the institution. Notwithstanding the few days' announcement and that many had witnessed the first rendering of the dainty and airy fairy scene from Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," nearly $100 was realized from the affair at the Seminary last evening.

Miss Mildred Potter opened the entertainment with a mazourka and a prelude on the piano by Chopin, and was followed by Miss Sandford with a recitation. At the Seminary Commencement the evening before Miss Potter had won plaudits as a clever piano performer, while Miss Sandford during the same evening impressed her auditors with the conviction that she has the if not a genius for elocution.

Shakespeare's pretty story was told by handsome boys and girls, in costumes rich though gauzy, and suitable to the characters impersonated.

The principal characters assumed were as follows:

CHARACTERS.

Titania, Queen of Fairies ... Miss Anne Corpes
Fairy Butterflies ... Miss Mildred Potter
Prince Oberon ... Master Edward Field
Puck ... Master Archie Cox
Moth, the Miller ... Master Howard Corbin
Ugliu, the Bear ... Master Howard Coddington with about forty others as Fairies, Butterflies, Clowns, Hunters and Frogs.

By the story as given, Oberon, the prince consort of Queen Titania, has psayfully stolen her sceptre, and gone off on an evening's sport with a train accompanied by two guards. He is met by Puck, who has because of his pranks been expelled from the queen's dominions. As he cars the prince suitmats until his return from the chase the queen's magic sceptre. After Oberon's departure Puck concludes to have some fun in the exercise of the new power this sudden-ly acquired, and with the help of Moth, the miller in the play, wanders by. He has also been expelled from the Queen's dominions, but for a totally different and more reprehensible cause. As follows in distress, Puck and Moth conspire together for fun. Moth goes off on a mission of mischief for Puck. During their absence, Uglio, the giant, appears on the scene for something to eat. But with the queen's sceptre in hand, touches with the queen's sceptre the giant, paralyzing his arms and legs, rendering him only in condition he is to serve Puck. As the giant disappears on a mission the queen of the fairies appears, and starts upon a fruitless search of her absent husband and her lost sceptre. She wants something to divert her mind, and Puck suggests a butterfly carnival. Titania consents and the butterflies and their queen. They are brought in captive, sleepy under a spell. Titania, as the Queen of the fairies wishes, and the spell is finally broken. Later Moth has stolen the queen sceptre from Uglio, and the latter of his power is quite forlorn, until Moth is found trailing the wand through the fields, and is brought back captive, and for his gratitude given over to be eaten by the giant, while Puck is restored to royal favor, upon the explanation of his good motives and the restoration of the queen's husband and magic sceptre.

The story is told in song, in which several of the most popular airs of "Pinafore" are conspicuous, and the carnival was altogether most enjoyable.

Plainfield Ahead Again.

Mrs. David Nester of Netherwood went out to her chicken roost yesterday morning where one of her hens was hatching. She found ten chickens hatched out, one of the number having one head, four legs and two tails. The much-legged chick had, however, performed too great a feat to survive, and died the speedy death of the prematurely born. Mrs. Nester showed us the curiosity in this office yesterday. The chicken was born with plenty of feathers and the two of the legs were just below the wings while the other two legs were in the usual place.

NEW MARKET.

The East New Jersey Baptist Association met in the Baptist church at New Market, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 8th and 9th. The attendance of delegates was large and a good interest was manifested in the meetings throughout. The churches of this association in general are enjoying a good degree of prosperity.

PERSONAL.

George D. Pope of North Plainfield has returned from a short visit with friends in New York city.

Rev. Dr. John C. Bliss, a former pastor of the Crescent Avenue church but now of New York city, spent Wednesday with friends in this city.

Mr. R. M. Titsworth of West Seventh street has gone on a fishing expedition for black bass to Lake Ontario, N. Y., to be absent about two weeks.

Mrs. Van Nest, an aged woman, died at her home in Dunellen on Wednesday morning. The funeral service took place from St. John's church in Dunellen this morning, after which the interment was made in Rahway's cemetery in this place. The deceased was a sister to Mrs. John Cameron of Madison avenue.

About forty of the members of the parish of the Evens Church of the Heavenly Rest last evening tendered their pastor, Rev. Mr. Taylor, a reception at his residence on Park avenue. The evening was spent in pleasant social intercourse, and a number of those present rendered vocal and instrumental selections which were highly appreciated.

Mrs. Electa M. Pennington, the aged mother of Nathan C. and Mr. C. M. Pennington, who died at the home of her son on West Fourth street during Tuesday, was buried from her son's residence at two o'clock this afternoon. Rev. Dr. Yerkes conducted the funeral arrangements, after which interment was made in the Methodist cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

A little four-year-old son of Mr. B. Rogers, who resides on Tenth street, east of Broadway, is said to have fallen from a second-story window during yesterday afternoon and sustained severe internal injuries. The little fellow is thought to have climbed upon a chair, reached a window and in so doing pitched headforemost to the ground below. So far as known no bones are fractured.

A Plainfield Tourist on the Wing.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20, 1886.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—We arrived at this place last evening, after a rather tiresome journey of about 900 miles from Salt Lake City, from whence we wrote our last communication. Salt Lake City and Salt Lake roads larger on paper than they really do, on witnessing them for the first time. The city is located some 5 miles away from the lake. The lake is about 60 miles in length and has the appearance of other lakes, save the salt on its shores. There are some curiosities about it for the reader to solve for himself, for when the numerous large rivers that empty into it; there is no apparent outlet, and it is said that the water is receding year by year. The city is the noted Mormon city of the world and the population is about two-thirds Mormons. They are usually industrious in habits. We attended Sunday services in their commodious building. It will seat about 12,000 persons. I should judge there were present that day between 5,000 and 6,000 people, and over 1,000 of these were other than Saints. It was a successful day and the communion was offered to all present, men, women and children. They use bread, and water in place of wine. It took about two hours to go through the ceremony. During this ceremony the speaker dwelt upon the persecutions, there being of late years, on account of polygamy and treason against the government. The governor has proposed their pardon if they will renounce the plurality of wives and submit to the laws of the government; but no, they will not do this. The speaker stated that from a religious standpoint that it was appointed by God, and that therefore our constitution they had no right to practice it. They believed that God would sustain them in it, and if need be they would be willing to die in the conflict with the opposition they are meeting with. Their public buildings are reckoned in a high rank with other places, and show that an immense amount of money has been expended here. But we concluded that it is a wicked city and accordingly we started on the train to Lot and his family to flee to the mountains for safety. Before we left we took the cars for Ogden and arrived safely. The next day we took a trip by carriage up the Ogden river canon to the terminus and also saw the scenes of beautiful springs and streams that gulch forth from the cliffs of the canon. Our guide told many a thrilling story of the capture of the black, yellow and grizzly bears in this locality. The next day we took our departure, passing northward around the north end of the lake, and the third morning opened upon us in the grand forest and a long, tedious day was ours, for three or four hundred miles scarcely a green spot of land was found for our vision, save where the railroad company had by irrigation supplied the same, setting a few trees and starting vegetation. Occasionally a station the Indians appeared, begging for something to eat, such as the Queen of Spain covered that they would offer to show for a nickel. They afforded much amusement to us, and we felt as if our breath went out through a goose quill and was not inclined to come back again. But we did the best we could, for we had to remain in this torment for nearly six hours until morning for the train to be ironed away, and then a dreary gloom was over our whole train, for we had to pass yet through some 50 miles of snow sheds, and shut out from the sun as we passed through ventilation cracks and holes. But we finally opened out into a new world and were shut out from the sight of the Sacramento Valley, when at nine o'clock we breakfasted in the blue canon amid roses and flowers, and in hope of better things to come, were a happy set of tourists again. We now came to the old gold fields where thousands of miners in the days of '49 had lived and dug over until the gold had ceased to be profitable to them, and then moved for that purpose; but the streams that have been raised for washing gold were turned to account for irrigating purposes, now the mountains and valleys blossom as the rose, with vineyards and fruit gardens that made us all exclaim in the glory that we were again in a primitive world. We pass Cape Horn as we descend at our left, and take a glance at the Sacramento and the fertile bottom lands, and are glad of our delay, as otherwise we should have passed these scenes in the night time. At noon we arrive at Sacramento City, and dine in the beautiful Sacramento Valley—the glory of the western world. We pass through fields of cattle and horses, beautiful fields of grain and newly-mown hay, while we are hearing the wholesome air of California. We cross the straits over the mouth of the river to Oakland, and thence by ferry and land in the wonderful city of San Francisco, and our home for the night is in that wonderful situation, the Palace Hotel of the world.

Friday, May 21.—We spent yesterday in sight seeing. The facilities for getting around are very good, remember, for cable cars, horse cars and dummy engines run in every direction, giving transfer tickets to any point you wish to visit at a cost of five cents whether it be one or ten miles. We visited yesterday, Seal Cliff, the native home of the sea lion, where hundreds could be seen on the high rocks near the shore, rolling, roaring and tumbling in their native glory, and the black whale now and then shows his back to the thousand and one visitors. The Cliff is the great resort of the West, the Watch Hill or New Port of the Pacific Ocean just outside the Golden Gate. We took a drive through the Park, out to the Soldiers' Home and to the gate, returning by the Oriental City or that part occupied by the Chinese, which is a city within itself, and a large section of the city; and their markets and trade are truly a wonder to behold. Their places of worship are many and for a fee of from 25c to $1 they will go through their method of worship, burning incense, and smoking pipes to your satisfaction; and it pays the tourist well to visit their quarters, for they will spend a dollar freely in their business. Their great aim is to save and they live on about 10 cents' worth a day. Some say that not many are poor and that in their graceful places, some of them living in the mountains on the back of the tenement places. Well, San Francisco is a place worth a visit to all tourists. But I must stop my pen for I have written this communication to an extended length as it is. Our boat, the landlord sent to our room a beautiful basket of roses and sent us a cordial invitation to call on as modern tourists. We go over to Oakland this afternoon, to spend Sabbath and Sunday with our Seventh Day Adventist friends. TOURIST.

—The police this morning arrested an itinerant mat peddler on Front street near Park avenue for being drunk and shouting on the streets. He offered resistance but was finally lodged in the station house.

A Supposed Rabid Dog on the Rampage.

An overgrown dog of the black and tan species, said to belong to a family residing on Crescent avenue, Plainfield, was the cause of a few minutes of the house into town yesterday afternoon. Between three and four o'clock as Sylvester F. Randolph of West Second street was passing along Park avenue, between Front and Second streets, he was suddenly startled to find that a dog had securely fastened his teeth in the calf of his left leg. The animal was beaten off and Mr. Randolph entered the first convenient place to ascertain the result of his injuries. Fortunately he wore a pair of unusually leather boots, which must have saved him from a severe biting. On the inside of the boot leg the indentation made by the dog's teeth were plainly visible. Mr. Randolph received only a severe pinching, and owes his narrow escape to the boots he wore. During the excitement the dog was allowed to depart, but the name "mad dog" was carried from one to another until there was a general exodus from the various stores.

Shortly after the excitement had subsided, August Schmidt, employe at the Muhlenberg Hospital, was attacked by the same dog in front of Edsal's store on West Front street. The animal had fastened its teeth in Mr. Wert's left leg at the ankle, and in relinquishing his grip carried away a portion of the pantaloons. It was found that the flesh had not been broken but the indentation made by the dog's teeth left blue marks. The dog showed no marked symptoms of the rabies other than panting and running aimlessly about with his mouth open. A number of persons gave chase to the dog, and finally succeeded in capturing it. Mr. Wert was attached to the other end of the rope seeking a secluded spot to end the dog's career.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

There will be a men's meeting in the hall on Monday evening next at eight o'clock. A full choir will be present to lead singing by a male choir, short talks and a good time. All are invited.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Young Men's Christian Association was held last evening President Newman presided. After reading the minutes of the previous meeting reports were given by Secretary Willis and Treasurer Murray.

The following gentlemen were elected as active members: Chas. A. Haynes, Jos. M. Homan, Frank F. Bayuon, W. L. Mason.

The next business in order was the election of officers and Directors for the ensuing year. Greatly to the regret of all the retiring President, Mr. Newman declined to stand on account of his health it was impossible for him to serve another year. Mr. Newman was one of the charter members of the Association in 1867, and has been a most faithful and efficient officer since its organization. Mr. Newman has consented to serve as a Director. The officers elected were as follows: Pres., Mr. T. F. Miller; vice president, Mr. Wm. Newman; treasurer, Mr. Murray; recording secretary, Mr. L. Mulford; corresponding secretary, Mr. C. S. Tyler. Directors—H. Chapman, E. L. Rooney, G. F. Brown, First Baptist church; H. D. Lum, Turkey river; Cement Avenue church; John Cory, W. M. McGee, Methodist church; E. L. Steffens, Congregational church; C. F. Wilson, C. F. West, Trinity Reformed church; D. E. Titsworth, Seventh Day Baptist church; C. A. Haynes, Park Baptist church; Milton Craft, Grace Episcopal church.

Articles of Incorporation Filed.

Articles of incorporation were yesterday filed in the Hudson County Clerk's office of "The New Construction and Building Company of New Jersey." The company's location in the State will be at Jersey City, Hoboken and Camden, and the business will consist of the manufacture of steamship furniture and the building of vessels. The company will start with a capital stock of $250,000. The following are the stockholders from this city together with the number of shares set opposite their names: Charles and Peter B. Matthews of North Plainfield, twenty-five shares, and B. A. Hageman, jr., twenty-five shares. The company will remain in existence fifty years.

Lecture at Reform Hall.

Edward Cosgrove of Boston, Mass., lectured before a small audience, composed mostly of ladies, in Reform Hall last evening on the subject of temperance—"The Tracked Track of the Traffic." He engaged the attention of his hearers for over an hour in laying down fundamental principles for the crusade against the liquor traffic. Mr. Cosgrove is an unmarried man, 36 years of age and a native of Boston. He began his career as a temperance lecturer in 1877, and has traveled extensively through the western States and Canada. Mr. Cosgrove will again lecture in Reform Hall on Thursday evening, July 1st.

WESTFIELD.

The Lesla Ball Club of Plainfield will play the Lasrels next Saturday afternoon.

Dr. F. A. Kinch and family expect to start on their trip to the Pacific coast next Thursday.

The much looked for stone crusher arrived yesterday morning. Mr. Hoffman will soon have it going.

The marriage of Edward Ladd to Miss Louise Conover took place yesterday afternoon at the Congregational church, Rev. Mr. Neel performing the ceremony. After the dinner at the bride's residence the couple started on a wedding tour amid the well-wishes of their numerous friends.

—A man named Conover was arrested in the Borough on Tuesday for carting without a license. He took out a license and paid the costs.

—The chimney on a lamp left burning in a apartment house on North avenue broke in the last evening, causing a loss of $5 and a severe scare. Some one mistook the flickering lamp for a fire and one of them ascended three flights of stairs and aroused the occupants who extinguished the light.

STATE NOTES.

The citizens of Lambertville are making arrangements for receiving the Seventh Regiment, which visits that place on the 5th of June. It is intended to make the day a general holiday.

An unknown man supposed to have been a German, stationed himself by a grave in Woodland cemetery, Camden, on Saturday afternoon and shot himself through the head. He died on his way to the hospital.

Conclusion of the Dunham Choristers' Festival.

Last night closed the inviting strawberry and ice cream festival set forth by the Dunham Good-will Choristers in the Warren Mission Church under the guiding hand of that never-weary-in-well doing lover of song and healthful mirth—Marvin M. Dunham, who was there in all the glory of the conventional dress of his club, his face wreathed in smiles, while his rotund form flitted through the room, took in the situation at a glance, and with a grip peculiar to him grasped the hand of every one he came in contact with, while he gazed in the direction of the ice cream, strawberries, cake, ginger ale, and what not, rather suggestively.

The Choristers seemed to have made up their minds to give the finishing touches to the festival and make sure that the cream would become beautifully less, for they turned out in full force, numbering ten to one of the lords and ladies present.

The platform had been bereft the musical instruments so ably handled by Prof Schibel on the two previous evenings and in their places were chairs in cloth of gold and crimson, daintily enough for an Eastern prince, and which were soon occupied by the Choristers, who looked cool and refreshing in their light coats, immaculate shirt fronts and neckties, while the potted plants, which were there through the kindness of Mrs Opdyke, formed a pleasing background.

The Choristers sang applied sweetly, under the baton of their leader, many well rendered and popular airs which brought down the house, and had to be repeated in almost every instance, the sweet tones of Professor Guttman's violin intermingling and making melody even sweeter in the ears of the listeners.

The entertainment was brought to a close by a tum-tums lecture by Mr. Carpenter, a song, a further consumption of cream and words of thanks from President Dunham who expressed the hope of meeting them again under as favorable and pleasant circumstances.

What Jay Gould Says of Yachting.

Jay Gould was in the library of the Fifth avenue residence when your correspondent put his head in and said: "If you desire to obtain an interview on the railroad strike, do not waste your time on me, as I have not of pertinacity to I positively won't talk on that subject for publication. Whatever is to be said from the company's side of the case is put out on the tape. That is my excuse me." The visitor suggested that his views on railroading generally would be interesting to the public at this time. "Well," Mr. Gould replied, "I will make me say that if steam yachting in my Atalanta could be done by every-body everywhere all over the continent, I would put up my railroad holdings at a sacrifice. Suppose that canals for the swiftest vessels could be dug along almost any wooded or fruit bearing country, who would ride any more in cars? I've just return d from a cruise in my yacht, and the highest luxuries known to land transit are to be enfoun d combined with steaming along, as safely as the average train, with no dust or jolt on railroads are useful, but for purposes of pleasure I shall forevermore despise them. And who knows —seriously, now—that some time or other waterways may supersede railroad tracks for fast and safe passenger travel for continental Enquirer Interview.

Danish Superstition Concerning Riches.

If you would be rich you must go out on Twelfth Night to a cross road where five ways meet, one of which leads to a church; and you must take with you in your hand a gray calfskin and an axe. When you reach the cross-road you must sit down on the heath, the side of a hill or a mound, and extend in the direction of the road which leads to the church yard. Then you must look fixedly at the axe while it must be made as sharp as possible.

Toward midnight, the goblins will come in multitudes and put good in great heaps around you, to try and make you look up, and then will battle furiously and angrily with you. But when at length they have failed in causing you to look aside, they will begin to take hold of the calf skin and the axe and drag it away with you upon it. Then you will be fortunate if you can succeed in cutting off the tail with the axe without looking about you and without letting go the axe. If you succeed the goblins will vanish, and all the gold will remain by you. Otherwise, if you look about you or damage the axe, it will be all up with you.—Chambers' Journal.

Milk Produced from Brewers' Grain.

The mineral constituents are largely present out of barley in malting, and consequently the material for bone growth is lacking. But milk from brewers' grains is for this very reason the best for adults. What is needed for adults is bone-producing food, to supply waste, not bone and muscle producing food to assist growth.—Scientific Exchange.

A MAD KING.

BAVARIA IN A QUANDARY ABOUT HER DEMENTED RULER.

Ludwig Refuses to Give Up His Crown and Defies the Ministers to Depose Him—His Uncle Assumes Authority of the Government.

MUNICH, June 11.—Prince Leopold, commander-in-chief of the army of Bavaria and regent of King Ludwig, has issued a proclamation assuming the regency of the kingdom of Bavaria, and summoning the diet to meet on Monday.

King Ludwig of Bavaria, who has just been adjudged mentally unsound and unfit to longer to rule, shows decided objections to the decision of the ministry which has decided to dethrone him and put his uncle, Prince Luitpold, in his place as regent. Having spent the forenoon at the mirror, Prince Luitpold issued a proclamation, countersigned by the ministry, in which he assumes the regency and summons the Bavarian diet to meet on the 15th inst. Prince Holstein, who had been appointed to wait upon the king and obtain his signature to this decree, has had a hard time of it. Upon delivering the edict of Holenschwangau yesterday he was arrested by the king's order. His majesty also gave orders that a guard of gendarmes be placed around the castle. The issuance of an order by the regent to release Count Holstein and to surrender the castle to the state commission is hourly expected.

There is great excitement in Munich, and some regret at the proposed deposition of King Ludwig, who, in spite of his eccentricities, has always been greatly beloved. Though he has given but little attention to the affairs of late years, it has not been found that the interests of the country suffered to any appreciable extent. In fact, so long as the price of beer was kept at the normal figure, and strangers were attracted to the capital, the king was content. Some of his art treasures left by Ludwig I, Munichmans carried little whether the king ruled or not, King Ludwig has been on the Bavarian throne since March 10, 1864, and in April will be 41 years old. The Munichian laugh at the idea recently started in Paris, that the king's hankers caused him to disapprove of Wagner's music, which his majesty was the first to appreciate in Europe. They rather attribute his dementia to his financial bankruptcy to to great a fondness for the manners and customs of the time of "Le Grande Monarque. His new Gothic castle of Neuschwanstein, built on the Bavarian Alps, cost him only a fraction of the vast sums he has spent in attempting to carry out on the Herren Insein, in Lake Chiem, his imitation of the palace of Versailles. The expenditures for his new chateau on the Chiemsee have been fabulous. A gigantic chandelier cost him $240,000, two rooms a million of francs, and a single covering in Chinese embroidery some hundreds of thousands of francs.

Two years ago his uncle, Prince Luitpold, paid out a sum of $750,000 to satisfy the royal creditors. Since then, however, the king has made further debts to the amount of four millions more. On Thursday a family council of the members of the Wittelsbach family was held at the house of Prince Luitpold, the head of the house, when the absolute necessity of a regency was decided upon. Prince Luitpold's eldest son, Prince Ludwig, is the heir presumptive to the Bavarian throne, and is married to a niece of the Archduke Charles Ferdinand. This second son, Prince Leopold, married the Archduchess Gisela, the eldest daughter of the Emperor Francis Joseph and his late brother, Prince Otto, born in 1848, but he is incapacitated for the succession King Ludwig's civil list has been $1,500,000 annually.

SURPRISED ORANGEMEN.

Belfast Practically Under Military Rule, The Dead and Dying.

BELFAST, June 11.—After its night of riot and bloodshed the city is quiet. The soldiers are ready to march at a moment's notice, and the police, largely reinforced, are patroling the town in squads. Mobs are not permitted to gather. The Orangemen are not out, but the present is the calm before the storm. The Orangemen number fully 100, though accurate figures are difficult to obtain, owing to many of them having fell in the fights with the police having been carried off by friends. Four of the wounded Orangemen have died, making ten in all. Four more are expected to die.

At a meeting of Orangemen held at Shank Hill road resolutions were passed denouncing the police from the districts outside Belfast for marching to the assistance of the Belfast police and "attacking peaceful citizens." This is said to mean that the Orangemen were lead to believe that after the defeat of the police in Belfast the police would not interfere with them if they killed Catholics or sacked their houses. This is causing alarm among the wealthy Irish Protestant gentry, who are begging their ministers to undertake their more logical lectures.

Drilling by Orangemen goes on every night and every small town in the Ulster Orangemen predominate.

RELIGIOUS FANATICS

Fighting at a Funeral and In the Factories.

DUBLIN, June 11.—The funeral of Thomas Gallagher, who was shot dead during the rioting at Lurgan on Tuesday, took place yesterday. The procession was a large one, and the route was proclaimed by 18 to go and 300 policemen. A mob of Catholics joined at the procession and threatened to attack the Protestants. Stones were thrown and then and drove them away. Beyond a few broken heads no one was injured.

Politics and religious creeds are exciting dangerous quarrels in the factories. In one factory the Protestant women have struck against working alongside of Irish Catholic employes.

Modified Home Rule.

LONDON, June 11.—In the house of lords Earl Carnarvon, refering to Mr. Parnell's statement on Monday concerning certain changes in the Irish land act which he would be glad to see the Conservatives in event of the return of that party to power through the assistance of the Parnellite section, said that he had, while in Ireland in February, had an interview with Mr. Parnell, but the conference was of an entirely private nature, and in no sense on behalf of the government. Referring to the government's home rule bill, Earl Carnarvon expressed his acceptance of the principle of modified home rule for Ireland.

Protestant Home Rulers.

CORK, June 11.—The Protestant Home Rule association of this city have issued a committee to cooperate with similar committees in Dublin and Belfast to support the Parnellite candidates. The association will not admit Catholics to membership or permit them to take part in the meetings.

THE OLEOMARGERINE BILL.

"Barrels of Money" to Be Used in Fighting It.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—President Joseph H. Reall, of the National Dairymen's association, is sending out broadcast a new and fervently drawn circular letter urging farmers to bring all the influence they can command to bear upon their representatives in favor of the bill to put brand bogus butter. In this circular Mr. Reall reviews the great oleomargerine contest in the house, and says:

"But there is an important battle yet to be fought, and for this we must concentrate and utilize all our forces that is to pass the bill through the senate. We must win there. It is the last fort to be carried, and we must carry it. I request that you write strong, urgent and unpersonal letter to members of the senate urging the adoption of our bill as a public necessity; circulate new petitions to take out at once during the last grist, and get them filed in the senate, and get all the names you can and send them in. Get your merch nt, your lawyer, your doctor and your minister to write letters. If you can do so, come down yourself and talk to them, and get all you can to do the same. Do everything you can, do it quick, and do it thoroughly. You must have this bill for your own prosperity. You have a terrible enemy, he will resort to every trick and device to defeat you. He has got the ear of the house. His character is illustrated by his record of fraud. Don't let him defeat us now and ruin our homes and our lands. We have a half million personally from this fraud. I have and you have.

A dispatch was received by Mr. Reall from Col. Hobert M. Littler, secretary of the Chicago Butter exchange, reading as follows:

Butterine men have been organized to Washington with barrels of money to work against the dairy bill. Stir up the friends of the dairy everywhere.

Senator Beck's proposition to attach the Morrison tariff bill to the oleomargerine bill created amusement, but it is a serious proposition, and will give rise to lengthy debate. The senate committee on agriculture will report on or before the 15th to ten cents as in the original bills.

A WOMAN WITH A HISTORY.

Unfortunate Mrs. Spaulding's Latest Adventure.

BOSTON, June 11.—Mrs. Marie R. Spaulding, a dressmaker, is mourning the loss of her daughter, who, it is thought, has eloped with a detective. The woman's life has been one of misfortunes. Years ago her husband disappeared, taking her only son with him. It was learned many years afterward that he went to South America with the boy. At last he died, and the boy was sent home to his mother by friends. On Saturday afternoon, Oct. 18, 1884, a young man and woman came to Mrs. Spaulding's house to select goods for a bridal dress. While doing so one of the men suddenly bound and gagged her. Then, taking her pocket book, they piled the goods upon the floor, poured oil over them and set the pile on fire. After a hard struggle Mrs. Spaulding freed her hands and feet, removed the gag from her mouth and finally succeeded in escaping, however, was not believed by the police and she was arrested, but was discharged for want of evidence. The insurance companies at first refused to pay the amount that covered her stock, but with the assistance of lawyers she received one half the amount. It was not long after this latter accident that Private Detective Foss came to the house to live. He fell in love with Mrs. Spaulding's daughter and his affection was returned. Finally the girl left her daughter severely and the girl left the house. Her mother ascertained where she was stopping and brought her back, but on Monday she disappeared. As Foss is also missing it is supposed that the pair have gone together.

CANADA'S REVOLTING CONVICTS.

Sentences Extended for Assaulting Officers of the Law.

MONTREAL, June 11.—The trial of Louis Vian, ringleader of the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary outbreak, was resumed in the court of queen's bench. He defended himself ably, making several of the witnesses against him contradict themselves. The charges were shooting with intent to kill the guard Chartrand, attempting to escape on April 24, the day of the revolt and escaping on May 4. Vian was sentenced to the last count but not to the others. He was closely watched by four guards heavily armed, and had shackles on his feet. Vian said the guards were divided into two factions, and he also charged the guards with helping him to escape. The jury returned a verdict of guilt on both charges, and the judge sentenced Vian to twenty-five years in the penitentiary. He has still eight years to serve, so that if he undergoes the full sentence he will be forty-eight before he gets his liberty. It is supposed that he will be taken to the Kingston penitentiary to serve his sentence, where the discipline is more strict than at the St. Vincent de Paul.

Randall and the Order of Business.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—A gentleman who has talked with Mr. Randall says that one reason which prevents the leaders of the Democracy assuming to an understanding as to an order of business in the house is the determination of the anti-tariff people not to take up the Morrison bill this session. Mr. Randall is a member of the committee of seven appointed to arrange an order of business. The balances of the committees are inclined to make the tariff bill part of the order, but Mr. Randall declares he will vote the entire order and carry forty-one Democrats with him. Mr. Randall predicts that the order will be: First, the naval bill; second, the sundry civil bill; third, the fortification bill, etc., until the appropriation bills have been disposed of, and then at the end of the second week in July an adjournment.

Important to Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Acting Second Comptroller McMahon has rendered a decision to the effect that every volunteer soldier who was mustered out and discharged, or whose regiment or organization, the members of which were kept together and under discipline, and did not receive their discharge until they were paid off, should be credited with the period of service until the day of payment, and should be credited with pay and clothing allowance to include that day; and if such soldier served for a period of two years he is, by reason of the provisions of the joint resolution of July 13, 1868, entitled to $100 bounty under the act of July 28, 1866, and to $50 bounty under the act of July 28, 1866.

Odd Fellows Violate the Law.

CONCORD, N. H., June 11.—Canton Wilder, patriarch militant, I. O. O. F., voted some time ago to contribute $1,000 to the New Hampshire soldiers' home at Boscawen, and the money by a grand jo tery fair. Prizes to the value of nearly $4,000 were to be distributed. Advertising circulars in large numbers were sent through the mail. The postoffice department sent an inspector to investigate this violation of the United States law. As a result the fair has been postponed and the money for nearly 8,000 tickets refunded.

CAR DRIVERS' TROUBLES

A STRIKE AVERTED BY MEN REFUSING TO OBEY ORDERS.

The Third Avenue Men Continue to Hope That Something Will Turn Up to Help Them Out—A Difference of Opinion Between Leaders.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The threatened trouble on the Dry Dock, East Broadway and Battery road has been averted. At a secret meeting held Wednesday night, a tie up of the four lines of the company was strongly urged by the leaders who called men, but the majority of the drivers refused to leave their cars if such an order was issued. The trouble grew out of the discharge of August Belmont, the president, of a driver who had run down and killed a boy. He said that such a thing should not occur during the last strike. At the time of the previous tie up, April 29, McDavitt did not show up for work, and his duty's pay was forfeited. Last Saturday, not supposing that the company could find any men to man the cars, he presented him self for work, but when Superintendent White agreed with the association drivers, McDavitt refused to act as starter. He was promptly discharged.

McDavitt made a statement of the circumstances at the meeting and had the good sense to advise the men not to strike on his account. He said that it would be better and safer for him to be out of work and be paid by the organization until he found work. He will be compelled to seek employment outside of New York, as no driver or conductor will be employed by the company who has been discharged for complicity in the strikes. A good deal of feeling was shown at the meeting, and no little disgust expressed with the action of some leaders on the smallest pretexts. The drivers on the bobtail cars who had no connection with McDavitt, who was the starter of the Grand Street branch, declared positively that they would not tie up. This, together with the lesson learned from the failure of the Third Avenue strike, finally resulted in a vote not to take any action upon McDavitt's discharge further than to pay him his $2 a day until he found another job.

George Newman, a non-union man, was appointed in McDavitt's place. He was at one time the starter of the Third avenue road, but left there to take a similar position on the Dry Dock, East Broadway and Line. Thomas McDavitt, a brother of the discharged starter, who was a driver on the Dry Dock line, resigned his position without notice a few days ago. While there were prospects of a strike on the road Superintendent White received a large number of letters from various railroad corporations asking him not to accede to the demands of the men to reinstate McDavitt. Besides these he had applications from engineers and firemen and conductors who were ready to take out cars in case of a strike. The authorities believe that the trouble is over, although another meeting of the men will be held to-night to settle the matter finally.

The unorganized members of Local Assembly 4,041 still refuse to believe that the strike against the Third avenue road is over, and have transferred their faith from the executive committee of District 75 to the board selected by the men on Tuesday night. To-night the attached the offices of the new committee to galvanize the corpse yesterday, but at a late hour last night the men were assembled in the hall and were anxiously awaiting the return of the chairman and two members of the new committee, who had been dispatched on a secret mission to Albany. It is said that Harris has usurped the place of the confiding love the men so recently bore their old leaders, and the desire to know what has become of the money generally collected. At Pythian hall

Graham, Best, Newman and Higgins occupied the executive room of the old headquarters yesterday, and were busy preparing for the meeting to be held to-night to submission to the District assembly next Monday night.

During the afternoon the new committee waited upon them and demanded the books, which were refused. Chairman Graham expressed a willingness to permit the committee to examine the books in the presence when the account should be finished, but declined to surrender them to any one not authorized by District 75 to receive them. Speaking of the statement which appeared in an afternoon paper yesterday to the effect that he had attempted to draw out $6,000 of the late strikers' funds, deposited in the Decker Howell Savings bank, over the heads the angry protest of Irving Gourley, of the new executive board, and Joe Wilson, a member of Local 3,103, that he had not only refused to honor the check, Chairman Graham said that he had never been in the bank in his life, and knew nothing of any $6,000 on deposit there. He had charge of the money remaining in the hands of the district committee will not, they assert, exceed a few hundred dollars, which will be distributed among the members next Saturday. This money the board claims to have just realized from several sources.

Harris refused to say a word about the matter he refused to say anything one way or the other, taking refuge in the assertion that none of the new board could talk about affairs of the order except in the presence of his fellow committeemen.

"Why, said one, "Jim Graham was the first to kick against signing that agreement. Right in our presence he said he would refused to sign, saying it was a clear give up."

Said another ex-driver: "Tis board has made fools of us. They have got us into a hole and now want to creep out. We followed their advice and now are thrown over."

A report was current that the Second avenue men would pay their assessments the same as usual. Among the friends of District 75 it is said that, though the men struck for the reinstatement of the men appealed to the district for assistance, the district did not propose to desert them, but ordered the strike off so the men would settle the necessity of assessments. They will not remain a burden on their brothers. It was asserted that the men would be provided with money enough to enable them to live until they could secure employment.

Mayor Grace vetoed the aldermen's bill requiring car drivers to obtain licenses, and which would have required the applicants to be men of good character who are citizens of the United States and familiar with the streets of the city. The mayor explained that, in the opinion of the corporation counsel, the clause prescribing necessary qualification for applicants made the bill unconstitutional and illegal.

Michael Connolly, who was dismissed from the police department for intoxication and then turned his hand at car driving on the Third avenue road, was the prime cause of the strikers, was fined $10 at special sessions for kicking a horse on the Third avenue line.

John Rapf, during the last tie-up, helped to place a wagon on the car tracks of the Dry Dock road on Avenue B. Yesterday, at special sessions, he was fined $25.

A nine assorted from Local 4,103 defeated a nine from the De Kalb avenue (Brooklyn) nine in a ten-inning game of baseball yesterday, on the Star grounds, in Brooklyn. Score, 13 to 12.

MARKED MONEY

FOUND IN THE POCKETS OF A SUSPECTED CLERK.

The Old Story of Postoffice Peculations and the Usual Decoy Letters with Marked Bait Lands the Victim Behind the Bars.

BROOKLYN, June 11.—Frederick B. Harris, chief night clerk in the Brooklyn postoffice, was arrested early yesterday morning, charged with opening letters which contained money. Later in the day he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Allen, and held for examination in the sum of $5,000.

The story of the crime attributed to Harris is remarkable in several respects. The accused man was appointed a clerk in the postoffice on April 1, 1885, having passed a civil service examination, and securing second place on the eligible list. His salary was $900 per annum, which seemed to satisfy him, as he was always of a contented turn of mind and lived well. He had formerly been a clerk in New York postoffice, when in fact, with strict attention to business, secured him rapid promotions, and he was finally made chief night clerk. In this position he had charge of the mails to his orders, and had access to the office at all hours.

About eight months ago Postmaster McLoer, of Brooklyn, and Postmaster Pearson, of New York, received letters complaining that the senders had lost money while it was in transit through the New York postoffice. Newcomb, of the secret service, was notified to investigate the matter, but as he was well known he made little headway, and for a time the complaints ceased. A vacation absence on the inspector's part, however, brought about a renewal of the complaints, and several business houses reported frequent losses of money. It was then that Newcomb would have to be made to capture the guilty one, the postal authorities at Washington were communicated with, which resulted in the sending of inspector Charles E. Dosser, of Georgia.

The official began operations at once, and after a thorough investigation announced that all the missing letters were in safely posted between 10 p. m. and 7 a. m. His second night dropp d decoy letters containing marked money into the box during those hours, which were all received at their destinations minus the money and encased in new envelopes the handwriting on which was nicely disguised from that of the last letters. This writing was compared with that of all the clerks on duty during the night, and was found to compare with that of the accused. Harris was always looked upon as greatly admired by his superior officers, and for a time they would not think of him in connection with the thefts. The inspector, however, went quietly to work and laid a trap for the suspected man. One of the night clerks, named J. S. Stewart, was taken into confidence and instructed to watch the disposition made of a letter that would be mailed at a certain hour on Wednesday night and immediately report. Accordingly, on Wednesday night, Assistant Postmaster Smith and Inspector Dosser went to the drop box and deposited four letters, one of which was addressed to Weckerly & Co., Manufacturing Jewelers, in marked money, and another to the Electric Belt company, in which was inclosed $2.50. The two gentlemen then went to the hotel and awaited results.

Clerk Stewart saw the letters deposited and watched them until they reached Harris. He then hastened from the building and informed the inspector. He had scarcely left Harris fumble the letters and apparently tear up an envelope. The three returned to the postoffice and Harris was summoned to the private office of the assistant postmaster, where he was detained until the arrival of Officer Reddy, of the First precinct, who had been sent for. He was made a prisoner and conveyed to the station house, where he was searched, and it is claimed, that the marked money was found in his pockets. Besides this there were postage stamps and two match boxes. The man took his arrest in a very cool manner, simply remarking that the arrest was a "pretty hard one on him." He, however, indignantly denied that he had stolen the money found on him.

He was taken before United States Commissioner Allen, to whom he denied his guilt, but refused to answer further questions, saying that he preferred to wait until he secured counsel to defend him. He was then held in the sum of $7,000 for examination, which was set down for this morning.

Harris boarded with Mr. Dunnigan at No. 506 Lefferts place. The latter is an employe of the New York postoffice. This gentleman gives Harris a very poor reputation for paying his debts, saying that he was driven away from the New York postoffice by his creditors, and that he owes him $60 at present for board.

Other persons stated that the accused man is a native of Batavia, N. Y., where he has a wife and child, and that his wife has frequently called on him and urged him to return home and settle up his affairs in the village gossips. Several stories were circulated about him by employes of the postoffice yesterday which gave the impression that Harris lived rather a fast life and spent his money freely.

The losses sustained by the thefts will, it is thought, mount up to several thousands of dollars.

BEN BUTLER PROPHESIES.

No Third Party to Figure in the Next Campaign.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—Gen. Ben F. Butler has expressed himself at some length on the general political outlook. He branded civil service as a sham, and thought the Democrats had completely showed their utter want of cohesion. He also said that the next presidential campaign will be fought, as the last was, on the character of candidates and the sensible men will vote for both. He thinks, he no organization of consequence, as both sides will fall for the labor vote. Taking a more national long-range view of things he expressed the idea that the growing preponderance of the south in national council would eventually produce discord again, but just when no man could say. He referred specially to the fact that while the south pays but one-fifth of the taxes, she dominates the presidency, the lower house, and soon, the senate. The senate, all on a system of representation based on population, pressed negro vote. Trouble will come some day, he believes, when the south tries to use this power to recover the south for payment of southern losses during the war. The conflict may not be of the sword, but will certainly be a tumult one bred of taxation.

Speedy Dissolution Asked For.

LONDON, June 11.—In the house of commons last night Mr. Gladstone said that as a consequence of the result of the vote on Monday night he had advised the queen to dissolve parliament without delay and order a new section. Her majesty had graciously assented to this proposition, and in these circumstances he would ask the house to wind up the business of the session with as much celerity as was consistent with a due regard to the interests of the empire.

TYPOGRAPHICAL CONVENTION.

A Novel Plan for Raising a Fund Adopted.

PITTSBURG, June 11.—The International Typographical union has finally decided to allow subordinate lodges to vote on the question of reducing the working day to nine hours, between February and April 1, 1887.

The committee on strikes amended the laws so that all strikes shall be investigated and arbitrated by an executive council composed of the president, chief organizer and two subordinate lodge delegates, and recommended that membership of the strike fund be made compulsory.

The committee appointed to devise a plan whereby the minority not gift of Messrs. Childs and Drexel could be put to the best possible use will recommend that the $50,000 remain invested for the space of five years. On the next birthday of George W. Childs it is proposed that every union printer working in union office east of the Mississippi river shall send up 1,000 ems, the proceeds of which shall go into this fund. Next when the birthday of Anthony Drexel arrives, every union printer west of the Mississippi river shall do the same, and then a very handsome sum not far short of $50,000 will have been raised. With this it is in contemplation to erect in Philadelphia a beautiful hall which shall be known as the home of the craft.

HIS RETENTION ASKED.

Prominent Philadelphians Ask for Assistant Treasurer Eyster.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—A petition, bearing 108 signatures of the most prominent officials and business men of this city, has been filed with President Cleveland at Washington, praying for the retention of United States Assistant Treasurer Eyster, whose commission expires in July next. It says that during the long and trying period in which he has satisfactorily performed the duties of this position so confined himself to the diligent and effective performance of his duties that, although as he does not appeal, as a partisan might, to the active assistance of any political party, nor is he likely to urge his own reappointment by any personal solicitation. In your judgment, which we believe is that of this community, the public interest would not be promoted and might be seriously endangered by any change which would remove Mr. Eyster from his office."

Among the signers are Governor Pattison, W. B. Smith, mayor of Philadelphia, and sundry other public officials, with many private citizens.

FREE TRADE AND PROTECTION.

Congress Relieved of Further Responsibility by Yale Alumni.

NEW HAVEN, June 11.—The "Yale '86 Class Book" will be placed on sale on Saturday. The material in the book, though similar to that in the book of statistics, is made up in quite a different order. The sentiment on the tariff question shows a remarkable break in the free trade ranks since the Yale class book was issued. A recapitulation of the statistics gathered on the tariff question is given below:

Republicans — Protectionists, 59; free traders, 20; undecided, 6. Total, 96.

Democrats—Free traders, 19; protectionists, 1; undecided, 3. Total, 23.

Independents — Free traders, 11; undecided, 10. Total, 21.

Opinions Formed at Yale—Protectionists, 22; free traders 17. Total, 40.

In the graduating class of last year there were 58 free traders, 44 protectionists and 21 undecided.

A Tannery Shut Down.

LOWELL, MASS., June 11.—For the past few months the employes of Avery, Madden & Bigelow's tannery have been dissatisfied with their pay and with monthly payments. When their efforts to benefit their condition failed, the leading officers of the Knights of Labor in Lowell consented to lead their aid. After considerable negotiation a price list, presented by the Knights, was accepted by the firm, which, however, does not consider the prices fair and says they have discharged all their help and shut down to await a better demand for goods.

An Editor's Satire Held as Libel.

BIRMINGHAM, CONN., June 11.—John H. Floyd, proprietor of the Sentinel, a weekly, was bound over to the July term of the superior court by Judge Platt on a charge of criminal libel. On May 26 William Holmes and a brother named William McGinnis had a wordy war in front of the Derby Silver company's shop. Floyd wrote up the affair as a prize fight, and printed an account of the alleged battle.

Neither Man Whipped.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Jos Eling sworth and Jack Fogarty fought ten rounds with gloves at the Oakland avenue skating rink, Jersey City, last night, for 75 and 25 per cent of the gate receipts. In the first five rounds they were cautious and scientific. In the sixth round the real fighting commenced. At the close of the tenth round both men were tired, and the referee declared the fight a draw.

A Prisoner Rescued.

CALAIS, Me., June 11.—Three masked men presented themselves at the station house, overpowered the officer in charge at the point of a revolver, released William Buckley of this city, under a charge of embezzlement on a Lynn, Mass., warrant, and escaped with him to the province. Buckley is the man who was recently entrapped in this city and arrested by an American detective.

OHIO DEMOCRATS

Decide to Hold Their State Convention at Toledo.

COLUMBUS, O., June 11.—The state Democratic central committee met here yesterday, with twenty of the twenty-one districts represented. Hon. George L. Converse was called out, and he said that there were only two questions to be decided by this meeting, and they were as to the time and place of holding the convention. The speaker thought that the first thing to do was to hold an early convention and to hold it in the city of Columbus. Mr. Converse also said that there were a number of questions that could be made issues during the coming campaign. He, in a general way, reviewed the condition of the oleomargarine bill in congress and the wool question.

Col. W. W. Armstrong made an eloquent appeal to the Democrats to have an early convention and hold the same at Cleveland. Maj. Forbes was the next speaker, and he said Toledo was the place to hold the convention. He said that the sentiment of the committee would be taken care of by the local committee of that city. Senator Dodd also made a strong speech in favor of Toledo.

At 4:30 p. m. the committee met to ballot on the location of a place for holding the state convention. On the ninth ballot Toledo received the prize, getting 11 of the 20 votes. The time fixed is Aug. 5. The apportionment of delegates is left as it has been, one delegate to every 500 votes cast for the last Democratic candidate for governor and one for every fraction of over 250 or over. The meeting was quiet.

Burying Hawaiian Islands.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 11.—A statement published here revives the rumor of the proposed sale of the Hawaiian islands to a syndicate of European capitalists for $9,000,000. A bill was recently introduced by the Hawaiian government authorizing a loan of $2,000,000. It is stated that a number of native legislators are ready with a amendment making the amount $10,000,000. Mr. Hoffman, agent for the transportation of Portuguese to the islands, has secured the king that a syndicate of European capitalists are ready to furnish the money. If this were consummated it would virtually mean the sale of the islands, as the amount could never be repaid by the Hawaiian government. It is stated that the king is not averse to the proposition so long as he secures the greater part of the money.

The Day We Celebrate.

WOODSTOCK, CONN., June 10.—For the Fourth of July celebration at Roseland park the following programme is announced: Address of welcome by Congressman H. H. Ward, of Connecticut. Address, as president of the day, by Senator Joseph R. Hawley. Senator Edmunds will speak on "Liberty of Labor." Gen. Horace Porter, of New York, on "Powers of Example," Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor, on "The Ballot." Howard K. Carroll, Ll. D., of New York, on "Powers of Expansion." Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor, on "The Ballot." Howard K. Carroll, LL. D., of New York, on "Powers of Expansion." Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor, on "The Republic of the Future." Hon. Levi W. Mead, on "The Arctic Regions." Hon. Levi P. Morton, on "Allies of the Revolution." Gen. Sheridan will also make an address, and poems will be read by Louise Chandler Moulton and ex-President Hill, of Harvard college.

At Boston—Boston, 2; New York, 0. One of the most remarkable games ever played on the South End grounds was that of yesterday. There were no errors outside of the batteries.

Gen. Badeau's Case.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The court of claims has adjourned until Oct. 1 without deciding upon Gen. Badeau's case. It is likely that, no matter what the decision may be, it will eventually go to the supreme court, as the question involved is the very important one of whether an officer can be restored to the army except by an act of congress.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—For the middle Atlantic states, fair weather and stationary temperature may be expected.

PAINTING A WAR PICTURE.

Collecting the Material for a "Panorama"—Col. Fred Grant's Photograph.

"In painting a war picture the artist must first secure a battle of national interest and with a certain dramatic value of its own. To secure the utmost realism is half of collecting the material. The soldiers who take part in a great engagement often represent almost every locality in the country. All these sources must be drawn upon. One cannot afford to be mistaken in a single instance. It would be detected the very first time an old soldier who was in the fight visited the picture.

"But to make you understand I will tell you how I collected the material for the siege of Vicksburg. Mr. Morgan is now finishing. First I obtained a pass to the war department at Washington, D. C., and collected every photograph and sketch pertaining to that fight. I also obtained copies of the roll call of all the Federals engaged in the battle. To 28,000 of these men I sent circular letters requesting them to send me their full names, age, weight, height, and a photograph. Thousands of these letters have been answered. It they were all collected they would fill a large room. I frankly believe it would be the most interesting and most unique contribution to the history of the rebellion extant.

"A few days ago I wrote to Col. Fred Grant asking him to send me a photograph of his father at the age when he was at the battle of Vicksburg with his father. Yesterday his letter arrived, and, inclosing his picture, representing a lad of 13. She writes: 'Dear General. Inclosed find a photograph of Col. Fred Grant at the age he was at the battle of Vicksburg with his father, Gen. Grant. It is the only one we have of him while at that age, and, as his mother prizes it very much, do not kindly return it when your great picture is finished.'

"Here is the photograph of four men all standing in a row on crutches. You will notice that each man has lost his left leg. They wrote me a letter stating that they were all engaged in the battle of Vicksburg, all were from the same neighborhood, all knew each other, and all lost their left leg. Now isn't that a bit of remarkable war history"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Race of Bald Heads.

A race of hairless Americans is threatened. It has been estimated that already one half the adult male of American birth living in our cities are bald, and baldness is extremely liable to be propagated in the male line, and to appear a little earlier in each successive generation.—Boston Budget

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading and passage at the meeting of the Council to adopt the same.

RICHARD MERRITT, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., June 7, 1886.

AN ORDINANCE.

To macadamize, by spreading crushed stone, Broad street, between Hillside avenue and Belvidere avenue.

Whereas, the owners of property fronting on Broadway, between Hillside avenue and Belvidere avenue, have petitioned for the macadamizing of Broadway as hereinafter directed, and have agreed to pay one-third of the cost of the work and macadamizing and the costs and expenses thereof in such sums and amounts as in all to four hundred and twenty-five dollars ($425);

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That Broadway from the easterly side of Hillside avenue to the easterly side of Belvidere avenue for the width of sixty feet, that is to say, for the width of eight feet on either side of the centre line of said Broadway be and the same is hereby ordered to be macadamized by spreading crushed stone for the average depth of four inches, and rolled and stone to be of good quality, to be thoroughly laid and compacted and properly rolled with a steam roller, and the surface shall be smooth and even. All of said work and macadamizing to be done under the supervision of the Street Commissioner.

SECTION 2. That the owners of property fronting on Broadway, between Hillside avenue and Belvidere avenue shall pay or cause to be paid into the City Treasury the sum of four hundred and twenty-five dollars, said owners having agreed so to do, and after applying such sum toward the payment of the cost of such macadamizing hereinbefore described, the remainder of such cost shall be at the general expense of the city and as provided by Chapter CXXII of the laws of New Jersey for the year 1884.

Fees, $5.80.

An Ordinance Concerning Dogs!

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That during the month of June, July, August and September of each and every year, and such other periods of time as the Mayor shall by proclamation direct, due notice to be given by the Chief of Police, it shall be unlawful to run at large within the City of Plainfield unless a good and sufficient muzzle shall be placed over the mouth of such dog in such manner as to prevent it from biting, and any person who shall permit or suffer any dog owned or harbored by him to run at large unmuzzled at any time during said months or such periods of time to be designated as aforesaid shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine not exceeding ten dollars.

SECTION 2. That it shall be the duty of every police officer during the said months or periods of time designated as aforesaid to kill any dog found running at large unmuzzled, and every dog he shall find in the City of Plainfield running at large without a muzzle, as required in the first section of this ordinance, and such police officer shall receive the sum of twenty-five cents for every dog so killed by him. And said police officer is hereby directed to take charge of every dog so killed by him, and to bury or cause the same to be buried, for which he shall receive no fee.

SECTION 3. That all ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent with the terms of this ordinance and contrary thereto, be the same are hereby repealed.

Adopted June 7th, 1886.

Approved June 8th, 1886.

CLARK BUTTERFIELLOW, Mayor.

Attest: RICHARD MERRITT, City Clerk.

Fees, $5.80.

per annum. There is nothing indefinite about this policy issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an examination. There are no medical fees, dues or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for $10,000, and the solvency of the contract is backed by assets of over $600,000. The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its contracts, and has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $262,182.75 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The great reduction in premium will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial backing, as mentioned in the above, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. # CLEVELAND'S WEDDING.

OUR CORRESPONDENT AND SPECIAL ARTIST DESCRIBE IT.

Married in the Blue Room—An Unkissed Bride—Mother-in-Law Folsom. They Couldn't Fool the Reporters—The Bride Been Not Promise to Obey.

Frank Clara Folsom is the first bride of a president who was ever married in the White House. It was probably her pretty, girlish with that the wedding should take place there. It was what a girl would naturally have. The president seems to have yielded to her wishes in almost everything, much more indeed than was to have been expected from a bachelor of his nature, years and dignity.

All the world knows by this time whether it was Miss or Mrs. Folsom that the president was going to marry. But there are many things more all the world would like to know, which, unfortunately it will probably never find out. For instance, where and how was the courting done, and when was the question popped? That's what an admiring country would like to know.

There was private secretary Col. Daniel Lamont. He has proved himself worth his weight in gold. He superintended the president's wedding trousseau, as the funny papers called it. He decided just the shade of silk gray that predominated in the dressing gown, the exact width of the diagonal ribbed stripe in the wedding trousers. Dan'l met the bride down by the way, took her to the Gilsey house, in New York, and then hurried back to Washington to see that the dining room was in order and in the proper place. Dan'l got the license and saw the minister. He coached the president about the proper time to put the ring upon the bride's finger. Now, the query arises, Didn't Dan'l pop the question, too? Grover never had any practice in these little matters.

The person who married the pair was Dr. Sunderland, the president's pastor, a Presbyterian and a Republican.

REV. DR. BYRON SUNDERLAND

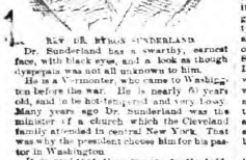
Dr. Sunderland has a smooth, earnest face, with black eyes, and a look as though dyspepsia was not all unknown to him.

He is a Vermonter, who came to Washington before the war. He is nearly 70 years old, and is hot-tempered and very lowy. Many years ago Dr. Sunderland was the minister of a church which the Cleveland family attended in Fayetteville, New York. That was why the president chose him for his pastor in Washington.

It is said that the presents to the bride amount to not less than $100,000. One diamond necklace is said to be worth $15,000. A newspaper reporter writes that the Tiffany's said that Tuesday, June 1, was the biggest day in the history of the firm, that all the foreign ministers and cabinet officers seemed to be buying presents at once. But nobody knows whether this is true or not.

The reporters got hold of the style of stationery used by Miss Franklin, and described it in their graphic way. The paper is smooth, large and pure white. The president's bride does not affect the monumental little colored note paper that so many girls are devoted to. But the main point is that it is that the young lady uses a coat of arms, and has it stamped upon her paper. How's that for Jeffersonian simplicity? Send the gomips. Well, there is really nothing unrepublican about the use of a coat of arms. It only shows one's descent, that one had ancestors who could be run back. It is merely an interesting record of family history, nothing more.

Mrs. Cleveland's heraldic device is a blue shield bearing the letter "F" upon it. Above the "F" is a golden cross with outstretched wings Underneath the shield is the Latin motto, "Ubi aperit ibi mel." Translated it means "Where the bees are there is honey."



COAT OF ARMS

The night before her wedding Miss Folsom, with her mother and cousin, Miss Perham, traveled from New York to Washington to meet her president bridegroom, after the fashion of Jefferson Davis and other great persons. In the gray of the morning the snow-white dome of the Capitol loomed into sight to Frank Clara, as sweet a bride as ever the sun shone upon. Just think of it, a girl as ought to be first lady in a republic. If you have read the proceedings of her arrival at the White House, you must travel with a maid or even a nasty little lap dog.

Best of all, when she was getting ready to leave the New York hotel for Washington, she left her wedding trinkets behind her, even fair, independent hands. It is a credit to her. It is as there is none of the silly shob about her, though as far as we know

Our picture is a copy of the very last photograph of her, in her beautiful wedding gown. It that wedding dress is a further index of her character. She is none more Grover and the country are to be congratulated. It was in exquisite taste, simple and dignified. It was a very rich corded ivory white satin with a plain rounded train five yards long.

The train flowed plain in two organ plaits from the waist, and had no trimming around the edge of the superb satin. Before, there is a short apron-front draping of India silk of the same color. A narrow band of orange buds borders this apron.

fastened upon the right hip. At the shoulder seams two exquisitely fine scarfs of India muslin begin. They cross upon the breast, and are tucked under the satin lappel. They are bordered with orange buds. The sleeves reach just below the elbow, and are trimmed with bands of the muslin. A tiny bouquet of orange buds is fastened on the inner side of the arm at the elbow.

Then there was an enormously long veil—six yards long, of fine white tulle. Where it is fastened upon the head there is a bunch of orange flowers and myrtle. The veil flows back and covers the entire train. That was all there was of this exquisite wedding gown; no flubbery, no cutting up into jags and dabs of trimming, but just plain and beautifully flowing, like the garments of a goddess.

The main length of the White House is east and west. Just inside the north front runs a long corridor. Through this corridor the public are admitted at present. At the east end of this is one staircase, at its west end another. From the large room overhead, from the west staircase, came the bride and groom to be joined in holy matrimony. It was a royal sight. The stately looking president, in tight fitting, perfect evening dress, his fine looking, well built person, escorted his fair girl bride down the steps. Her train was so long that it swept the stairs almost from the top.

DOWN THE STAIRCASE.

In its superb style the pair moved eastward along the grand corridor, till they came to the Blue parlor. It gets its name because it is furnished in blue. Here the guests were grouped. There were not many—only twenty-six persons in all, the cabinet ministers and their wives, and a few relatives. Two of the cabinet ladies were secretary of State Bayard and Secretary of the Interior Lamar. The other cabinet officers came with their wives, who were all exiles and were beautifully dressed. These two—Lamar and Bayard—came each alone. Each, particularly Secretary Bayard, looked serious and a little lonesome. He discomfited soon from his carriage and went up the broad front steps.

There was no procession of relatives and bridesmaids attending the stately pair. Alone they went along the corridor, alone they stood under the chandelier in front of Dr. Sunderland. The Red room is next west of the Blue room. From the door of the Red room our skilful artist made a hurried, though very correct, sketch. As the bridal pair stood to be married their backs were toward the corridor; their faces toward the south. They faced a wonderful and fairy like structure of flowers.

For the information of the young ladies it may be mentioned that the word "obey" was not included in the bride's part of the vows. The service was the same for both, except that when Grover, the young man, promised to "cherish," Frankie promised to "honor."

It is noticeable that while there were several widows and single women present at the ceremony, there were only two bachelors. One was Mr. Ben. Folsom, the bride's cousin, the other was Mr. Stan. Hassell, the president's former partner in Buffalo. He has as big a double chin as the president himself, and is said to have beamed upon the happy occasion "with a smile that weighed a pound."

Rev. William Cleveland, the president's brother, from up in New York state, assisted at the ceremony, though Dr. Sunderland didn't seem to need much help, and there is every reason to believe he tied the knot good and strong.

Reports of the wedding ceremony were obtained from that good and helpful man, Col. Dan Lamont, and they were much complimented. May every president who takes a new wife have as useful a private secretary.

To a disinterested observer, the joke of the whole affair was the newspaper young man. Before one is inclined to say hard words of their "cousin," as we call it, look at the thing. You public, particularly you feminine public, read every word about the wedding before you got your breakfast, didn't you? You men, freedom say you didn't just "glanced over it" as you rode down town to business. You know you did. There were tremendous sales of the daily papers next morning after the wedding, and somebody must have bought them. Newspaper people know by experience what the dear public likes to read. They mean to supply the want, for that is how they make their living. If reporters did not have "cheek," as you call it, and persistence and dauntless courage and heroic physical endurance, you would not get your news, and they would not get their bread and butter. A reporter who would not have hung around and spied on and dogged everybody about the White House would have lost his place without a moment's notice.

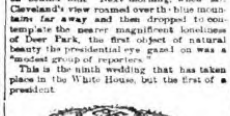
It was not the newspaper men's fault that this disgreeable work had to be done. The square, pleasant thing, and the thing for the president to do, would have been to have the marriage announcements, yes, even the route selected for the wedding journey, given in the newspapers in a few simple words, before the event took place. Even private citizens who are in any way prominent do that. A simple, dignified request, that for once during his term of office, the president of the United States would like to be in quiet and privacy as much as possible, would have been sufficient. The people are loyal enough to him, and kindly enough to have respected his wishes, and he would have enjoyed far more privacy than he got, as it was.

THE CEREMONY.

He had planned to slip out the back way with his new wife, jump into a carriage which wasn't the ordinary White House one, and get off to the Baltimore and Ohio special train which waited to take the pair to Deer Park, Md., before the newspaper men even got "get on to it." Bind man! Did he think to fool the newspapers! The correspondents made a cordon around the White House grounds, and watched every slit where a pig could crawl through.

When the bride had just tasted the supper and taken a bit of the wedding cake, she changed her royal gown for one to travel in, and she and her new husband darted out the back gate and into the carriage that waited for them. It took an "escort" all the way route to the station. But fifty newspaper men were too many to be fooled. Those who stood guard had cabs waiting at every entrance. They made common cause in pursuit of their aim. Every time a carriage, whose occupants were not seen plainly and recognized, left the grounds, a young man with a note book and pencil hidden somewhere about him sprang lightly and sweetly into a cab and followed that carriage to its destination. So you see how impossible it would have been to do anything without the knowledge of the press. The train next after the special one by which the president traveled whirled the fifty journalists right on behind him. Next morning, when Mr. Cleveland's view roamed over the blue mountains far away and then dropped to contemplate the more magnificent loneliness of Deer Park, the first object of natural beauty the presidential eye gazed on was a hundred pair of reporters.

This is the ninth wedding that has taken place in the White House, but the first of a president.



WEDDING CAKE.

The wedding cake weighed twenty-five pounds. Three hundred exquisite little satin-lined boxes were manufactured, with a hand painted monogram "C. F." inside. These were to contain the wedding cake that was to be sent away for girls to dream on. The large wedding cake measured seven and one half feet around. Poor Miss Cleveland, who, with Col. Dan Lamont, remained at the White House to put things to rights after the ceremony, was indeed almost out of her life by requests for wedding cake. Hundreds of person persistently presented claims that they did not have the shadow of for this favor. Among those most importunate were school girls and congressmen's wives. School girls, of course, one expects to be silly, but congressmen's wives!

MOTHER-IN-LAW FOLSOM

Here with is an authentic picture of Mrs. Folsom. Frankie's mother. It is from a photograph by Mr. M. Michael of Buffalo. Mrs. Folsom does not really look more than ten years younger than her son-in-law. She still wears her widow's cap and mourning for the late Oscar. She changed her black to lavender silk on the occasion of her daughter's wedding. She is said to be small and shrinking, while her daughter is tall and stately.

There was one sad omission at this otherwise beautiful wedding. The husband did not kiss his new wife after the ceremony. Nobody kissed her, nobody at all. Rose Elizabeth reached up and saluted the president's sample cheek, but that was all the osculation there was. Now, the spectacle of an unkissed bride is a sad one. Perhaps she liked it that fashion, but it was no sort of way for any right-minded girl to do.

SARAH KING.

WASHINGTON, June 3, 1886.

THE HONEYMOON AT DEER PARK.

Newspaper Men Give Chase to the Flieing Bridal Couple—The Cottage.

DEER PARK, Md., June 5.—Your correspondent needs no further proof of the nobleness and manly properties of the air up here, near the top of the Alleghenies, than his own experience gives him. On leaving Washington the night of the wedding, in company with other correspondents who had gone through the strain of watching and hurrying and working during that ordeal for the newspaper men, we had reached Deer Park at 4 o'clock when sleep seemed impossible. To add to our excitement, we were engaged in a railroad chase of the bride's couple, who had one hour the start of us. We were not certain of their destination. All the indications pointed to Deer Park, but there had been so many statements and movements made in last at Deer Park, about 270 miles from Washington, but before reaching there, and while the train was climbing up the steep inclines, the somnolent effect of the mountain air was felt by the newspaper party, and the first day was given up wholly to uncontrollable sleep.

Besides the salubrity of the atmosphere at this great altitude, the president's first idea in coming to Deer Park was, of course, to find a spot as secure as Long Branch. The beauty of this place he has shown considerable good judgment, for certainly he could have found few places in America so utterly quiet and devoid of interest to any but those placed in the same position as himself. Few trains stop here, and even should a venturesome traveler or office-seeker make his way thither, he would have hard work keeping alive or awake while waiting to see the president. A cordon of railway detectives surrounds his cottage constantly, and no one is permitted to approach nearer than 150 yards under any pretence whatever unless he be recognized as a servant having business there. It is out of the question to attempt to get a card or letter to the chief executive unless it comes in the regular course of the mails or over the wires.

THE COTTAGE AT DEER PARK.

The cottage occupied by the president and his bride is situated in a southeasterly direction from the hotel and about 300 yards from it. Architecturally it is an American modification of the Queen Anne style, two and one-half stories high, with steep sloping roof, and piazza extending half way round the north end of it. On the first floor are a parlor, sitting room, dining room and kitchen. A broad staircase in the center of the house leads to the floor above, where are four bedrooms. The bridal chamber on this floor is a room twenty feet square in the northeast corner of the building, and from its windows a splendid view for a distance of mountain peaks is obtained. The furniture of the cottage is of the description usually found in cot ages at summer retreats, bent rattan chairs with satin ribbons and pretty matting. The room contains richly carved rosewood and black walnut furniture.

Since their arrival the bridal couple have taken numerous drives over the mountain roads and some few strolls, on which occasions it was noticeable that the president walked with a light, sprightly step, such as he never used in Washington.

PERRY BARTON.

THE PRESIDENT'S COUNTRY HOME.

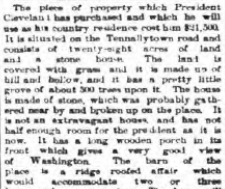
The Summer House Recently Purchased For President Cleveland and Bride.

The piece of property which President Cleveland has purchased, which he will use as his country residence cost him $21,500. It is situated on the Tennallytown road and consists of twenty-eight acres of land and a two story house. The land is covered with grass and it is made up of hill and hollow, and it has a pretty little grove of young trees on it. The house is made of stone, which was probably gathered near by and broken up on the place. It is not an extravagant house, and has not half enough room for the president as it is now. It has a long wooden porch in its front which gives a very good view of Washington. The barn of the place is a large roofed affair, which would accommodate two or three horses and a cow or two. The house will have to be lighted by candles or oil, without the president makes his own gas or digs a gas well. The water comes from a well and a cistern, and there will be enough room for fruit and garden truck. The land, however, is rather poor. Tennallytown road, on which the house is located, leads directly north from Georgetown college.



PRETTY PROSPECT.

President Cleveland's new home is called "Pretty Prospect." And it will. When he has improved it, be one of the pleasantest country seats in the United States. He bought it of Mr. R. Green Forrest, whose family has been owned for the last 100 years. Green's grandfather was Uriah Forrest, who was on Washington's staff during the revolution, and who died in 1805. He was possessed a large fortune by acting as a commission merchant for the Maryland tobacco planters in England. He was probably a millionaire during the revolutionary days and among his speculations were a large amount of property in Washington and a great deal of land surrounding that now owned by the president. After Forrest came back from England he became interested with Robert Morris, the great financier, and when Morris failed in 1797 he lost his property except that which the president has purchased. Not far from it is Whitney's country seat, and there are very pleasant looking cottages lining the road between it and Georgetown.

One drive from this place leads out through the fashionable north west. You can go past the house of Blaine and Edmunds, getting a glimpse of Dan Rice, where John Howard Payne lies buried, and Kalorama, where Robert Fulton experimented with his steamboat, and out into the country.

—Thursday was the day fixed by Judge McCormick to hear argument of counsel in the application for a new trial for Frederick DeBaun of Rahway, who was last week convicted in the Union County Court of Quarter Sessions of stealing the two horses, carriages, harness from Rahway, and on account of other heightened features the Judge postponed the hearing indefinitely.

—The following invitation has been issued by the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union of this place to the legislative entertainment of to-day to be given during the session:—"Your presence is requested at the first anniversary and reception of the Y. W. C. T. U. of Plainfield, on Thursday evening, June 17th, at eight o'clock, at the Union Club House, Broadway and Fourth street. Refreshments will be served. Music by the Quartette."

Killed by Falling from a Gondola.

About half-past one o'clock this afternoon Jacob Snyder, a man employed by Charles H. Gill in the construction of a new house on Fifth street for Wilson Madden, fell from a scaffold, erected at the foot of the roof to the ground below, striking on the back of his head, killing him instantly. The men had been engaged on the roof of the building and had finished the work assigned to him, when descending by the scaffold in the rear of the building he is supposed to have been overcome by the heat, and, losing his balance, fell backward to the ground, striking his head on some heavy beams which were lying at the bottom. When the unfortunate man was picked from the ground the back of the head was found to have been crushed to a jelly, while the fingers on the hands had been twisted and broken. Dr. Toulmeen was immediately summoned, but his services were of no avail. The body of the unfortunate man was then placed in a box and taken to A. M. Runyon & Son's undertaking establishment on Park avenue and County Physician Green of Elizabeth telegraphed for, but on the hour of going to press he had not arrived.

Deceased was an old resident of Somerville and had been employed here but a little over a week. He boarded at Mrs. Bowman's on West Front street, and it was said to be his intention to return to his home this evening and spend Sunday with his wife and five children. He came to this city unhanged was dispatched to Somerville on the first train to break the sad news to his family.

Before Justice Matthews.

Two cases of assault and battery came up before Justice Matthews in the Borough yesterday afternoon. The first case was that of Louis Kuntz vs. Anna Hand, in which the defendant was charged with assaulting the plaintiff by striking the complainant on the head with a stone. Louis Kuntz, the complainant, was the only witness put on the stand. He testified to having gone to the house of John Hand on Monday evening for the purpose of paying the rent due Mr. Hand for rent; he was met at the door by Mrs. Hand, who began to abuse him. The defence had no witness to testify, and the Justice held Mrs. Hand in $20 bonds to appear before the Grand Jury at Somerville in the December term of court.

The second case was that of Mrs. Anna Hand vs. Louis Kuntz. This case was the outgrowth of the fuss between the two parties named in the foregoing case. Mrs. Hand entered a counter-charge against the defendant for assault and battery. Kuntz, the only witness produced in court, testified to having worked all day during Monday; he had been saving the money with which he intended to cancel a debt due Mr. Hand, and had gone to the latter on the Monday night in question to make the payment. As there was no direct cause for action against the accused Justice Matthew fined Kuntz the costs of the prosecution, $4.50, which he paid.

Found Dead in Bed.

At an early hour this morning Mrs. Sarah A. Becker, an aged lady, was found dead in bed at the house of Mr. A. H. Allen, who resides on the place known as the "Brokaw Farm" on the road leading to Washington Rock, in North Plainfield township. Mrs. Brokaw, who was 61 years old at the time of her death, had until within the last three months been employed with her nephew, Mr. K. F. Drake, of Somerset Place, in the Borough. Since that time she has been living as companion to Mr. Allen's invalid daughter, who was at to Mrs. Becker's room early this morning to arouse her, but failing to receive an answer to her repeated knocks at the room and found the dead body, as stated. Deceased had apparently enjoyed good health of late and retired last night at her accustomed hour feeling quite well. In former years a physician had treated her for heart trouble, and it is supposed that it assigned to heart disease. County Physician Wagner of Somerville was sent for last night in the hour of going to press the result of the examination is not known.

Close of the Reformed Synod.

The General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, which has been in session at New Brunswick for the past nine days, closed its session at noon yesterday. The Board of Directors commenced with its synod, reconvening that a committee of five be appointed to investigate the affairs of the Reformed Church uniting with the German Reformed, and the following were placed upon the list: W. J. R. Taylor, J. A. De Baun, J. Rinsmeier, W. H. Bookstaver and E. J. Miller. The Board also advised that the next Sunday in June, 1887, be set apart as Children's Day. The next meeting of the synod will be held at Catskill, New York, on the first Wednesday in June, 1887, beginning at three o'clock in the afternoon.

Insurance Awarded.

The various contracts for enlarging and putting in repair the Union County Jail at Elizabeth have been awarded as follows: The amount of the bids will not be made known until the contracts are signed next week: Freeman T. Wheeler, mason work; Samuel Ryman, carpenter work, for the accommodation of the male department; Theodore B. Budd, carpenter work, alteration of female department; Van Steinburg & Clark of Newark, stone work; Essex Iron Company, Newark, iron work; John Seton, Brooklyn, skylight. The additions will have twelve to the present number of the present structure, and will have 44 new cells. The masonry character of the female portion of the jail is to be rendered. The total expenditure will be about $15,000.

Southard Cement Notes.

An action upon contract brought by Griffin vs. DeCamp which came to be for trial on the following Monday before Justice Bush Thursday morning was settled out of court.

In the debt action of Gilliman vs. O'Donnell, Justice Bush Thursday rendered judgment for the plaintiff for the amount for the debt and costs of suit, the latter amounting to $17.50, judgment upon $9.50 costs.

An Appeal for Fare Banner.

The following will explain itself:

National Hotel,
Washington, D. C., June 10, 1886.

To the Farmers of New Jersey:

As you are aware, we are engaged in an active campaign for the nomination of Fare Banner for Governor, and each of the delegates to the State Convention, which meets in Trenton on the 23d inst., is pledged to vote for him on the first ballot. We have secured a number of delegates through the House of Representatives after a long and desperate fight against an organized opposition. Mr. Fare Banner is entirely free from all entanglements, and is the choice of the people of New Jersey for Governor. The result of our every effort depends upon the selection of delegates to the State Convention who are absolutely free to vote for Fare Banner, therefore, consumers every farmer in the land.

Our Bill has been reported to the Senate, where we have a majority in its behalf pressing on the question of reference to the Committee on Agriculture. Every member of the House of your State supported us with all his power and influence. If Gov. Ross can be induced to understand that the farmers of New Jersey are in earnest in this measure, I, therefore, urge that every farmer in the State write to Governor Ross, and request him to appoint Fare Banner delegate to-morrow, and vote for it, and do this at once, as it is already to the names of thousands of farmers in letters and petitions praying for the passage of this Bill. Should he fail to do so, as many parties are justly anxious that Mr. Farmer should be right on this question, so it is my native State and your humble servant.

Very respectfully yours,
James H. Beale, President
American Agricultural and Dairy Ass'n.

That Cranny.

The Japanese Cranny to be given at the Park Avenue Baptist Church on Tuesday evening by the Sunbeam Department of the Sabbath school, will consist of music, recitations and tableaux. The various numbers are being selected with great care, and this portion of the entertainment, it is said, will be well worth hearing. The costumes will be on the order of Noble Patriots, adding largely to the general effect. Refreshments will be served, and that native patriotism may not be forgotten in the Centennial year, Tuesday will be a large supply on hand of regular genuine Occidental lemonade, cake and ice cream. The grocery, by the way, is patronized ad generis and nothing like it has ever yet been seen outside of the walls of Yedo. The price of admission is 25 cents, a trifle when the fact by being on hand on Tuesday evening.

Lost a Toe.

Daniel Regan, an employee of the Potter Press Works, was engaged cutting steel at the works on Thursday afternoon, when a hammer used in cutting hard metals came down with such force upon the bar of steel placed in position beneath it that the steel broke, and the iron bed of the lower part falling on the right foot of Mr. Regan, crushing three of the toes in a horrible manner. The wounded man was taken to the office of Liberty street, and Drs. Bullock and Rome summoned. It was found necessary to amputate one of the toes in order to save the others. The wound is very painful and will confine Mr. Regan to the house for some weeks to come.

Union County Courts.

Before court adjourned on Thursday John M. Price of Rahway was tried for assault and battery. The jury was out all night, and having failed to agree were discharged by Judge Scudder until yesterday morning.

Emma Bokes, a young colored girl, pleaded guilty to stealing a watch from her employer and was sent to the Reform School.

Westfield.

Bellerophon Wheelmen will send a team to contest for prizes offered at the wheelmen's race on Saturday at Irvington.

Mr. E. Embree and Wm. Delamater were elected trustees at the annual meeting of the Congregational Society on Wednesday night.

A large number of the Baptists attended the convention of the State Association at Rahway on Wednesday. Rev. Mr. Fuller of Westfield, Matthias Towsley, Charles Quibby and Edward Bokaw being among the number.

The Bellerophons will have an evening parade next Tuesday night. Invitations have been extended to the R. B. of Roselle, P. R. G. of Plainfield and the Y. M. C. A. of Elizabeth to participate. This will be the last one Consul Kinch will participate in for some months.

Oliver Cheshire, who is in the habit of inebriating too much, was arrested on Wednesday while attending the circus. Leaving his wife and children, and an amount of his particular spleen a few days ago, and refusing to return home, he was left to his sad fate by Friday afternoon, when his wife, finding all wife who, although urged time and time again to make a complaint, refused to do so; but on Friday afternoon, after a search, she took the matter in charge and lodged a complaint against him. Justice Matthews, before whom he immediately appeared, fined him $10 and sent him to the county jail for seven days.

State Notes.

Mrs. Lillegore, wife of T. W. Lillegore of Orange, Grove Camp Meeting Association, and the only proprietor of the house of her entertainment, died yesterday.

James Rogan, a five-year-old boy, fell into the canal at the Borgan Point plank road, Jersey City, yesterday, Mary Brightwell, a young girl, jumped in after him and succeeded in rescuing him. The children were both drowning when a boatman rescued them.

John Anderson, age seven of No. 122 Garden street, Paterson, while walking on the tracks of the Erie Railroad, was struck by a Railroad train yesterday and received injuries that will result in his death. The engine crushed in his skull and broke his left leg. He was taken to the house and a physician called, but he died from exhaustion. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital in a critical condition.

SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1886.

The National Cemetery at Antietam.

It is proposed to convert the National cemetery at Antietam into a national park, to be adorned with the monuments of the respective warriors who bore the blue or the gray. It is known that 4,667 union soldiers lie buried there, and that 1,836 have been made by fourteen states, amounting to $65,-250. The remains of the Confederates who fell there have been removed from Hill cemetery near Hagerstown, Maryland. The plat of the cemetery is that of a semi-ellipse, divided into equal sections of circles, sections of circles, and sections of rectangles, according to the number of the dead from different states. Every division is marked by a letter, and the graves are numbered in regular order. A wall of masonry drive extends through the ground, from which run in every direction avenues ready and well macadamized. The avenues are beautifully kept, and near the entrance stands a lodge, which is occupied by the keeper, and is also used for the office of the superintendent. In the center of the cemetery stands the colossal granite statue of an American soldier, twenty-one feet and six inches high, standing at parade rest, with the right hand resting on the musket held from his left shoulder. The whole structure stands forty-four feet and seven inches above the level of the ground.—"Perley's" Washington Letter.

The Biggest Week in America.

Professor Bonelle-Lemoine holds that the greatest forward step witnessed on the globe must have been that of the Pacific coast in the year 1886. The great mountain volcanoes of the present age, Mount Etna and Mount Dungay, have surrounded themselves with lava-fields varying from ten to fifty feet in depth, and covering a combined area of half a hundred square miles. But the peculiarity is that there is no lava here at its source or anywhere near it. The area of the Cascade range, Oregon, has covered a district of 200,000 square miles, with a continuous bed of lava of an average depth of 1,000 feet. All the gold now taken from the valleys of the Klondyke river in northern California to the Okanagan range in British Columbia, has been brought down from the mountains equal in volume to the contents of the five great Canadian lakes and the river system of the Mississippi and Missouri. The gold-bearing drift deposits taken day and night, would have to flow on for half a century to equal the results of the mountain erosion or scour of eruptions.—Dr. Felix Oswald.

Enterprise of a Small Boy.

When the enterprising boy of Smithtown says: "Give me a paper, and it rewarded by the investment promptly with a fragrant penny, he does practically preserve his spirit with an appreciation of its resemblance to his handiwork. He runs to the next street, holds up his trophy, and sells on to the next passer-by: "Want a flavor? One cent."

PARNELL'S STATEMENT.

EARL CARNARVON CONTRADICTED BY THE IRISH LEADER.

The Controversy About a Somewhat Celebrated Interview—The Plans of the Earl for Ireland's Government, as Proposed to Parnell—Other Cable News.

LONDON, June 12.—Mr. Parnell has requested The Cable News to publish the following: "I positively deny that I sought at any time with Lord Carnarvon, and also differ with him in regard to two of the conditions upon which Lord Carnarvon alleges he based an interview, namely: that he was acting upon his own book entirely, and that he declined to hear of any one word which might be construed as detrimental to the union. Lord Carnarvon did not lay any conditions whatever, previous to his conference with me.

"I admit that there is some foundation for the third condition he has mentioned, namely: that I hoped it would be understood that he was not engaged in sucking any treaty or bargain. Lord Carnarvon said he had sought an interview with me in order to ask my views upon the question of a constitution for Ireland, but it soon became obvious that he wished to give his own. Replying to his inquiry respecting a proposal to establish a central legislature in Ireland founded upon the county boards, I said I did not think that the Irish people would accept that as a final settlement; the central body ought to be a parliament in name and in fact, having power to deal with the local government of the counties.

"Lord Carnarvon stated that this was his own view, which statement impressed me as being an important concession to the weight of Irish opinion. He also suggested that the number of Irish participants in Dublin upon the model of the colonial parliamentary bodies. His opinion upon this subject struck me at the moment as being somewhat shady. I stated that the protection of certain Irish industries against English and foreign competition was absolutely necessary.

"Lord Carnarvon replied: 'I entirely agree with you; but what a row there'll be in England!'

"I left Lord Carnarvon believing that we were in complete accord upon the main outlines of the settlement of the question of governing Ireland, and have reason to believe that he entertained his views upon the subject. I also believe that Lord Carnarvon resigned office because we did not give the support to the Tory party at the polls, which he spoke at Wicktow and acted during the elections under the impression which I gained at this interview."

Lord Carnarvon, in an interview with a correspondent, said he did not intend to issue an election manifesto at present. After the dissolution of parliament he will address the electors of Dublin and Cork and fully enunciate his views.

CHAMBERLAIN'S MANIFESTO.

He Appeals to the Prejudices against Landlords.

LONDON, June 12.—Mr. Chamberlain's election manifesto was issued last evening. It says the government's Irish proposals have created a profound sensation in every Liberal statesman of the country. "What the Liberal leaders in Northumberland solemnly and emphatically declared to be the final settlement of the question has been rejected and even the premier has now undertaken. The Irish landlords of all the classes affected are alone subjected to exceptional constitution by the proposals of the government, and every Englishman are told that the act of union was procured by shameful corruption. It is to be hoped that the offer of separation is not to be followed by the most gigantic bribe ever offered to the opponents of any legislation. The alternative proposals increase the number of occupiers of land, establish a complete system of popular local government, alike in its main features, for England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, established, to involve a greater influence in its local administration and in legislation for the special needs and requirements of all, the imperial parliament being reserved over the whole. This will satisfy the national aspirations of England and Scotland. The national aspirations of Ireland are far greater than those, nor are they more entitled to sympathy."

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

United States Vice Consul Shoots His Wife and Himself.

DUBLIN, June 12.—Mr. A. Mackenzie, United States vice consul at Dublin, shot his wife and daughter this morning, lodging a bullet in her temple. He then placed the pistol to his own head and fired a bullet into his brain. Both died where they fell. The tragedy occurred in the presence of their three little children.

Mackenzie's Motives.

BELFAST, June 12.—The respectable Catholics and Orangemen of Belfast have offered to assist the police in repressing the mob and preserving order; but the police have declined the assistance, stating that their assistance would increase the jealousies of the rival parties. The government has issued a proclamation, in which it declares that the disturbances in Belfast are confined to certain districts of Ulster to refrain from violence and observe order.

Mr. Colledge Gets Damages.

LONDON, June 12.—Mr. Colledge, late British consul at Kertch, in the Crimea, has been awarded £1,000 damages. The libel was in consequence of the publication in that paper of a telegram from one of its correspondents alleging that Colledge was at the head of an organization of brigands, the object was to extract vessels in order to obtain salvage upon their cargoes.

Mr. Gladstone's Plans.

LONDON, June 12.—In the house of commons last evening Mr. Gladstone said that when the Irish people had clearly understood that the country had not approved the policy of the government of Ireland, the Tory government of Ireland, or if they should be unable to form a cabinet, or the verdict of the people, parliament would be immediately reassembled.

Our Navy in London.

LONDON, June 12.—Miss Mary Anderson arrived at Liverpool last night, and immediately proceeded to London.

Sunday Law in Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, June 12.—The state senate has passed the Lemann bill, with important amendments, prohibiting the opening of stores, saloons, etc., on Sunday. The amendments will probably be adopted by the house, and the bill will then become a law. Newspapers, drug stores, common carriers, places of amusement, dairies and ice houses, not absolutely prohibition carrying on other business.

THE COMTE HAS HOPE.

He Will Fancy Himself a Monarch if Expelled From France.

PARIS, June 12.—The Comte de Paris, in an interview, said he had not yet decided where to go if expelled from France, as he expected to be. His leaning was toward Brussels, and he had received many expressions of sympathy from that country that it would be difficult for him at present to choose any other place of refuge. He could not go to Germany. Austria was too far removed from beloved France. His delight ultimately go to Switzerland, but for the present he would remain in Brussels or at any place. In his previous exile he felt at liberty to select a fixed residence. Then he was not the acknowledged head of the royal family of France, and could await the course of events without any neglect of duty. The state of affairs now differed. He did not entirely renounce the hope of returning to his country, for he did not believe the persecution would last forever, or that France would not open her doors to all her children. For this reason he should fix settle anywhere permanently, but would move about and fancy that he was traveling, and he would have change of scene without change of place.

The chamber resolved, by a vote of 310 to 223, to consider the committee's clauses enacting the immediate expulsion of all the princes, pretenders, and heads of families with the minority. The chamber subsequently rejected the first clause of the committee's bill enacting a general expulsion. The vote was 314 to 220.

THE HOME CLUB.

Knights of Labor Opposed to Any Star Chamber.

NEW YORK, June 12.—In publicity given in the press in regard to the secrets known as the Home club, with headquarters in this city, has aroused intense interest among the rank and file of the order of Knights of Labor in this city and vicinity, and a majority is rife as to who the favored few are who compose the membership of this already famous club. The Home club is not welcomed upon with favor by the members of the order is evidenced by the many expressions of disapproval heard at meetings of the local assemblies, at which references was made. Members say that there should be no inner circles in the order, as their existence would imperil the democracy of the order, which is its chief characteristic.

Of course the leaders are indignant that their schemes should have been exploded and the true inwardness of the Home club laid up for the benefit of the order at large, and since the adjournment of the general assembly have been making desperate attempts to counteract the effects of the exposure which began to set in against them, and at the same time punish those whom they believe to have been instrumental in exposing their plans. How and when the newspaper correspondents at Cleveland got their information has perplexed them considerably, and their ambiguity to the newspaper fraternity has been greatly intensified.

ALABAMA DEMOCRATS

Nominate a Candidate for Governor and Indorse the President.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 12.—Thomas Seay, president of the senate, was nominated for governor at the Democratic state convention. The nomination is equivalent to an election. The platform congratulates the country in the national government and says to President Cleveland that the Democratic party of Alabama would extend an earnest hand to the brave and upright man for his unsectional patriotism, high integrity, unshaken firmness, ability and good judgment, with the belief that having superior knowledge of northern opinion he will in his administration using his best efforts under great difficulties to correct enormous abuses, to bring the country back to the paths of constitutional government, and to establish those conditions which permit and conduce to prosperity and happiness among the people of all the sections of the land, and to bear healing between the races from a better understanding of their relations.

Polish Catholics Quarrel.

PITTSBURG, June 12.—There is war in the Polish colony in St. Adalbert's church, in Grant Fifteenth street, this city, arising out of the organization of the Polish branch of John Sobisky by Charles D. Nowalk, who, with the consent of Bishop Phelan, has established a church of his own, in spite of the strenuous opposition of Father Mishkiewicz, priest of St. Adalbert's parish. Father Mishkiewicz holds last Sunday and the Sunday previous denounced the society from the pulpit. Father Mishkiewicz says that he has received an anonymous letter threatening to murder him unless he withdraws his opposition to the society, and his life is in some way. Two of his supporters guard his house every night to keep away the dynamiters. Members of Nowalk's party claim that they are being pelted by female supporters with knives, with which all the honors are to be consummated at noon on Sunday morning next.

Counterfeiters Caught.

NEW STRAITSVILLE, O., June 12.—For the past five months counterfeit silver dollars coin has been passing freely in and around this neighborhood. Some days ago a citizen named Uriah Shadle, Dr. Rodgers, Bell, of Columbus, and Bell, with two detectives, came here last night to investigate. They made a raid on a residence about three miles from here, and found the counterfeiting outfit in full blast in a room in the house. Four persons were arrested at this place at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, taking the counterfeiters unawares. All the metals, dies, moulds, etc., were found, and about $100 of the manufactured article was captured. The prisoners were in a log hut with a woman and daughter. One J. A. Dawson is the owner of the property, and has secured a lease or two in the penitentiary for the same offense. Homer Berry, alias George Miller, is a stranger here. Both will be taken to Columbus.

Shot by His Son.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 12.—William Freeman, residing in a country suburb, Prospect, on Rit river, was shot and killed by his son. The two had been quarreling about property, and the father struck the son with a hoe. The son then shot his father. Young Freeman was taken in custody, but was released on bail. The coroner returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

Unfavorable to Goods.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—It is believed that the report that the senate judiciary committee has decided to recommend the confirmation of Mr. Goods to be solicitor general unfavorably is correct. The conclusions of Mr. Ransey, in his review of the testimony in investigation, probably had something to do with it.

Boswell P. Flower in Canada.

KINGSTON, Ont., June 12.—The R. P. Flower party, of New York, have paid a visit to the Thousand Islands on the Rapids and Pembroke railroad, in which they are interested. The railway magnates in the city regretted a capital, hugely invested in railways, of $25,000,000.

A PENSION AGENT

GIVES SOME INTERESTING GOSSIP ABOUT PENSIONERS.

Large Sums of Money Paid Out Each Quarter at the New York Office, and the Class of Men Who Receive It, Statistics of the Office.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The World prints the following interview with Pension Agent Gen. Sigel Gen. Sigel, twenty-five years ago scouring the highways of Missouri on the magnificent charger, humorously described in Artemus Ward's lecture, and followed by the glistening eyes of 20,000 men; Gen. Sigel in civilian's attire, hemmed in by the pressing crowd of pensioners at the city of his adoption, and Gen. Sigel sitting in the seat of disbursement, head up, eyes bright and keen, every element of his nature kindled with the enthusiasm of the day, and ready to welcome a nation to the old and future, the maimed and the scarred, present to the American people these pictures, each worthy of the highest model of perpetuity in a golden frame of gratitude.

I met the old gentleman yesterday, and, overhearing him, after interchanging a few words of greeting with me, I said, "How are you getting on in your new office?"

"Oh, charmingly, swimmingly," he responded. "The quarterly payment of pensioners on the roll of the New York agency began at 4 o'clock on June 4, and up to the 8th, the close of the day, I had paid 3,000 names, of whom 4 633 are invalids and 1,784 widows. I pay out in the invalids $124,217, and to the widows $72,634, a total of $197,876."

"I suppose, general, you have some curious phases of statistics, attempted frauds, great hardships, do you not, generally?"

"Indeed, do," replied the veteran, and then, settling himself upon an iron hydrant, after a moment's hesitation he said: "I find that out of a total of 17,284 on the rolls May 1, 1886, comprising 11,393 invalids and 5,387 widows, army and navy, besides 90 survivors and 505 widows of 1812, there are 1,726 invalids of German parentage who draw $164,091 per year, and 886 widows of German soldiers drawing $7,050 a month. Very many of these served in regiments entirely or nearly so composed of Germans."

"Are there no other nationalities, foreign I mean, except Germans, represented?"

"Oh, yes; there are 130 outside of the English and German nationalities. French, Swiss, Polish, Hungarian and Scandinavian are quite numerous among the army invalids, while Italy, Spain, Portugal, Denmark and Greece are represented in a partially in the navy. Many regiments were organized at the commencement of the war whose names sufficiently indicate the nationalities of those composing them, as the Garibaldi guards. The German regiments were generally named in honor of some general of their nation or some distinguished statesman, as the Sigel regiment, the Steuben, De Kalb, Lincoln cavalry, Cameron rifles."

SOME UNIQUE NOMENCLATURE.

"Do you ever strike any odd names?"

"Yes, indeed. On the rolls of the agency appear the names of some persons of historic as well as contemporaneous renown—as, for instance, your devoted ally Gen. Grant. Washington is recalled by the name of Lafayette, a veteran of the Eleventh New York volunteers; the name of the fiery advocate of Italian liberty of independence is perpetuated in the name of Andrew Garibaldi, a mariner bold. Recent events have made the name of Cleveland quite a favorite, and familiar to the people, but according to our rolls she is the widow of one who rallied to his country's flag during the troublous period of the war of secession. Mrs. Caroline Robert Burns, Thomas Moore, Daniel Webster I also recall, among others, which will be sent thundering down to posterity on the pension rolls.

SOME SUGGESTIVE MATTER.

"Some of the names are suggestive. Take Henry Ballard, of the Seventy-ninth New York cavalry, Cyrus Grant, of the Fifth Maine battery, Lieut. Col. Custis Lee, a descendant of the famous Communistic agitator who transplanted his Christian name to Virginia, Gen. Sam Lee and his own cousin, Darbie, the two most prominent leaders in the Communistic movement that attended throughout Pardee from 1782 to 1787, Gen. Jubal A. Early, one of the four other conspirators, at Vendome, near Orleans, and sentenced to the guillotine. They tried to cheat the ax by shooting themselves, although the first fleeting terrible wounds, they lived long enough to suffer the penalty of their crime. Three of the conspirators were sentenced to deportation and forty were acquitted. Babeuf reasserted, in report of his Communistic principles, the Abolished Rights of Man, and the Social Contract sentiments and far greater ability, and not a physical and moral monster like the present pallbird. The jury which tried the conspirators was composed of Republicans, two of whom were necessary to acquit. In the case of Babeuf and Darbie only three were necessary to acquit. In the case of the presence of English-speaking nationalities—namely, American, Irish, English, Scotch, Welsh and Canadian—in all about 15,430."

"That's very old history, isn't it?"

"Among the eighty pensioners of 1812 there is one, Samuel J. Mank, who is 94 years of age, and another, Charles R. Tappan, who is ninety years of age. Both are living in Brooklyn and called at the agency for their last quarter's pension. Of the widows of 1812 also drawing pensions, Mrs. Sarah Bell, who was with Lewis wrestling with old age, sign their names to the vouchers."

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE VETS?

"What is the character of the disability of the invalids on the pension roll?"

"Well, let me see; 440 have lost either an eye or a leg, or both; 560 suffer from rheumatism; 360 from chronic diarrhoea; 340 from diseases which seem to be the inheritance of all soldiers who passed through the ordeal of long-continued and hard service in the field; 1,200 are sufficiently disabled to participate; 547 with hernia, or some kind, 30 are totally blind, 17 are totally and 30 partially deaf, and so on. Of the widows, 1,200 suffer from diseases of the eye, 194 from disease of the heart and 180 from lung disease."

"Taken altogether, you seem to think they are square and deserving of the help they get?"

"Yes; from personal observation and daily contact with them I am very sure pensioners who do not beg for pensions deserve their funds. It is indeed a sad spectacle to see many brave men, who have undergone hardships and privations for their country, carelessly wasting their funds, but it is the natural result of their long exposure and addiction to the use of stimulants, and that they are really a disgrace to their country, and not for a soldier's system to bear the punishment there is to go at it."

"Sigel is a character with a history—a great, living romance. Is he not a Democrat?"

And then to this he'll have a great big history soon."

JOHN KELLY HONORED.

Tammany Hall Duly Remembers Their Late Leader.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Memorial services were held at Tammany Hall last night in honor of the late John Kelly. The great hall of the wigwam was heavily draped. A life size bust of the dead sachem rested upon a pedestal at the right of the chairman. The attendance in the hall in the overflowing, and seemed to comprise nearly all the well known politicians of the city. Many ladies were also present, occupying the private boxes.

Among those on the platform were ex-Judge Tappan, who presided; Governor Abbett, of New Jersey; Senator David B. Hill, Treasurer Fitzgerald, Colonel John A. Sullivan, Hon. O. S. Potter, Arthur Leary, Judge Patterson and Duffy, Gen. John Cochrane, ex-Senator Jacobs, ex-Senator Erickson, John D. Newman, ex-Mayor Wickham, Recorder Smyth, Gen. Fitz John Porter, Hon. Nicholas Muller, County Clerk Purroy, Peter Reilly, and scores of other prominent citizens.

Secretary Thomas F. Gilroy read letters of regret at inability to attend and highly eulogistic letters from Judge T. J. Gilbert, Governor Hill, Judges Rapallo, Roger and Mill of the court of appeals, Judges Noah Davis, Barrett, Donohue, Larremore, Van Brunt, Daly, Hon. Abram S. Hewitt, Governor Purcell, ex-Mayors Hy and Elson, S. H. Cox, Gen. Spinola and others.

In moving the adoption of resolutions of sympathy and grief, Hon. Bourke Cockran delivered an address full of touching reference to the personal qualities of the deceased, and to public services of a distinguished service and sagacity. The resolutions were then unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

Mr. Charles A. Dana was the next speaker. He paid a high tribute to his late friend, and praised his stanchness and disinterested devotion to the people.

Hon. George Raines of Rochester, Governor Abbett of New Jersey, Gen. Sickles, ex-Senator Erickson and ex-Senator Grady also spoke in terms of the highest laudation of Mr. Kelly's public career and private life.

RAILROADED OUT OF TOWN.

A Celebrated Bank Swank Thief Not Wanted at the Hub.

BOSTON, June 12.—Big Ned Rice, alias W. H. Moore, alias "Hen" Rice, alias "Dan" Summers, a notorious bank swank thief, arrived here from Canada this morning. He was arrested at the depot and taken to jail. Rice is now about 50 years of age. He has served twenty years in prison. In 1878 Rice, in company with Long Moore, who is now serving time in the Charlestown state prison, robbed the Cambridgeport National bank of $30,000. In 1880, Rice stole $20,000 from the cash of Col. Morton at the adjutant department of the Brooklyn postoffice. After that job Rice went to Canada, where for a time he lived in elegant style. On July 5, 1883, Rice, with Charlie Harris, stole $6,000 from the banking institution of Fisher, Preston & Co., in Chicago. He then returned to Canada, where he has been operating ever since. Rice is described as a man of fine appearance, 5 feet 10 inches high, and has a pal named Dutch Pete, had a quarrel, during which Rice savagely wounded Pete. The most probable job done by Rice and his pals since living in Canada were the robbery of thousands of dollars from the Bank of Montreal, at Stratford, Canada, and

TYPOS' CONVENTION.

RELATIONS OF THE UNION TO THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

The Stereotype Plates Celebrated—Their Future Fixed Offices to Be Unionized if Possible—The American Press Association Pronounced an Army of Facts.

PITTSBURG, June 12.—At the afternoon session of the International Typographical convention Mr. Douglass, of Keokuk, Ia., presented a resolution condemning the "so-called Anarchist outbreak at Chicago." Adopted.

A motion was made and concurred in send all the matters of interest to the International Typographical Union to the Chicago Historical society for preservation. Different reports of committees were then made. That of the committee on relations of the Union of the International Typographical union to the Knights of Labor was adopted in substance as follows:

Believing that the charges divided against itself cannot stand," the committee made a concise statement showing how little in reality is the difference existing between the two organizations. Commending the fidelity of the leaders of the Knights of Labor, and the efforts of its members to secure for themselves a portion of the fruits of their toil, the report concluded as follows:

"First—That the Knights of Labor will not attempt to dictate the course of action of distinctive trades.

"Second—That they will not cover with the shield of the order—an order of which all of us are proud and glad to be members of—any man who has forfeited his membership in any trade union.

"Third—That they will not hesitate, therefore, to join our forces in every possible honor short of a surrender of our long established rights or an impairment of the integrity of this union; and by this sign we shall conquer."

Miscellaneous business followed. A resolution was introduced declaring The Craftsman, of Washington, not the union's official organ; placing an assessment on the members of the union to pay that paper on a reasonable basis. The report of the special committee on the trouble existing in the New York typographical union was approved. This directed that the old and new unions in New York shortly consolidate, and if at the end of six months they cannot agree, and desire to separate, on a vote of two-thirds of the members charter shall be granted to each. Next was the report of the special committee on the use of plate matter. The committee recommended the issuance from time to time of bulletins, furnished them by the American Press association. The committee recommended that the executive council shall reserve to itself all free memberships, leaving plates which are not prize, and that the executive council is authorized to publish a list of papers that do not issue made plates; also that the secretary be requested to interdict the use of plates where a reduction of the working force results; prohibiting the use of plates from tabling action regarding the use of plates without consent of the executive council; prohibits union papers from using plates of non-union offices; that in connection the Press Bulletin on the question of plates the rules of subordinate unions governing the matter must be sent to the executive council, which will send out advice to them, thereby securing uniform policy. After a long discussion the report was adopted.

At the evening session a resolution was offered asking that steps be taken to unionize the town of Greenfield, Mass., which was the first one having a label, ran prohibition. The matter was referred to the general organizer. Two hundred dollars was appropriated for the relief of Jos Knowlin, Toronto, who has been ill for a month for six months. A Detroit typograph firm offered, providing the convention would authorize the issuing of a brand of tobacco "tobacco-like," to donate a portion of the profits into the treasury two cents for every pound sold. The proposition was rejected by a unanimous vote. A motion was made that the salary allowed Hon. T. P. Dundon, the local assembly 1,688, Knights of Labor; the press of Pittsburg and the printing officers of the convention, and the official editor-journal to meet in Buffalo next August.

Wheat Charges Trouble.

CHICAGO, June 12.—The Northwestern and St. Paul lines met the Rock Island $4.25 reduction St. Paul and Minneapolis business yesterday morning. Freight rates on wheat have not been received yet to establish rate from above points to Chicago, but tickets were sold by street agents and scalpers in St. Paul and Minneapolis at the rates agreed upon by the regular agents. This is virtually the beginning of a fight that may possibly continue until the rate is reduced to a much lower figure.

Yerkes Denies the Story.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—Charles T. Yerkes, the street railway magnate that purchased the North Side Passenger railway of Chicago, is in this city. He denied that he had paid a bribe of $150,000 to the Chicago $125,000 for certain franchises, as charged by the Chicago papers. By the most emphatic manner Mr. Yerkes denied paying anybody any money to obtain the passage of the bill granting valuable franchises to the railroad company.

BRADSTREET'S BULLETIN.

The State of Trade as Reported From Various Sections.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The general trade situation, as telegraphed to Bradstreet's, has been irregular, with a tendency towards a conditioned moderate movement. This is due in large part to the spring trade being over, to farmers being busy in the country and to the fact that the summer trade has not begun yet. The late rains in the Mississippi valley and western and southern states will help. Meanwhile notes are generally slow. Bradstreet's special telegrams from Minneapolis contradict the extreme statements of damage to the winter crop in that section, made public in the morning papers yesterday. There are no noteworthy changes in the iron or steel markets.

The general industrial situation has improved, though there are still a considerable number of employes on strike at various manufacturing centers. Of the 200,000 who received concessions as to shorter hours, with full pay, some months ago, the returns now show that less than 140,000 retain those advantages, one-half of whom are at Chicago, and one-sixth each at Cincinnati and New York. The strike against competition from low-hour workers is breaking down most of what is left of the movement.

Labor troubles are also progressing finely in Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas. Heavy rains in the Carolinas and Georgia foreshadow trouble from grass.

More Fees for Litigation.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Receiver Johnston, of the Marine bank, has begun suit to have the supreme court appoint him the clerk of Receiver Davies, of the firm of Grant & Ward, and cause him to account to Mr. Johnston for all the money and property in his possession. The suit is based on the claim that James D. Fish, as member of the firm of Grant & Ward, had an legal right to assign the property of the firm to Davies, having previously assigned to Mr. John H. Morris. The matter will come up June 17.

Philadelphia Actors at Baseball.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—A number of actors, who have enjoyed with more or less success the difficult roles in "My Partner" and "The Galley Slave," at the Park, took the lights for the baseball field yesterday afternoon. Five hundred dollars were realized, and will be given to Mrs. Bartley Campbell, the author of the play, for the benefit of "The Galley Slave." The players were attired in the costumes of the characters in those plays. The score stood: "My Partner," 26; "The Galley Slave," 18.

A Costly Blaze at Toronto.

TORONTO, June 12.—At 2 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the rear shop of Pinkhurst Bros' extensive box factory on King street-east. A general alarm brought the fire brigade quickly to the spot, but the flames had time to serve the factory very much damaged. The fire spread to the lumber yard in the rear, which was also destroyed. The loss is roughly estimated at $100,000, partly covered by insurance. Origin of fire unknown. Several employes were at work in the factory when the fire occurred.

An Author Dead.

PRESIDENTIAL HOMES

PAST AND PRESENT — PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S COUNTRY SEAT.

A Look at Mount Vernon, Monticello, Oak Hill and the Hermitage — Zach Taylor's Cottage and Homes of Presidents and Their Widows of To-day.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—I visited the president's new country home to-day. It lies on the hills three miles west of the White House, and there is probably not a finer piece of scenery in the United States than that which will be spread out before the president's eyes as he chats with his new bride on its front verands. To the right the plain white shaft of the Washington monument, with its aluminum top blazing like a great white diamond under the last rays of the sun, rises up above the green trees, and directly in front rises the great Capitol building, its dazzling white dome not larger than a country hake oven in the distance, and the giant statue of liberty on its top, which is really almost as tall as the new city building appearing no bigger than a twelve-inch pigmy. A good glass would bring out the statue of Gen. Scott which stands upon its granite pedestal at the Soldiers' Home, and it is easy to point out the various objects of Washington. The city itself makes a beautiful sight. It shines out a living map dotted with its 100 trees, a poem of brick and mortar in its entire reality. Right here also there a score of dome-like white in the classic architecture of the marble buildings of the government. The back ground of this scene is the wooded hills of Virginia with Alexandria and the Potomac in its front and Mount Vernon almost visible in the distance.

The president has here twenty-eight acres of lawn and trees. A grove of oaks and chestnuts stands at the entrance to the estate and there are fruit and grapes about the house. A wire fence, with green wooden panels, surrounds the property and the grounds are rolling.

CLEVELAND'S FUTURE RESIDENCE.

The house is an old-fashioned, square, two story affair, with a ridge roof of a very peculiar shape. It has large rooms and a wide porch running along the front. The manner in which it is built are just together in all sort of shapes and the white plaster flows out between the cracks. The windows are large and of every conceivable shape and size, and those at the front open out upon the verands. A wide hall runs through the center, and the chambers of the second story are large and roomy. The house contains about thirteen rooms, and it is of such a nature that it can be easily improved. As it is now, it needs paint badly, and the present owner will not move into it till he has made considerable increasing its size. I understand that he intends to add a Mansard to it, and to erect a tower which will give even a more splendid view than that from the veranda. Back of the house there is a small barn and a few outlying things, and it seems to me that the whole of the buildings on the estate could be erected to-day for less than $5,000. President Cleveland paid $21,500 for the property, and it is of such a nature that it will be worth considerable than that at the end of his administration. The country house of Secretary Whitney, which is not far off, is now worth $30,000, and he bought it for $20,000. Mr. Folsom, his father-in-law, and the drive past these houses is nightly filled with the carriages of statesmen, millionaires and other people of Washington society. The president is to have possession of the house, I understand, about the 15th of June, but it will be some time after this before he will be able to get into it. When he does he proved it, it will compare favorably with the homes of the presidents of the past.

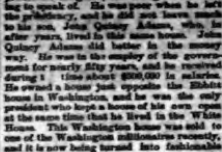
Washington got Mount Vernon by inheritance, and it was in consequence of his connection, when he was president, that he was induced to have the national capital located on the Potomac. He had in his early days large tracts of his property. Mount Vernon lies sixteen miles below Washington city, and Washington's wife owned, at the same time, the Arlington estate, which is just across the river. Washington came to Mount Vernon shortly after he was married and during these times he added but little to the estate. He improved the house greatly after he became retired, and at his death it was in the condition in which it exists to-day. It is built of wood, and it has a large hall and a wide piazza on the front and back. The piazza, or porch, gives a fine view of the river. When Washington was at old age he used to walk up and down it when he was thinking for hours at a time, and he entertained here in grand style. The rooms of the interior are rectangular in shape, and one or two of them contain beautiful mantels. They are plain, however, in comparison with our modern houses, and the Mount Vernon mansion will not compare favorably with several of the residences of to-day. The house is kept now in the same condition it was in when Washington first lived, and it is visited by thousands every year. Washington's estate at Mount Vernon comprised 5,000 acres, and it had ten miles of river front. When he died he left a number of farms to Martha Washington, and bonds and bank stocks to a large amount in different places. His live stock at Mount Vernon was valued at $25,000, without including the slaves, and he had no debts to speak of.

John Adams lived at Quincy, not far away from Boston. He was rather well off for a lawyer, and he owned a pleasant little house there. He was a poor lawyer when he was married, and such property as he owned was the fruit of his



JOHN ADAMS' HOME.

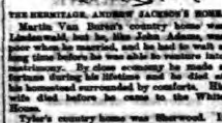
Adams family wealthy, and some of John Adams' descendants are now millionaires. Quincy is a suburb of Boston, and many of the descendants of the Washingtons and the Jeffersons, and Washington's hair million has been scattered to the winds.

MONTICELLO, THOMAS JEFFERSON'S HOME.

Monticello, where Jefferson lived, is located on a high hill near Charlottesville, Va. It was here that he brought his red-headed wife, and here he lived until he died. Jefferson received quite a fortune from his father. He died in debt, and his daughter taught school for a time in the old mansion where her father had entertained so royally.

Madison lived within a day's ride of Jefferson, and his home, like that of Monroe, Jefferson and Washington, was modeled somewhat after the classic shape with a large portico in its front upheld by columns. He had his mother-in-law with him, but one wing of his house was set off for her special use, and this was known as her domain. It is a historic house, for Dolly Madison, and what were then the old style hangings, while the rest of the house was furnished in the fancy French furniture so fashionable during Madison's administration. Dolly owned the house at the time of his marriage, and he was only six years younger than Cleveland is now when that sweet look place. His wife was much older than Frankie Folsom. She was a widow and the pride one of the best belles of the White House circle when Madison was in power. Her fortune when he died, but the son of her first marriage spent it for her so rapidly that she was poor long before she died.

Andrew Jackson's the Hermitage is place his wife, and the estate which surrounded it, lying about twelve miles from Nashville, comprised 1,000 acres of fine land. Jackson's house is historic. Its construction, and upon a friend of the general objecting to the site, Jackson said: "Mrs. Jackson chose the spot, and she shall have a house." I am going to build this house for her, and I don't expect to live in it myself." Jackson was at this time very feeble. His wife, however, died before his term of office came to the White House as its mistress. The Hermitage is now owned by Tennessee, though it is occupied by some of the Jackson family, or, rather, by the descendants of Mrs. Jackson. There has been talk of making a soldiers' home of it, and as it is now, I understand it is not kept in the style of old. Jackson, like many of the other presidents, lived too extravagantly for his own good. He spent all his salary while in the White House, and his hospitality at the Hermitage cost him a fortune. His wife was buried in the gardens of the estate, and when he died he was laid beside her.



THE HERMITAGE, ANDREW JACKSON'S HOME.

Martin Van Buren's country home was Lindenwald, but he, like John Adams, was poor when he married, and he had to work a long time before he could build himself a country house. By close economy he made a fortune during his lifetime and to die at his homestead surrounded by comforts. He died before he came to the White House.

Tyler's country home was Sherwood. It was bought by his son for him while he was in the White House, and it consists of about 1,000 acres on the banks of the James. He took his second wife, the beautiful young Miss Gardiner, to it as a bride, and it was to Sherwood, in 1844, that Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, and a host of other statesmen went to visit the president. Tyler is now living there in retirement, and he is the only president who kept a house of his own after all the time that he lived in the White House. This Washington house was sold to one of the Washington millionaires recently, and it is now being turned into fashionable stores. Yankee frugality has made the

POLK PLACE, RESIDENCE OF JAMES K. POLK.

President Polk's widow occupies the mansion which he built in the heart of Nashville during the days of his presidency. It is a large, square house, surrounded by a wide piece of ground, filled with beautiful trees and flowers. It is known as Polk Place, and I saw that Mrs. Polk Page, Mrs. President Polk's cousin, in the same condition as when he lived in it.

Zach Taylor owned a cottage on the Mississippi river near Orleans at the time of his election president. His wife did not like the White House, and she was more noted as a fine cook of plain food than as a model queen.

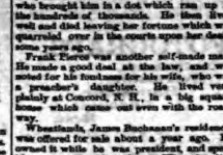
ZACHARY TAYLOR'S HOME.



LINCOLN'S HOME.

When Johnson was married he began to keep house in his tailor shop, and his wife taught him to write during the intervals of his pantaloons making. He is said to have served as alderman, mayor, member of Congress, and when he retired he owned a plain two-story building in Greenville, Tennessee, which was extravagant neither in furniture or surroundings.

Gen. Grant had a number of homes, and pictures of nearly all of them were given in the papers at the time of his election. He owned property in Washington, New York, at Long Branch, and at Galena, Ills., and all of his homes were nicely furnished. He married Miss Dent at St. Louis, and at the time he was in the army when he was married, and the fortune that he at last left came from his literary labors during his sickness.

Garfield had his home at Mentor is now occupied by Mrs. Garfield. It is a beautiful place, a mile from the lake shore, and the finest farms surrounds it, and it is considered one of the prettiest little estates in northern Ohio. Mrs. Garfield also owns a home in Cleveland, which she rents, and she owns the residence which her husband owned in Washington while he was a member of congress. This last is a very good square, the story brick structure on the Capitol hill, not far from John Sherman's residence. It is worth, I should say, $30,000, and Mrs. Garfield's personal residence is said to be worth $50,000.

President Arthur lives in New York. His number is 26 Lexington avenue, and his house is a large, three story brown stone front, with a high stoop and flower gardens in front. It is said that his wife's room in it is kept in the same condition as when she was alive. President Arthur lives a little extravagantly, and he has not much money as well as any of the presidential widowers of the past.

HOLIDAYS IN NEW YORK.

How and Where the Working People Spend Them.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, June 5.—Holidays in this city are not much boons as they might be. The trouble is that every interesting place of resort is overcrowded, and the day of work are also even those who have their time on set days to go to such days are less pleasant than the ordinary days of labor. They are divided in mind between "going somewhere" and resting. The majority decide in favor of "going somewhere," and the result is that the cars, the boats, the hotels, the restaurants, the parks, the theaters, the beer saloons, the dance halls, the concert halls and the streets are crowded. Children are dragged around all their bodies and tempers both give out, and they fill the day with crying and fighting.

The business streets are lonely and deserted. The people who are busy the rest of every day can't seem to find anything to do on holidays. They don't know how to get out of doors and enjoy themselves. They sit around and wonder "they know not where," like people who have been shipwrecked on the coast of a hard fate. There are street-corner groups of men who talk and lean against posts and call it enjoying themselves. Others are drawn by an irresistible instinct to the corners of the saloons and corrupting boarding-houses, and there stand or sit, and chew, talk, expectorate and argue. In this sort of monotonous way the day drags by. The people do nothing new, no change, and find no real recreation. They have simply tired, and that is the end of it. Interesting way. The people who have time to spend in the country or at the seaside or mountains or lakes find no pleasure in it. They are Calling on the Pennsylvania Governor.

A great many queer people visit the executive department at Harrisburg as call on Governor Pattison. The Pattisonian simplicity with which affairs are managed there enables many of them to gain admission to the tabernatorial presence. The other day a gentleman supplied with an unmistakable cord leg and a check suit fashionable in some of the backwoods counties of the state, walked up to the door, and appeared before Private Messenger Hughes and asked courtly:

"Gov'ner in?"

"No, sir. He's out of town."

"Um. This is his sectum sanctorum, is it?"

"This is his private office.

"Yes, his sanctum sanctorum," with a look of deep pity at the messenger's ignorance. "Well, there's my pasteboard. Give it to him, and tell him Ezra Selby, the first Mawr of Allegheny county. When he comes our way tell him to stop. We kin give him clean bedding, fresh eggs, cream, napkin, and Mom' Semple to red hot on griddle cakes. Nuf said."—Philadelphia Press.

Liszt's Troubles with Royalty.

Liszt has always borne his head high with royalties and aristocrats, and he well knows how to make himself respected. He met Czar Nicholas in Russia, and when the latter proposed William's health at the close of the dinner, and broke a lance with Louis Philippe at the banquet in Sweden, he never forgave that stingy monarch for abolishing certain musical pensions, and unhesitatingly refused to play for the Tuileries. One day the king, entering Liszt's particular exhibition, on private view, came suddenly upon Liszt seated at the piano. He was in the midst of his "Rakoczy," that you played at my house when you were a boy, and I was duke of Orleans." Much has changed since then! Yes, you replied Liszt, "but not for the better." Whereupon the ruffled king went home and struck Liszt's name off the list of those who were to have the honor to play at the court of Queen Isabella, in Spain, burning musicians in Spain in those days were never presented to royalty.—The Argonaut.

PAPER UNIONISTS.

MR. GLADSTONE ISSUES A VIGOROUS ELECTION MANIFESTO.

THE QUESTION IS SUBMITTED

To the Electors as to the Future Government for Ireland—The Old Man Arraigns the Tories and Seceders, and Defends With Force His Plan.

LONDON, June 14.—Mr. Gladstone has issued a manifesto addressed to the electors of Midlothian, which is as follows:

"GENTLEMEN: Consequent upon the defeat of the bill for the better government of Ireland the ministry has advised, and her majesty has been pleased to sanction, the dissolution of parliament for a decision by the nation on the grave and illiberate the simplest issue that has been submitted to it for half a century. It is only the sense of the gravity of this issue which impels me at the close of a long life, to take a course civic aloof for repose, to seek, after sitting in thirteen parliaments, a seat in the fourteenth, and with the hope of serving for the fifth time the honor of your confidence.

"At the last election I endeavored in my addresses and speeches to improve upon you the situation which had arrived in the affairs of Ire and. Week as the late government was for ordinary purposes, it had great advantages for dealing with the crisis. A compulsory measure proceeding from them would have received warm and extensive support from within the Liberal party, and would probably have obtained the Irish members without the aid of the Irish conservative association, and have left the parliament of 1885 free to prosecute the now stagnant work of ordinary legislation with the multitude of questions it includes. My earnest hope was to support the late cabinet in such a course and policy. On the 26th of last January 7,000,000 people—nearly one-third of the cleared to have been the choice of the government, Earl Carnarvon alone refusing to share in it. The Irish question was placed in the foreground to the exclusion of every other. The hour for the settlement of the claims of Ireland, as all felt, was come. The only point remaining to determine was the manner in which the question was to be dealt with. In my judgment a proposal to govern Ireland by a policy of coercion was not justified by the facts, and was doomed to certain and disgraceful failure, and some method of governing Ireland other than by coercion, I thought, ought to be found.

Continuing with an allusion to his undertaking the task of obtaining for Ireland a domestic legislature, and a reminder of the great peace which that question has held in the legislation of previous parliaments, Mr. Gladstone says:

"We will not govern Ireland by coercion, or will you let her manage her own affairs!

"To debate in this address this and that detail of the late defeated bill would only be to disparage the cause. It will be as futile as to discuss the halting, stumbling, ever shifting, ever vanishing projects of an intermediate choice which have proceeded from the leading liberals. There are two clear, positive and intelligible plans before the world. There is the plan of the government, and there is the plan of Lord Salisbury's party. The plan of Ireland should, under well considered conditions, transact her own affairs. Lord Salisbury's plan is to keep Ireland under the present system of laws for twenty years, by the end of which time he assures us, Ireland will be fit to accept any government in the way of local management that she likes. The coercion laws you may wish to give her.

"I leave this Tory project in its unadorned simplicity, and I turn to the proposed policy of the government. I ask you, gentlemen, electors men, whether Tories or seceders, have assumed the name of Unionists. I deny them the right to the name. Unionists, they are not all Unionists in the, but the union they refuse to modify is, in its present shape, a paper union, obtained by force and fraud and never accepted by the majority of the Irish nation. They are not Unionists, but only paper Unionists. True union is to be tested by the sentiments of human beings. United and true by this criterion we have less union between Great Britain and Ireland now than we had under the settlement of 1782. Then we had both a local and imperial legislature in a form divested of prerogative which might have impaired her imperial interests, and better adapted than the settlement of 1782 to secure to her the regular control of her own affairs."

Mr. Gladstone trusts that Scotland will condemn the attempts so singularly made to support the constitutional rights by a separate element of religious bigotry. Let her take warning from the deplorable riots at Belfast, and of other disorders in the north of Ireland.

Concluding, Mr. Gladstone writes: "Well, gentlemen, the first question now put to you is, how shall Ireland be governed? There is another question, how shall Ireland be kept out of it, how are England and Scotland to be governed? You know how, for the last six years imperial unity has been the ruling principle of Scotland have been imp ded and how your imperial parliament has been discredited and disabled. All this happened while the Nationalists were loyal to the union, and while the Irish members were without the support from so much as a handful of members not Irish. Now they approach ninety, and they are entitled to say that they represent the views of the Irish nation. It is impossible to deal with the subject by half measures. They are dying in the midst of suffering in British support, which brought 118 members to vote for their country, but strongest of all in the sense of their being right. But, gentlemen, we have done our part. The rest remains with you, the electors of the country. May you be enabled to see through and away all delusion, refuse that which is evil and choose that which is good. I leave the issue, gentlemen, to be your faithful and grateful servant,

WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE."

Tennyson's Objections.

LONDON, June 14.—Mr. George O. Trevelyan is to publish a new edition in which he says that the house was built recently I sued by the government seeks to put a law and order in hands in which they would be useless. The bill, he says, would involve the adoption and operation of the land purchase measures, imposing enormous liability upon the British taxpayer. Such measures would result in ruin, and he would be avenged of simple local government were extended to Ireland in accordance with the well known Liberal principles. The opposition of the Irish party practically stamps with true Liberalism.

BUFFALO ASYLUM CRITICISED.

Alleged Cruel Treatment of an Indiana Physician.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 14.—Something more than a year ago the physician of Dr. A. J. Houghton, an old physician of Knox county, advised him to go to a private insane hospital in New York for rest and repose, as he had developed some eccentricities which they attributed to mental aberration, and he left home for that purpose. When he reached Buffalo it is alleged that he became violent, and was thrown into a jail and finally tried before a lunacy commission and sent to the public asylum. Here he remained ten months, during which time, he says, he was brutally used, kept in close confinement, beaten often, knocked down time and again by burly attendants and all but killed. He undoubtedly not of sound mind, so some of his friends say, and the attendants regarded him as dangerous. About a month ago Superintendent Andrews, of the Buffalo asylum, notified Superintendent Fletcher that Houghton would be sent to the Indiana hospital, and Fletcher was urged to guard him, as he was dangerous.

Two attendants accompanied Houghton to Buffalo, each evidently afraid of him. Houghton, his friends here say, the patient, if ever a dangerous man, has shown a remarkable recovery. He has given no evidence of violence, and Dr. Fletcher has given him the privilege of the grounds, has permitted him to come to the city and do pretty near as he pleased. Friday he began bank corpus proceedings for his release, and as soon as the papers were served upon Dr. Fletcher, Houghton was released and left for home.

THE HYDROPHOBIA CURE.

Banker Morosini's Daughter Returns From Pasteur.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Dr. L. Duncan Buckley, who accompanied Banker Morosini's family to Paris, where Miss Amelia Adelaide was bitten by a pet dog on April 14, was taken to be treated by M. Pasteur to prevent hydrophobia, is an ardent supporter of the great French scientist's method.

The wound, which was on the bridge of the young lady's nose, was cauterized four hours after the dog bit her. Nineteen days after the wound was inflicted Pasteur began his treatment, assisted by Dr. Grancher, who made the hypodermic injections which Pasteur's method consists of.

"Two months and a month passed," said Dr. Buckley, "and I am satisfied now that Miss Morosini's case, which was genuine, as was shown by the symptoms of the dog, is only one of M. Pasteur's many cures."

"Are all of Pasteur's cases gratuitous?"

"Yes, but those who have been treated by him have subscribed seventy-five to the founding of a laboratory for M. Pasteur."

Mr. Morosini, it is said, gave a check for $1,000, or 5,000 francs, toward the laboratory, which will cost about 1,000,000 francs. He also presented Dr. Grancher with a handsome set of silver plate.

Miss Morosini is in full health, and no evil effects from the bite are feared.

CATHOLICS SEEK REVENGE.

Protestant Houses Burned — Buckshot Fired at Rioters.

SLIGO, June 14.—A terrible riot occurred here on Saturday night, during which several houses, occupied by Protestants, were wrecked, and many people injured. The Catholics celebrated the recent acts of the Orangemen at Belfast, began a crusade against Protestants, and for several hours held possession of the streets. The residences of many of the Protestants were wrecked and burned to the ground. The military charged the mob, which fought desperately. Several of the rioters were shot. Extra police have been sworn in, and the assistance secured of the military, the constabulary has since been able to preserve order.

The riot is alleged to have originated from the anger of the Catholics over the destruction of the railing surrounding the bishop's palace. No one could tell who committed the destruction, but it was at once asserted to the Orangemen, and thousands of Catholics assembled and began an attack upon the persons and property of Orangemen. The first act was riot, but it was not headed, and it was only when the military poured a volley into the crowd that they dispersed. Much work of destruction. A Methodist church, the residence of a Congregational minister, and several club houses were attacked and wrecked.

SEVERAL DEATHS FROM STORM.

A Dakota Blow That Destroyed Property And Life.

HURON, D. T., June 14.—Further details of the tornado that passed near this place on Friday show that it was more serious than at first reported. F. H. Houseon's house was destroyed by its splinters, the roof being laid by carried over ten rods, and all of them being killed or badly injured. The victims were: Stephen Johnson, killed; Mrs. Ole Johnson, arm broken and otherwise dangerously hurt; her 5-year-old daughter, broken thigh bone; her 3-year-old daughter, badly bruised; Mrs. Ole Gunderson, 20 years old, hurt in back; Nancy McArthur, partly paralyzed; Adam Peterson, arm broken; Mrs. Peterson injured; Andrew E. Mac, index finger out of joint. Christopher Johnson leaves a wife and seven young children.

Considerable damage was done in other parts of the town, but there were no casualties so far as known. Reports are current of great destruction of property in the surrounding country, and in several cases lives are said to have been lost.

FLEEING FROM FATE.

An Old Man Flies a Razor to End His Sufferings.

LYONS, N. Y., June 14.—To-day the trial of Farmer David H. Converse for the murder of his wife was to have been begun in Lyons. On the celebration his 61st birthday to jail yesterday, and asked and allowed to shave himself for his trial. The sheriff gave him a razor and went away for a short time. On his return he found Converse lying dead with his throat cut his throat from ear to ear in his cell. Fortunately he severed not the jugular vein, and the wound would result in recovery, but he was dead. He committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor which he obtained from the sheriff.

A ROYAL CRANK.

STORIES OF A KING'S BRUTALITY AND IDIOCY.

A Small Head On Royal Shoulders Leads to Abandonment of Selfish Gratification—A Supreme Wedding the Water Cause Her Death—Sleigh Riding.

LONDON, June 14.—The attempt to throw a veil of romance over the crazy antics of King Ludwig, of Bavaria, is regarded as amusing by those who have known of his mad brutalities for the past ten years. He was a devoted student of art, with his mind finally overthrown by the excess of his devotion. He was simply a man of commonplace mind whose God was himself. It is merely the story of a spoiled man, in addition to his absolute egotism, had wealth and power enough to carry out every selfish fancy of his mind. The papers are full of stories of his mentality exploits, but the papers are all under the pressure of the monarchies in which they are published, and the hideous and selfish character of the incidents is glossed over. The story that has never been in print is as follows:

The king sent for a new soprano, who had made wonderful success at Munich, to entertain him with her singing at his castle at Hohenschwangen. When the singer arrived the king told her he wanted to hear her singing on the water just at midnight. They proceeded to a shallow lake in the castle grounds, and King Ludwig produced a gaudy pleasure boat with a music box attachment, like a canoe and a gondola. He seated the singer in the bow of the boat and placed himself in a luxurious pile of cushions in the stern. The music box was started by some device, which was skillfully wielded by the king. There he kept the poor artist singing for fully three hours. At last she begged to be allowed to stop, as she said that she had already contracted a severe cold, and was unable to control her voice. The king sternly ordered her to proceed, but she could not. Then the king said he was going home, and he supposed she knew the way ashore. He stepped over the side of the boat into the water, which was not more than three feet deep, and calmly waded ashore and walked up to his castle. The artiste remained in the boat, filled with despair. For the first hour she was afraid to move, would surely send some one to her rescue, but no one came, and after two hours of waiting, she too waded to the shore. She went to the castle, but couldn't get in. She knew anything about her, and she was turned away as an imposter. She started to walk to Munich, notwithstanding her clothes were soaked with water and bedraggled with mud. Fortunately she soon met a hackney coach, which took her to her apartments. She immediately summoned a doctor, but the fatal mischief had been done, and she died within a week of pneumonia. The king sent an extravagant sum to pay for her funeral, for which those days went to 1,000,000 francs. He also presented Dr. Grancher with a handsome set of silver plate.

Miss Morosini is in full health, and no evil effects from the bite are feared.

CATHOLICS SEEK REVENGE.

Protestant Houses Burned — Buckshot Fired at Rioters.

SLIGO, June 14.—A terrible riot occurred here on Saturday night, during which several houses, occupied by Protestants, were wrecked, and many people injured. The Catholics celebrated the recent acts of the Orangemen at Belfast, began a crusade against Protestants, and for several hours held possession of the streets. The residences of many of the Protestants were wrecked and burned to the ground. The military charged the mob, which fought desperately. Several of the rioters were shot. Extra police have been sworn in, and the assistance secured of the military, the constabulary has since been able to preserve order.

The riot is alleged to have originated from the anger of the Catholics over the destruction of the railing surrounding the bishop's palace. No one could tell who committed the destruction, but it was at once asserted to the Orangemen, and thousands of Catholics assembled and began an attack upon the persons and property of Orangemen. The first act was riot, but it was not headed, and it was only when the military poured a volley into the crowd that they dispersed. Much work of destruction. A Methodist church, the residence of a Congregational minister, and several club houses were attacked and wrecked.

SEVERAL DEATHS FROM STORM.

A Dakota Blow That Destroyed Property And Life.

HUSHER, D. T., June 14.—Further details of the tornado that passed near this place on Friday show that it was more serious than at first reported. F. H. Houseon's house was destroyed by its splinters, the roof being laid by carried over ten rods, and all of them being killed or badly injured. The victims were: Stephen Johnson, killed; Mrs. Ole Johnson, arm broken and otherwise dangerously hurt; her 5-year-old daughter, broken thigh bone; her 3-year-old daughter, badly bruised; Mrs. Ole Gunderson, 20 years old, hurt in back; Nancy McArthur, partly paralyzed; Adam Peterson, arm broken; Mrs. Peterson injured; Andrew E. Mac, index finger out of joint. Christopher Johnson leaves a wife and seven young children.

Considerable damage was done in other parts of the town, but there were no casualties so far as known. Reports are current of great destruction of property in the surrounding country, and in several cases lives are said to have been lost.

FLEEING FROM FATE.

An Old Man Flies a Razor to End His Sufferings.

LYONS, N. Y., June 14.—To-day the trial of Farmer David H. Converse for the murder of his wife was to have been begun in Lyons. On the celebration his 61st birthday to jail yesterday, and asked and allowed to shave himself for his trial. The sheriff gave him a razor and went away for a short time. On his return he found Converse lying dead with his throat cut his throat from ear to ear in his cell. Fortunately he severed not the jugular vein, and the wound would result in recovery, but he was dead. He committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor which he obtained from the sheriff.

CANADIANS EMPLOY BOODLE.

A Railroad Subsidy Secured Near South Lobby Methods.

MONTREAL, June 14.—An action, now proceeding in the superior court, is causing a good deal of interest. E. A. Senecal, a relation of Senecal, who has made a great deal of wealth in this province, sued T. X. Archambault, a lawyer, to recover $1,830 which he entrusted to defendant to bribe two French Liberal members, Lt. Patrie, of Montreal, and Lt. Lecteur, of Quebec, to support a bill he had presented to the local legislature to get power to build a railway tunnel under Mt. Royal. Lawyer made the bill secret passed, and plaintiff never got a satisfactory explanation of how the sum was expended until witnesses were examined in the trial. Archambault testified that he had paid Senator Thibeaudeau $530 and $1,030 to Provencalne, a lawyer and Liberal candidate for the legislature. Senator Thibeaudeau in his evidence stated that he had received the money, but, as he had advanced the amount previously for Archambault in connection with politics, he put the money to repay himself. Mr. Prefontaine admitted getting the $1,000, but his receipts from the proprietors of The Daily Journal mentioned that he only got $500 on account. Between them for their patronage of the scheme. There is more evidence to come, and the scandal increases each day. The plaintiff has supported the conservative governments, both federal and provincial, for years past, and before the last general election for the local house was charged with corruption to the extent of $10,000 by a dozen of men to support the local government, with whom he had formed a syndicate to purchase the North Shore railway from here to Quebec, which he subsequently sold within two years after disposed of it to the Canadian Pacific for $3,000,000 profit, the half at least being his own share.

LAMB CHOPS AND VEAL CUTLETS.

A Strike of Butchers for Better Pay and Shorter Hours.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The Butchers' Protective union held a secret meeting yesterday to hear reports from the committee who recently demanded an increase of wages and a reduction of the hours of labor. Many members reported that their employers granted all that was asked, but quite a number stated that they met with a point blank refusal.

In accordance with previous arrangements they decided to order a general strike to this city, Brooklyn and Jersey City. The strike is to be confined to men employed in slaughtering sheep and calves. There are 900 in this city, 150 in Brooklyn, and 86 in Jersey.

At present they are paid ten cents for killing and dressing a lamb. Three men share in the lambs, and they kill seventy and a half cents, and they ask twenty cents for killing and dressing a calf. They complained also of their long hours of labor. Some of them work from 4 in the morning to sixteen to eighteen hours on a stretch. They are also opposed to week work. They insist that all men shall be paid by the piece, as some of them are paid by the week at work for $15. Most of the Jersey City men work in the Central stock yards. The strike began at noon yesterday.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

A Large Assemblage Expected On Tuesday Evening.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The reception which President and Mrs. Cleveland will hold on Tuesday evening will be very large, although it is not an official personage. Of course every one will turn out to see the bride, and as the "ladies of their families" are included in the invitations, the number will be very large indeed.

Since the president's return from Deer Park he has been working hard, and the prospects are that he will be up with the business early next week. He will have to do so for some time to come. He now has before him in the neighborhood of 160 bills to examine, as the adjournment before Saturday. Of them. Most of the bills grant pensions, but will be examined the same as other measures, and as several of them are open to the objection that they are private pension bills a number of vetoes may be looked for during the week.

Teamer Criticised.

CHICAGO, June 14.—It is alleged that the losing of the championship by Garman Teamer to Gaudaur on Saturday was only the part of the Kennedy-Teamer scheme. The twenty-five Pittsburgers who came here to back their cot lost their money in good faith. One of them, a Mr. Wagner, Mr. German, a deputy sheriff, knew of it. The scheme is that Teamer was to appear strong this spring, just as he did at Lake Ponchartrain, and then, after the Fourth, he was to row at Oak Point in 28m. 28s. and then to suddenly break down and lose. The purpose is said to be to have Teamer entered as a broken down sculler at the inter-state regatta, to be backed by a syndicate headed by Flagler, of the McKeesport Tube works. It was thought the scheme would be worth a large part of $1,000,000. What they will now do besides denying the report is not known. If they keep it up, stories about the condition of Teamer's health will appear in the sporting papers.

Two Lives Lost at a Fire.

NEW YORK, June 14.—At 9 o'clock last evening a fire, caused by the upsetting of a kerosene lamp, occurred on the third floor of the five-story tenement house No. 104 Allen street, and before assistance could be obtained William Somerkalt, a German, 35 years of age, and his wife Mary, aged 28, were burned to death. The alarm to the building and furniture was trifling.

Yankee Boys Caught Three Tartars.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., June 14.—While several boys were riding on a horse car yesterday afternoon, three Chinamen entered. One boy was left in charge, and he knew not a revolver, another a knife, and the third passed some cartridges to the one having the revolver. The boys fled in terror, one fainting and falling in the street.

How Havana Hotels Are Conducted.

While the manner of conducting hotels in Havana is very unlike our way, the change is agreeable for a time. There are but two real meals per day, a lunch consisting of coffee and rolls at 10 o'clock and that of a great feature ridiculed, wished, the breakfast hour being at 10 o'clock and the dinner at 5. We were prepared to suffer martyrdom at the hands of the Cuban hotel keeper, but generally surprised to find most excellent fare, the steaks being better than the average at home, and the Cuban method of preparing fish simply superb. Pineapples, bananas, oranges, and an infinite variety of conserves made from tropical fruits with unpronounceable names, together with a quantity of fair table wine to each two persons, rendered the table quite endurable, even though all the waiters were accustomed in being served. In a word, we found in Cuba, as in Spain, it is not only desirable, but agreeable, to fall into native ways, and lounge at midday with all such. The Spanish custom seems to be to wander about the city between the courses, a style which some of our party were not slow in adopting.—Cuba Cor. Chicago Times.

A BOAT CAPSIZED,

CAUSING THE DEATH OF THREE PEOPLE BY DROWNING.

A Boating Party on the Rockaway River Comes to Grief—An Eddy and a Sudden Wind Upsets the Craft—One Body Recovered.

NEW YORK, June 14.—A Doran visited at Jersey City, yesterday. He was accompanied by Matilda, his wife, aged 26 years, and his son George Jr., aged 7½ years. Besides these were George Doran, a brother, aged 24 years; Antonio Tapet, of New York, and John Guyon, aged 15 years.

At about 4 o'clock the party decided to go sailing. They hired a boat on the Newark bay. When they started it was with the intention of sailing to the Hackensack river to fish till it was too cloudy for sailing, when home and supper were headed. These institutions the party desired to visit.

A fair wind blowing from the southeast brought the party rapidly up the stream, and in a short time they were near the Pennsylvania railroad drawbridge. The usual horn was blown by the steersman and the bridge opened. The boat was headed directly for the opening. When within ten feet of it a very strong eddy struck it and drove the boat against the upright of the bridge. This action of the tide caused the boat to veer about, and a flaw of wind striking her while fast to the piles swamped the boat in capsize.

The entire party were thrown into the stream, screaming for help. For an instant not a soul was to be seen. All had apparently gone to the bottom of the water. Doran rose first to the surface, followed by all excepting Doran's wife, Matilda, his son George L., and Laura Keefer, Doran's niece.

They were drowned. A large number of citizens had seen the accident, and headed by Bridge Tender Hall of the drawers, they rendered the party all the assistance possible, and succeeded in saving all from drowning except the three mentioned.

When the bodies were taken ashore and placed in the house of the toothache bridge tender to dry, the volunteers dragged the capsized boat to the beach and continued their search for the bodies of the missing. After searching for a couple of hours the bodies needed without a peculiar object of the search.

The tide was unable to bring in many bodies because of a large pile. He gazed at it intently for a moment, and, calling for assistance, had it towed to shore. It was the body of Matilda, Doran's wife.

The police were notified, and they caused the body to be sent to the Hudson morgue. The other members of the party were taken to the Fourth precinct station house, where they were detained until an investigation as to the cause of the disaster could be made. This was not concluded until 8:30 o'clock last night, when the parties were released.

The bodies of the two other victims have not been found. The relatives of Mrs. Doran will be removed to New York to-day by her husband, who is prostrated by grief.

"OLD SPOT" STILL LIVES.

A Fourth of July Parade Will Contain the Horse.

PORT JERVIS, June 14.—The whole upper part of the Delaware valley and the western part of Orange and Sussex counties will commemorate the Fourth of July in one grand celebration to be held at Port Jervis. One of the attractions of the great parade on the day will be "Old Spot," the late Gen. Judson Kilpatrick's war horse which still lives, in the age of 31 years. This is the horse ridden by Gen. Kilpatrick in all of his dashing cavalry exploits during the war, and in the saddle the heroic cavalry officer rested at Brandy Station. The old horse still presents a fine appearance, but is nearly deaf and growing blind. He was brought from the Kilpatrick farm in Sussex county to this village a few days ago, and is kept in the private stables of Dr. Sol Van Etten, a veteran of the war. He is groomed by Mandy Lee Landgraff, who was one of Kilpatrick's cavalry scouts. Old Spot will be led in the parade, bearing Kilpatrick's empty army saddle, and Old Ben, who was the general's body servant during the war.

Boycotting the Colonel Vote.

Dr. Joseph V. Bowles, Thomas McPherson, an agent of Kennedy No. 752, K. of L., of South Chicago, has arrived in this city for the purpose of trying to induce members of the assembly engaged in making rails from the Calumet Iron and Steel works at South Chicago, at which a lockout has prevailed for some months. He induced most of the carpenters and retailers to refrain from buying the rails.

THE LACKAWANNA LINE.

Surveyors at Work on a Western Connection.

BUFFALO, June 14.—Ever since the extension of the Lackawanna to this city, in 1883, it has been the belief of those who knew the policy of the management that this was the first step toward the building or leasing of a line to Chicago. The outlook west from this city are practically controlled by Vanderbilts, the only independent route being the Grand Trunk, which, on account of its close relations with the West Shore, did not prove to be such a valuable connection as was expected. The Nickel Plate was taken as a western outlet, but many disputes occurred between the officers of the Lackawanna at times because thoroughly disgusted. A surveying party under pay of the Lackawanna has, it is learned, been working along the route south of the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate running a line west. The course taken by them is several miles south of these roads. It is thought by some in a position to know that a line will be built from this city to Marion, O., where connection will be made with the Chicago and Atlantic and through that road with the Wabash. The surveyors are from New York and have evidently been sent out at the suggestion of the board of directors.

WELL-DIGGING ASSOCIATION.

Texas Stockmen Driven Into the Earth for Water.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., June 14.—Cattlemen in this section, drifting by dear experience, resulting from the recent disastrous drought, have organized an association with a command, for the purpose of sinking wells at regular intervals on the vast pastures lying west of here to the Rio Grande. The undertaking is gigantic, but the value of such wells can be estimated at millions of dollars. A dozen wells have already been dug and good water found at a depth of about 200 feet. As the diggers get further west, it is calculated that artesian wells will have to be sunk. Leading cattle and sheep men of this section have put it at only a question of a few years before the great flocks and herds in Presidio and far western Texas will be supplied with water. An enormous number of horses are passing northward through Collin county this season for northern markets. The output of horses is estimated at double the number of the previous years. This ought to make horses cheap at St. Louis, Chicago and the east.

DEAFY KNOCKED SILLY.

A Cousin of John L. Sullivan Unable to Resist the Champion.

GREENFIELD, Mass., June 14.—James Deasy, alias Kilby, alias Sullivan, who claims to be a cousin of the champion, John L., came to town a few days ago and challenged James Carroll, of Holyoke, champion New England light weight, who is instructing pupils here. After eight four rounds with Carroll, Marquis of Queensberry rules, Carroll accepted, and after many hitches in the arrangements the fight came off at 8 a. m. yesterday on the banks of the Connecticut, in the presence of 150 sports, who had raised a purse of $100 for the winner. Four brisk, hot rounds were fought, characterized by hard punishment inflicted by Carroll upon his opponent. Deasy was used up in the second round, but managed to face Carroll, with a bleeding and badly pummelled face, till the fourth round, when, with a fierce, straight-arm blow, Carroll knocked him senseless. Deasy had few friends, and was uneasily insulted and abused by the crowd.

Poisoned In His Cell.

BALTIMORE June 14.—The coroner's jury in the case of Nelson Palmer, the young stock broker, who died Saturday night in a cell at the central police station after having been arrested on a charge of forgery, rendered a verdict that the death of Palmer was caused by some unknown poison administered by his own hand.

Quaint Fancies of Famous Composers.

Stechini worked surrounded by his pet cats.

Franklin composed while his head reside while lying in bed.

Auber composed while on horseback, riding at full gallop.

Bach found that his imagination had fewer vent in a dark room.

Meyerbeer drew his finest inspirations from a thunder-storm.

Adolphe Adam got his ideas while buried under an elder down quilt.

Sir Arthur Sullivan is addicted to Bass' ale and thinks it helps his composing.

Gluck composed best out of doors in a meadow, with his piano and a bottle of champagne.

Wagner, when composing his historical operas, arranged himself in the appropriate mediæval garb.—New York Graphic.

Inventor of the Ball-Catcher's Mask.

The mask which base-ball catchers now wear was the invention of Fred Thayer. He was practising for Harvard nine in the winter of 1876-7, when Harrold Ernst, one of the fastest of left-hers, was on the nine. Jim Tyng, who caught, said that he would not stand behind the batter unless he could get some sort of protection for his face. The result was that Thayer fixed up a sort of cage, which has gradually become the improved mask of to-day.—Chicago Tribune.

Beards in the French Army.

Gen. Boulanger, minister of war, has resolved to sanction beards in the French army. Officers and sergeants may wear any amount of beard, provided it is worn long enough to conceal the number of their regiments on their collar. For private there is no restriction. Side whiskers, however, must be worn alone, and short hair, especially behind, is still compulsory.—Chicago Journal.

CHICAGO'S BEST MAYOR.

CARTER HARRISON AMONG THE ANARCHISTS AND STRIKERS.

A Mare-Mounted Man Whose Face Was Familiar During the Great Riots—Famous Because He is a Personification of Chicago's Peculiar Characteristics.

Special Correspondence of the News.

CHICAGO, June 7. This breezy town has just passed through a world of troubles and tribulations. What with the struggles between ambitious labor and zealous capital, wild-eyed dynamiters and brave police, the times have been full of turmoil and the air drenched red with reverberations and rumors of war. But throughout all the commotion there has been one conspicuous figure toward which all eyes have turned, one representative of law, one commander of forces, one universal arbitrator, one giver of advice, dictator, referee and spokesman who has never lost faith in himself, in the police, in Chicago, the constitution, the law or the American eagle. His name is Harrison—Carter Henry Harrison—by his 500,000 subjects called simply "Carter," or "Carter" for short. Wherever crowds gathered and trouble brewed there this mayor of Chicago was to be found, with a loose rest about his florid body, a rakish slouch to his hat, and that broad back of his high-bred Kentucky mare between his legs. "Carter and the mare—there go the mayor and the mare" has been the cry a score of times a day, first among the strikers at McCormick's great reaper factory, then in the Bohemian district, where you may travel a mile and see no American name on a sign board or American face among the throngs on the sidewalks, and again patrolling that wilderness of huge heaps and noisy planing mills known as the lumber district. Everybody in Chicago, even the dirty faced child playing in the alley, knows Carter and everybody knows the mare. And as the noble matched and matchless pair moved from crowd to crowd and through street after street shouts of recognition greeted them on all sides. Some called him "Carter," a few ward workers addressed him as "the old man," the women bowed low and exclaimed "Yer honor," while one bold small boy immortalized himself by crying "Hi! Hi! Use of the epithet in an offense well nigh capital in Chicago, and the bystanders expected to see the young criminal arrested and confined in a dungeon cell without delay, but instead the paternal mayor read the offender a lecture which will delight the ring in his ears till Gabriel's trump sounds.

To strikers and assembled crowds the mayor made many speeches. To employers he gave much good advice. In the midst of rioters he was as fearless as a cavalryman in a charge, and in the midst of danger he was all vigilance and energy. He was not in the Haymarket when that awful bomb exploded, but he was soon thereafter among those wounded at the Desplaines street police station house. Daily the gray mare has been stood for a half hour before the city hospital, while Carter went from cot to cot, the sufferers whose limbs and bodies had been torn by Anarchist bombs and bullets.

It is easy to see that this equestrian publicist is a man of many accomplishments. He is altogether extraordinary. He is picturesque. Not a very great man, nor an exceptionally good man, nor a notoriously bad man, he has served the public well and has made as much of the town he rules. There are an hundred congressmen and a score of senators in Washington, but nowhere throughout the country's length and breadth than he. He was in congress once himself—and now has an ambition to return after sitting eight years in the mayor's chair of America's interior metropolis—but it was not in Washington that his fame was wrought. It was here, and if we look for the whyfore we find in him that he has not only been Chicago's chief magistrate, but her impersonator. He has been a reflex of many of Chicago's most characteristics. He has been, and is, Chicago personified.

Like Chicago, he is bold, buoyant, undaunted. self-complacent, self confident, prosperous, rich, generous, pew-holding, but not prim; ambitious, approachable, self-loving, easy-going on the Sabbath day, tolerant of saloons, gamblers and pug-abouts, but the man to whom money is the natural, full of aim, business, brains, breeze and conceit.

Sight-seeing visitors in Chicago rarely fail to ask to be shown the mayor. The business man from New York, the stock drover from Kansas, the miner from Colorado, request the head of the municipality to be pointed out the mare. They have heard of him. In some manner their curiosity concerning him has been aroused. He has come to make him famous they do not know, nor does anybody else. But analysis shows that he is notorious, because he stands typical of Chicago.

It is difficult for non-residents to understand how big a man Carter Harrison is in Chicago, how he is regarded as the autocrat of the town and the rich and powerful Chicago exceeds in population eight or ten states of the Union, and in wealth and importance three or four. In principality the mayor is supreme. There is a common council, but he has the power of veto, and in the control of the patronage, which all good aldermen bungle for, he excels the council. All of the other departments of the city government, excepting a few perfunctory offices, are safely in his hands. He fills them with whom he likes. Even the police justices are his. And to this lawful power the aggressiveness, individuality and personality of the man is added, and you have a potentate who moves in the orbit of an emperor.

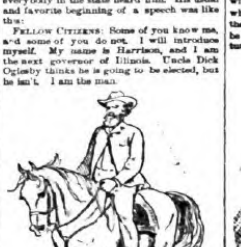
There was a time when the mayor, mare-mounted, could not ride through the streets of Chicago without being followed by the huzza as of endless crowds. He was popular. The less of a man he was the more of every man a month, without regard to politics. When he returned from a European trip, during which he had scanned the parades of the American eagle in the shadow of the cuirassier of a half dozen effete monarchies, the crowd which met him at the railway station covered ten acres. In its midst the fat mare was borne to the carriage which no mares drew triumphant through the streets. But now the popularity has waned, and the favorite has lost many votes, to which men of all parties contributed their suffrage, in a fled a year ago to a contested election.

Yet in many ways Carter Harrison is truly the best Mayor Chicago ever had. In a city of jobbery, he has been in no jobs; surrounded by a corrupt council, he has been clean, and more than once has interposed his veto between blackmailers and their booty. His financial control has been close, able and honest. His police and fire departments have become models. He has changed Chicago from thieves, garroters and sand-baggers. At the same time, strangely inconsistent, he gave peace to the gamblers as long as their great political influence was exerted in his behalf, turning his police loose upon them only when they turned against him. All the while he has been over lenient with tough saloons and unclean dance houses.

In politics he has been something of a demagogue as well as a brilliant leader. Even the Socialists, cousins-German to the red-eyed Anarchists, have known his favor. One Socialistic leader is now one of his office-holders, and The Arbeiter Zeitung, late organ of the Socialist, Spies, was once "official paper of the city."

If this picturesque mayor is noted for anything more than his nerve and his handsome person, it is for his fluency. He is a wonderful talker. He speaks every year more speeches than any other man in the west. His wit is of true temper and always ready. In conversation, crowd, convention, or at the meetings he is a veritable reservoir of well-mixed humor, eloquence, sarcasm and anecdote, which needs only to be tapped to run forth a torrent. There have been few campaigns more brilliant than the one he made for governor of Illinois. He spoke two or three times a day for six weeks. Nearly every time he did he captured him. His usual and favorite beginning of a speech was like this:

"FELLOW CITIZENS: Some of you know me, and some of you do not. I will introduce myself. My name is Harrison, and I am the next governor of Illinois. Uncle Dick Oglesby thinks he is going to be elected, but he isn't. I am the man.



THE MAYOR AND THE MARE.

This audacity, diversified and semi-libel, was good campaigning. But the odds against him were too great, and the mayor made his third race, strapped his modesty, and risked his reputation as a prophet for naught. Uncle Dick Oglesby was elected.

Carter also stood for the senate. He went down to Springfield at the beginning of that historic fight, which finally resulted in the re-election of Logan, and here his propensity for speechmaking found free vent. He burst into flights of rhetoric at every opportunity. Almost any evening he could be found sitting in the hotel offices, surrounded by gaping crowds of rural legislators. Of all the many candidates only one man talked, and he the mayor of Chicago. The personal pronoun I, and praise of the works himself had performed in the matter of the state, were his thick upon his lips. But Morrison was the choice of the caucus.

The evening in which the nomination was to be made Carter Harrison was walking from one hotel to another. On the way he met two legislators. They were not intending to vote for him, and he stopped to labor with them. He talked over the state ticket, promised to vote for the mayor, and desired to hasten on to the caucus hall. But the loquacious candidate was not satisfied. He so loved the sound of Warren voice that he was loath to stop. The winds whistled, snow fell, street lamps blinked with passing hours, and carriages and pedestrians hastened by. But the mayor kept on and on, though a shout rose above the moaning of the wind, and the mayor paused.

"What's the noise about?" he inquired of a man who was shuffling along through the snow.

"Morrison nominated on first ballot," was the reply.

The two shivering legislators looked at each other in amazement. Their two votes, which the mayor's eloquence had won, the mayor's garrulity had lost. The caucus was over.

It is the fashion in Chicago to "go and see the mayor about it." Women who have been worsted in neighborhood quarrels, individuals dissatisfied with their water rates or gas bills, merchants with grievances or corporations with complaints, employes who want more wages, employers whose men are on strike, fathers with unruly sons—all call on the mayor. His doors are always open. He is the court of Chicago. And when he has listened for a time in patience many words of wisdom fall from his lips.

Every day or so the mayor's office is filled by fifteen or twenty bright young men with tabs of paper and indifferently sharpened lead pencils. As the mayor talks the young men write.

"Now print this just as I say it to you," the mayor commands, "or you'll get no more news in my office."

Those young men are reporters, and the mayor is giving the public, through them and the more or less great and moral journals which employ them, a free daily lecture. As trite as not he is lecturing the newspapers, for he and they do not get along well together. They all are prone to misleading him, and he rarely fails to back. Several of them he sued for libel because of intimations that he had had a hand in the notorious Cronin affair.

Mayor Harrison is an aristocrat in whose veins flows the blood of that Harrison family which gave a president to the United States and a governor to Virginia. He has a Kentuckian's love for fine horses, a Virginian's adoration for beautiful women, and in his whole nature is a touch of the south. Though a man of the people he everywhere maintains his dignity. He has a "How are you?" for the ward worker, but not a shake of the hand. He gets close to the line from the immunity from arrest, but they cannot speak to him or enter his office with his consent. He is a good man and a bad one, an able man and a weak one, a statesman and a demagogue, an aristocrat and a politician by turns. He has two radicisms in his character, and there are not a few faults in the combination, but in the sight of many in Chicago he has done more for the city, in the way of public improvements, good order, decency, administration and economy of the finances, than any mayor since Chicago became an interior metropolis. He will not be elected mayor another time and probably will go once more to congress, and the mare would make a sensation on Pennsylvania avenue, and the admiration his splendid horsemanship would be sure to excite could not fail to stir the ambition which lies more or less dormant in every Chicagoan's breast, and which, in his case, has already been realized by The New York Sun's suggestion of Carter Harrison for president.

AROUND THE WORLD.

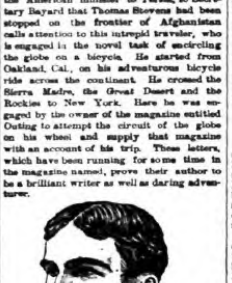
A MAN WHO INTENDS TO CIRCLE THE GLOBE ON A BICYCLE.

He Started from California—Having Traversed the American Continent and Europe, He Succeeds in Crossing Persia, But is Stopped at Afghanistan.

The announcement from F. B. Winston, the American minister to Persia, to Secretary Bayard that Thomas Stevens had been arrested on the frontier of Afghanistan calls attention to this intrepid traveler, who is engaged in the novel task of encircling the globe on a bicycle. He started from Oakland, Cal., on his adventurous bicycle trip from the Pacific. He crossed the Sierra Madre, the Great Desert and the Rockies to New York. Here he was engaged by the owner of the magazine entitled Outing to attempt the circuit of the globe on his wheel and supply that magazine with an account of his trip. These letters, which have been running for some time in the magazine named, prove their author to be a brilliant writer as well as daring adventurer.



THOMAS STEVENS.

Thomas Stevens is a representative Kansas ranchman, he is but 32 years of age, but almost the whole of that time has been spent on the plains west of the Mississippi. He crossed the Atlantic in April, 1885, was landed at Queenstown, took a steamer to the French coast, mounted his wheel again, and after traversing France, Germany, Austria, the Turkish provinces and Persia, he found himself in Meshed. Before leaving Teheran for Meshed, Mr. Stevens was careful to get permission of the Russian government to pass through the czar's dominions on his way to Pekin, and after receiving such permission provided himself with sufficient Russian coin to savvy him on his journey. After incurring this expense he was arrested by Russian authorities on the confines of Persia, and told he must not proceed on Russian territory. His only way, then, was to pass through Afghanistan.

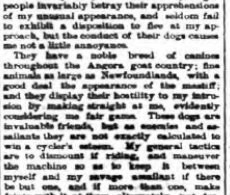
But on arriving there he has been obliged to turn back, because he is a born Englishman, and does not take the precaution of becoming an American citizen. He will now have to retrace his steps toward Constantinople, from there he will again take his way through India, which will make the journey to Pekin much longer for him. In one of his recent letters he tells of the troubles he has with an enemy which he finds everywhere in the east—the dogs.

KEEPING THE DOGS AT BAY.

The sight of my approaching figure is, of course, the signal for a general suspension of operations, and a wondering of what sort of a being I am. If I am riding along some well worn trail, the women and younger people invariably betray their apprehensions of my unusual appearance, and seldom fail to exhibit a disposition to flee at my approach, the barking of their dogs causes me not a little annoyance.

They have a noble breed of canines throughout the country, good country, fine animals as large as Newfoundlands, with a good deal the appearance of the mastiff; and they display their hostility to my intrusion by making straight at me, evidently considering me fair game. These dogs are invaluable friends, but as enemies and assailants they are not exactly calculated to win a cyclist's esteem. My general tactics are to dismount if riding, and maneuver the machine so as to keep it between myself and the dog. This is smallish work to be but one, and if more than one, make feints with it at them alternately, not forgetting to caress them with a handy stone whenever occasion offers.

In his last letter he describes his trials until reaching Angora, where he presents himself to the sultan of Turkey. Of him he says: Suleiman Effendi appears to be remarkably intelligent, compared with many Asiatics, and, moreover, of quite a practical turn of mind; he inquires what I should do in case of a serious break-down somewhere in the far interior, and the curiosity to see it in actual use finally led to my having that notwithstanding the extreme airiness of my strange vehicle, I have had no serious mishap on the whole journey across two continents. Alluding to the bicycle as the latest product of that western ingenuity that appears so marvelous to the Asiatic mind, he then remarks with some ingenuation, "the next thing we shall see will be Americans crossing over to India in balloons, and dropping down at Angora for refreshments."



A RACE WITH A TURKISH TROOPER.

An individual named Mustapha, a blacksmith who has acquired a certain reputation for skill on account of the beautiful horseshoes he turns out, now presents himself and begs leave to examine the mechanism of the bicycle, and the question arises among the officers standing by, as to whether Mustapha would be able to make one; Mustapha himself thinks he could, providing he had also always at hand to copy from.

Contested Elegance.

What is the last word in each of the following lines?

Three merry boys they built a ——,
Their locust was a little thing a ——,
They manned it well, both fore and ——;
Then started for a sail.

There came just then, an awful ——,
Near and more near the boat, when ——,
He, spashing round their little ——,
Upset it with his tail.

So he these merry boys did ——,
Which was to them a bitter ——,
Indeed, they took it very ——,
And thus at him did rail:

"It was quite a serious ——,
That laid our hopes and pleasures ——,
A grudge you sure have surely ——,
But 'tis of no avail.

"For spread around you safe from every ——,
That holds you safe from every ——,
You have no fear of moral ——;
And so make our wail."

A Girls' Tricycle Club.

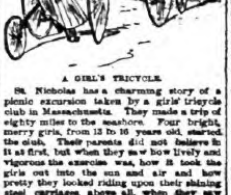
When the people get used to seeing girls and women riding upon tricycles, they will be no more surprised at it than they are now at the sight of a boy upon a bicycle. Doctors pronounce tricycling the most healthful of exercises. It makes girls strong and graceful. It gives them plenty of outdoor exercise, and makes them self-reliant and clear-brained.

As an exercise, it is not tiring as walking, and you can get a longer pace which you want to go nearly as soon as you could on horseback. The machine does not get tired, like the horse.

Fashionable ladies in England use the tricycle very commonly over the long, pleasant country roads, and in the small towns. They are beginning to do so in this country, too. For riding short distances upon roads near villages, these machines are preferable to a horse, or even a horse and buggy.

The Columbia is said to be the best make of tricycle. One advantage of such a machine is that while it can be used instead of a horse in many ways, it does not cost more than a quarter as much in the first place, and does not cost anything to keep.



A GIRL'S TRICYCLE.

St. Nicholas has a charming story of a picnic excursion taken by a girls' tricycle club in Massachusetts. They made a trip of eighty miles to the seashore. Four bright, merry girls, from 12 to 16 years old, started the club. Their parents did not believe in it at first, but when they saw how lively and vigorous the exercise was, how it took the girls out into the sun and air and how pretty they looked riding upon their shining steel carriages, above all, when they saw their sturdy daughters had not lost their hearts on it, the fathers and mothers gave in gracefully, and one young lady after another appeared spinning through the village streets till it got to be a familiar and pleasant sight. "If girls and women knew what comfort one takes with a tricycle, half the hacks would be thrown out of use," said one of the girls.

On their 80-mile trip to the seashore the four girls took with them only two of the masculine genius. One was a faithful black man who had lived with the family for three of them for many years, the other was a tall boy brother of one of the girls. The colored man was named Joe, and he led the way in the procession and often came to four girls, then the big boy brother, who gallantly led the ladies precede him.

THE PROCESSION.

Joe was a skillful tricyclist himself. The procession looked like a real picture with Joe's black face and white teeth.

They went fly-by past farm houses, where the people had never seen a tricycle. Men, women and children gazed at them with open eyes and open mouths.

"Ma! ma!" cried a white-headed young one, "come here quick! Here's a girl a-ridin' three wheels on a chair!"

Where hills were steep and the roads up them heavy and sandy, the tricyclers had to walk. But on good roads their steel steeds were not so good as horses. But they were merry and strong, and made the best of things, so that they did not mind the walk up hill. They even urged on one of the girl's tricycles, but she did not score at all, but sped bravely on her way. Some of the machines are made with a little rear seat to which a value is strapped. In this way quite long journeys may be taken. It is raised heavily once during the trip, when the party crossed a ferry. Then Joe and the young brother piled the tricycles into a sort of frame. They put branches across them, spread the girls' waterproofs over them, and so made a real comfortable raft, on which the ladies crept and were sheltered from the rain. It was like camping out, and they enjoyed it as much as any part of the journey.

Boys prefer the bicycle for their use. There was lately in Boston a meeting of the "League of Wheelmen," which is known as the society of bicyclists calls itself. There were 800 youthful riders, and some lady tricyclists, too. The bicyclists had racing, and George Webber, the champion, went nearly half a mile up hill in 3 minutes 16 3-5 seconds. He won a gold medal.

Buried Cities.

Each sentence contains the name of a city, with the letters in regular order: 1. The month of October never is very cold. 2. How much, I should say, when they do such heavy work. 3. There was an Indian engraved on the silver pitcher. 4. You must quit overworking, or you will be ill, no doubt. 5. His face is as red as a rose. 6. A peculiar gait. 6. Can you command a layman to do what is the pastor's work? 7. I love nice winter weeds. 8. The convicts are all somber suits. I should say, when they do such heavy work.

JOTTINGS.

—A committee of the Union county Board of Freeholders inspected the Essex county Insane Asylum on Friday.

—Allen, the stationer, 23 West Front street asks our readers to call and see "Alden's latest, biggest and best offer."

—A new cement walk is being placed in front of the Crescent rink, greatly improving the appearance thereby.

—The annual reunion of the surviving members of the Eighth N. J. Regiment, New Jersey State Volunteers, will be held in New Brunswick to-morrow.

—A Union County Press Club will be organized in Elizabeth this evening, at which time all the members of the press throughout the county are invited to be present.

—The Common Council of Newark recently voted an appropriation of $250 for the purchase of fireworks to be used in connection with the Fourth of July celebration.

—The Borough of Dunellen is not to be behind the age. At a meeting of the Board of Commissioners held last week it was decided to establish a Board of Health and the necessary steps taken to the formation of the same, we understand were taken.

—The parade of the Bellerophon Wheelmen and visiting clubs which was to have taken place at Westfield to-night, has been postponed until Thursday night. The Plainfield Bicycle Club expect to participate in the parade and will start from their club house at 7.15 Thursday evening and wheel to Westfield.

—The little pet black-and-tan dog belonging to Mr. J. R. Van Deventer of Washington avenue, North Plainfield, which was bitten by a supposed rabid dog some weeks ago, and which has since been closely watched by the family of Mr. Van Deventer, was shot on Saturday. The animal showed no signs of the rabies, but it was thought best to shoot it.

—During April last Fenton Hibbitts swore out a warrant for the arrest of one Daniel Connors of North Plainfield, charged with having used threats. Connors has since made himself "scarce" until last evening when he appeared before Justice Nash and gave himself up. Upon his promise to do better the Justice paroled him on his good behavior.

—One of Plainfield's promising young men was treated to a sound thrashing by a woman at the depot Sunday evening for insulting her. In attempting to escape he stumbled and fell and before he could regain his feet the angry woman had caught up with him and boxed his ears with an umbrella until she was forced to desist from sheer exhaustion. She has probably taught the gay Lothario a wholesome lesson.

—Since the new dog ordinance has been adopted by the Council considerable comment has been indulged in as to what constitutes a "muzzle." Some of the country stores opened for sale of conspiring with the law are of little or no protection whatever. It is the intention of the city authorities to vigorously enforce the dog ordinance. No muzzle satisfies the requirements of the ordinance which does not allow it absolutely impossible for the dog to bite.

—To-night the first entertainment of the kind ever given in Plainfield will be held in the Park Avenue Baptist Church, the occasion being a Japanese Cranzy. The entertainment is to consist of songs and music by the Tuxedo Department Band, of which Professor Ikima is the Cranzy Quartette, Japanese eggs and numerous other articles of ancient design will be offered for sale. A nominal admission entitles the visitor to see all that is to be seen, and purchase that which he may.

—Two of Netherwood's residents are to settle their little difficulty through the Union County Courts. It appears that one of them had last recently cleared his lawn of all the stones found thereon, making a heap of the same in front of the house. A neighbor's son undertook the work of throwing them back on the lawn, one by one. This brought forth angry expressions and a subsequent twisting of the boy's ears. The father of the boy sought redress through the courts and the offender was placed under bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The Joint Commission of the Legislature in Session.

An unexpected meeting of the Joint Commission appointed by the Legislature at its last session to inquire into the advisability of separating the sexes at the State prison at Trenton was held at Long Branch yesterday afternoon. A resolution was offered by Senator Chattle before the Legislature and adopted, establishing a separate prison for female convicts, including a reformatory for girls between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one, and to be under the control and management of female officers, caused the appointment of Senators T. G. Chattle of Long Branch and William H. Carter of Burlington, with Assemblyman Thomas C. Olcott of Mount Holly and John Martin of South Amboy to act with R. B. Seymour of Jersey City as such commission. All the members were present except Mr. Seymour.

Mrs. Sarah J. Downes, president of the New Jersey branch of the Christian Temperance Union and vice-president of the United States Union was present. Senator Carter was chosen president and Assemblyman Olcott was elected as vice-president. Mr. J. S. Crane of Asbury Park was elected secretary. An address was made by Mrs. Downes, who spoke in touching tones of the degradation to which convicts were made to endure, and promised the aid and permanent assistance of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the penitentiary such as is situated in Indiana or the one near Boston, provided it were offered exclusively by women.

Assemblyman Olcott suggested that the Commission visit the different reformatories for women in Indiana and Boston and make a full report at the next session of the Legislature.

A resolution was introduced and adopted requesting the Commission to meet in Jersey City on July 5th next, at four o'clock in the afternoon, and from there proceed to Boston Mass., in order to avoid delaying our forms for press.

—Police Officer Grant last evening arrested John Walters for being drunk and causing a disturbance. This morning he was fined two dollars by the City Judge, which he paid.

—We have had a route beginning at Franklin Place and La Grande avenue and extending outward, which has been run independently by a boy whose ill manners have caused our readers so much annoyance that we have finally been compelled to include the route in our regular route system, beginning to-day, which we believe will be more satisfactory all around.

—On Sunday night there arrived on the 10.46 p. m. train from New York, a lady accompanied by an infant child. One of the hackmen approached her and solicited her patronage, the woman stating that she wished to be taken to a hotel. Instead of driving to the hotel as directed the hackman is alleged to have driven into Richmond street to the north of Front street, and made an insulting proposition to the woman. The story is that the insult was resented indignantly, but the commotion caused thereby frightened the infant. Its shrieks were heard by a gentleman who was passing in the neighborhood at the time and he at once sought the assistance of a night-watchman who is employed in that locality, and together they pursued the fleeing vehicle, unable, however to overtake it. They saw it going over the brook, and the police have a description of the driver, whom the failure of the woman to make a complaint interfered with his arrest, and will be receiving punishment if so richly deserves.

PERSONAL.

The elocution class of the Plainfield High School will be tendered a reception in Assembly Hall to-night.

Rev. Mr. Mitchell, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church conducted the funeral services over the remains of the seven-year-old son of Harry and Lucy Colson in that edifice at half-past three o'clock this afternoon.

Mrs. Caroline VanDoren a widow lady residing on Madison avenue at the corner of Fifth street, died last evening, aged 79 years. Deceased had been ailing for about three weeks and the cause of death assigned was "relvular disease of the heart."

The funeral of the late Mrs. Sarah A. Becker who died suddenly at the home of Mr. I. H. Allen early on Saturday morning, took place from the residence of her nephew, Mr. T. B. Drake, on Duer street, North Plainfield, at half-past two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Some days ago we noticed the illness of young son of Adelbert Vail of West Fourth street from scarlet fever. Since that time the mother and three children have been taken down with the disease, and although yet confined to the house no serious result is anticipated.

Upon arriving at his home on Saturday evening Mr. Kosehli was confronted by a party of young people. Among their number were Miss Philippine Meyers, daughter of Henry Meyers of Warrenville, and William Newmiller, who presented themselves as the contracting parties to a matrimonial contract. Rev. Mr. Koschli performed the marriage ceremony, after which the happy couple left for their home in joyous spirits.

Mr. and Mrs. Ethan Lanphear of Central avenue arrived home this morning at ten o'clock, after an absence of about eight weeks, during which time they have traveled in all about 8,000 miles. Mr. Lanphear has from time to time furnished the readers of THE NEWS with interesting accounts of his travels, another installment appearing today. A number of very kind complimentary communications have been received and are awaiting publication.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron M. Powell of East Sixth street sailed to-day per steamer "Wisconsin" for Europe, to be absent from the city for several weeks. During their absence Mr. and Mrs. Powell will attend the fourth congress of the international Federation for the abolition of State Regulation of Vice and the Promotion of Social Purity, to be held in London. They will also be present at the British and Colonial Temperance Congress, which will convene in London during July.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

A Plainfield Tourist on the Wing.

LIVINGSTON, M. T., June 2, 1886.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—The sun is bright this morning. The snowy mountains around us glitter in beauty. We have to wait for an afternoon train for the Yellowstone Park, sixty miles away, and will drop a few notes. Our last communication was written on our arrival at Portland, Oregon. We took the cars there for Salem, a beautifully located town, and found the State Grangers in session. But as we were not Grangers we knew a liver could not take us ten miles away into the wheat-growing mountains of tens of thousands of acres. The sight is most beautiful to behold, the wheat just being in the head. Here we find an old acquaintance who emigrated to this country over 30 years ago from Worcester by ox-team load roots, and was over six months making the journey. We found the old man happily situated on the south side of the mountain with his son-in-law, where the outlook over the Willamette Valley and the great wheat field of three counties, is grand. The combined families of the old gentleman have nearly one thousand acres and most of the land is sowed with wheat. The old man is now 84 years old, hale and hearty. We had not met before in over 40 years, and we had a happy greeting as the old gentleman said he had not seen a man since he had been in that county that knew so many of his friends in the East as I did. He would not allow us to return with our team, so we remained over for a visit. The old gentleman left his team in care to the son and we kept up our visiting until we separated, when we returned to Portland, rested, took in the beauties of the city, attended service Saturday evening in the Chinese Mission Chapel, and at a Baptist church during the morning, heard an able sermon upon the ancient flood and the wickedness of the people in that generation, comparing them with the present and giving the people a warning. At three o'clock we crossed the Willamette river and took the cars on the Northern Pacific road for this place. We followed up the Columbia river for 240 miles. The train stopped 23 miles from Portland to give the passengers a chance to view the falls, that fall 822 feet from the magnificent mountain above us to the river below, and the boat rounds and in a wide bound foaming waters. But we are journeying and pass on up the river with cliffs hanging over our heads thousands of feet above us, and come to the valley where the river is hundreds of feet below us, fighting its way through the narrow passage of rocky cliffs. Coming in morning sunshine. And one night soon to and sweetire for rest and, of course, lose much of nature's beauty, as sleep we must have in taking such a journey. But morning dawned upon us and we find ourselves nearing Wallula Junction, cross the snake river and across the plains, flowing south of the great bend of the Columbia river. These plains are gloomy and desolate; the land poor, the cattle ranches covered with rather poor cattle. Much of the land is called "bunch land." Pitch pine grows, with only now and then a good fit for cultivation, are to be seen. We leave Washington Territory and cross the northern part of Idaho. Washington Territory in localities is heavily timbered, having trees 275 feet high and as straight as a string and eight feet in diameter. We have journeyed all day and 960 feet flood is 11,225 feet high and Mt. Tacoma, 14,444 feet high and can be seen from a long distance. As we journey along, the Cascades are wonderful as seen in passing up the Columbia river, but we must not dwell on them. The mountains of Idaho is wild in the extreme, with deep gorges, high mountains and narrow valleys, usually only room enough for river and railroad, now and then room for a small lake, where people tent and fish for the season. But we pass on to a beautiful little valley where everything is green and beautiful. Here it is said the big turnip grew that took the premium at the World's Fair at New Orleans. But night overtakes us and we pass unaware of the fact, the Mormon bridge, Salt Lake and 960 feet long. Daylight appears as we pass on. Mountains are sometimes near and sometimes in the distance, until we arrive in Washington Territory. Slowly we creep up the mountains, while they appear in different shapes and, sometimes resemble hills of sand, large elephants, then a rhinoceros, or an old man smoking his pipe. Now we cross the Missouri river nearly 2,000 miles from its mouth, passing along its borders high amid the cliffs, while its waters are fighting their way through the mountains below us in almost wildness. We leave the river and pass over a summit, through a tunnel, and open out into a valley pleasant and beautiful, where the earth has been dug over for gold, but where now stands the city of Helena, and the surrounding hills are still being mined for the precious metal that so attracts mankind the world over. The ranches are large in the slopes in this vicinity, and the grazing fine. Stock are to be seen that would win in any show. We pass on and up to the highest pass through the tunnel, this time 5,570 feet above the sea, the Continental Divide, the Atlantic and Pacific. Pacific, it being 5,555 feet above sea level, and we are on the eastern slope now prepare. We have a short stop at Livingston at the junction of the railroad that runs nearly 60 miles to the Yellow Stone that we may hereafter mention. TOURIST.

Meeting of the T. A. B. Society.

The members of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society held a business meeting in St. Mary's hall at eight o'clock last evening. President Keeney presided. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, four candidates were admitted to membership. An amendment to the by-laws was taken from the table, read the second time and subsequently adopted. A special committee to make the necessary arrangements for a picnic was appointed by the chair. The president then appointed the following committees for the ensuing year and the meeting adjourned:

Committee to visit the sick—John Daly, Andrew Nolan and Thomas Fitzgerald.

Investigating Committee—M. J. Harding, Thomas Hughes, John Carty and John Higgins.

Choosing a Site for the Soldiers' Home.

The commissioners appointed to choose a site for a new Soldiers' Home visited Perth Amboy a few days ago. The plot offered for their disposal there contains fifty acres of land and is situated on Raritan river. The place is known as Eagleswood and the price is said to be $10,000. There is a building on the ground that was erected about forty years ago at a cost of over $80,000. The commissioners have thus far visited but five of the scores of places offered for that purpose. Whether or not Plainfield is among the number remains to be seen. The Setherwood Hotel is spoken of as one of the sites to be visited by the commissioners.

STATE NOTES.

The Caldwell High School commencement will be held on June 24. Six scholars will be graduated.

According to the new census Montclair has 1,672 children of school age, showing an increase of 100 over last year.

Julius Yolskie, a painter living in Liberty street, Union Hill, attempted to commit suicide yesterday morning by hanging himself in a barn behind his house. His wife hearing a noise in the barn rushed out and cut him down in time to save his life.

The management of the Monmouth County Agricultural Society met yesterday and it was unanimously resolved to offer to the Grand Army Department of New Jersey of the Republic the use of the fair grounds free for their annual summer encampment.

A large party of the friends and relatives of the unfortunate women and young boy who were drowned in the Hackensack river Sunday, worked unsuccessfully all day yesterday in the hope of recovering the bodies of Mrs. Keller and young Doran. The party will continue the search to-day.

Christina Johnson, 16 years of age, was taken suddenly ill while attending the Rev. Dr. Imbrie's Bible class in the First Presbyterian church, on Washington street, Jersey City, Sunday afternoon. She rose to go outside for a breath of fresh air and fell back into the Rev. Dr. Imbrie's arms. A commotion followed, but the services were not suspended. Miss Mulford, the present pastress-teacher of the class, will continue to teach another class in the Sunday school, which she has been for the past three years.

The President has nominated William R. Jones to be postmaster at Long Branch, at a salary of $1,800 per annum. A new postmaster will be appointed in a few days to succeed L. L. Mulford, the present postmaster at Salem. This position pays $1,700 per annum. The leading applicant is said to be Joseph D. Ferguson, of the late Salem Democrat. Postmaster Janney of Camden urged upon the New Jersey members of Congress the claims of Joseph Cooper, who has been in the service of the post-office department for the past fifteen years. He said the present building, which is rented, is a veritable rat-trap, unfit for human occupation.

—The telegraph operator at the Dunellen station has been discharged. He, together with the fireman on No. 30 drill engine is said to have entered at night one of the passenger cars belonging to the company at Dunellen recently which is against the rules. The fireman has also been suspended.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, to $22.50 per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated in the policy, and does not depend upon an appraisement. There are no Membership Fees, or Annual Dues, nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy, and the contract is clearly stated in each of the $600,000.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1875 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and it is Reserve Fund is over $1,000,000, on the 1st of June, 1886. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over $900,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. ## TORTURE OF A "SCAPE-GOAT."

Good Friday's Repentance in Mexico—Punishing the Wickedest Man.

Once a year, on Good Friday, the Mexicans select a victim for the whipping, and sometimes more than one. The selection is made by tasting the worst one of the lot. This is determined by all making a confession of their sins, and the worst mind deeds, and the one decided to be the worst sinner is selected as a sort of "scape-goat" for the balance.

The martyr is prepared at the church by being stripped nearly naked and by being prayed over. Then he is made to carry a heavy cross full four feet long, with the cross arm of five or six feet in length, and made of wood six to eight inches in diameter. He carries it to this cross is considerable, because to a place selected for the purpose, where there is another larger cross erected. Arriving at the upright cross, he carries his cross around it and is permitted to lay it down. Here the business takes a turn not quite so agreeable to the candidate, for he finds a crowd of women surrounding him. Two of these worshipers are armed with large cactus bushes of what is commonly called "tree cactus" or "cane cactus," on account of its being used for canes, or walking sticks of it. This cactus grows to the hight of three or four feet and is armed with thousands of needles, each of which is fully an inch long. The main stalk is as large as a man's wrist at the ground, branching off as it rises, and each branch having many lateral branches from three to five inches in length, all fully armed with needle-like thorns, which are very poisonous, the prick causing very painful, festering wounds in a short time.

Seizing one of the cactus bushes by the butt and which had been trimmed for the purpose, two ladies commence whipping the candidate on the naked back and marching him around the cross, the rest keeping up a confusion of singing and playing with music by a sort of wind instruments. Having whipped him around until their bushes are broken up, they form a pro-cession and march him back to the church door, where he is stopped. Here, with sticks like rakes, the adhering pieces of the cactus are scraped off of him and spread on the ground in the door where he is next to enter, making barefoot on the pieces of cactus. After this the victim is allowed to be taken to his home to get dressed, which process may be. He is not allowed to pull out the thorns until they come out by festering, and it frequently requires about six or eight months to get them all removed.

Festus's Appeal.

ELMO, June 15.—Mr. Thomas Sexton, M. P., has telegraphed to the mayor of Elmo urging all persons who value Irish national principles to avoid committing any acts of violence or outrage. This news the mayor has caused 15 be posted through out the town. The town authorities have offered a reward of £100 for the arrest of the persons who damaged the bishop's house.

MOST NOT WANTED.

NEW YORK SOCIALISTS DRAW THE LINE AT ANARCHISTS.

A Picnic and Circulars Define the Aims of the So-Called "Socialistic Labor Party"—Seeking to Control Political Power.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Most was not missed by the Socialists at their annual picnic, held at Lon park yesterday. Indeed, his presence in the penitentiary was the cause of much rejoic ng, and several of the speakers, who denounced the late leader of workingmen, were heartily cheered. The arrangements of the pic nic were in the hands of the national executive committee of the Socialistic Labor party. Two thousand Socialists, with their wives and children, enjoyed themselves at the picnic. There was dancing, singing, foot racing and target shooting. The main keet many in the large hall, where they listened to speeches. Pamphlets were distributed, from which the following abstracts were made by a reporter:

"Socialism and anarchism pursue contrary aims, and the success of the former will forever destroy the fanatical hopes of the latter.

"The Anarchist rejects all law, and respects only such as he himself considers just. He would have society converted to his ideas al present institutions are to be destroyed and they take possession.

"The following circulars were paid by Jay Gould for destroying our organization. could not more efficiently go about it than they do.

"To protest against being confounded with Anarchists, as we are the implacable enemies of all anarchism.

"The socialist demands are these:

"That the land, the instruments, of production (machines, factories, etc.) and the products of labor become the common property of the whole people.

"That all production be organ-ed cooperatively and be carried on under the direction of the commonwealth, as also the conception, distribution and the method of recording to the services rendered, and to the just needs of the individuals.

"To realize our demands, we strive to gain control of the political power with all proper means.

"The Socialistic Labor party claims the title of 'Labor Party,' because it recognizes the existence of an oppressed class of wage-workers as its fundamental truth, and the emancipation of this oppressed laboring class as its foremost object.

EX-SENATOR BRUCE

Employs His Time in Lecturing on Race Problems.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Ex-Senator Blanche K. Bruce, a former colored representative in the senate from Mississippi, has settled down in Washington. He owns a large Mississippi plantation, which gives him sufficient income to support his family. He has recent engagements to go into the lecture field. Mr. Bruce has prepared two lectures. One is "The Race Problem," and the other "The Future American." He points to fact from the facts is that the Indians and the Chinamen will have to go. The blacks and the Indians are different. He points to fact that the colored race is increasing as the evidence that the blacks are here to stay. He recognizes the faults of his race, but thinks that they are improving and will continue to improve. He is of the opinion that the acquisition of property by them will be the same stop-halter of luxury and destroy in a measure their extraordinary fecundity. The increase of this race in the future will be less one.

A LEAP FOR LIFE.

The Expensive Result of a Button in a Machine.

CHICAGO, June 15.—Fire destroyed Payne, Beires & Meanie's mattress factory yesterday. There were nineteen girls at work on the second floor when the fire broke out. Miss Vina Chelsea and Jennie O'Hara also plunged from the window to the ground and were picked up unconscious. They were seriously but not fatally injured. A button was the cause of the fire. An operative was feeding rags into the separating machine. A loose in the machine struck a button and a spark shot into the air and fell into the midst of the combustible material. The loss is estimated at $60 000.

Baker Breaks His Own Record.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 15.—Weshd Baker, Harvard's champion athletic runner, made a successful attempt yesterday afternoon to lower the amateur record for him-ff in the 220 yards dash. The track was level and lies on park on a straight-way course, and although the weather was very unfavorable, the record is the best made on a second. Baker held the best college and Canadian amateur record of 0:22 3-5. The best English amateur record was exactly the same, and was held by Mott Hall, Phillips at London in 1878. Ever since the Mott Haven game Baker has been running very fast, and it was generally expected that he would break the record. He started hard with him and Baker covered the distance in twenty-two seconds. He was also timed in 0:50 and 1:50 and 2:40 on each of these distances he broke the record also, although as there was only one timer at the latter distance the record cannot stand.

Cake Wages Adjusted.

MT PLEASANT Pa., June 15.—At a conference of the Mount Amalgamated association and the Connellsville coke operators in the coke region, held at Everson, an agreement on the wage question was reached, and will date from the first of June. The company stores are to be regulated by prices of town and country stores. The prices adopted are as follows: 5 cents per bushels for drawing coke; 5 cents per bushel for forking cars of 2,000 pounds. $4.50 for fixing cars over 2,000 pounds. Day rates are 15 cents per hour, and driver's $1.75 per day.

Summer Travel Arrangements.

JERSEY CITY, June 15.—The West Shore railroad will, during the summer season, run its Catskill mountain and Saratoga trains so as to connect with the Jersey City station of the Pennsylvania railroad, in which connections will be made to and from Brooklyn by the regular Annex boats, and with trains on the Pennsylvania railroad for New Jersey coast resorts, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and the south.

A GENERAL KNOCKDOWN.

Prize Fighters Found Each Other and Spectators Take a Hand.

JERSEY CITY, June 15.—Fifty sporting men assembled at an out-of-the-way resort in Jersey City last night to witness a fight to a finish between Paddy Welch and Tom Keenan. They agreed to battle for a purse of $100. Both are boarers weighing 140lbs. Keenan was defeated recently by Jack Burgess in twenty-three rounds. Dan Hart was referee and Tom Granger was timekeeper. From the start the men hit like sledge hammers. Keenan received Welch, and Keenan was loosed after by Young Maguire. In the first round Keenan succeeded in knocking Welch down just as time was called. In the second round Keenan again forced the fighting, and during the round planted a heavy blow on Welch's nose, breaking it. In the third round Welch led off, but Keenan fought savagely, and ended the round by knocking Welch down in the corner.

From that time until the battle ended Keenan was master of the field. In the fourth round he sent Welch to his knees. When the latter arose he was again sent to the floor by a heavy grass. At this time Welch called for the fight, while Keenan was strong and full of fight. As the men came together in the fifth round, Burgess told Welch to fight for his life. Welch made a sarcastic reply to Burgess. The latter lost his temper, jumped into the ring, and hit Keenan a heavy blow in the face, knocking him down. Instantly all was confusion. Every man present wanted to fight, and the rule was "hit a head when you see one." During the general row Burgess and Welch did fine places. The referee declared the fight a draw.

SEVERE STORM AT GALVESTON.

The Water Floods the Streets and Causes Much Damage.

GALVESTON, Tex., June 15.—A violent gale set in about sundown Sunday evening from the east, and increased in fury until o'clock yesterday morning when it was at its height, registering fifty miles per hour. At the same time torrents of rain fell, and at daybreak the water was rising rapidly all around the city. The streets are from 10 and 12 to northeast at 9 o'clock saved the city from being completely inundated. The water of the bay hat at 8 o'clock was 3 feet above the ordinary tide mark, and 2 feet above the level of the streets. All means of communication with the mainland was cut off. The Missouri Pacific was the first road to get a train in the mines of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railroad track approaching the long bridge over the bay is washed away, and it will take a week's time to repair the damage. The road used by the Missouri Pacific track meanwhile. The damage on the island, on the Gulf side, amounts to many thousand dollars. The track of the Gulf City street railway is washed away, and a number of bathhouses on the beach were carried away. Shipping is at seriously damaged. Large vessels broke the precaution to weigh anchor and stand out to sea, and rode out the storm in safety.

AN EX-MAYOR IN COURT.

Accused of Larceny by a New York Banker.

YONKERS, June 15.—A tall, well-dressed man entered the Yonkers police court yesterday and showing a summons to the clerk told him that he had been ordered to appear in the court to answer a charge of larceny brought against him. The larceny was one of three $1,000 bonds of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. The gentleman was George Innes, an ex mayor of Poughkeepsie, now a wholesale commission merchant, and a trustee of Vassar college and Matthew Vassar. Mrs. Phebe Willis Innes fifty $1,000 bonds, and as Mr. Innes refused to return them a civil suit was brought against him by Mr. Williams, and the 1,000 of the bonds were recovered. Mr. Williams says that Mr. Innes converted three of the bonds to his own use, and made no return. He also put on summons on Mr. Innes, so Mr. Innes was paroled until Wednesday.

MICHIGAN FUSIONISTS.

Talk of Nominating Barry for Lieutenant Governor.

EAST SAGINAW, June 15.—The talk of nominating T. B. Barry, one of the executive board of the Knights of Labor, for lieutenant governor of Michigan on the fusion ticket, is favored by many citizens here. A correspondent asked Mr. Barry if he would accept such a nomination. He replied that though he had all respect for the position he would accept it if it was offered to him because of the good he believed he should be able to do the workingmen. This decision is a surprise to many of his friends here, as Mr. Barry has heretofore declared that he would not accept the nomination if it were offered him. The decision gives color to the statement made at the time of the recent state convention of Knights of Labor at Lansing, that certain prominent Democrats were in the convention in Lansing at the time, had arrived at an understanding, and that the effect would be seen this fall.

THE SERVANT GIRLS

Combining and Forming Local Assemblies.

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—For some time past a number of prominent Knights of Labor organizers have been industriously at work among the servant girls of this city. A local assembly has been organized, and they will be admitted to the Knights of Labor as part of a national district assembly, to be composed entirely of servant girls. The organization has been named the Household of 150 members, and is increasing at every meeting. The place of meeting is kept a secret for the present, the principal reason being a desire of the girls to withhold their names from the public, for fear that if they were known to be members of the Knights of Labor they might lose their situations. Hod'ewriters will also be admitted, and their combined strength will, they are confident, bring their employers and mistresses to terms.

Railway Master Mechanics.

BOSTON, June 15.—The American Railway Master Mechanics' association, represented from all sections of the United States and Canada by 146 delegates, will hold its nineteenth annual convention here beginning at 10 a. m. to-day. Mayor O'Brien made a short address of welcome. President Barmett delivered his annual address, and the reports of the executive committee, Wednesday and Friday sessions will also be held. Thursday, by invitation of the New England Railroad club, the members of the association will take an excursion on the Empire State.

Summer Travel Arrangements.

JERSEY CITY, June 15.—The West Shore railroad will, during the summer season, run its Catskill mountain and Saratoga trains so as to connect with the Jersey City station of the Pennsylvania railroad, in which connections will be made to and from Brooklyn by the regular Annex boats, and with trains on the Pennsylvania railroad for New Jersey coast resorts, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and the south.

AN EDITOR SHOT.

A KANSAS CITY LAWYER ON THE WAR-PATH.

Not Content With an Assault Upon the Editor, He Fires at Random at a Car, Hitting Two People, One of Whom Was a Lady.

KANSAS CITY, June 15.—Dr. Morrison Munford, editor of The Times, was shot and seriously wounded by W. D. Carlile, a lawyer of this city, yesterday. The assault was the outgrowth of articles recently published in The Times, in which it was stated that Carlile had been unduly intimate with a young lady named Crute, whom he had induced to leave home and live with his family, and that their relations had not been purely of a platonic character. At the time the first article was published Carlile was out of the city, but on his return he wrote a card denying everything that had been alleged against Him. Miss Crute also published a card, in which she stated that Mr. Carlile had been a friend in whom she had trusted, and who had never betrayed her confidence. Mr. Carlile entered a car and was soon followed by Carlile, who, approaching him, said: "You have killed my wife," at the same time drawing a revolver and firing at Dr. Munford. The ball let struck Munford in the left side and ranged across the abdomen for a distance of six or seven inches and lodged just under the skin. Carlile had fired at his victim he jumped from the car on the south side and fired four more shots, two of which took effect in occupants of the car. One of the bullets struck John E. Hale in the cheek. Another hit Miss Jennie Streator, seriously but not fatally wounding her. Dr. Munford was removed to Dr. McDonald's office, where an examination of his wound showed that the bullet had not penetrated a vital part. Dr. Munford stated that Carlile had fired on him. Carlile jumped from the car, cried: "I tried to get my revolver out," said the doctor, "but it stuck in the holster, and by the time I drew it I knew he was in the hands of an officer, and I knew if I fired I might hurt some one in the crowd." The excitement occasioned on the street by the tragedy was intense. Carlile was arrested almost immediately after the shooting, and so sooner was the nature of the occurrence known among the crowd threats of lynching were expressed. If the fact had been well established at once that Carlile fired the first shot it is not unlikely that the police would have had a great difficulty in removing him to the police station. Carlile was not locked up in a cell, but remained in charge of an officer. He refused to talk.

SPURIOUS CURRENCY.

Counterfeit Bills Passed by an Italian Laborer.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Stefano Trippa, a laborer, was before United States Commissioner Shields charged with passing counterfeit money. It was claimed that on Saturday he had called for drinks and offered a counterfeit $5 bill in payment. He was arrested by Policeman Bigley and at the station house a counterfeit $2 bill and $10 in good money were found in his possession. Trippa said that he had been working for a contractor at Portchester and that he received the counterfeit bills among other notes given him in payment of his wages. He was released on his own recognizance in $500 bail. Rikof the same man, and are printed from woodcuts. They are poor counterfeits and very scratchy. The "y" in Treasurer Wyman's name is omitted in each of them. On the back of the $2 bill the word "tenderer" is "legal tender" is "lender."

SHARP STEPS DOWN AND OUT.

The Philadelphia Syndicate Assumes Control of the Broadway.

NEW YORK, June 15.—At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Broadway and Seventh Avenue railroad company a board of directors in the interest of what is known as the Philadelphia syndicate were elected. The directors then elected Henry Thompson president and Thomas Sparks secretary and treasurer. There was no contest, as the present managers of the property preferred to let a "new crowd" take hold and do the fighting in the courts. It will be some time before the case can be decided, but it is to be gone through before the company's right to the Broadway surface railroad franchise is determined. So far as the present control of the latter road is concerned, however, the Philadelphia men have obtained it. Among the new directors are the some what widely known P. A. B. Widener and William L. Elkins, of the Philadelphia Traction company. Jacob Sharp and his associates retain their stock in the company, but what their relations to the road will be is with the new management remains to be seen.

Died of Starvation.

NEW YORK, June 15.—"Died of starvation," was written opposite the name of Mrs. Nellie Hinman on the blotter at Chamber's street police station this morning. She was 30 and lived in a three-foot attic. She was the wife of a mate of a merchantman, people said, but drink drove him from her long since. Mrs. Hinman married a sailor now at the Sailor's Snug Harbor, Staten Island. He also cast her off. Lately she had been suffering from a fall and been unable to do washing. From the proceeds of which she had lived. When found by neighbors she refused food, and finally ignored drink, and died soon after her removal to the hospital.

The Railroad War in the Northwest.

CHICAGO, June 15.—Passenger rates on the western lines continue to gradually crawl downward. The Rock Island opened with a first class limited rate to St. Paul and Minneapolis. The Milwaukee by the St. Paul officials putting into effect the same rate, not only between Chicago and St. Paul, but also to and from Council Bluffs and all of the junction points in Iowa, Minnesota and Dakota. The cutting is being done by the rebate system, under which method the nominal rate remains intact, but the commission is to a large extent protected.

The Battle of Bull Run.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Governor Fitzhugh Lee, of Virginia, made his first visit yesterday afternoon to the grand panorama of the second battle of Bull Run. A number of gallant officers of the Confederate army were present with Gen. Lee, and the comparison of notes made it decidedly interesting to those who were fortunate enough to hear the talk.

A Pine House Burned.

HAMILTON, Ont., June 15.—The newly erected pine house on John street has been destroyed by fire. The people objected to the erection of the house in this locality, and it is supposed that some one took this means of getting rid of it.

POLICEMEN AS RIOTERS.

Indictments Against Three of East St. Louis' Guardians.

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Terrill Britton, the carpenter arrested in East St. Louis last week for an alleged conspiracy with sundry unknown men to rob the banks of the city, had his preliminary examination and was released, the only evidence against him being that of J. J. Powell, a fellow-carpenter, to whom Britton is alleged to have divulged the plot. Powell is in jail himself on the plot, but their names were not given out, and Britton was the only man arrested.

Indictments have been returned against three East St. Louis policemen, John Dalton, Thomas McFarlan and William McManus, for assault to kill. On the day that Deputy Sheriff Jones was shot and killed several people in East St. Louis, C. R. Barnhardt, the Evansville division superintendent of the Louisville and Nashville road, and William Wightman and James N. Chesney, deputy sheriffs, were assaulted by a crowd of strikers, among whom were several policemen in sympathy with the strikers. Chesney was shot in the arm and also badly beaten. The three policemen named were recognized, it is charged, as leaders of the mob, and were indicted with Michael Flynn, the only striker recognized in the crowd.

INCITING TO RIOT.

Car Drivers Arrested for Blockading a Rival Line.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Warrants for the arrest of two of the Avenue B car drivers, who assisted in blockading the car track at Avenue B and Thirteenth street, and in front of No. 27 Clinton street on the 7th inst., were obtained a few days ago from Justice Duffy by Detective Sergeant Sunday. Oliver S. Kerr was arrested at the car stables, and William H. Lake was taken into custody at his home. The men were arraigned before Justice Duffy in Essex market, and were remanded after they had given the police the information on which four more warrants were issued. Yesterday morning John Naylor was arrested, but was allowed by Justice Duffy to go home on parole as his other men are dying. During the evening Richard Sherman, McDonald O'Brien and William Reece were arrested at the car stables and locked up at police headquarters. All the men are employed on the Avenue B line. The warrants charge them with "inciting to riot."

WITH BOGUS CHECKS

A Western Reporter Pays His Hotel Bills.

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Orth Steins, a Globe-Democrat reporter, disappeared last Friday. He came here during the strike, and at once took a leading position among the reporterial workers. He was known to whom he introduced as his wife, lived in a fashionable boarding house in the west end. He paid his board with a check on H. Steins, a general manager of the Gould railroads, representing that Mr. Horrie owed him $300 for making his strike reports favorable to railroads. The check was for $50, a forged draft on a New York bank, which he said was in payment for work done for a press bureau, and paid a bill at the Lacede hotel with a check for $25 on the Bank of St. Louis. Steins is a native of Kansas City when he was city editor of The Star. He made an unenviable reputation in Chicago and Lafayette, Ind., where as an editor of a newspaper called The Comet, and he is charged with robbing his mother of nearly $5,000.

A Young Passenger.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 15.—While the east-bound passenger train on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad was at Mt. Nebo, Ky., a colored woman got on, carrying a basket upon the train and disappeared. After several hours a noise was heard in the basket, and an examination revealed the presence of a white boy baby, about 12 hours old. A lady on the train, who had a small child with her, took part of its clothes and dressed the baby. The little stranger was given to the railway agent at Scott station, a short distance from this city, who will raise it unless it is called for by its unnatural parent s.

The Schooners Ashore.

SEABRIGHT, June 15.—About 6 o'clock last night the schooners came ashore broadside on, one immediately south of the Octagon house, the other 300 yards south. The former is the A. D. Bush, of Rockland for New York, loaded with cord wood, and the other the Clayton Frame, Capt. Charles Smith, bound from Millville, N. J. for New York. All on board were brought safe ashore through the high surf. Both vessels will be got off.

North American Turnerbund.

BOSTON, June 15.—At the session of the North American Turnerbund the question of making a permanent stand in Chicago at their gatherings was discussed but not decided. After four ballots Chicago was selected as the next meeting place, it receiving their vote, and Buffalo 107 and Milwaukee 62 for San Francisco. Telegrams of congratulation were read from the New York Turnverein and the Twenty-fifth New York Turnverein.

For Selling Unwholesome Meat.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Dr. Cyrus Edson, of the board of health, yesterday caused the arrest of J. I. Hammond and Thomas Burke, who keep butchers' stalls in "Ham row," Washington market, for selling unsound meats that were so far decomposed as to be unfit for use. Dr. Edson had warned them that if they did not stop selling such unwholesome meat. Justice Power held them for trial.

She Fell Dead in Church.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Christine Johnson, aged 16 years, a daughter of Mrs. Mary Johnson, of Bethlehem, Conn., and Bridge street, attended Sunday school at the First Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon. She became overheated and soon complained of being sick and started to go out, but fell dead. The cause was rheumatism of the heart.

Coat Thieves Get Seven Years Each.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Daniel Sullivan, 20 years old, of Second avenue and Seventy-sixth street, and Thomas Egan, no fixed abode into Joseph Beckhart's clothing store, No. 1485 First avenue, on June 3 and stole $20 worth of coats. Yesterday, in the court of general sessions, they were convicted, and Judge Cowing sent each of them to states prison for seven years.

Died of Hydrophobia.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 15.—Robert Hutchison, aged 16 of Waterboro, has died of hydrophobia. Another victim of the dog days. He was bitten on the left arm by a mad dog two years ago, and a few days before his death was seized by be a on the same arm.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION ATTENDED BY THE PRINTERS,

Who Enjoy Hearty Welcome — Many Bridal Parties Among the Callers—An Old Soldier Who Had Walked from Missouri with His Blind Wife.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—It was a good natured crowd that greeted the president in the East room yesterday afternoon, and prior to his arrival there was a busy hum at conversation. As the famous tailless coat soon as the portiere was thrown back from the folding door leading into the lobby, Mr. Thomas T Hindle stepped toward the president at the head of a delegation from the Typographical union. "These gentlemen, Mr. President," said the spokesman, "have come a long way to pay their respects to the chief magistrate, many of them having left Pittsburg, where they were attending a convention, expressly to see and shake hands with you."

This brought out a response from the president that he was glad to see the printers, and they were then presented by their chairman. It was quite difficult to distinguish the bridal couples, for, invariably as the grooms grasped the outstretched hand of the president, they would murmur congratulations in their low tones. The ladies looked unspeakably joyful. Some of the ladies washed the president much happiness, and one very new pair in gray traveling suits, as the president shook the lovelorn satin tie, wanted to linger awhile and exchange notes with the president, but the others compelled them to move for others. The president had hurried to go to his luncheon just as a party of four, two ladies and two gentlemen, entered the East room. One of the former, a very sparkling, attractive looking brunette, remarked: "He has turned his back on us." This was overheard by the president, who stopped and waited for the party to approach, and the speaker, it was observed, was given a hearty hand-shake. Among the visitors was an old soldier named Hall, leading his blind wife. He told the president that he had walked with his wif-all the way from Missouri in order to get an official copy of his discharge from the army, and expedite his pension claim.

To Visit Pennsylvania.

READING, Pa., June 15.—Col. Daniel S. Lamont, private secretary to President Cleveland, has written to the proprietor of the South Mountain House, a summer resort near Wernersville, this county, in reference to engaging rooms for the president and his bride for a few days. Col. Lamont states in his letter that the president is desirous of paying a visit to Berks county. The contemplated visit of the president has created quite a local sensation.

PERSISTENT SOCIALISTS.

They Will Celebrate the Fourth of July by a Picnic.

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—The Socialists of this city continue to hold their regular meetings despite the prohibition by the city authorities prohibiting them. They are, as a rule, quietly conducted, and although they are held secretly, it is understood that the revolutionary and incendiary speeches which were the order of the day before the Chicago riotsf have become less frequent. Three meetings of three different branches of the order were held to complete arrangements for a grand demonstration on the Fourth of July, which will take the form of a picnic, at which speeches are intended to be expended "for benefits of our friends, who are being persecuted by the authorities" in various parts of the country.

The circulars announcing the coming picnic is printed on vividly red paper, and the tickets of admission on no less lurid scale. It is expected that 15,000 people will participate. Noted Socialist speakers from various localities have been secured, one of this most prominent being William G. Gorsuch, of Baltimore. Johann Most, Kropotkin, who is now in London, about to sail for the United States, it is expected, will be in attendance.

Died from Inhaling Steam.

CINCINNATI, June 15.—John Rossler, aged 50, engineer at Goodally's planing yard, stepped across the street to invite a friend over to examine a leak in the boiler. Just as the two men were about to enter the engine room the boiler let go with a muffled noise. A flue had burst, and the rushing steam threw the fire and bricks of the furnace into a pile of live coals, setting fire to them. Rossler got the hose and rushed into the boiler room, and his friend followed a minute later with a bucket of water. As the latter entered he saw Rossler fall backward with a groan. The fire was soon extinguished and the body of Rossler disclosed lying on the ground beside his boiler dead. Not a mark or bruise could be found on him, and when the coroner arrived soon after he said that death resulted from inhaling the steam.

The Duty on Woorsteds.

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—At a meeting of the Wool Merchants' association, of Philadelphia, this resolution was adopted: "That while the Philadelphia Wool Merchants' association is unalterably opposed to any change in the tariff on wool, unless it be for the restoration of the act of 1867, we would urge the importance of immediately correcting a manifest error in the construction of the present tariff act relating to worsted goods. We therefore respectfully ask for the passage of the amendment to the schedule proposed by Senator Dawes, which proposes to put worsteds on the same basis as woolens."

HE PLEAD GUILTY

Of Defrauding the Cincinnati Infirmary, Twelve Years.

CINCINNATI, June 15.—Fred Hermann, the defaulting ex-city infirmary director appeared in Judge Maxwell's court yesterday, accompanied by his attorneys. When arraigned upon the six indictments against him relating to the infirmary crookedness he pleaded guilty in a firm voice. Judge Maxwell thereupon sentenced him to the penitentiary for two years for each indictment, a total of twelve years, but granted a stay of execution for thirty days. Immediately thereafter Prosecutor Pugh was given notice that an application for pardon would be immediately made, the famous case taken to jail. This move indicates clearly that Hermann's testimony before the grand jury, and his expected testimony in court, have won for him the consideration of the governor and others, so that he will be virtually set free.

AN ELEVATED FRANCHISE.

St. Louis Wants a Chance to Build a Line.

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—There will be introduced in the house of delegates to-morrow evening a bill authorizing the construction, maintenance and operation of an electric elevated railway, double track, standard gauge, with sidings, turnouts and buildings. The franchise will be asked by Thomas O'Reilly, assigns and successors. The terminal of the road will be at Fourth street and Forest park, the distance between being about four and a half miles. The bill provides that the road shall be constructed as nearly as possible, over the middle of the streets along which it shall be, upon machine-brought iron, and that electric power shall be electricity only. Mr. O'Reilly says that eastern capitalists will furnish the money and commence the construction of the road within a week after the passage of the bill.

Believes in Mascot Luck.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Senator James G. Fair, of Nevada, was encountered by a reporter to-day. In speaking of the president he said:

Will he run in 1888? He will, if the party wishes him. He is a man who has had neither with his wif-all the way from Missouri in ambitions. The president has lost his right bower in Manning. I tell you he was a Democratic fortress, all manned and ready for action. He was the chief man in the cabinet and knew all about politics. His retirement may weaken Cleveland's chances in 1888, but I believe in his mascot luck, and I think if he is nominated he will be elected.

Prince Leopold at Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Prince Leopold, grandson of Dom Pedro, emperor of Brazil, accompanied by five of his fellow officers of the Brazilian war vessel Almirante Barroso, has arrived here. They are staying at the Arlington hotel. They will remain in Washington several days. The prince will be invited to the president's reception to-night. The prince and his associates will, with the Brazilian ministers, call on the president to-day.

Mr. Arnold Investigating Free Schools.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Matthew Arnold has left Washington for this city. In time he will come," Mr. Arnold said, previous to leaving the city, "I will be engaged in completing and superintending a work which I have undertaken at the request of the British government, in investigating the school system in vogue upon the continent, with especial reference to the question of the desirability of free schools."

A FEW SOUTHERNISMS.

EXAMPLES OF QUAINT SAYINGS IN GEORGIA AND SOUTH CAROLINA.

Peculiarities of Pronunciation Held by the Southern People as a Class—The Word "Funny" Used with Startling Effects—"To Get to Go"—Examples.

Some years ago Richard Grant White wrote a delightfully interesting book on Americanisms. He might well have divided the subjects into two parts: Yankeeisms proper, which are largely characterized by incorrect pronunciation, or in the formation of sentences, is a most difficult accomplishment, and few there be, either north or south, who have reached such a degree of perfection that no exception can be taken by "carping critics" to their utterances. In the matter of pronunciation the times are changing, and one can scarcely keep pace with the innovations being introduced by the leading orthoepists.

The purpose of this paper is, however, to present, in a succinct way, a few of the quaintnesses of pronunciation and construction held by the southern people as a class. Among the first that comes to mind is the custom of omitting the last two letters of such words as "more," "store," "four"—which are pronounced "mo," "sto," "fo," respectively—and adding the letter "r" instead, and ten to one he tells you it's "half-pas' fo'," if that happens to be the hour.

Another common southernism is the use of the word "if." For instance, the words "as if," "She looked like she knew me," is a common expression, or "she looked as if she'd die." In the same line is "walkin-tagion, and in all the states south of Mason and Dixon's line.

USE OF THE WORD "FUNNY."

The word "funny" is frequently used, instead of strange, and sometimes with startling effects. A young southern girl was visiting in once, and a caller was telling of the death of her brother through swallowing a fish-bone. "Oh, wasn't it funny!" exclaimed our visitor, at the close of the narrative. "I think you mean strange," said the caller, as soon as she recovered from her astonishment. Our girl friend has never used the word "funny" since.

If you happen to see somebody say "ry chee" you may know it is intended to mean "right here." For instance: A South Carolinian will say: "Where was he at last night" and his fellow citizen will say, "He stood ryc cheer with me." Dear—pronounced in one syllable—is not a Russian word, but it might be supposed. It means "do you hear" and is usually addressed to servants in this form: "You, Jim! Bring in that wood, dear!"

"To get to go" is essentially a Georgia expression. They say, "Do, don't fail to come to-night," and the reply is, "I've tried to get to go three we-ks now, so I reckon I'll be there t-night." The expression "I don't" is heard in Georgia and South Carolina, but rarely elsewhere. One of the most laughable things to be heard is the particular pronunciation of the word "about." It is impossible to express the South Carolinian pronunciation, phonetically. It is something like "ubbowt," very quickly in three syllables. "Quare," for "queer," is another word. The use of "reckon" for "presume" is said to have been derived from the Yankees at the expression "right smart" for the word "much."

In imitation of English, perhaps, is the custom of saying "ha'r" for "hair," "ha'd" for "hard" and the general use of the word "got" where it is quite unnecessary. Also Englishish is the use of "obliged," as "I'm obliged to do it" for "I must do it," "he is obliged to go," for "he must go." Ambiguity of expression is too prevalent in Dixie, and too many people are content to seem to sound.

PECULIARITIES OF PRONUNCIATION.

Low-country people and the residents of middle South Carolina say "gee-arden" for "garden," and "Gord" for "God," with the hard sound of "g." So, too, with such words as "card," "car," and "cart," into which is introduced the sound of "e." To take the place of the "r" is convenient, thus: "kee-ard," "kee-ar," "kree-art."

The use of delightful for delicious, in such a sentence as "the ice cream is delightful," is very common. "Pretty is a word very often misused, for instance: "Isn't this a pretty day!"—and this error is a very general one. North Carolinians say the scenery is "pretty"—meaning picturesque; the day is "pretty"—meaning fine; and that a person's manners are "pretty"—meaning well-bred.

"You all," or, as it is abbreviated, "y'all," is one of the most ridiculous of all the southernisms I can call to mind. It usually means two or more persons, but it is at times used when only one person is meant. For instance, a caller on taking her departure, says, "Y'all must come to see us," which means the lady upon whom she is calling, and her husband may call.

The Yankee have quite as many ridiculous forms of speech as those I have mentioned as peculiarly southern, and it will be reserved for another paper to present the addition of Yankee conversation. In the meantime every true-hearted southerner who reads these lines will declare that he never used any of these southernisms, and will be glad to honest in his belief as the Charlestonian when he vows that he never says "dis-a-way" for "this way," and "dat-a-way" for "that way."—Dixie.

WOMAN AND HOME.

HELPFUL WORDS FOR THE OVER-WORKED HOUSEMOTHER.

A Good Deed Well Done—Plea for Society Girls—Go West—Danger in the Nursery —Stage Struck—Fire-Proof in Wool—The Hands—Hints.

I have a little story to tell you, boys, the old man said to the group of people that other evening. "One day—a long, hot day it had been, too—I met my father on the road into town.

"I wish you would take this package to the village for me, Jim," he said, hesitating.

Now, I was a boy of 14, not fond of work, and was just out of the hayfield, where I had been at work since daybreak. I was tired, dusty and hungry. It was two miles into town.

My first impulse was to refuse, and harshly, for I was vexed that he should ask me after my long days work. But I did refuse, somewhat sullenly. He was a gentle, patient old man, but something stopped me; one of God's good angels, I think.

"Of course, father, I'll take it," I said, heartily, giving my scythe to one of the men. He gave me the package.

"That is very kind," he said, "I was going myself, but somehow I don't feel very strong to-day.

He watched with me to the road that turned off to town, and as he left me he handed me my earn ing again. "Thank you, my son. You've always been a good boy to me."

I hurried into town and back again. When I came near the house I saw a crowd of farm-hands at the door. One of them spoke to me before I could dismount.

"Your father," he said. "He fell dead just as he took hel the house. The last words he spoke were to you."

I'm an old man now, but I have thanked God over and over again in all the years that have passed since that the last words he spoke were "You've always been a good boy to me."

No human being ever yet was sorry for love or kindness given. Do not, then, begrudge loving deeds and kind words, especially to those who gather with you about the same hearth. In many families a baby of negligible value, or blistered girlie, gradually covers the real feeling of love that lies deep beneath.

And after all it is such a little way that we can go together.—Exchange.

Good Deed Well Done.

A Pittsburg divine on a recent sunday narrated the following incident of the flood. Two years ago there existed a small settlement of people on the banks of the Ohio, in the State of Indiana, not very notorious for their criminal thriftlessness. They were idle, drunken, profane, and regarded by all who knew them as beyond redemption. The annual flood of 1884 swept all of that these people possessed in the way of food, clothing, and household goods. The various relief parties passed them by without affording any help, presuming them to be utterly worthless to waste anything upon. Along in the summer a detachment of the Red Cross army, under direction of that noble woman, Clara Barton, came by, and learning something about the character and condition of these people, she left them to themselves. Some time after her best, she being at that time prostrated with sickness. About thirty of them—which constituted all the grown people—accepted the invitation, and to these she talked to them kindly and discreetly, counselling them for their highest good.

It was the experience in the lives of those abandoned people. Everything given them Miss Barton entered into a contract to pay them interest in all money saved by them at the end of ten years. She also supplied them with such necessaries as were required for their immediate wants, and in addition paid them for the time consumed in making the visit from that time she has continued her interest in this little settlement, which is known as the "Big Six." A letter received from her by the Associated Press on the sequel. At the end of the year they had paid off all their debts, given up gaming, drinking and profanity. A gentleman who resides not far from them writes that they are industrious and thrifty; they raise large crops, keep their store bills paid up, manage in good society send their children to school and that all of them have become members of church. With a case like the latter it would be cruelly sinful to despair of reforming any one, or how ever hopeless and abject their condition might seem to be.—Exchange.

Go West, Young Lady, to West!

It is marvelous that so many young women will consent to spend the best part of their lives in a close room or in an office in an over-crowded city like New York when all of the far west is open to them, where they can with a little industry and energy soon not only comfortably board for themselves, but sometimes fortunes as well. Travelling in any part of the west one meets cashiers of men who have gone there and with only a small capital to start, are now a few years' board, and from the first supported herself handsomely with her labor. She has been equally successful in other ways, and there is scarcely a case known where an energetic woman has not succeeded. Added to the advantages offered by the ever-shifting of the health-giving climate which would put new life into the pale faces of city girls in a week. Let them go! Mr. Greeley's advice to young men still leave their cheap boarding-houses and early graves, and go west to the land of promise and plenty.—New York Sun.

In Defense of Society Girls.

One word of praise in defense of our society girls. Many of them, like singed cats, "are better than they look," or rather, than they seem. They are not wholly reason able for what they are, for they are creatures of circumstance, and it is no fault of theirs if they have been cast in the fashionable, frivolous, worldly mold. All they lack is originality and courage to become desirable candidates for better-halves of men. It is my opinion, however, that the average is on the increase in the line of women to begin with. The great Creator made a man first as an experiment, and found that he could make a great improvement, so made woman, and she has been man's "better half" ever since. Girls who are truly sweet and lovable are not always seen at their best in society, and are wronged, maligned and misunderstood.

Woman's weakness consists in a desire beyond her good judgment to please man, and if the society girl runs under a mask of affectation, and shows only the artificially cultured side of her nature, assumed simply to gratify man, why blame her training? And if the mask be pleasing, perhaps the genuine, if sought, might also prove to be charming. Many a society girl, I doubt not, is "weighed in the balance and found wanting," yet there are those who are earnest, thoughtful and practical and capable of making good wives, mothers and useful members of society if the opportunity were presented.—Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Danger in the Nursing Bottle.

In the baby department of the dry nurseries, where the baby is fed, all nursing appears to be done by the bottle. This is just the reverse of the practice in the French creches, in which mothers that are able to nurse their infants are required to do so, on the principle tested by medical experience that the mode of nourishment which nature has provided is far the best one. In cases where the use of the tiberon bottle is unavoidable it must have no India rubber tube. In 1883 the academy of medicine of Lyons, France, offered a prize for a practical study of the dangers to which infants brought up on the bottle, appointed a committee to examine into and report on the subject.

This committee after careful study and a very minute and varied investigation of facts and of experiments connected therewith, came to the conclusion it would take time after time to be taken apart, cleaned, rubbed, and put in boiling water for a few minutes, because if these precautions be neglected there will soon be a disagreeable fungus, which multiplies after it has got into the child's stomach and causes death. Dr. Masson of the academy attended physician at the creche of St. Louis d'Antin was so fully convinced of the conclusions arrived at by the committee that he urged upon the lady managers to do away with the tube altogether at all, and where breast milk could not be had, or not in sufficient quantity, to use either cow's milk, or goat's milk, not boiled, and have it given out of a glass tumbler.—New York Sun.

People Are Fire-Proof in Wool.

A correspondent signing himself "Fire-Proof" writes "Hailing petticoats" have again ended a young life in unutterable horror, and have inflicted lasting torture and agony on those to whom the victim was dear. You opportunely quote the excellent advice of Dr. Jager, but you have omitted that is if the poor flaming creatures have presence of mind to follow it. But intense terror deprives most natures of reason, having only that left which will urge flight in agonized quest for help, which usually comes too late. I do not think above all others, the case where prevention is better than cure, and therefore would like to say a few to those to whom the victim was dear. I do not think above all others, the case where prevention is better than cure, and therefore would like to say a few to those to whom the victim was dear. You opportunely quote the excellent advice of Dr. Jager, in his "Essays on Health Culture and the Sanitary Woolen System," says:

"The great difference in the respect between cotton and wool is worthy of much noticing. Cases often occur in which the hair catches fire, but it never burns down to the skin, as would certainly happen with vegetable fiber. If a piece of linen or cotton be held over a lighted candle, as soon as it ignites it burns away with a clear flame and leaves nothing but ashes. In the case, similar experiment is made with woolen material a considerable time will be required before it will ignite at all, and then the flame is extinguished as soon as the material is removed from the lighted candle. This people are fire-proof in wool—that is, their clothing or bedding can not catch fire, while when clothed in woolen instead of vegetable fiber, they are practically torches ready for the lighting."—Exchange.

Proper Care of the Hands.

There are not nearly as many secrets in hand treatment as people imagine. A little ammonia or borax in the water you wash your hands with, and that water just lukewarm, will keep the skin clean and soft. A little oatmeal mixed with the water will whiten the hands. Many people rub glycerine on their hands when they go to bed, wearing gloves to keep the bedding clean, but glycerine does not agree with every one. It makes some hands itch and burn. Those people should rub their hands with dry oatmeal and wear gloves in bed.

The best preparation for the hands at night is white of an egg with a grain of alum dissolved in it. Quacks have a fancy name for it, but all can make it; spread it over their hands and let it dry on. They also make the Roman toilet paste. It is merely white of egg, barley flour, and honey. They say it was used by the Romans in olden time. I don't know why, but it's rather thing, but it is a sticky sort of stuff to use and does not do the work any better than oatmeal. The Roman toilet lardoni hands can be made soft and white in a month's time by doctoring them a little at bed time, and all the tools you need are a nail brush, a bottle of ammonia and a bit of powdered borax, and a little fine white sand to rub the stains off, or a cut of lemon, which will do even better, for the acid of the lemon will clean anything.—Scientific American.

Dream of a Stage-Struck Wife.

Let us suppose that the wife has realized her intensions. Her husband has permitted her to go upon the stage and make a great name. He has to find her clothes to make her start. The leaving of admirers and friends in her role the house of most of its content. She paces before the looking glass and rolls her eyes. She dreams nonsense, and loves a noble while, insensible to her talk has turned from art to salary. Along toward midnight, when she was ordinarily in bed in her husband, she is down in some basement putting black stuff on her eyebrows and red paint on her cheeks. She has become transformed into a nervous being half deadly waiting the moment when she shall be called upon the stage and quite dead if she shall never be called at all.

Subsiding on her pecuniary affairs, believing that there is a world and a career above consoling children and letting them drink from her breast, she unfits herself for the duties of home, and yet is almost sure to be disappointed in the life of the footlights. Some day or other, as in the ballad of Lucy Gray, she will be found in a cheap lodging or to a third rate hotel a corpse consumptive, or fallen, or disappointed, wondering why she ever permitted the devil to look at her face or over the footlights and break her heart.—"Gath" in Cincinnati Enquirer.

How to Clean Oil-Cloth.

Water and soap will soon destroy the best of oil cloth. The surface must be occasionally washed, put on little water, wipe with a cloth wrung out of skim milk, and finish with a dry rag. If oil cloth is carefully used on a floor in front of the door, in the kitchen, its term of service will be almost indefinitely prolonged. After the usual sweeping which should be done with a little damp corn broom, fasten a large dry cloth on the broom and go over the floor with it. If you do you will not be troubled to find dust hanging in your skirts or baby's alpa.—Ellen Lyman in Minneapolis Housekeeper.

"Going to Bed" Etiquette.

It is always a debatable point of etiquette, whether hostess or guest makes the first movement to go to bed, and then breaks up the evening gathering. The guest ought to be overcome with fatigue from a day's journey, the host may be fagging under the strain of entertaining, and longing for the guest to show some signs by which he can gracefully and hospitably suggest "that it is getting late," yet neither quite likes to appear, as they think, impolite. In fact many visitors have suffered agonies in trying to be agreeable, while the host and hostess were using their best to suppress their yawns and to "make conversation" until chance offered a solution of the difficulty. There is, however, but one way to be followed in this relationship of host and hostess, and the hour of retirement. The host or hostess must always take the initiative and fix an appropriate word as to the lateness of the hour and the desirability of going to bed.—Boston Beacon.

Two Types of Feminine Humanity.

There are two little girls in this town, quite young. The first is always busy interesting to me as exemplifications of the two extreme ways of getting what you want. One is bright, quick, active, aggressive, and always gets what she desires her fancy and gets it by sheer irresistible compulsion because you can see that she already realizes that you will not refuse her. The other is quiet, unobtrusive, passive, and her disposition is so sweet, and she is so apparently indifferent, that you give her what she wants before she has time to attract her attention. She looks, she doesn't speak, and she gets everything in sight offered to her. The first gets what she wants. The second gets that and a great deal more. If they both develop on their present lines, they'll have lots of fun. The one will command, the other will simply control every man she meets, and they'll both be irresistible.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Method of Correcting a Child.

Seldom a child that never needs correction, and, for my part, I think there have proved more permanent benefit from one of more efficacious than the old fashioned, if somewhat softened, whipping. But who of us can say they administered it discreetly, soberly, and for the child's best good? Who dares plead excuse that they were angered, hot-headed, and shall not hear that a word of warning addressed to those who "offend one of these little ones."

There are exceptions. It is meet that we, who have no children, should tell parents how to govern them. But suppose they don't do it? This past summer two distinguished authors got into trouble and the papers, for quoting malicious little boys. It is vulgar, I'm told, to quote; but what would you?—Ruth Hall in Good Housekeeping.

Three Colors in Her Hat.

Every woman in New York is now making a heroic struggle to wear three colors in her hat, and the question is, will she win or lose? Of course, I am told, is another result of the "Mikado" craze, the three little maids from school having set in town a fad for three colors being apparently endless. Women and girls walking in threes are now so numerous as to no longer attract comment. It is an old and rather sardidotic fancy to carry the idea into decoration for hats, and the effect is often entirely amusing. A faded and washed out looking face of no particular leading is mounted with a tossed decorated with green, red and yellow, sinks the colorless face into such insignificance that the spectacle excites rather pain than admiration.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Widow of Business Capacity.

Mrs. Mark Hopkins, the widow of the California millionaire is building a magnificent country residence at one of the seaside towns in Massachusetts, where she intends spending the summer months. Mrs. Hopkins is a woman of thorough business capacity, and attends closely to every detail connected with her large estate. She is now about 50 years of age, but well preserved and still a fine looking woman, although inclining, perhaps, a little too much to the rotund model order to be generally admired. She is large of frame, and has rather a severe cast of features. Like most rich women she gets her money carefully, although she gives a great deal in charity.—New York World.

To Prevent Hair Falling Out.

The following formula for preparing a tonic to prevent the falling out of the hair is highly recommended: Salt of tartar, 1 drachm. Quinine sulphate, 20 grains; glycerine, 1 fluid ounce; cologne, 2 fluid ounces; bay rum, 2 fluid ounces; rose water, 11 fluid ounces. Dissolve the salts in the glycerine, and add the other ingredients in order named. The addition of fluid extract of yaborandi is recommended to stimulate the growth.—Chicago Herald.

How Much Easier It Is.

Is there a knife or key in the house which comes against the wall when the door to which it belongs is swung wholly open? A hole in the paper, if there be any, and in course of time in the plaster, will be the result. How much easier to nail or screw a small wooden block behind the door to prevent the knob or latch to replace the paper or plaster.—Exchange.

Broiling Fruits and Vegetables.

It is asserted by an authority that it is a mistake to suppose that broiling is applicable to fish and meats only. It can be employed with fruits, vegetables, and even eggs are watery exceed-ist results are obtained. The apple, pear, quince and banana, the cucumber, tomato, green pepper and egg plant also prepared make admirable dishes.

Girls in a Printing Office.

The French national printing office employs girls as its typefounders, printers, bookbinders, bookbinders, etc., the wages ranging from 60 cents to $1 per day. After three years' service both men and women are retired upon a pension.—Democrats' Monthly.

Mrs. Logan's Washington House.

Mrs. John A. Logan's house in her Washington house has an old-fashioned rag-carpet on the stairs and picturesque Indian blankets for portieres. On one of her parlor mantels is a large gilt statuette of an American mulberry tree bark.—Inter-Ocean.

The Next Fashion in Hair.

It may be interesting to the ladies to know that the next fashion in hair, according to a London authority, will be to wear it in the prepossessing, plain, such as the old Florentine masters used to paint.

Blackleaf for Stove Polish.

A liquid black lead for polishing stoves is made by adding to each pound of black lead one gill of turpentine, one gill of water and one ounce of sugar.

To draw the taste of paint out of new wooden pails that are painted inside, fill the pail with fresh milk and scald from twenty-four to thirty six hours.—Exchange.

If some of us old folks were to go to school to our children, I am sure, indeed, it would do us a great deal of good.—Thackeray.

The lily of the valley seems to be returning to favor as a wedding ornament.

It's good to put a bother away over night, it all straightens out in the morning.

A LOOK AT THE SENATE.

A PEEP AT OUR STATESMEN FROM THE PRESS GALLERY.

The Senators, as a Rule, Are Big Men—Heights and Breadth—Choice Hits for Cannibals — Bald Heads and Long Beards—Side Whiskers.

I am sitting in the press gallery of the United States senate, and the American house of lords in its every day greatness lies below me. A queer set of fellows they are, and I know many of them well. They have their peculiarities, their eccentricities, their petty spites and lofty ambitions, and they are as sensitive as children in their feelings and often as foolish in their actions. There are seventy-six of them and the greater majority of these are over fifty years of age. John Logan is of Sherman (63), and Morrod, of Vermont, the oldest man in the body, is Senator Edmund Jones older than either Sherman or Morrill, and his hair is frosted and crown bald at 80, while Kenna, of West Virginia, the youngest member of the senate, looks like a boy and has yet to see his fortieth year.

The senators are as a rule big men. Their average height is over five feet nine, and their average weight about 175 pounds. The fattest and heaviest senator is Philetus Sawyer, who though he is short can pull the beam at 250. Stanford, of California, Eustis, of Louisiana, and Beck, of Kentucky, will aggregate at least 600 pounds, while Palmer, of Michigan, Jones, of Arkansas, George, of Mississippi, and the doughty Wet, of Missouri, have each about 240 pounds of solid flesh in their anatomies. John Sherman has not one ounce of fat, but his bone, brain, and muscle weigh about 190 pounds. Senator Hoar, Edmunds, Sawyer, weighs 150, and John C. Spooner about 325 pounds. John A. Logan has grown fat lately, and he now weighs about 220 pounds. Ingalls is the slim back of him, though he is six feet tall, will not weigh more than 160. It would take twenty Mahones to make a ton, and the weight of these twenty would not amount to as much as that of eight men like Senator Sawyer. Mahone is the lightest man in the senate, though Call, of Florida, Harris, Henry B. Payne, of Ohio, and Ingalls, of Kansas, crowd him very close.

HEIGHT OF SENATORS.

Payne, Walthall, Sherman, Saulsbury, Ingalls, Eustis, Call and Blair are each six feet high, while Vest is not over five feet six and Spooner about five feet four. I forget to mention that Senator Hoar is the tallest man. Of all the notes I dinner-eaters in Washington he gets the least fat out of his meals. He looks very small indeed as he sits, but when he rises you find that he is of a good height, and as he draws those long 40 word sentences out of his anatomy during his speech you imagine he must be a giant. Senator Harrison, of Indiana, is short and inclined to obesity. Gen. Hawley is taller with a slight tendency the same way. George Hearst, the new millionaire, Pugh, of Alabama, six footer, and Maxey, of Texas, has to take off his hat when he goes through an ordinary sized door. Riddleberger is above the height of ordinary men. Mr. Salisbury looks to be six feet on account of his thinness, and Wilson, the new senator from Maryland, although he is about an inches shorter than Salisbury, looks to be a foot less by the contrast.

If I were a cannibal I would rather eat a slice of George Hoar, of Massachusetts, than any other senator. Hoar is the personification of cleanliness, and his complexion shows that he keeps his blood in good condition. He has a fine head and a fine face, and he looks like Horace Greeley. Allison is another man who would serve up well, and Manderson, of Nebraska, and Gorman, of Maryland, would make a dish fit for the king of the Fijis. I don't think there would be much demand for either Sherman, Logan, or Ingalls as the cannibal roast, and Conger, Eustis, Kenna, and Chase with their brunette complexions would only be in demand on the principle that the dark is sometimes the sweetest.

HAIR AND ITS LACK.

There are a number of bald heads in the senate, and the most patriarchal of these is Jim Brown Wet, with his long beard of white hanging upon his chest, looks like a Mormon elder. Philetus Sawyer, and Henry B. Payne are both bald. They shine brown, and Gibson, of Louisiana, and Harris, of Tennessee, are fast growing the same way. I note that Senator Hoar's hair is now his very careful combed to cover the white skin on his cranium, and Austin F. Pike, of New Hampshire, has a head whose top is as bald as that of a drum head, and so also is that of George F. Edmunds. Walthall, who takes Lamar's seat in the senate, is one of the long-haired senators. He has a head of long gray locks, which he throws back like a mane, is another, and Morrill, of Vermont, a third. Colquitt, of Georgia, does not part his hair at all. It is very thick, but iron-gray, and he combs it a la pompadour. Logan's hair is as black as shoe polish, and the glossy ox jet. Ingalls is short iron gray hair, and Blair, of New Hampshire, is the only red-head in the senate, although Spooner's locks are of a reddish brown, and Jack Logan has a touch of red in his auburn blonde when he was a boy. Senator George, of Mississippi, lost his comb and brush, but has returned to congress and has never bought a new one. Spooner seems to have a cowlick all over his head, and the gray bristles of Wilson, of Iowa, stand up like a brush all around his finely formed cranium.

Not one of the senators wears a wig, and none of them dye either their hair or beards. John Sherman's hair is of a brownish gray, and a look falls in a contrary way down over his forehead at times. Jones, of Arkansas, has a full of iron-gray hair, and through his hair, which keeps it from being in well-kept order, and Wade Hampton has a good growth of iron-gray streaks, with a pair of able whiskers, cut so as to make him look like Kaiser Wilhelm in miniature.—Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

Armor Plate That Shot Can Not Pierce.

The latest victory in the long drawn match between the gun and the armor plate has been won at Spezia. In the fort of Spezzia a German chilled steel armor plate, five feet nine inches in thickness, weighing 130 tons, was fixed against the face of the cliff, and battered with chilled shot from the 100-ton gun. A thunderbolt weighing almost exactly a ton was hurled against the face of the plate by a charge of 97 cwt. of powder without producing more than a slight indentation and some trifling cracks. Three shots failed to make any serious impression on the plate, who is has done come off victor in the struggle. It would seem that no shot yet invented will go through six feet of chilled steel.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A New Cotton-Picking Machine.

A new cotton-picking machine has been invented and patented, which, it is claimed, fulfils all the conditions required of such an arrangement. It is the work of a Georgia inventor, Owen T. Burg, and, though perfected too late to do any work on the late crop, will be put in the field to test its capacity on the next one.—Inter Ocean.

JOTTINGS.

—Sweepstake shooting at live birds took place on the grounds of the Middlesex County Gun Club at Dunellen this morning.

—Friday morning at the High School exercises of a commencement will be rendered by the scholars of the school. The friends of the school are in vited to be present.

—About fifteen of the carpenters of the city went to Newark yesterday to attend a picnic given under the auspices of the journeymen carpenters there.

—Justice T. A. Smith of Metuchen on Monday committed William Campbell of that place to the Middlesex county jail in New Brunswick for disorderly conduct.

—The colored people of the city gave a cake walk and festival on West Front street last evening for the benefit of David Martin. The affair wound up in a rumpus.

—The Gospel services held in the tent on Mr. P. J. Loiseaux's grounds, corner of Chatham and Water streets, are being continued every evening at eight o'clock. All are freely invited.

—Mayor Rockefellow has placed in blastore the best contractors for the conveyance of money into the office. It is similar to those in use by the New York houses and saves a great many unnecessary steps.

—Friday morning beginning at nine o'clock the sale of the City Hotel furniture will take place at Laing's Hotel. This will be the largest sale of furniture ever put up at auction at any one time in this city.

—The Athletics and Stars have been unable to arrange a game of base ball for next Saturday afternoon and in consequence thereof the Athletics will play a game with a nine chosen from the Plainfield Turn Verein.

—Two men under the influence of liquor disturbed the peace and quietness of Somerset St., near Front, at nine o'clock last evening, with songs and boisterous talk. As soon as the police put in appearance they made themselves scarce.

—The first entertainment and recitation of the Y. W. C. T. U. will take place at the Union Club House, Broadway and Ninth street, on Thursday, June 17, at eight o'clock. An interesting and enjoyable evening is anticipated by the fortunate possessors of invitation cards.

—The hearing in the case of the Praise boy who was committed to the Somerville jail by Justice Mattison of the Borough, recently, will come up before Judge Bartine in Somerville on Monday. The boy is said to bear a bad reputation, and it is the intention of the authorities to have him committed to the Reform School.

—Considerable speculation has been made as to the cause of Fire Commissioner Cutter resigning his position as a member of the Board of Fire Commissioners. In answer to a question Mr. Cutter said that he had no statement to make; but that he was considering the matter of tendering his resignation for some time, and thought this to be an appropriate time.

—The members of the Athletic base ball club of this city and the Mystic base ball club of New Brunswick are arranging for a game of ball to be played in that city next July. Quite a rivalry exists between these two clubs as to the championship. Two games were played last year, each club winning one, but the decisive game has never been played.

—On complaint of Mrs. Mary Kane, Edward Julac yesterday afternoon appeared before the City Judge to answer to a charge of using profane and indecent language. He waived an examination and was fined five dollars in default of which the sentence of the court was that he be confined in the county jail for a term of 20 days. After some hesitancy he paid the fine.

THE JAPANESE CRANZY.

Funny Features—A Large Audience and Fully $100 Realized for the "Little Sunbeams."

The tall spire of the pretty Park Avenue Baptist church above the surrounding foliage formed a conspicuous index in the hazy moonlight last evening to guide all good and merry people in the way they should go to witness what was dubbed, we suppose for the want of another name, a Japanese Cranzy. And enough of the good and merry people of this vicinity to fairly pack the spacious social part of the edifice hied themselves thither, the good man, the good wife, and their lovely daughters and manly sons, all out for fun.

Mrs. J. M. Whitfield was some time ago invited to take charge of the "Little Sunbeams" during the illness of the regular teacher, who was her friend, and although Mrs. Whitfield was not a member of the church, she was induced to continue the charge. She originated the "Kaffee Klatsch" there which some time ago proved such a success, and then devised the Cranzy of last evening, assisted by several ladies and gentlemen from other churches, among them Mr. and Mrs. Amesbury and Mr. and Mrs. Green, of the party of Plainfielders who recently gave such a successful entertainment at Music Hall to aid the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

There were about eighty persons, including forty children, in all manner of handsome Japanese costumes, presenting in themselves a very pretty sight. Numerous Chinese lanterns hung from the ceiling, adding to picturesque effect.

The entertainment was begun by the following

Cranzy Song.....Chorus and Class

After the program was rendered and the audience was in happiest of moods, all were invited to partake of refreshments, including Cream, Ice cream, and that we suppose is where Mrs. Cranzy herself showed to advantages her joke. People sat around in groups and the hum of voices and jingle of dishes and spoons, together with the pleasant conversation indicated that everybody was most happy.

The various tables were presided over by the following ladies in Japs' costumes; Tea room—Mrs. L. Heyniger, Mrs. T. I. Runyon and Mrs. Giles; Japanese fans and scrolls—The Misses Heyniger; Japanese cups and saucers—Mrs. T. I. Runyon; cranzy eggs—Miss Liura Stimpson; candy table—Miss Elma Runyon, Miss Jeffries and Mrs. W. F. Lowry; lemonade bower—Miss Addie and Liura Runyon; refreshment table—Mrs. Antsonty, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Henry Moore, Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Compton. The ushers were also several children's tables for pop corn, etc.

While all the tables were very pretty in the manner of their decorations, conspicuous among them in artistic effect was the ice cream and cake table, in charge of the group. Surrounding the abundance of frosted cakes there was a profusion of frosted flowers which had been permitted to remain in the rain yesterday and thereby preserve their freshness. Those were pompoms, etc. Except a central pyramid, the base of which was daisies on a bed of ferns, and the pinacle roses of various colors.

After the Cranzy, which was given to raise funds for a piano for Mrs. Whitfield's class, had been closed, it was found that the sum of one hundred dollars or thereabout, as nearly as can at present be determined.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

The public school here will close on Friday, June 25th, for the summer.

Road Overseer Hezekiah Hand is engaged making repairs on the roads between this village and Fanwood station.

James Baker, of the firm Baker & Mount, on Saturday received a handsome new horse to be used in connection with his business.

A fair and festival under the auspices of the Episcopal church is being held in the church building during the afternoon and evening.

The interior of the Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company's house is undergoing decided improvements. The walls are being plastered and other necessary repairs are being made.

Mrs. Simpson and sons of New York city, have returned to this place and taken up the old homestead. Mr. Simpson is their beautiful dwelling on the side of the mountain to the north of this place.

Sunday was observed as Children's Day in the Methodist Episcopal church. Children's Day program was rendered in the afternoon which included music, recitations and an address by the pastor. The floral display was something grand.

John Allen, the hackman, has within the last few days, lost two valuable horses from disease contracted by eating poisoned hay belonging to Mr. Allen is sick and yesterday afternoon the animal fell upon him and severely bruised his leg.

Some considerable dissatisfaction has been aroused among the residents here by the proposed scheme of the Board of Freeholders to abolish the law in favor of appointing a female principal in place of Mr. I. F. Town, the present incumbent, whose term of office is about to expire. Many of residents are said to be in favor of the reappointment of Mr. Town, who has filled the position to general satisfaction.

Police Court Notes.

The blotter at police headquarters was well filled this morning when the City Judge opened the usual morning session at the station house.

The first case to be disposed of was that of John Gray of New Brooklyn, arrested by Police Officer Lynch Sunday afternoon for being drunk and fast driving. The man was driving through town at a high rate of speed when the officer arrested him. The horse and vehicle was sent to a livery stable. Gray was fined "five dollars or twenty days in the county jail." He paid the fine.

For the ninth time since September, 1878, Albert Cole was arrested to answer to the charge of being "drunk and disorderly." He had been liberated from the county's institutions but four days when Friday's work of officer Grant arrested him on Park avenue last evening. The City Judge sentenced him to the county jail for 30 days, and imposed a fine of $20. He took both.

Charles Williams was arrested late in the evening by officer McCue. This morning he was arraigned with the "drunk and disorderly" for the seventh time since June 1880. The Judge's patience was evidently exhausted and he sentenced Williams to jail for 60 days and also to pay a fine of $25, which is equal to 90 days. He will be liberated in time for the election.

Police officer Lynch found William Sergeant acting in an unlawful manner on North avenue during last night and "gathered him in." He was fined three dollars by Judge Ulrich this morning.

On complaint of his wife, Edward Kennedy was arrested by Detective Dodd last night on a charge preferred for assault and battery. He was locked up in the station house.

Accident at the Scott Press Works.

Jacob Sperling, an employe of the Scott Press Works, met with a severe accident at six o'clock last evening. Of late the business at the works has been on the increase to such an extent as to compel Mr. Scott to employ an extra night force of workmen. At the close of each day's work, it is the custom of the engineer to shut off the engine and oil the machinery, leaving a skeleton on the night "run." When the engine was stopped last night Mr. Sperling, who is employed as a helper, threw the belt from his machine, causing it to stop. He then attempted to stop the machine next to him which had been left running by the night man in charge, and in so doing his right knee was caught in the gearing between the belt and the shaft and badly, inflicting a deep flesh wound of about six inches in length, from which the blood flowed profusely. A physician was summoned but fainting to respond, skilled persons in the shape of Messrs. Green and Lacres, fixed up the injured man was taken to his home.

$20,000 Damages Claimed.

Miss Mary Martin, a young woman of Metuchen, is said to have brought suit against Frank Bohl of the same place, for slander, claiming $20,000 damages. She has employed counsel to represent her in the suit. Miss Martin will be remembered as the young lady who in connection with her mother, a short time ago sought to have her father, Wm. Martin, declared a lunatic and sent to the asylum at Trenton, on account of whose cruelty to her father appeared in those columns at the time. Frank Bohl is a young German who is courting and living with the Martins for some time, and it is now charged with slandering Miss Martin. It is expected that the prosecution is a piece of spite work, as will be shown if the case ever comes to trial.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schermerhorn entertained a number of their friends at their residence on North avenue last evening.

Michael Byrnes of Elizabeth has been awarded the contract for enlarging the grand stand at the Waverly fair grounds.

Inadvertently yesterday the name of Charles Thomas was omitted from the Investigating Committee of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society.

The Misses Maggie and Emma Rocap anticipate a trip through the western states, probably starting next week. The trip will include Chicago.

Clark Evans has given W. H. Warner & Co. the contract for laying one of their London artificial stone sidewalks in front of the Crescent Rink.

Miss Iva, daughter of Joseph T. Crowell of Rahway, was one of the graduating class at the Woman's Institute of Technical Design, New York, last week.

An evening social was given at the residence of Assemblyman J. McCutcheon on Roosview avenue, North Plainfield, last evening, and there was a large number of guests present.

Rev. Dr. Hurlbut and family are at present register-ed at Asbury Park, where they have gone for the summer. Dr. Hurlbut will shortly start for Kansas, to take charge of the Ottawa Sunday School Assembly.

Rev. W. E. Honeyman, who has been confined to the house for several months past through indisposition, is slowly recovering, and together with his wife left the city today for the Isle of Shoals, N. J., where it is thought his health will be benefited by the change

Oliver W. Wren of Brooklyn, who is on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Sebring of Prospect Place, North Plainfield, has been induced to give some of his humorous readings at the Reform Club rooms, Monday, at the free meetings. He is one of the best and most laughable in the country, and is in constant demand, especially among the Odd Fellows, with whom he is a great favorite. There is to be no charge. He is the manager of the Wren Comedy Company of Brooklyn.

As a sign of prosperity in Plainfield it may be mentioned that between seventy and one hundred new dwellings are now in course of construction here. Among the number that may be termed stately in their elegance is that of Mr. Runkle on West Eighth street which bids fair to rival in elegance the magnificent structure of ex-Assemblyman Jacob Kirkner. In North Plainfield St. J. McCutchen's new residence is an object of much admiration because of its grandeur. Another of pleasing dimensions which will add greatly to the beauty of Plainfield is the dwelling about to be erected by Councilman Bowers on the elm streets at the corner of Franklyn Place and La Grande avenues. Those with the elegant Potter, Tracy and Talmadge residences will be places of which any city may feel justly proud, and show the taste and good judgement for which the inhabitants here-about are noted.

Reception by the Plainfield Public School Class in Elocution.

Assembly Hall was well-filled last evening with friends of the elocution class of the Plainfield public schools. The stage was beautifully decorated with flowers, which formed a pretty back ground to the bright young faces. The entertainment aimed more at simple elocution than dramatic effect. The pupils more than fulfilled the high expectations of their friends. All acquitted themselves with credit. Miss Bovee delighted the audience with some well chosen selections and was three times encored. A choir of excellent voices from the High School added much to the enjoyment of the evening and was greeted with warm applause. Tom Brown and Miss Dewey added to the musical part of the program. The pupils received many beautiful floral offerings in testimony of the affection and appreciation of their friends. The rendering of all the pieces showed the fine effect of Miss Bowen's careful training. Following is the

A City of Millionaires.

Your correspondent counted seventy new houses in course of erection, a number of which are being built by four of the dozen millionaires that make the city their home. Plainfield can boast more millionaires to the square yard than any other city in the State.—New Brunswick Home News.

WESTFIELD.

M. Shepherd returned on Tuesday from his month's visit to his old home in Mississippi.

J. N. Wilcox began yesterday afternoon the moving of the safe belonging to the township to its new quarters on Elm street.

To-morrow Dr. F. A. Kinch and family will start on their trip to the Pacific coast. They expect to be gone four months. Cousel Kinch goes along with his wheel.

STATE NOTES.

Commissions were issued on Monday to two new postmasters in New Jersey, viz., John W. Decker, at Deckertown, Sussex county, and Joseph Wood Wallace, at Hornersville, Salem county. An order has also been issued establishing a daily mail route between Carsonia and Mount Laurel.

The wife of John Weber an Orange baker quit him recently and found employment at Long Branch. She next sent her husband word for her to have their child with her, but he refused, and yesterday she appealed to Court Commissioner Precious, who promptly issued a writ of habeas corpus and the child was surrendered it to its mother.

A counterfeit five dollar gold piece has been discovered in circulation. It is dated the date of 1851, and is larger in diameter and thicker than the genuine. The workmanship is good and the color is fair, but the head of Liberty the coin is much elongated, and the "in" in the word "United is reversed. The weight is not as great as that of the genuine, and the intrinsic value of the metal about one-half.

The first annual tournament of the New New Jersey State Lawn Tennis Association for the championship of the State will be held on the grounds of the Orange club, Mountain Station, Orange, on July 5th and following days. Matches will be two best sets of three, and the player who wins four out of five will decide. Entries must be made before June 25th to H. N. McCartar, jr., 38 Park place, Newark.

Ex-Sheriff Blundell of Paterson, the administrator of the estate of Peter V. Fernandez, who was shot by his wife lately at Hawthorne, has begun legal proceedings to claim from the New York Life Insurance Company the $15,000 for which Fernandez was insured. The papers recently made out of Mrs. Fernandez claim that as she survived her husband a few minutes she was entitled to this money, and that they, as her agents, ought to have it. The brother of Fernandez thinks differently, and there is likely to be litigation over it.

The Jersey City Police Commissioners yesterday carried out the arrangement by which Commissioner Lee succeeds Lyon president of the board. Mr. Tilden is a Republican, and the understanding with the Democratic members was that they should be permitted to elect a captain and a sergeant in return for their votes for him. The Republicans had refused to carry out the agreement. Yesterday they retained and Moses Newton, a Democrat was promoted to the captaincy, and Roundsman Joseph Carroll was made sergeant in his place. Robert Pearson was made a detective. All three are Democrats.

Washington street and LaGrande avenue.

Rates Reduced.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $24 to

per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay in case of death is to $5,000, and does not depend upon an assessment. There are no Membership Fees or annual dues; nothing but a plainly stated premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy, and the contract is backed by assets of over $600,000.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since, and it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also a large surplus to its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $943,182.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over 600,000, it has paid claims to the amount of five times amounting to over $700,000. ### A Brief Sketch of Ellis Island—A Heavy Quartermaster—A Dull Life.

Ellis Island, or Fort Gibson, as it was formerly called, is north of Bedloe's island, about 600 yard distant and close to the Jersey shore, although included in the First ward of New York city. The fort formerly mounted 15 guns and was garrisoned by a detachment of United States troops until some time during the "fifties, when it was formally turned over to the ordnance department of the navy to be used as a magazine.

Until 1890, however, the army nominally controlled the fortification, which was annually visited by an officer connected with the military service. In 1881 an order was received directing the removal of the guns and the dismantling of the fort. Since then the island has been under the absolute control of the chief of the bureau of ordnance, navy department, Washington.

During the war of the rebellion immense quantities of powder were securely stored upon the island, while the shell rooms were literally packed with projectiles of every description. There are at present five compartments used for the manufacture of charges of powder and the storing of shell and other projectiles. Notwithstanding the dangerous character of the material, no instance has yet been reported of an accident by explosion since the island was used as a magazine. This is due to the extraordinary precautions observed by the employes under the direction of the officer in charge, who to each instance has been selected from the ranks of the gunners of the navy.

Not without excitement, however, attended in handling shell several narrow escapes from accident have been reported. Upon one occasion while unloading some sixty pound shells from a vessel's cargo Quartermaster Lowe noticed a white smoke issuing from the box containing the projectiles. Hastily snatching up an axe from the hold of the vessel he dashed ashore shouting to the men at the shed whip to "throw the blamed thing overboard." The men fled for their lives, while Lowe, coolly calculating the time, threw the smoking shell into the river. For this brave action he was complimented in general orders by the chief of ordnance.

There are at present four watchmen employed about the island, one of whom is constantly on duty to prevent the landing of pleasure parties without permission and in noting signals. The island is reached by means of a rowboat from the Jersey shore, a small red flag on the flagstaff near the landing-floor being the usual signal of the presence of visitors. As it is necessary for every vessel of the navy when leaving or entering the navy yard to discharge or receive powder and ammunition from Shell island, the place is sometimes enlivened by the presence of naval officers. Beyond this, save visiting steamboats, any boat arrived from a cruise on the sea is little visited. Torpedo, belonging to the island, a residence of three years is for imagining is devoid of excitement.—New York Times.

THE BOSTON PURITAN OUTSAILED BY THE NEW YORKERS.

A Close Run for First Place by Three Crack Ioops—The New Atlantic a Close Second to the Winner—The Puritan Out of the Race.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The opening fight for supremacy among the fleet-winged beauties yesterday, and ended in a manner which cannot but have a depressing effect on some Boston folks, not to speak of the young sprite in town who has had their captain of the Atlantic and the Boston victor of a year ago, but, even as late as yesterday morning, refused to put out their money on Gus Cahfield's front sloop, even at the regular odds of 4 to 1, which were off red in every well re ated pool room in this city. The weather was not conducive to high hopes among the yachtsmen that sailing would amount to anything and more than one yacht owner was heard to say he knew, possibly for the first time in many a year, and made a timid appeal that howling, roaring gales might prevail for six hours or so. Instead of that day the sky was not an indigo fit of much hope, but the wind rose with the sun and by 9 o'clock the bay and two rivers were dotted with whitecaps. The tug Luckenbach, which had been secured by the Atlantic club for the regatta, bobbed and bounced at the club's wharf, Brooklyn, until the regatta committee—Jacob T. Van Wyck, Charles T. Pierce and William F. T. Winteringham—and the three judges—W. W. Bube, D. K. McNulty and A. B. Paine—stepped aboard, followed by Messrs. A. B. Richards, D. K. Valentine, Edward Stanton, William H. Eggert and Dr. McGatt, the club surgeon, as guests.

The tug was crowded; but as sooner was the yacht over the line than the order to cut those sails was heard from the deck, and instantly the two massive shoots of canvas filled out in all their immensity to the breeze. It was a beautiful piece of seamanship. The little English cutter Clara followed with her new and bobtailed jackyard topsail in the Atlantic's wake. Passing down the bay the Puritan kept the lead, which she gained by her speedy start, but within unconscionable proximity behind her came the Atlantic and Priscilla. Almost beside her was the little Thetis, which in fact retained the lead of the other yachts as far as the stake boat at the point of the Hook.

Off Coney Island point about noon the wind almost entirely died away, and the whole fickle fleet that had made of the whole fleet would certainly have drifted back to Bay Ridge. As it was the boats drifted seemingly until noon, when it sprang up again and the bigger boats rounded the point of the Hook, and in a somewhat heavy sea headed southward for the Scotland light, which they rounded in the following order:

| | H. | M. | S. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Puritan | 1 | 19 | 13 |
| Thetis | 1 | 16 | 30 |
| Atlantic | 1 | 16 | 38 |
| Priscilla | 1 | 18 | 35 |
| Mischief | 1 | 22 | 05 |
| Clara | 1 | 22 | 06 |
| Gaywing | 1 | 26 | 36 |

The Priscilla, however, which rounded the Scotland light last of the sloops of her class, gained rapidly on the stretch to the red Sandy Hook lightship, so much so that she was the first to round it, which she did at 2h. 25m. 25s. The Atlantic came next at 2h. 29m. 36s., and at 2h. 32m. 25s. the Puritan, Thetis and all three went over on the port tack for the home stretch. The Gaywing rounded at 3h. 43m. 40s., and thirteen minutes later the Mischief followed suit. For nearly an hour after, the other forty yachts in the race turned the ship and followed in the wake of the three crack sloops. Coming home, Priscilla increased her lead until at Romer Beacon, she was nearly two miles ahead of the first, and of the Puritan and Atlantic, both of which had apparently given up hopes of beating her, and were each contesting for second place.

When about off Long 12, the wind died away, and the Priscilla got becalmed. The wind still lasting two miles below where the Atlantic and Puritan were sailing, filled their sails and gave them quite a spurt, which lessened the distance between them and the Con boat. But the Priscilla could not be defeated in a race of that kind, and soon steadily, slowly, but surely, until 4h. 39m. 58s., judges time, when she struggled over the line, and was greeted as victor by the most fervent shattering roar and cheer of enthusiasm that shrieks that ever resounded through the Staten Island hills. The steamers Columbia, Sylvester and the Cygnet, with the club guests on board, raised a terrific pandemonium, which was augmented by the firing of his 7-pounder by Gus on the Staten Island end of the long shoot.

At 4h. 54m. 28s., just fourteen minutes and one second after the Priscilla, the Atlantic drifted over the line and was greeted with the same cheering. The Puritan, however, had drifted up about 200 feet in the rear of the Atlantic, was totally becalmed and could not obtain sufficient steering way to bring her over the finishboat line for fully 15, but drifted outside of the tug, and, of course, was out of the race.

ATLANTIC.

Approaching the fleet the scene was indeed a pretty one. Nearly seventy-five yachts and boats of high and low degrees were about the anchorage, some at anchor, but most of them beating around and flying as near and off as though eager for the contest. The crest of the Bay Ridge hill and all along the shore road to near Fort Hamilton was crowded with spectators. The three crack sloops were lifted nearly thither across the bay, their white wings standing out in white silhouette against the leaden sky.

The regatta was divided into eleven classes—from A to K—and an additional supplementary class for the crack sloops. The start was a flying one from a line across the first signal being a gun from the club house on the top of the hill, followed by the raising of the Atlantic club flag. The second gun, five minutes later, was the signal for the start of the big schooners and the crack sloops. The Puritan had been hovering in suspicious proximity to the line for some time before the Luckenbach arrived, and but for the fact that Joe Ellsworth didn't command her this time, but was in command of the new Atlantic, the idea would certainly have prevailed that he was adopting his tricks of a year ago, which resulted in his collision with the Genesta.

PURITAN.

It was 10:40 when the gun for the start was fired. The wind blew stiffly from the northeast and right through the smoke of the big guns, and which echoed over and richochetting through the hills the Puritan went over the line and ran up her big balloon jib, at the same time running out her spinnaker. Fifteen seconds later the Boston sloop Thetis followed. At 10h. 41m. 30s. the little sloop Hesper followed and at 10h. 42m. 30s. the Priscilla crossed, with Gus Canfield, her owner, at the wheel. The schooners Montauk, Grayling, and sloops Aggie and Grizzie crossed, and others along the line. At 10h. 43m. 30s. the yachts screeched and whistled, but Joe Ellsworth was too busy to respond. It was 10h. 52m. 30s. when the Atlantic crossed, and if it had been eight seconds later it would have been handicapped with a time allowance for not crossing in the allotted time. As it was, not over a marine manoeuvre was performed which was worthy of the veteran Joe. Everybody wondered why his balloon jib and spinnaker were hauled down little and instead of flattering free to draw as soon as on the line

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

A YOUNG HUSBAND SHOOTS HIMSELF AND HIS WIFE.

An Unexplained Crime at a New York Hotel—A Western Couple End a Bridal Trip in an Abrupt and Effective Manner—The Truth May Never Be Known.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A few minutes after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in room 25 at the Sturtevant house, this city, Winfield B. Thompson, of Kansas City, aged 27, shot and killed his wife, a handsome woman of about 23, and then shot himself twice, inflicting fatal wounds in the head and near the heart. Mrs. Thompson lived twenty-five minutes after being shot. Her wound was in the back of her head. An employe of the hotel was hurrying toward the room in response to a call, and, meeting one of the annunciator, when he heard the three shots fired. He rushed back to the clerk's desk and informed Mr. Lewis Leland, the proprietor, who hurried upstairs with several of his subordinates. The door of room 25 was locked. Groans were heard from within the room. The door was quickly burst in, and a terrible sight was then revealed. Upon the floor, their heads resting each upon a separate pillow, were Thompson and his wife. The woman was dying. Thompson was groaning with pain. Beside him lay the heavy revolver with which the shooting had been done. The hotel carpenter, who had been called in the first to reach the room, was the first to speak. Dr. Mulford, Katzenbach and Pallen soon followed. Calling him by name, Dr. Mulford asked Thompson how he felt. Thompson breathed her last. The physicians turned their attention to Thompson, and all agreed after a brief examination that he could live but a short time. An ambulance having arrived, the man was placed therein and conveyed to the New York hospital. Thompson arrived at the hotel with his wife five days ago and registered as from Kansas City. The couple had a large amount of baggage and seemed to have plenty of money. They were quiet and did not mingle much with the guests. That morning Thompson stood at the hotel desk and wrote two letters, which he left to be mailed. One was addressed to R. H. Yard, of Hanover square, this city, and the other to C. S. Thompson, No. 310 West Fourteenth street, Kansas City. A telegram has been sent to the latter address by Mr. Leland. The hotel people think from appearances that the couple were on their wedding tour. An examination of the room revealed no indications of a struggle

THE RECEPTION.

THE PRESIDENT STANDS WITH HIS WIFE TWO HOURS,

While the Diplomatic Corps, the Army and Navy, the Senate and Judiciary, and a Host of Others Shook His Hand and Look at His Wife's Dress.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The reception given by President Cleveland last night by the diplomatic corps, the army and navy and the judiciary brought a vast crowd to the executive mansion to greet Mrs. Cleveland's return into society at the capital. The mansion was closed to visitors during the day and florists were busy all day decorating the flower rooms. Particular pains were taken with the East or largest room in the mansion; and, as usual on state occasions, this and the Blue and Red Green parlors were beautifully adorned. Large tropical plants filled the corners, windows, and recesses of the East room, while the mantles were banked with mosses and many colored vegetable fibres.

The large chandeliers were draped with smilax, and garlands of evergreens encircled the pillars. The mansion was never more elaborately decorated, and the display contained a larger, more distinguished or brilliantly attired gathering.

Carriages began to arrive before 9 o'clock, and a steady stream of invited guests poured into the mansion until long after 10 o'clock. An unusually large number of persons, about 1,500—and it seemed as though every one invited had availed themselves of the opportunity to attend—glimpse of the "first lady of the land." Promptly at 9 o'clock the president and Mrs. Cleveland came down stairs, and when they had taken their places in the Blue Room, Mrs. Cleveland at the president's right, the reception began. Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. Vilas and Mrs. Whitney were the only cabinet ladies present, and the diplomatic corps in full court dress, and accompanied by the ladies of the legations, were the first to be presented to the president and Mrs. Cleveland. Prince Lepo do, of Brazil, who came with the Brazilian minister and attaches of that legation, attracted considerable attention, and appeared to be much wonderfully impressed with the surroundings and was very enthusiastic in his expressions of pleasure and surprise at the scene of the assemblage. It is a matter worthy of note that there is not a diplomat in the United States representing a foreign government who was not present at this reception.

After personal introductions to the members of the corps and their ladies the "army," headed by Gen. Sheridan, the "navy," by Admiral Porter, the members of the senate and the house, the judiciary and other invited guests passed slowly by the president and Mrs. Cleveland. The guests one by one were first introduced to the president and then to Mrs. Cleveland, and so a continuous stream passed by them until about 10:45 p. m. When the last invited guest had been presented to Mrs. Cleveland, the president, departing from the usual custom on such occasions, did not at once repair to the private portion of the mansion, but, taking his wife's arm, led her out through the Green room into the East room; and standing in front of the conspicuous apartment—followed by Secretaries Endicott and Whitney and Postmaster General Vilas, and their ladies—passed through the long corridor to the private part of the mansion. This was the signal that the reception was over.

President Cleveland was attired in a full-dress evening suit. Mrs. Cleveland wore her wedding dress, so often described as a "poem in ivory," and captivated everybody with her handsome face, graceful carriage, sweet face and winning, pleasant manners.

ENCOURAGEMENT FOR IRELAND.

Urging the People to Abstain from Violence.

DUBLIN, June 16.—At the regular fortnightly meeting of the Dublin branch of the Irish National league, Mr. John Dillon presided. He stated that the receipts of the branch for the two weeks last past otherwise the donations to the league fund to have been as follows: From America, £300; from Ireland, £130; and from Australia, £100.

The meeting was addressed by Mr. Dillon and other speakers, all of whom urged the people of Ireland to be patient and to place implicit confidence in their leaders in parliament and Mr. Gladstone. A policy of patience, abstention from violence and trust in those who were using their best efforts for the cause of Ireland would, if followed by the Irish people, Mr. Dillon said, infallibly bring about the establishment of local government and the restoration of prosperity to Ireland.

Hat Men Arbitrate.

READING, Pa., June 16.—The local board of arbitration of the hat finishers union has declared John R. Miller & Co.'s and Pendel Brothers & Co.'s factories open, to all hat finishers, and the understanding between all parties is that the finishers employed in both factories previous to the late difference in regarding wages are to be given the preference. Non-union men are employed in some of the other factories, and the arbitration committee say that in the future no cause for an adjustment can be made with the proprietors.

Hocking Miners Sentenced.

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 16.—Judge Hart to-day refused to grant the twenty-four Monongahela river miners, who were found guilty of riot and conspiracy, a new trial, and sentenced each to pay a fine of $100 and to undergo eight months' confinement in the workhouse.

THE FATAL AQUEDUCT.

Laborers Poisoned by Inhaling Blasting Gas.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Shaft 21, section A, of the sixth division of the aqueduct, situated at Morris dock, seems to be a genuine death pit. Monday morning William Ryan, aged 46, supposed to be a resident of Jersey City, applied for employment as a laborer and was assigned to work in the shaft. That evening he was taken with violent cramps, and yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock he died in intense agony from the effects of the gas poisoning. The men were generated by the blastine of the rocks in the tunnel.

James Fitzpatrick, a handsome young fellow, 25 years old, and Theodore Frank, 48 years old, also entered the shaft for the fatal time Monday evening. When they entered the outer air at the completion of their night's labor, both complained of a feeling of suffocation about the chest, and in a few hours they were in a comatose condition. Fitzpatrick died at 8:30 o'clock, and shortly after Frank was taken by the police of the Second precinct (High Bridge) station to the Ninety-ninth Street hospital, where he died.

Word was sent to the coroner's office of the fatality of the other two men, but up to 1 a. m. no action had been taken in the matter, and the bodies were taken to a hut adjacent to the house in which they died.

Henry L. Judge, assistant engineer of the division of which F. W. Watkins is the head, said that death was probably caused by the inhalation of the gas which emanates from the debris caused by the blasting of the rocks. It is the duty of these men to shovel up this loose place it in cars, which carry it to the dumping ground.

Four other men are seriously ill, and it is thought one will probably die.

THE LONG STRIKE DECLARED OFF.

Third Avenue Drivers Vote to Give Up the Fight.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The Third avenue strikers who deserted Joe O'Donnell and James P. Downing as trustees, in April, for the purpose of making a deal with Jay Gould, met would have been taken back to work at once by the Third Avenue company, appointed a committee of Downing yesterday to try and reinstating for them.

Downing has recently lost his job as a Fourth avenue conductor. He and O'Donnell complained bitterly with the desertion of the strikers yesterday and on their behalf tried to see President Lyon. They saw only Treasurer Beaver and Superintendent Robertson. They were not cordially received. Superintendent Robertson suggested that they call around again in a fortnight.

They went back and advised the strikers to declare the strike off, because their warlike attitude annoyed the company, and was inconsistent with their desire to go back to work. It was voted by a small majority to declare the strike off. It was also decided to keep up the organization of Local Assembly 4,163, but to go to work at anything that offers.

The six Avenue B car drivers arrested for inciting to riot were held in default of $400 bail each.

CARRYING BEER INTO IOWA.

A Railroad Refuses to Take It and Is Sued.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Suit for $10,000 damages was begun by George A. & Frederick W. Bowman, beer sellers at Marshalltown, Ia., against the Chicago and North western railroad for its refusal to transport 5,000 barrels of beer for the plaintiffs, from Chicago to Marshalltown. The railroad declines to haul the beverage for the reason that state making it a penal offense to take liquor into the state. Bowman Brothers bought 5,000 barrels at $6.50 per barrel, the payment for which is guaranteed on their getting it into Iowa. The North western road refused to take it. Bowman Brothers assert that beer is sold all over Iowa, and if once they succeeded in getting it into the state they could sell it for $8 per barrel and not be molested. The refusal of the company to transport it is to be made the occasion of a test of the validity of the Iowa law.

THREE YOUNG LIONS.

A BOY CUB AND HIS TWO LITTLE SISTERS BUT A FEW WEEKS OLD.

How the Mother Guards Her Young—The Father Gets Cuffed on the Side of the Head—The Boy Cub, the Mother's Favorite—A Jaguar and Her Cubs.

Jennie, the African lioness at the Zoo, gave birth, some days ago to three cubs, one male and two females. It was in a cage darkened so that every particle of light was shut out, and the outer entrance at half-past 2 one of the doors was taken down by Superintendent Stevens and a fine view of the mother and children presented to the reporters who were privileged to look on a day but at the rear of the cage, her eyes staring fiercely at the intruders. The little cubs were huddled close to their mother, looked dignified and calm. In the adjoining cage lay Paul, the father, and he seemed to fully realize the new responsibility that rested upon him. He would walk to the door of the cage containing the cubs, look in and back out, then quietly lie down by himself. On the day of their arrival he slowly crawled into the cage to see his mate, but he came out with a bound and a yell, for Jennie gave him a "scaloy" on the side of the head that made him think that his intrusion was unseen any. In a few days he picked the boy lion cub up in her mouth and carried him back and laid it before her liege lord and master. He condescended to look at it and backed to the further end of the cage.

"Would you like to take them up?" said Mr. Stevens.

"Not if it's necessary to go in there with the old fellow."

A PEEP AT THE THREE CUBS.

"I'll let them out in the out-door cage," said, pulling up the door, the male lion bounded out, closely followed by Jennie, the mother. Down slammed the door, and the artist and reporter entered the cage and picked up the cubs. The boy cub felt as well as a ball of butter, his ears were not over a quarter of an inch long, and his fat body covered with spotted yellow, fine, soft hair as wool. His eyes had no fierceness. He looked and felt as Jim Nye said once at a banquet, "too full for utterance." His body seemed too big for his legs, and he tumbled over in his clumsy, little teeth—milk white—no bigger than a kitten's, and about as sharp. He waddled along the floor of the cage, and is his mother's favorite, as it is the only one of the litter that she carries around in her mouth holding it by the nape of the neck as a cat carries her kittens.

Lionesses carry their young from thirteen to fourteen months, and they are not weaned for four or five months. When they are old enough to polish a bone. Her diet is now a quart of fresh milk from one cow, nine pounds of good chopped beef and some soft bones, one of the latter is mention and chicken bones. Jennie is 7 years old, and this is her fourth litter. The others she ate up, or they died from her carrying them around too much. Minnie, one of her cubs, is an opposite cage, is nearly eight months old, was raised by Bill Halstead on the bottle, and is half fellow well met with a cane that climbs up the bars and drops on Minnie's back, and rides around the cage in fine style. She is as large as a Newfoundland dog.

THE DEVOTION OF THE MOTHER.

The most noticeable feature about the lion family was the devotion of the mother, who fairly lived in the cage with her young them. Her eyes never left the visitors, whose every motion she noticed, and when she came in from the outdoor cage after the cubs had been transferred to the inside, and, standing in the open door, paused a moment, as if to say, something is coming, and I must see it. She went to the cubs and smelt them all, and appeared satisfied. Feeding time soon came, but she did not appear ravenous, but, coming slowly to the front, kept looking from side to side, and took her meat in at back to the rear of the cage, lying down with the cubs. When they sleep she goes out and lies with the lion.

Quite in contrast was the conduct of the jaguar, which has a three-months cub in the adjoining cage. While the lioness mother was calm, contentment and quiet repose, the jaguar was ceaseless uneasy and snarling. She would not suckle her cub, and snapped viciously when he approached for lunch. "She knows it's near feeding time," said Stevens, "and will not let the cub come near her until she has been herself fed. Yet if the cub come near the front of the cage, she quietly paws it back to the rear, and goes in her handling." The lion cubs have none of the majestic appearance of the lion, no mane, in short, they look like stupid Newfoundland pups, with soft, straight yellow instead of curly, coarse, black hair. The chances are in favor of the cubs being reared. They have been kept so long in the dark and no disturbance whatever suffered to come near the mother, and she appears so quiet and maternal, that there is every reason to believe that they will be reared.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Would Not Be a Boy Again.

Why is it that so many foolish folk look back ward to their boyhood for their halcyon days? Somehow you could not be induced to go back to the games you once enjoyed it. But if you have lived a decent and healthy life you have come to a larger place and fuller joys. You had a good home and have probably abdicated it. But the boy was less than the man. The youthful fret was as great, the cares as many and the struggles as great as the man's, according to his strength, but the boy was not like the man of trade where now you strive for masteries. Your hands may shake with their present burden, but you prefer the shaking to the blistering of iron catches on the old winter's mornings, if only one's manly hands have no blisters of moral sores, he has. You should have, as those around sources of enjoyment now where you had ten then. For your sorrows you have the strength and the faiths of a full grown man. Better be a man before you are, not behind us.—Rev. Emory J. Haynes.

TWO KISSES.

Sleep kisses he remembers through all the darkening years—
Through life made drear with sorrow, through blinding mist of tears,
The first kiss of his mistress, under a moonlit sky;
The last kiss of his mother, the night he saw her die.
The first, all full of passion, through hair of shining gold.
The last, all love and tenderness, death could not make it cold!

Two kisses he remembers: The woman's golden hair
In misty glory shading a face most sweet and fair;
Ah, falsehood stains the rosy lips, false is the lifelong face—
A newer love is smiling in the old trysting place!
His mother's kiss, unchanging, with tears he gave to give,
While death's hand presses on the heart so full of love for him!

Ah, love's first kiss. The sweet spring-time and beauty's tempting glance
Seen through the dazzling sunshine of love, and wine and dance;
He still may find love's kiss again, for love is light of wing,
To one immortal tenderness no change the years may bring
One love is with him always, one look of buried eyes.
One kiss alone remembered—his mother's as she dies.
—L. M. N. in Philadelphia Times.

AN ICEBERG IN THE FOG.

A Sailor Detects the Adjacency of Ice by the Paucity of Smell.

Fortunately for the vessel in the densest fog or amidst the heaviest snowstorm by change of the temperature in its vicinity. A thermometer will fall as much as 4 degrees to windward of an iceberg, and 2 degrees lower yet to leeward. Indeed, experienced shipmasters assert that the thermometer will not only indicate the approach of a ship towards the but the amount of ice likely to be met with. An instance is given of a captain passing two icebergs, the temperature of the water losing 44 degrees and that of the air 41 degrees. When 10 degrees nearer to the ice either the same man passed thirty miles between the thermometer showing 30 degrees and 4 degrees in air. It will thus be seen that the temperature was 3 degrees or 9 degrees lower, although the ice was between 600 and 700 miles closer to the line and at a point where the mean temperature would be 10 degrees higher.

Experienced seamen will often detect the adjacency of ice by the faculty of smell. A ship full of passengers once narrowly escaped destruction thanks to the keen nostrils of her chief officer. She was off the Horn, running before a gale of wind. It was snowing furiously, so that it was difficult at moments to see 2 cables' length of the forward part of the vessel. Two of the best men in the ship's company were stationed on the lookout; the chief mate was at the brake of the wheel, and a seaman stood near the binnacle. On a sudden the mate began to sniff, and, turning rapidly, he called to the captain that he could smell ice. There was a pause whilst the ship continued to storm along, but the mate, once more sniffing vehemently, turned eagerly to the captain and cried again that he was sure that there was ice in the neighborhood.

He had scarcely said this when a loud and fearful cry of "Ice right ahead!" resounded from the half-obscured forecastle, and the helm of the ship was shifted just in time to enable her to go clear of a gigantic iceberg, which leaped like a newly-created island upon the sight, out of the whirling mist and snow. In this case it was calculated that the berg was about two and three miles distant when the officer of the watch detected its presence, to which must be added the circumstance of the mate being to windward. The stories of the many hairbreadth escapes from collisions with or environment by ice would make a thrilling collection.—London Telegraph.

A Type That is Dying Out.

There is a distinct type dying out of the west, and I am sorry to see it go, I mean the prospector. The miner is a different character altogether—a man who works for so much a day like any other laborer, but the prospector was the real rover, wandering over the mountains with his pack-mule and grub stake, and sustained by the ever present hope that he was just about to strike it rich. It was a great game of chance, in which they staked life, health, friendship, the association of their fellowmen and heaven knows what, the possibility that they might any day wake up millionaires created a set of men who established practically in a dream. They lived in caution in the air and ate hard-tack and corned beef.

Every moment for years and years of toil and failure the prospectors have cursed the heart out of any one else on earth they planned what they would do when they found their mine, and were planning when death took them in the throat. It was never "if" they struck it, but always "when" they did. Of course, these men insensibly lived in character of their ambitions, and you could strike more poets, dreamers, dilettanti and voluptuaries over the mines of mountain trail than in the most effete court of Europe. But they are dying out. There place is being filled by the agents of the great eastern syndicates that are gobbling up the silver territory as fast as possible—fellows who gravitate at Heidelberg, wear spectacles and have no soul above a prospect's hammer.—J. T. Elkins in Globe-Democrat.

Now the Donkey-Cart Craze.

Young girls have taken a sudden craze for donkey carts this season, the donkey, for some reason, having awakened to find himself the fashionable creature to ride with even astonishment. The small ponies are no longer in demand, but in their stead the donkey is sought after and in consequence that bespeaks him more popular than he will perhaps be when the fair purchasers become more familiar with his tricks and his manners. This fancy for donkeys is being brought to New York and are sold as fast as they arrive. Every girl must have one of those sleek creatures among her possessions or she is very unhappy. The fancy is for the large white donkey, which is not only difficult to get but costs very handsome sums for any thing good, and is supposed to be more amiably disposed towards man kind than his common gray coated brother. This fashion has been brought over from France, where donkey carts are seen always at the summer resorts and on the Bois.—New York Letter.

Savings Banks in the French Schools.

To promote economy the French government has established saving banks in connection with the public schools. There are no less than 24,000 of these banks, and the 800,000 boys whose names are on the books have an average of $2 each to their credit.—Foreign Letter.

A Portland, Ore., paper-mill gets paper stock—jute butts—from Calcutta for the manufacture of manila paper.

Some Small Fancies.

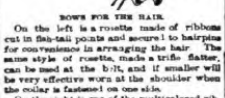
Ribbon bows are everywhere now. Some very pretty ones are made for the hair in various ways, two of which are shown here with.

BOWS FOR THE HAIR.

On the left is a rosette made of ribbons cut in fish-tail points and secured to hairpins for convenience in arranging the hair. The same style of rosette, made a trifle flatter, can be used at the belt, and if smaller will be very effective worn at the shoulder when the collar is fastened on one side.

On the right is one of the multicolored ribbon bows now fashionable for brightening the coronage and wearing in the hair. It is made of feather-edged gros grain ribbon, the colors comprising maroon, pink, chartreuse, lavender, gold and scrap. The ribbon is arranged in looped loops and ends, which are strapped together with a twisted cross piece in two colors.



SLEEVES

Here are shown two tasteful ways of finishing off dress sleeves at the wrist. They relieve the severe plainness which has been in fashion so long.

With Taffet Suits.

With the severer tailor suits worn with a masculine collar and cravat young ladies wear a high straw hat the color of the dress, made of rough straw, or else in an open braid that has no lining. The rim turns up closely behind, and rolls also on the left side, while the right side is straight, or in extreme cases is flattened low against the head. The crown is finished with velvet, and a narrow velvet band encircles the crown. A ladder of cross bows of ribbon may extend up the back of the crown, or else it may have long, erect loops with a bunch of long-stemmed blossoms, usually of very small flowers.

For older ladies to wear with tailor suits the newest bonnets are of rough, dark straw, made small, yet very high in the crown, so that the extremely high bows of last season may be dispensed with, and instead a rosette of velvet ribbons is used. This large rosette may be all of one color, but is more often of two or three colors, made with all the loops of each color massed together and forming a third of the rosette. Thus, on a black rough straw bonnet there are cream, pale yellow, and black loops in the rosette, for a blue dress, dark blue and red and cream loops, or else pale blue loops form the rosette, with brown dresses are white, yellow, and brown loops. This trimming is also seen on fine black silk bonnets, and there it has a black suite, and is especially pretty when the fashionable pistache green is used with pale mon yellow and cream white. On a chocolate brown tulle bonnet the rosette may be of pink, cream and chocolate color. The velvet ribbon is three inches wide by half an inch wide, and is prettiest with purled edges. This forms the entire trimming for the bonnet, except that there is of the dark-red color in the rosette, and is made of two long loops, or else merely pointed ends that are scarcely an inch wide, yet are long enough to reach back to the ears. Small jeweled pins are thrust in these loops, and are thought to give more style to the toilet than if used as breastpins, indeed, they are almost the only jewels now worn out-of-doors.

Fabrics for the Seaside.

It is astonishing, seeing what an annual affair going to the seaside is, that people do not yet understand how the sea air will prey on knots of ribbon, pretty enough when new, and all the flutings and draperies of a costume that look well in Rotten Row and not at all well by the "lone sea wave." Ginghams, sephyrs, holland and dark linen withstand the assault of wind and sea best, and serge, cashmere, nun's cloth, canvas or vicuna in wool; but not cheap, badly dyed stuffs, nor muslin, which loses its stiffness in an hour or so. And yet the fashionable watering places, you see every day people in flimsy washing gowns and rich brocades utterly unsuited to the occasion, what fallibility that they might any day wake up millionaires created a set of men who established practically in a dream. They lived in caution in the air and ate hard-tack and corned beef.

Every moment for years and years of toil and failure the prospectors have cursed the heart out of any one else on earth they planned what they would do when they found their mine, and were planning when death took them in the throat. It was never "if" they struck it, but always "when" they did. Of course, these men insensibly lived in character of their ambitions, and you could strike more poets, dreamers, dilettanti and voluptuaries over the mines of mountain trail than in the most effete court of Europe. A Portland, Ore., paper-mill gets paper stock—jute butts—from Calcutta for the manufacture of manila paper.

Little Girls' Hats.

Misses and children's hats are very prettily trimmed. Leghorn straws are lined with fine gauze ruchings and have large frills down. Quite as much care is bestowed on the "garniture" of English straws, in open work and coarse straws. They also have the under part of the brim lined with ruchings or pleatings, and often the outside of the hats are covered with shell-shaped lace fastened down here and there under flowers or ribbon rosettes. If the brim of the round hat is raised on one side, a band of ribbon is taken across it and fastened on the crown under a bow or a bunch of flowers. Sometimes there are three or four small bands of ribbon arranged in this way. They are bordered on either side with tiny ruchings or gauze or tulle. Many children's hats are covered with flowers.—New York Times.

Trimmings.

Blamine dresses are trimmed with scrolled lace, embroidered galloon in one color, or with cachesaire and Algerian designs, and bands of "bretenne" embroidery. These bands will also serve to trim cashmere goods, navy blue serge for children's dresses and jerseys and jackets. White breton jackets are the style for wear under jerseys. They are embroidered with colored silk or wool, or dotted with tiny gilt stars. Jerseys and jackets are trimmed in the same way with sequins of mother of pearl. Scotch plaid, surah and foulard, combined with plain goods, makes very pretty suits. There are striped foulards and fancy checked materials used for the same purpose. There may be revers and velvet bracles or plaited guimpes on the waists. Foulard and surah are to be much worn.

FASHIONLETS.

Upper skirts grow fuller.

Under skirts remain plain.

Red is at present much used in Paris, particularly for trimmings and linings under transparent fabrics.

Poke bonnets or round hats and white parasols are worn as part of brideamaids' toilets for summer wedding s.

Short petticoats are being made of the daintiest and most delicate materials and in the most exquisite and artistic designs.

The most fashionable modistes still declare their faith in the comfortable jersey waists, by importing them in almost every color.

Despite their inexpensiveness, rough straw hats remain fashionable year after year, and each season seems to add something to their popularity.

Stamped "satin-ettes" and Alsatian cretonnes make becoming and serviceable dresses, and they are quite indispensable for country wear.

A caprice of the moment in millinery is that of veiling the hair in various parts of the bonnet or round hat. For instance, the coronet front, instead of being faced with velvet, now has tulle puffed on it, dotted with beads.

Fancy Neckwear.

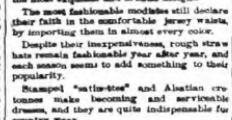
Dog collars, so called, have had a long run, but they are still worn.



DOG COLLARS.

On the left is a removable collar ornamented with three gilt buttons on each side of the opening in front, and secured by a full bow made of blue velvet and red faille ribbons. This style of collar can be used with any dress if made in silk or some such material. The collar is made of dark blue velvet.

On the right is a separate collar made of red velvet embroidered with small jet beads and edged with large ones. The bow is of red velvet ribbon.

FICHU

A graceful fichu made of cream-colored crepe lisse is'd in very fine plaits and ornamented with bows of ribbon, one-half pale blue and the other cream color, edged with gauze with blue and pink chenille dots on the surface. The smaller illustration shows the manner of adjusting it on the corsage.

Fashion's Bell.

As amiable and talismanic are always more or less the fashion symbol used by people and others anticipating marriage, this appears a proper connection in which to make mention of the newest sensation in this line, namely, the Chatterley bell. This is a small bell, first seen in New York city swinging from the watch chain of the young English author, Kyrle Bellew. They heard tinkling in a muffled tone at each movement made by pretty devotees of Wallack's theatre, has at last appeared from out its shrouded mystery and been adopted as a talisman charm by many young men and women in society. The original Chatterley bell, a story goes, was found in an ancient ruin in Rome, and, as the hieroglyphics cut therein, when deciphered by learned searchers after the unknown, signified the end of prosperity to the possessor, it was presented to Queen Margherita of Italy, who accepted it as her talisman. The patronage of this lovely young queen was sufficient to warrant duplicate Campanello bells to be made and worn in both the old world and the new. The current style of wearing the silver-tongued symbol, Mrs. Grundy says, is attached to the left shoulder of engaged young ladies, who proclaim their freedom from matrimonial ties by making music wherever they go, until such time as a lover's ring is offered and accepted, when the little bell is transferred from its seclusion to ever after tinkle on the chain of the happy victor. Jewelers will tell those interested with truth, that the little bell is now made in both gold and silver, and is worn by young people as a charm, sometimes on the watch and sometimes on a locket or a lace pin. The word "campanello" itself means "a little bell."—Jeweler's Circular.

Restless Gowns.

LAWN TENNIS AND WALKING DRESSES.

The lawn tennis dress is a combination of plain and striped wool goods. Over the loose waist is laid a plain jacket, open in front, behind, and with a strap around the neck. It is slightly pointed at the back, top and bottom. Our many girls who play lawn tennis will find this costume very attractive and easily made.

The little round, flat-topped hat is trimmed with the striped goods.

On the right is a different street or walking dress. This, too, is noticeable for its elegant simplicity. It is made of plain and striped goods, the skirt has a very slight draping low down at the back. The waist is open at the side of the full piece, under the vest front.

The Complexion.

To obtain a beautiful skin one must begin and diet properly. Butter, fat meat and greasy food of every kind must not be eaten. Coffee and tea must be given up, so must sugar and all kinds of sweets, and milk or lemonade substituted. Fruits and vegetables should be eaten in abundance, rich candies and cakes avoided, pie never should be touched, and hot bread and fried food generally should be dispensed with. A woman who follows the above rules will find that her skin will become smooth and clear after several months have passed. Of course, the dieting must be thorough and careful. No improvement can be made unless it is.

A tablespoonful of lemon juice taken every other morning for a week, and then not taken again for three days and then taken every other morning for another week, is one of the best things to clear a muddy complexion. It acts like magic. It should always be mixed with molasses or something that will clear it from the system.

A great deal depends upon the constitution of the person and the kind of complexion she has. What will help one woman wonderfully will have no effect whatever on others. One thing is certain, however, milk is always conducive to softening and whitening the skin, and it is a noticeable fact that girls who have access to plenty of milk to drink tea or coffee, and who have drunk quantities of milk have generally, when they reach the age of 20, very beautiful complexions.

Hot water is also one of the best things with which to keep the complexion in order. A tumbl rful should be drunk one hour before every meal. If it is disagreeable by itself, the juice of half a lemon should be added. Sugar should not be used. Most women in summer time are too careless of their complexions, and when water comes, and they go out to balls and parties, they regret it. The sun is excellent for the complexion if it does not get too much of it. A little browning and freckling is oftentimes very beneficial, but when the face is exposed to too great measure of the sun's rays the skin is apt to become coarse. Veils—very thin ones—should always be worn at a seaside resort, unless parasols are carried. The sun and salt sea air together are bad for the complexion, though excellent for the general health.

The face should always be washed in water that has the chill taken off it. Warm water is not good for the complexion, despite all that has been said to the contrary; neither is really cold water. The one makes the skin coarse, and the other chills it, the other roughens it. Oatmeal and Indian meal water are both excellent for washing the face and hands in. The meal softens the skin and gives it a delicate flush which is very becoming. The majority of women will also find that salt water will help their complexions. Get ten cents' worth of rock salt every month, and wash in a basin into which a good jump of it has been placed. Rain water is an excellent thing for the skin, but there is so much truth as poetry in the saying that the "early dew of the morning will make lilies the face of an angel the woman who bathes in it."

Bows for Dress Skirts.

In millinary the various ways of making bows have been followed by the dressers. The "French" bow for dress skirts is formed of ribbon No. 12. This is the usual width. The bow is arranged by the loops being drawn close together, the ends are very long, generally half a yard, and the streamers are frequently a yard in length. Another style of bow for skirts has the loops about six inches long, with a long loop turned downward with a center-piece. The ends are rather short. This style of bow can be made of the same goods. It is soft and not at all thick. Double bows with two kinds of ribbon of blending shades, trim to excellent effect, and are very becoming on light dresses.

Has Never Grasses a Degree.

Miss Alice Jordan, the young lady student in the Yale law school, will not be able to obtain the degree of bachelor of law from the university upon her graduation, Professor Harlow being asked what the matter had not even been considered by the corporation, and added: "The corporation has never granted a degree to a woman and I don't think it ever will."—Exchange.

JOTTINGS.

—The public schools of this city will close for the summer vacation on Thursday, June 24th.

—A meeting of the newly-organized Republican Club will be held in Association Hall this evening.

—A special meeting of the Borough Council will be held in the North Plainfield Council chamber this evening at eight o'clock.

—It was Mrs. Maggie Kane of West Third street, who caused the arrest and subsequent fine of Edward Juler for using profane and indecent language and not Mrs. Mary Kane as was inadvertently stated yesterday.

—Preparations for the observance of Independence Day in this place are fast becoming. So far as is yet announced a picnic and a number of private parties are the only places where a true-born American citizen can give vent to his patriotism.

—Photographer Thorn took a photograph of the 6-pound cannon, which was loaned the Grand Army Post of this place for the Decoration Day procession. The photograph has been framed and placed in the window of Sheriff Stiles' building on East Front street.

—Charles Grasder of Somerset street was arrested by Marshal Becker last evening for being hilarious in the demonstration. He, it is said, Wm. Pangborn becoming his surety in the sum of $100 for his appearance before Justice Mattison to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

—Engine No. 169 of the Philadelphia and Reading road arrived in this city at noon today attached to the Philadelphia express train in a disabled condition. The "eccentric strap" on the left side of the engine had been broken. The broken engine took the train into Bound Brook some minutes late.

—Benjamin Sutton, a colored employe of Mr. S. A. Gimas of Broadway, is alleged to have committed an atrocious assault upon one of the female domestics in Mr. Ginna's employ, during last evening. The woman's head is said to have been severely cut in the fracas, and a warrant for his arrest is likely to follow.

—We stated yesterday that Mrs. J. M. Whitfield was the originator of the Japanese Cream at the Park Avenue Baptist Church the evening before. Instead Miss Clara S. Whitfield, the daughter of Mr. J. M. Whitfield, was the person, according to a letter from one of her friends received to-day. Well, it is all in the family.

—The Zephyr hook and Ladder company have in their possession a black dog, whose pleasure it is to stand by the half hour and have one of the company's horses fondly caress him. The horse in a playful way will grasp the dog by the nape of the neck and nearly raise him from the ground. The unsight is amusing and has been witnessed by many people.

—A "neighborhood meeting of the Missionary Societies of the Congregational Church" is being held during this afternoon and evening in the Congregational church here. The friends of the two mission societies are in attendance, some of whom will address the meeting this evening. A collation is furnished the visiting delegates in the parlors of the church.

—A week ago Tuesday night a horse disappeared from the pasture field of Mr. J. M. Voorhees of Evona. At the time it was thought the animal had wandered away but nothing has since has been heard of its whereabouts. O'Brien's circus performed in the city during the day and evening previous and it is now thought that the animal was stolen or wandered was from the pasture field and was loaded on the cars along with the circus horses.

—Three youthful depraves were arrested by Police Officer Lynch on Park avenue yesterday afternoon for soliciting alms. One of the number claims to be blind. The boys tell different stories as to their place and places of residence and say they are brothers. They say they came here from Glen Gardner, where they had been living but a week, but it is thought that they belong in Allentown, Pa., and have adopted the tramp persuasion as a means of obtaining their livelihood. They are held in the station house awaiting further developments.

At Loggerheads over an Arrest.

On complaint of defendant's wife, Justice Anning Taylor issued a warrant for the arrest of Edward Kennedy, on a charge of assault and battery. The warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Bauersachs, who learned that Kennedy was carousing in the city. Justice Nash endorsed the warrant and the warrant was forwarded by Chief Dodd as he was emerging from a saloon on Tuesday night and locked up in the station house as an accommodation for Constable Bauersachs. Then arose some dissatisfaction as to which county the prisoner was in. Prosecutor Marshal Weaver, who is in charge of the borough lock-up, is alleged to have refused, after receiving instructions from the mayor and corporation counsel, to allow the incarceration of Kennedy there. It was said to be the intention of Constable Bauersachs to obtain a commitment for the man in the borough, where the examination was to take place. This complicated state of affairs occupied all of yesterday on the part of the officers. Meanwhile Kennedy was locked up on this side. Later in the day he was arraigned before Justice Nash, when he waived an examination and gave bail in the sum of $100 to await the action of the grand jury.

An examination of the laws of the State shows an act passed in the laws of 1882 which bears strongly upon this subject. For the information of all the parties concerned and also those who wish to acquaint themselves with it, the law is herewith published in full:

An act in relation to the receiving and detention of prisoners in city, town and township prisons in this State.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the passage of this act in all cities, towns and townships of this State, where there is a prison, lock-up, police station, or place of detention for the reception and detaining of prisoners awaiting examination, trial, or final commitment at the hands of the proper authority or authorities of said cities, towns and townships, it shall be the duty of the keeper or keepers, of other proper authority having charge of such prison, lock-up, police station, or place of detention, to receive in the same, and legal commitment of any justice of the peace of any county in any said prison is situated any prisoner or prisoners, and detain the same for hearing on the order and commitment of said justice for examination, commitment to the county jail, or for trial before said justice, for any period not exceeding forty days.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 21, 1882.

Union County Courts.

In the Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth yesterday Samuel Tice of Rahway who was convicted recently at the second trial for indecent assault upon his fifteen year old step daughter, Anna Keetch, was arraigned for sentence. Judge McCormick said that the penalty for the crime which would send the accused to State Prison for five years should be imposed, but in view of the fact that a petition signed by 150 of the most respectable citizens of Rahway had been received asking the court for leniency on the part of the prisoner, together with the verdict of the jury recommending the prisoner to mercy, he thought these circumstances should be taken into consideration and the sentence of the court would therefore be that the accused be fined the sum of $150. Another indictment for fornication against Tice was thrown out by the Judge suspending sentence.

The case of Kenyon vs. McLaughlin which was tried before Justice Nash and a jury some weeks ago, and which was appealed to the higher courts was tried at Elizabeth. The court rendered judgment in favor of plaintiff in the sum of $100 with interest to date. Counsel from this city and Elizabeth represented the defendant, while the City Judge appeared for plaintiff.

Suicide at Elizabeth.

Theodore Weinbold, a German, and from all appearances a resident of Boston, committed suicide by shooting himself at the Cherry street crossing of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad in Elizabeth about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. In one of his pockets was found a pass book in which was written: "There's no need of my saying I am sorry, but God will now save me for I did no harm.

THEODORE WEINHOLD."

The dead man was neatly dressed was about five feet six inches in height, of light complexion and apparently about 25 years old. The body was taken to the morgue and Coroner Terrill will hold an inquest today.

Admission Free.

To remove the doubts of those persons who have made application to the members of the Board of Education for admission tickets to the exercises of the High School commencement which takes place in Music Hall one week from to-day, it may be said that admission to the exercises will be free, but a ticket of admission will be required for the accompanying programmes of the graduates in Assembly Hall at the close of the graduating exercises in Music Hall. It is understood that a limited number of tickets, entitling the holder to reserved seats, have been issued for the graduates to distribute among their friends.

—The High School graduates are holding daily rehearsals in Music Hall.

—In Somerville recently the executors of Mrs. Catherine Bunn and Helena Hall, deceased, sold 91 shares of Somerset County Bank stock at public sale to close the estates. Hall Bunn was the purchaser of 70 shares as follows: Thirty shares at $14 per share, twenty shares at $14.02½ per share and twenty shares at $14.04 per share. R. H. Brokaw of Bound Brook purchased 21 shares at $14.05. Par value of shares is $15.50.

—At the regular weekly meeting of the Reform Club held in Reform Club hall on evening Oliver W. Wren, who is visiting in the city, will give some of his humorous recitations Mr. Wren is said to be a whole show in himself. The Kansas City Journal thus speaks of him: "Mr. Wren, the comedian, is one of those jolly souls that leave memory impression upon the very atmosphere he moves in and to laugh at him is as natural as it is for water to run down hill.

Reunion of the 11th New Jersey Volunteers.

At the Assembly room, Masonic Hall, New Brunswick, yesterday, the survivors of the Eleventh New Jersey Volunteers held their fourth annual reunion.

The members present from Plainfield were Captain William Hand of Co. D, and Privates Thaddeus Doane, John A. Goodwin, Henry Mollison and William Paine.

The committee appointed a year ago to write up the history of the regiment, reported progress, and were reappointed. Captain Hand made a very affecting remarks which brought tears to the eyes of himself and comrades as he affectionately and with much feeling recalled the virtues of some of the comrades who had fallen in the strife.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President—Gen. R. McAllister.

First Vice-President—Col. John Schoonover.

Second Vice President—Captain John Hill.

Third Vice President—Lieut. E. R. Good.

Secretary, B. W. Main.

Treasurer—O. B. Titus.

Historians—Thos. D. Marbaker and R. W. Main.

It was resolved that the next meeting be held at Plainfield, June 16, 1887, whereupon the regiment adjourned to dinner.

After the dinner there was a parade through the principal streets by the comrades and their guests, in which the battle-scarred flag of the regiment, literally in shreds, was carried with much pardonable pride.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Miller of Roselle has been elected president of the New York Cotton Exchange.

Talmage, a brother of James Ross of this city, died at North Branch on Tuesday.

The family of the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond has been increased by the advent to-day of a son.

Theodore Hoffman of New York city has returned to his former home here to be treated for quinsy sore throat.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen B. Ryder after an absence of two years in New York city, have again taken up their residence on Central avenue.

At five o'clock this afternoon in the Park avenue Baptist Church Wilbur J. Chamberlin and Miss Laura Moffett will be united in marriage by the Rev. A. R. Dilts, jr.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy joined in wedlock at the rectory of the Church of the Holy Cross on Thursday, June 10th, Francis Joseph Kelly of Jersey City, and Miss Mary Murphy, of this city.

Mr. A. D. Shepard, the President of the American Bank Note Company, has taken up his residence on Front street, near Richmond, while his residence at Scotch Plains is being overhauled. His interesting family are with him.

The remains of Caroline Van Doren, the aged lady who died at her home on Madison avenue, Monday night, were taken to Raritan yesterday, from which place the funeral services were held in the Reformed church at one o'clock in the afternoon.

Miss Erickson in "Pyramus and Thisbe" and Miss Wheeler in the "Three Bells," who should have been included in the program of the entertainment of the elocution class as published yesterday, are said to be among the best elocutionists in the Plainfield public schools.

President of the Board of Education, John Murray, sailed from Southampton, England, on Thursday last, per steamer Elder of the North German Lloyd line, on his homeward trip from Europe. The vessel is expected to arrive in the New York harbor tomorrow.

Charles S. Palmer died at his home in Singer Alley on Monday from hemorrhage. Deceased had been ailing but a little over a week. He was about 60 years of age and leaves a wife and five children. The funeral took place from his late home yesterday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Eccleston officiating.

The regular monthly and last sociable for the season of the Seventh Day Baptist congregation was held in the church building last evening. The entertainment was pleasing in its detail and consisted of charades, recitations and music. An aged quartette composed of the oldest members of the congregation rendered vocal selections, which were highly enjoyed by the large number present. After the entertainment ice cream and cake were served.

STATE NOTES.

Lambertville has 1,128 children of school age; 558 are males and 566 females.

The proposition to light the city of Orange with electric lamps is meeting with opposition, but its advocates say that it can be done at an annual expense of only $11,000. The subject will be discussed at a special meeting of the Common Council on Monday next.

The East Orange Township Committee intend to introduce a local system of sewerage at an estimated cost of $100,000. They will issue 6 per cent. bonds, to pay interest at 6 per cent. payable semi-annually, and the bonds run for twenty years, five per cent. of the principal to be raised each year.

August Mohle collapsed at the residence of Paul Jensen, a West Hoboken florist, Monday evening and invited Miss Christina Jensen to accompany him to a picnic in the Hudson County Park. She accompanied the florist and returned home since. Yesterday the florist asked Recorder Schleicher to assist in ascertaining the whereabouts of the couple.

A man known as "Pete the Tramp" broke into the grocery store of James Clayton at Red Bank early on Wednesday morning. Ellen Scott, a nephew of Mrs. Clayton, was awakened by the noise made by the intruder and, getting a shotgun, fired at him. The charge took effect and the burglar was captured and taken to the county jail. Over 30 large shot were pulled out of him. He is dangerously wounded.

The assets of W. Romeyn Vermilye of Englewood, who has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to Edward E. Miller of No. 30 Nassau street, New York, will fall in all probability cover the $65,000 or so of debts which he owes. Mr. Vermilye's estate consists entirely of property in New Jersey, which is estimated to be worth over $50,000. Mr. Vermilye's financial collapse, it is said, is due to disastrous speculations and in [illegible] stocks. Years ago his father, Col. W. R. Vermilye, died and left him about $1,000,000.

Not Bound to Kiss the Bible.

The Court of Chancery of this State has just rendered an opinion holding that a witness in the State who swears by the bible is not bound to kiss the book.

A woman, when sworn laid her hand on the Bible but refused to kiss it. The only reason she gave for her refusal was that she had "never kissed the book." She was allowed by the Master to testify, but a motion was made to strike out the book and her testimony. Here is the law as laid down by Vice Chancellor Bird:

"Almighty God, or the Ever Living God, or the like, is called upon by the witness to witness that he will speak the truth. The reason for calling upon the object of the oath. There is great force in this. How did the witness herself regard it? She is presumably a witness, for nothing to the contrary appears. She accepted the form of the oath as usually administered, without objections, except this kissing the Bible. By this act on her part the Court is justified in presuming that for the purpose of inquiry, that the witness intended that her conscience should be bound. Up-asking from the forum of her conscience, she believed that if she was not sworn to kiss the book in order to impose upon herself all the obligations of an oath.

DUNELLEN NOTES.

The trees in this place are being trimmed pursuant to instructions by the Board of Commissioners.

Mrs. James Lowrie has gone to Brooklyn, N. Y., for a few days with her daughter and also to meet some of her friends from Massachusetts.

The Children's Day observances will be held in the Presbyterian church here on Sunday evening next and will include the Sunday school anniversary. A pleasing and entertaining program has been arranged.

Children's Day was observed in the M. E. Church on Sunday. In the evening the Presbyterian church was closed and the congregation joined in the exercises which were conducted mainly by the children and consisted of speaking, singing, etc. The church was tastefully decorated with potted plants, a pleasing appearance and altogether the occasion was a most enjoyable one for the children.

The inclemency of the weather did not noticeably interfere with the strawberry and ice cream festival given in the basement of the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. During the afternoon the clouds disappeared, and the delightfully cool evening which followed attracted a large number to the festival, which was well patronized in prise to the church building, where the ladies in charge flitted about in heyday attire dispensing the wares of the [illegible] gry and thirsty assemblage. The basement of the edifice had but recently been remodeled into a Sunday school and lodges room, and the ladies in charge agreeably entertained their friends in the new and commodious quarters. The receipts for the evening amounted to about $75.

The Horrors of Vivisectionsm

Vivisection is a terrible thing, even when anæsthetics are employed, but when performed on an operator must have nerves of steel and the heartlessness of a devil to perform it in a proper way. Of course, I don't pretend to say that good boss not resulted from it, but, I repeat, it is a horrible thing—horrible beyond expression. Some years ago, a lot of young children in Indianapolis, Ind., operated on a horse in a cellar. The animal was tied to stake driven in the ground and after two or three days had starved to death because they went to work without. To prevent the suffering brute from making a noise, and the cry of a horse in pain is one of the most appalling sounds on earth, they cut the vocal cords. All it could do after that was to make a hissing sound, like wind escaping from an air pump. Well, by penetrating the cavities, several of the living loins, and even lifted out some of the organs. One of those who was present at the operation told me he thought the horse would never die, and that the scene haunted him for months.—Dr. J. G. Read.

In the Hands of Conservatives.

I was talking the other day at the Palmer house with a bright, energetic young man from a town not more than a hundred miles from Chicago. He told me in substance: "My town is a most discouraging place for a young man to locate in. Everybody there is rich and wealth of the town are in the hands of a lot of residents who are able to live luxuriously from their rents and interest, and who don't care whether the place grows any or not. In fact, some of them would rather see it remain just as it is, for they have become so attached to the old landmarks that they do not like to see them disturbed. No encouragement is given to any new enterprise that may be started in the country, if it has any tendency to interfere with the business of the old standards, they band together to crush the life out of it. While other towns around it, with no better natural advantages, are pushing right ahead, ours is as dead as a last year's bird nest"—Cor. Chicago Journal.

The President and His Visitors.

President Cleveland has a queer way of expressing his interest in a visitor. If he is pleased and is won over, he will stand with his hands behind his back and settle his head upon his breast. If he puts his hands to his side, you may be certain that he is all attention, and is about to get at the facts in the case. But once he has brought his hands together in front of him, you may be very certain that the matter has been settled as far as he is concerned, and that a further audience is unnecessary. It is said that there never has been an instance where the President brought his hands together in front of him that he accomplished the object in a most positive and decided negative—Washington Letter.

SHROUDED IN MYSTERY.

NO REASON DISCOVERED FOR THOMPSON'S MAD ACT.

All Efforts to Induce the Murderer to Talk Prove Futile—His Past Life Throws No Light Upon His Sad Ending.

New York, June 17.—Winfield R. Thompson, who killed his wife in their room at the Sturtevant house on Tuesday afternoon and then fired four bullets into himself, in order to die without the penalty of the law, and if his motives for the act which brought his honeymoon to so tragic an end. He has thus far resisted quietly in his cot at the New York hospital, apparently unconcerned as to the result of his self-inflicted wounds, and refusing gratuitous to say a word as to the circumstances which have brought him there. A great many people called to see him yesterday and inquired as to his condition. To them he had set in, and it was said that he would die.

Late in the afternoon the Rev. Dr. John Hall called at the hospital and asked to see Thompson. He said that he had known his father well, and he was the only visitor admitted yesterday. He spent but a few minutes with the wounded man, and Thompson gave no explanation of his act. Dr. Hall asked him no questions. Dr. Markoe explained that Thompson's apparent indifference was no doubt largely due to the fact that he is kept largely under the influence of chloroform all the time.

Thompson's wife and the circumstances of the shooting are as many as there are theories. Seven shots were fired. One of them was found in the wall beside the piece of wall to which Mrs. Thompson's body was found. This indicates that she was standing before the mirror adjusting her hat for her contemplated journey to Philadelphia in the afternoon when Thompson fired at and missed her. He must have immediately fired again at a closer range as to scorch her hair. This wound was not discovered by the hasty examination on Tuesday, but Deputy Coroner Jenkins found it at the autopsy.

This shot had served to stun the terrified victim, and she fell to the floor as Thompson fired the fatal shot, which entered at the left side of the head and passed to the right of the ear, passed through the brain to the right side of the head, fracturing the skull in front of the right ear, and lodging in the brain, from which the ball was afterward found to be cut nearly in two, and very much battered. Thompson must then have turned his 22-caliber pistol upon himself, and after the first shot he probably sank to the floor, and while in this attitude fired the shot which passed through his scalp at the back of the head, and fractured the ceiling overhead. The shot which penetrated his body was, no doubt, the last one fired to complete his dreadful work.

The ball which entered his head had been taken to the home of her parents on Tuesday. Conrad Kahler, her father, is a truck driver. His family consists of his wife, a daughter and a son. For some unexplained reason Gueveave left home two years ago, but had been a frequent visitor there since while engaged as a shop girl at Sherr Brothers' store.

Mrs. Kahler, mother of the dead girl, was beside herself with grief yesterday, and very demonstrative. She refused to talk exclusively of the matter, but seemed to have no other idea than that Thompson had shot his bride and himself because of straitened financial circumstances.

"Poor fellow" exclaimed the bereaved mother, "we couldn't have done much for him, for he never let us know we would have done something.

The Rev. Dr. Eder was married the couple, and Mrs. Frank Mrs. Thompson's friend, was present at the mourning during the afternoon and evening. Mrs. Pratt, who lunched with her friends two hours before the tragedy, could say nothing which would in any way explain the mystery. When she left the Sturtevant house she said Thompson and his wife appeared to be entirely happy. There was no indication of a shadow over their relations. When Mrs. Pratt took her leave Mrs. Thompson was dressed for her trip to Philadelphia and Saratoga, and had had her hat on in readiness for the journey.

The theory of financial distress does not appear to be borne out by the facts. It was suggested that Thompson, finding himself without means to start on the westward journey which he had planned out for Tuesday, and the bridal tour, and not having to settle a hotel bill of $35, hadn't the courage to tell his wife of his lack of means and preferred death to an exposure of his poverty; but his wife's signed check for $1,000 to the M. R. S. Yard, a clerk with W. R. Grace & Co., said last night:

"Thompson and I were headed to take his life on account of a temporary distress for money, and he could have had any amount he needed for the asking. Up to about a week ago he was engaged to be talk of a girl in Kansas City, to whom he was engaged to be married, but when he began his journey to Kansas City, they put the vocal cords. All it could do after that was to make a hissing sound, like wind escaping from an air pump. Well, by penetrating the cavities, several of the living loins, and even lifted out some of the organs. One of those who was present at the operation told me he thought the horse would never die, and that the scene haunted him for months.—Dr. J. G. Read.

In the Hands of Conservatives.

I was talking the other day at the Palmer house with a bright, energetic young man from a town not more than a hundred miles from Chicago. He told me in substance: "My town is a most discouraging place for a young man to locate in. Everybody there is rich and wealth of the town are in the hands of a lot of residents who are able to live luxuriously from their rents and interest, and who don't care whether the place grows any or not. In fact, some of them would rather see it remain just as it is, for they have become so attached to the old landmarks that they do not like to see them disturbed. No encouragement is given to any new enterprise that may be started in the country, if it has any tendency to interfere with the business of the old standards, they band together to crush the life out of it. While other towns around it, with no better natural advantages, are pushing right ahead, ours is as dead as a last year's bird nest"—Cor. Chicago Journal.

The President and His Visitors.

President Cleveland has a queer way of expressing his interest in a visitor. If he is pleased and is won over, he will stand with his hands behind his back and settle his head upon his breast. If he puts his hands to his side, you may be certain that he is all attention, and is about to get at the facts in the case. But once he has brought his hands together in front of him, you may be very certain that the matter has been settled as far as he is concerned, and that a further audience is unnecessary. It is said that there never has been an instance where the President brought his hands together in front of him that he accomplished the object in a most positive and decided negative—Washington Letter.

IN A ROBBERS' CAVE.

A Chapter of Texas Border History Revealed.

San Antonio, Tex., June 17.—For several years the Helots settlement, north of this city, has been the headquarters of an murderous a gang of robbers as ever flourished in the world. A band of four or five miles distant, has been their hiding place in criminal times, and also a storehouse where all sorts of plunder has been kept.

A short time ago Tom Johnson, one of the gang, was shot and killed while on his way to this city. His brother Cal Brannon became the leader of the band. Many members of the gang, and to get square, he went before the grand jury and charged Frank and T. J. Scott, father and son, members of the gang, with the murder of Dick Harris. Harris was arrested in September, 1884, by Frank Scott, who was then a constable, and from that time until a few days ago nothing had ever been heard of Harris. The grand jury, on Cal Brannon's advice, sent deputy sheriff to search the house of the Scotts, and while looking in a coffee sack, was found a skeleton, which has since been identified as the remains of Frank Harris. Over the right eye was found a bullet hole. An official friend of Harris has identified the remains by the peculiarly decayed front teeth, from which the gold filling had dropped out. The fragments of the pants, the boots and an old saddle that had belonged to the dead man, and which was found in the brush near by.

It is believed that as Harris was last seen alive with the Scotts an indictment for murder will be found against them. The object of the murder is not stated, but it is thought many reveal that Harris was very fond of Miss Scott, daughter and sister of the alleged murderers, and that Harris had been heard to say that he would die before he had to do it in blood. The Scotts opposed Harris and favored one of the gang named Pitts, now dead. He was a murderer, a train wrecker, a stage robber and a horse thief, but was a thrifty thief, and his collection of plunder found favor with the male members of the Scott family

AN AGREEMENT REACHED.

Iron and Steel Workers Come to an Understanding

Pittsburg, June 17.—The tedious labors of the conference committees of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers and the Western Iron and Steel association terminated at 8:30 o'clock. The conference committees on the proposals as received at the last session of the convention on Saturday last. The only important alterations on the revised scale were:

On turning and heading the rolls' complaint referring to the roll turners' scale, and having no data for comparing or basis to work on, it was agreed to postpone the demands for one year.

The manufacturers also expressed a desire to leave the nail scale in the hands of the Western Association. It was agreed to postpone further consideration of this clause until June 25, at which time the nail manufacturers will have a full representation at the conference.

This scale goes into effect on July 1 and holds good for one year.

This is the first instance on record that the scale has been signed by the manufacturers previous to the time the scale went into effect.

A Woman With a Record.

Lancaster, Pa., June 17.—Salome Whitman, Lancaster's only woman horse thief, has again come to grief. She was released from a term for horse stealing only a few months ago, Sealey Smith, a notorious mountaineer, marrying her. She was brought to Lancaster and committed to the county prison. At the hearing before a country magistrate she struck one of the witnesses in the face and had to be thrown down before she could be got under control. On the way to Lancaster she made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from the officer.

To Appear Against Titus.

Hackettstown, June 17. Arturo Riviera, of the City of Bogota, United States of Colombia, now a student at the Methodist institute, has been put under $1,000 bonds to appear as a witness at the trial of Zanlor Titus for the murder of Tillie Smith. Riviera is one of the two students who came forward with the news of Titus and said that they saw Tillie leave the commercial traveler Munnich at the gate of the institute grounds and pass around to the rear of the building. The bonds were signed by Henry Smith, of Mt. Pokuono, Pa., a small town near here. He will appear when wanted.

Imprisonment for Debt.

New York, June 17.—Governor Hill has signed the act, promoted by Erastus Wiman and others, amending the law regarding imprisonment for debt. Hereafter six months is to be the limit of imprisonment on arrests in civil actions, and the operation of the law is not to apply to the case of Colonel Ludlow Street jail, New York, and also where, who have been incarcerated for more than six months.

No Pardon for Westen.

Pittsburg, June 17.—The pardon board destroyed Milton Weston's hopes of a release from the penitentiary by refusing his application for a pardon. The decision is final, and the Chicago millionaire must now serve out his sentence. Weston is suffering from unusual health, and as far as outward appearances go, is not greatly depressed by his failure to obtain a pardon.

A District Divided.

Indianapolis, June 17.—The Democratic central committee of Marion county, by a vote of 61 to 59, decided that Colonel Ben Bynum was not the regular nominee of the Democrats of this district, and requested the withdrawal of both Bynum and Bailey. The officers of the committee will be members of the executive committee are hostile to Bynum's candidacy.

Fatal Election Riots.

Santiago, June 17. via Galveston.—During the election here a great riot occurred. Forty persons were killed and many wounded. The hospitals are full of injured persons. Senor Balmaceda, a prominent member of the Radical party, was killed. The result of the election is supposed to be in favor of the Liberals.

The British Cannot Proceed.

London, June 17.—Advices from Chitral state that Col. Lockhart's party, with reenforcements, has reached the Afghan boundary reservation, is surrounded by natives who although they do not measure the party want violence, will not permit them to proceed.

"Big Ed" Is Limbo.

Elmira, June 17.—"Big Ed" Rice was yesterday handed over to Detective Constant, and Tim is blamed if I want to be pumped from one state to another until I'm landed there."

READY TO GO.

THE YACHTS THAT WILL COMPETE FOR THE PRIZE.

To-Day's Races the Chief Interest Among Spectators—The Mayflower Said To Be a Daisy, and Will Show What She Can Do Before the Wind.

New York, June 17.—Everything favors a fine race to-day, wind and weather permitting. The symmetrical Mayflower, biggest of the quartet of "nappy Yankee accidents," arose from the mud of Gowanus bay, opposite one of the screw docks at the foot of Market street, and was immediately attacked by a little regiment of whiteclothed workmen with planes, scrapers, sandpaper and pot lead. Thousands of folks interested in yachting walked around her during the day, and many made the passage of Gowanus bay and the bay as well as a Mayflower. Her bulging seams were planed, scraped and sandpapered, and coated with pot lead to her water line. Then at 7:30 o'clock she was towed into the water again, her pot-leaded centerboard was put in position, and a tug towed her down to Bay Ridge.

Commodore Dwsigner Edward Burgess and Mr. Richards, who sailed with Gen. Paine in the Puritan last year, will go over the New York club course with the Mayflower to-day. Gen. Paine said that the qualities of the Mayflower were as little known to him as they were to the general public. He had never been aboard her except at moorings. He will steer to-day, and the sailing master will be Capt. Clock, formerly of the Mischief, and Capt. M. V. B. Stone will be at the wheel. The Puritan, Priscilla and Atlantic will leave their anchorage yesterday. An inspection of rigging, sails and tackle was made on each boat to see that everything was in order. Each boat will be piloted and sailed by the same men who performed those duties on Tuesday.

The course for the entire fleet is from a line between the two Romer buoys, anchored off Owl's head, Long Island, and a stakeboat in shore from the tug; thence to and around Romer No. 10, leaving it to the west and south of it, and north of Buoy 5, off the point of Sandy Hook; to and around the Sandy Hook lightship, and then back over the same course to the mark vard of the home stakeboat, which will be anchored abreast of and to the eastward of Buoy 15, just outside of Fort Tompkins.

The iron steamboat Taurus took out members of the club and their friends to see the races. Messrs. E. E. Chase, Frank T. Robbins, and Edward Mott, of the regatta committee, are the judges.

Among the guests of the Gracie is his imperial highness the grandson of the Brazilian emperor. He never witnessed a live yacht race at close quarters.

A Nomination Rejected.

Washington, June 17.—The senate has rejected the nomination of James C. Shields, of Michigan, to be chief justice of Arizona territory. It was urged against the nomination of Shields that his appointment was made to fill a vacancy made by a removal through Mormon influence; then there were charges of the murder of Tillie and Judge Titus for the murder of Tillie Smith. Riviera is one of the two students who came forward with the news of Titus and said that they saw Tillie leave the commercial traveler Munnich at the gate of the institute grounds and pass around to the rear of the building. The bonds were signed by Henry Smith, of Mt. Pokuono, Pa., a small town near here. He will appear when wanted.

A Greco-Roman Contest.

Cincinnati, June 17.—Muldoon and Cannon have deposited the balance of the stakes with Richard K. Fox, and the match is to take place to-night at the Grand Opera house. It will be one of the most body contests ever seen in this country. The last one occurred in this country. Both men are in fine condition, and the struggle for supremacy is expected to be an earnest one. If Muldoon wins, Carroll Muldoon, and Jimmy Faulkner will look after Cannon's interests. The match is for $500 a side. A catch-as-catch-can wrestling match between Jonnes Faulkner and Edwin Bibby, to take place in this city within two weeks.

Killed by the Marshal.

New Orleans, June 17.—Thomas Davis, member of town council of Covington, La., and his brother William, were drunk at the town of Madisonville, and created a disturbance. V. M. Fauris, town marshal, attempted to arrest them, when Thomas Davis drew his revolver and fired. Fauris returned the fire, killing Thomas in the neck, and inflicting a fatal wound. William Davis was also shot in the region of the heart, died instantly. Fauris received a slight wound in the hand. The coroner's jury exonerated the marshal.

A Bill for Mrs. Grant.

Washington, June 17.—At its evening session the house made some progress in the work of clearing the private calendar of a number of measures. Gen. Frye's bill for the bills of a private character, among them being a senate bill granting the franking privilege to the widow of Gen. U. S. Grant, and a house bill for the relief of the survivors of the exploring steamer Jeannette and the widows and children of those who perished in the retreat from the wreck of that vessel in the Arctic seas.

Holman Reminiscent.

Greensburg, Ind., June 17.—Mr. Holman was renominated for congress yesterday. The vote stood, Holman, 121; Cravens, 59. Jefferson county refused to make the nomination unanimous for Mr. Holman made a short but ringing speech.

Big Wool Auction.

London, June 17.—The yearly wool auction yesterday was largely attended. There are more than 150,000,000 pounds to be disposed of. Buying was principally for French account, at stiff prices.

VIEWING THE DEAD KING.

Almost a Riot over the Remains of Ludwig.

Munich, June 17.—The body of King Ludwig lies in state in the old chapel of the Residenzschloss, and the public are permitted to view the remains. The officials had not estimated the number of persons who would probably come to take a last look at the dead king, and were totally unprepared for the tremendous crowd that rushed into the chapel, choking up the entrances and surrounding the body, to the imminent danger of many persons and trampling upon it. Efforts were made to turn the crowd back, but these attempts only served to increase the confusion and infuriate the people, many of whom were thrown down and trampled upon, and their cries of pain mingled with the oaths of those whose entrance was barred. Finally the guards succeeded in clearing the passage, forced the crowd back into the grounds and closed the doors. It was then decided to admit 200 persons at the end of each quarter of an hour, and a strong guard of soldiers with fixed bayonets was stationed at the doors to carry this plan into effect. This had the effect to compel more people still more and greatly increased the danger of an outbreak. The crowd surged back and forth in front of the entrance, but the guards were able to control them, and the ultimately the people became quiet. None of them went away, however, and all insisted upon holding their places until they could be admitted.

SEGAR MAKERS QUARRELING.

Strikers Fined for Throwing Mud at Non-Union Men.

Reading, Pa., June 17.—Two strikers who were in the crowd which threw mud at Glaser & Frames' non-union cigar makers, were yesterday fined $5 and costs in the mayor's court. The mayor warned them that a second offense would be more harshly dealt with, and the took occasion to say to the large crowd of strikers present in court that judicial action would be instituted even by force if necessary. The affair was almost a riot. About 1,000 men and boys surrounded the police when they marched the non-union men from work, and the situation seemed so threatening that the police thought it wise to act only on the defensive and they had to march slowly to the hotel. Then they arrested the leaders of the crowd, who were the men fined. Ten more non-union men arrived from Lancaster county and went to work at Glaser & Frames. The building was surrounded all day by angry strikers, and there was great excitement in town on account of apprehensions that the police held themselves ready to proceed to the factory promptly, if summoned.

A BOY'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Falling from a Train, He Pursues His Way on Foot.

New York, June 17.—Mrs. George H. Borden, accompanied by her son, aged 3 years, and little daughter, aged 18 months, left Ocean on the Erie road. Mrs. Borden reclaimed her son she took a sleeper on the Boston express. After Slingerlands was passed she allowed her children to go out into the passageway of the parlor car. The boy was dozing up on her hair. This completed, she turned to look for her children. The party opened door and she saw the boy fall from the car step. When the train reached Albany telegrams were dispatched to Delma and Slingerlands to search for the lost boy. Two hours later a telegram was received, "found unhurt." When discovered he was trudging along the track in the direction of Albany, and had already covered more than half the distance from Delma to Albany. A slight cut on the back of his neck was his only injury. Mrs. Black and children left for Boston.

A JERSEY SECRET.

The Dead Lobbyist and Funds Intrusted to His Hands.

New York, June 17.—A special to The Mail and Express from Trenton, N. J., says: There is a mystery connected with the will over the estate of Culver Barcalow, the well-known lobbyist, who died recently of heart disease. It is stated upon reliable authority that just before the death Barcalow deposited about $25,000 in a national bank at Somerville. The deposit was made in his own name, although it is alleged that he received the money from others for use in the legislature. There is no trouble in surmising what use the money was to have been put to, but the executors in charge are anxious to make it public. The heirs are unwilling to restore the money, and contend that the corporations can furnish no proof of their claims. Should the controversy be carried to the courts the testimony, no doubt, will disclose some interesting facts about the way state legislators are influenced.

Mr. Beecher's Send-Off.

New York, June 17.—Mr. Beecher's friends de fos propose to let him depart for Europe in the usual matter of fact way. His congregation, and a number of citizens of Brooklyn have chartered the steamer Columbia, and with Mr. Beecher as their guest on board they will leave Jewell's Dock, Fulton ferry, Brooklyn, at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, and go down the bay to Sandy Hook, where the Etruria will stop and take Mr. Beecher aboard.

Counterfeiters Confess.

Cincinnati, June 17.—Three counterfeiters, who have been passing bogus silver coin on saloonists and others, have been arrested. They gave their names as Richard Clark, Edward Lane and Frank Strickler. About $1,000 in counterfeit coin was found in their possession. They made a full confession, and directed the officers to the place where the plant was found.

What Was the Text?

Hendersville, Ga., June 16.—A party of colored people, while returning from church, departed and had words over the question of sex. Richard Perry, while trying to stop the quarrel, incurred the wrath of Sam Martin, who shot and killed him. A general fight followed, in which Sam Martin, Tom Meade and Mrs. Alcinda Law were fatally wounded.

Defending Canadian Customs.

Ottawa, Ont., June 17.—Inspector Newbury, of the customs department, has unearthed a number of frauds in the importation of granite from the United States, at Hamilton and Clifton. The amount involved is upwards of $100,000. Seizures will be made.

Confidence in Gladstone.

London, June 17.—The Midlothian Liberal council has passed a resolution of confidence in Mr. Gladstone by a vote of 33 to 16.

Rates Reduced.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on its $5,000 accidental insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to

per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an examination. There are no Membership Fees or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy, and the contract is backed by assets of over $600,000.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $945,182.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over 600,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. # WOOL AND THE TARIFF.

MR. MORRISON PRESENTS REPORTS UPON THE QUESTION.

Ohio Growers and Dealers Sending Their Views and Wishes to the House—The Question Open for Discussion—Shall the Tariff Be Changed?

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mr. Morrison, from the committee on ways and means, has submitted two important reports to the house on questions affecting wool. One was the resolution of Mr. Converse, of Ohio, declaring that it be the sense of the house that the tariff on wool should not at this time be changed. The other on the resolution of Mr. Grosvenor, of Ohio, to repeal the duty of 1867 on wool. Both were majority reports and adverse to the resolutions. Mr. Morrison adopted as his report on the first Mr. Kins resolution, a letter received by him from ex-Representative John Q. Smith, of Ohio. The letter declared that the statements made by Messrs. Columbus Delano, George L. Converse, J. R. Taylor and David Hipster, of his state, published in pamphlet form and purporting to represent the views of the Wool Growers' association, were absurdly false as to the importance and magnitude of sheep husbandry in Ohio and elsewhere. He thought a flock of sheep could be raised on every farm to advantage; that they made little trouble, were inexpensive, and the revenue from them was a clear profit.

As to the Grosvenor resolution, Mr. Morrison says only the manufacturers and dealers are benefited by a tariff on wool; that an increase of duty would be injurious to all classes; that it drives from our markets many kinds of wool which are indispensable; gives European manufacturers the exclusive use of them; that one of these wools, and therefore of certain grades of goods, confines American manufacturers to a restricted class of goods, and to the production of a limited class of goods, with which home markets are glutted. The duty has never enabled American wool growers to get better prices, but has furnished an excuse for heaping heavy taxes upon the clothing of the people, thus taxing the wool grower to an amount far exceeding the whole benefit which he ever imagined he would derive from the tariff, without giving him that imaginary benefit. It reduced the wages of workmen in woolen manufactories by the delusive promises of a high tariff; has greatly hindered our trade with our natural customers in South America, and it has made our clothing dearer and that of Europe cheaper.

A MEXICAN RESCUE

Results in the Death of Several Participants.

MATAMORAS, Mex., June 17.—Particulars of a terrible affray at Terra del Canaler, in Tamaulipas, have just reached here. A criminal named Segmente Rodrigues was rescued from jail by a mob of twenty men headed by Casiano Baez, Antonio Morales and Juan Sanchez, who overpowered the civil authorities, forcibly released the prisoner and attacked the rescuing party. In the battle which ensued a corporal of police was shot dead. Exiquio Rodrigues, son of the prisoner, was killed by Sanchez, and Morales was killed by the police. The rioters then took refuge on a neighboring ranch, where they were protected by the owner, Pedro Quantilla.

The ranch will be raided by the authorities to-day, when more bloodshed is expected.

"A Horse" on Professor Tufts.

EXETER, N. H., June 17.—Professor Tufts, of Phillips Exeter academy, was decidedly angry when he entered the recitation room yesterday morning. He lost no time in announcing that he was not at any jobbing horse having a horse locked up in his study, as he found had been done during the night. He proposed to have the guilty students identified, and believed that within twenty-four hours he would know their names. It was evident from the innocent expression on the faces of the students that they knew nothing about the affair. Everybody is wondering how the boys got the horse up three flights of stairs to the study. The exertions of three laboring men in getting the animal down again evoked much hilarity.

Government Buildings Not Sleeping Apartments.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Acting Secretary Fairchild, of the treasury, upon complaint from the collector at Austin, Tex., that the United States district attorney and marshal and their deputies, occupied rooms in the public buildings for sleeping purposes, thus materially increasing the government's gas bills, has addressed letters to the Austin collector, as well as custodians of public buildings elsewhere, directing that hereafter public buildings shall not be used for sleeping purposes.

Fined for Boycotting.

NEW HAVEN, June 17.—In the city court Benjamin F. Gildden, walking delegate, J. Frederick Butcher, jr., Thomas F. Mahoney and David T. McCarthy, members of the Typographical union, were fined $50 and costs each on the charge of conspiring to injure the business of The Journal and Courier, of this city, by boycotting that paper. An appeal to the superior court was taken in each case, and the matter will come up in the July term.

The Orange Grand Lodge.

LONDON, June 17.—The Orange grand lodge of Ireland has issued a manifesto protesting against the action of the loyal minority in Ireland at the bidding of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell in the interests of rebels, dynamiters and Fenians. The Unionists have decided to contest the Dublin parliamentary seats.

Cabinet Makers Give It Up.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—The cabinet makers at Reeves & Son's works, who struck on May 11 for shorter hours, have gone to work at the old terms, ten hours per day.

CONDENSED NEWS.

A dynamite bomb was placed in the driveway of ex-Mayor Secor, at Racine, Wis. It exploded with a loud report about fifteen minutes after Mr. Secor had driven over it. A Bohemian was injured, and tracked a mile by blood, where he was captured.

Both English and German will be taught in the schools of the Tippecanoe of North America.

Nova Scotia held an election based upon the issue of secession from Canada, and the secessionists prevailed by a handsome majority.

The Vermont Republicans have nominated Ebenezer J. Ormsbee for governor. This indicates the return of Mitmouds to the senate.

A fire at New Haven caused a loss of $200,000. Several firemen were injured while fighting the flames.

American association baseballists, Bushong and Latham, who engaged in a fight on the Baltimore grounds a few days ago, have been sentenced to pay fines of $100 and apologize, or stand suspended thirty days.

THE APPLE ADAM ATE

Was Not Even a Respectable Crab as Now Grown.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The American Association of Nurserymen, Florists, Seedsmen and Kindred Interests met in the agricultural department hall yesterday in its eleventh annual convention. There were about 300 delegates in attendance, representing every state in the union. The convention was called to order by the Hon. Norman J. Colman, commissioner of agriculture and president of the association. In his address Mr. Colman said:

The trees of Eden bore no such fruits as do ours. It was a wild garden. Its products would be no temptation to our eyes to-day. The apple, of, indeed, it was an apple, which was plucked by Eve—

Whose mortal taste
Brought death into the world and all our woe—

was not even a respectable crab apple, as we now estimate fruits. The crab was, in fact, a great advance upon the apples of Eden. The fabled gardens of the Hesperides bore no such luscious fruits as may now be found in the garden of the recent settler in Nebraska or California. The specimens brought from Canaan were no such products as may be seen at any of our horticultural exhibitions. The grapes of Eschol would compare only unfavorably with the clusters which grow on our Pacific coast and in thousands of places all over the land. Under the hand of the nurseryman and the horticulturist, and through the intelligent selection and variation by which all growth is determined, the wildness of nature has been subdued and her products have been developed as we see them to-day.

A War on Snakes.

TUXEDO, N. Y., June 17.—The Tuxedo Park association, whose large possessions are in this town, are anxious to rid the park of reptiles, and have offered to give them some concern. Consequently, they have offered a bounty for the destruction of all dangerous snakes, and have included in the employees at the park are making money in destroying them. For poisonous snakes $1 each is paid, and for the less dangerous species of the same kind, black and garter snakes, fifty cents each is given. A few days ago one of the mechanics employed at the park made a search for snakes in different parts of the tract of land included in the reservation, and succeeded in killing $40 worth in a few hours. The Italians on the work, who seem to know more than others the dangers of snake bites, are particularly active in the work of extermination, and are going about in groups hunting reptiles, and are said to be making good wages.

Harrington's Manifesto.

LOWNDES, June 17.—Lord Harrington has issued his election manifesto to the electors of Rossendale, in which he says: "I am certainly not prepared to commit myself to the details of any of the plans proposed for the government of Ireland, but certain conditions may be clearly stated which are essential to any plan. Parliament ought to control the executive, that is, not a part of the kingdom, and the powers which may be conferred upon subordinate local bodies should be delegated not surrendered. Subjects should be carefully defined, and the right of parliament to control and revise the action of subordinate legislative and executive bodies should be equally clearly reserved. Lastly, the administration of justice ought to remain in the hands of authority which is responsible to parliament.

"Better Pay for Scrub Women.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The house has added a clause to the legislative appropriation bill increasing the pay of the scrub women employed in public buildings throughout the country from $40 to $60 a month, and giving them a vacation with pay for thirty days each year. It was also provided that three of the twenty special agents of the census office, in the collection of statistics and information bearing upon the industries of the country shall be women, and employed in that manner among the wage workers of the country.

A Sheriff Fined for Contempt.

CINCINNATI, June 17.—Sheriff Beresford was fined $50 and costs for his contempt of court, in releasing ex-Infirmary Director Herrman from jail, contrary to the judge's order.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—For the middle Atlantic states local rains, slightly cooler, variable winds.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

A Weak and Featureless Market Outside the Grangers.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Money at 1 per cent. Exchange, $4.84@4.84½ for sixty days, $4.86½@4.87 for demand. Bar silver, 98½c; bid, 98c; coup., 99c.

The stock market opened dull and fractionally lower, but on buying of the grangers for the account of Chicago parties, the decline was soon recovered, and an advance of ¼@½ per cent. established. During the afternoon these stocks the market was featureless. At the close trading was at a standstill.

THE PATENT OFFICE.

INVENTORS A CLASS WITHOUT THE MONEY MAKING SENSE.

Patent Lawyers Who Make a Good Deal of Money—Numerous Patents for Railroad Inventions—A List of Queer Patents—Perpetual Motion.

"The extent of the wonk of the patent office is wonderful, and it increases every year," said a gentleman standing very high in the patent office. There were 8,000 more patents issued in 1885 than there were the previous year, and 10,000 more than in 1883. Ten years ago, and the applications filled for patents last year numbered 35,000. The patent office is the only office of the government, I think, that pays more than it receives. It has a surplus of over $4,000,000 in the treasury department, and it made a clear $140,000 above all its expenses last year."

"Do inventors generally make money out of patents?"

"No, as a rule the money is made by people who buy or swindle the inventors out of their rights. Inventors are nearly always poor men. They work their brains for their bread and butter. They are a visionary set of fellows, and have not the money-making sense. They get in with business men in order to develop their patents, and these suchre them out of their profits. The man who invented the elevated railroad in New York died a poor man, and while he was living was a poor man. All his ideas, it is so with hundreds of other patents, and if you will look over the history of the patent office you will find that it is the business men who make the money, while the inventors do the work.

"Some patent lawyers make a great deal of money, and there is a number in Washington who have grown wealthy in the practice. There is a man here who has made a fortune in the patent law. He had something to do with the india-rubber patent, and he has been prospering ever since. He owns a fine mansion on Seventeenth street, and tried like a perfect prince of making a stable for his horses in the basement. All the modern improvements, however, as the shape of water would not agree with the stable, and he finally had to fit up as a loft job. Many patent lawyers, when they see that a man has a good thing, contract with him to get out his patent for a certain amount of money and some shares in the stock of the patent. They get paid for their work with the money and have a fair chance of making a fortune out of the patient if it turns out well. There are hundreds of patent lawyers in Washington. Many of them are smart fellows and all of them are making money.

NUMEROUS RAILROAD PATENTS.

"I see they talk about having side street railroads here. Is there much advancement in this line of patents?

"Yes, indeed, there is a great deal. The cable road is a comparatively recent invention, and there are a number of patents filed for grips and other things connected with it. You would be surprised to know how many patents are issued for railroad inventions. New ideas for rails, switches, and ties are being put forward every day. The railroad tie of the future is a big bone in the air. Timber is very hard wood to make a tie, and this class of wood is being fast cut out of the country. Railroad building has developed such a point that there is not enough wood to supply the ties, and a new invention has got to be made. There are now something under 150,000 miles of railroad in the world, and about 120,000 miles of these are in the United States. This wear out, and the time will soon come when there will be no wood to replace them. We have already given out on glass ties, ties of iron and ties made of paper and wood pulp. Another set of fellows have been interested in metallic ties and in fences and fence posts. The old wooden fence has seen its best days, and the wire fence is rapidly taking its place.

"A great many inventors devote themselves solely to making patents for kitchen utensils, and are working upon machines regulating entirely to water. A great many of the railroads and machine shops and factories of various kinds keep inventors who do nothing but work upon the special duties of the factories in which they are employed. Women make a great many patents, but those deal chiefly with household matters, or with their own dress. There has been a great deal of electrical invention during the past few years, and it is perfectly wonderful how rapidly patents come in after any success in any particular branch of invention. A great accident always brings in patents to prevent its occurrence in the future, and when a big fire occurs at any of the big hotels with a great loss of life the fire escapes roll in by the bushel."

"Have you many patents for perpetual motion?"

"Yes, hundreds are applied for, but they are not granted. I remember once a man walked from Kentucky to Washington to patent a perpetual motion, and one of your fellow new-paper men, not long ago, telegraphed to the Associated Press that the invention of perpetual motion had at last been conceived somewhere in Ohio. I should think that Washington would be a good place for an inventor to work. By going to the patent office he could see all that had already been done in the line upon which he was working, and he might get a big idea and a wheel there would perfect some patent which would then be worth tens of thousands of dollars where it is now worth nothing."—Carp's Letter in Cleveland Leader.

Women Engaged in Legal Practice.

The following is a list of the legal practice before the courts in this country are distributed as follows: Iowa, 8; Missouri, 2; Michigan, 6; Utah territory, 1; District of Columbia, 4; Illinois, 6; Ohio, 4; Kansas, 1; Wisconsin, 3; Indiana, 2; Kansas, 3; Minnesota, 1 (from Iowa); California, 3; Connecticut, 1; Massachusetts, 5; Nebraska, 1; Washington territory, 1; Pennsylvania, 1. The admission in all these states is to the highest courts, except in the case of Pennsylvania, Iowa and Wyoming, where women attorneys in several of the local courts of Maryland, and have been admitted to United States courts in Texas and Oregon, though not to the state courts.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Sacred to the Boston Folks.

Sympathetic is believed to be a word sacred to the Bostonese. The other day a resident on the "Hill" was overheard ordering the family dinner at a stall in the Scollay square market, and this is the way the call it: "You may send me spring lamb. Have you this spring's lamb? Very well, send that, and two bunches of asparagus and a can of 'petits' pois.' They are so sympathetic with lamb."—Boston Herald.

Ben: Perley's Latest Joke.

Ben: Perley's Poor's latest joke was to send a number of senators to a certain cigar store at Washington to see a "cherry-colored cat." The cat was the color of a black cherry.

Horse Breeding.

Some of the most remarkable animals in horse history have come out of obscurity and hard work. We quote a Kentucky farmer at farming commonwise operations with a little dyed-in-the-wool mare, of not over 900 pounds weight, and a mate; the mate, though 200 pounds the heavier, proved in service to be her equal at the plow or before a load. The mare, named for her owner Queen, was, in turn, several times sold, but never brought out frowned to the other end of the owner. She raised a family of Queens, male and female, and, in succession, two different farms were opened up and improved by this mare and her progeny, surplus being sold at sundry times for good prices. Now, you never with a veiled dig at "cold" blood always tried to sell and to mate. Always wanted by buyers that knew good metal, and can sell it very well. Now, this case has occurred on many a farm, and could occur on most other farms if judgment were used in selecting and managing. In these days of progressive farming it is not necessary or one to breed a stock of light weights, for grocery work, as are found compound with good feet and good forearms, and not beyond the ordinary level that it permeates every where. The farmer, even of he had away strong, is not an impossible locality, if he will mind from that which some of his neighbors to his own door. Rightly used, an horse and rates as good as any, and can earn cash, and the modern fatherhood, if the horse be handled with discretion, he can earn his living as a gentleman, until he has developed his best qualities. The farmer mistakes just here, says the cash value.—Nations. Live Stock Journal.

To Train Your Colts.

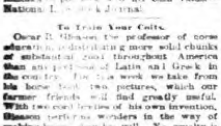
Oscar B. Gleason, the professor of horse education, is distributing more solid chunks of sensible talk about horses and horsery than any professor of Latin and Greek in the country. For a week we take from his horse talk pictures, which every farmer friends will find greatly useful. With two contrivances of his own invention, Gleason performs wonders in the way of making a colt will. No cruelty is used, either, and it is the best part of his system. An important part of his plan is to confuse the colt, strange sensations a horse that has no real habit, so that he will forget his hate.

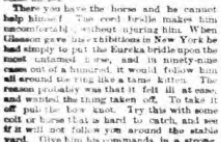
The bridle in the illustration is called the Eureka bridle. It is to make a horse stand still while he is being curried, harnessed and shod, or while having sores and wounds dressed.



EUREKA BRIDLE.

We hope our readers will follow carefully the directions which are copied from the book. Try it with them the first time try again, and keep trying till you succeed. The directions are these: First, have a strong cord one-eighth of an inch in diameter. Make the end of it into a slip noose and pass it around the horse's neck. Pass the rest of the cord through the mouth and over the head from the off side. Then take it back and pull it through the noose on the near side. Pull the end firmly forward, then take it up over the head just behind the ears from the near side, and bring it down side the head upon the off side to the mouth, pass it under the upper lip, above the upper teeth, from the inside, bring it back upon the near side, pull it through the cord that passes around the head, back where the loop is, pull it firmly as you see in the picture, and fasten it in a low knot that will not come untied.

There you have the horse and he cannot help himself. The cord feralls makes him unconscionably restless without using him. When Gleason gave his exhibitions in New York he had simply to put the Eureka bridle upon the most unbroken colt, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, it would follow him all around the ring like a tame kitten. The reason probably was that it felt ill at ease, and would do the thing taken off. To take it off pull the low knot. Try this with some colt or horse that is hard to catch, and see if it will not follow you around the stable yard. Give him no commands in a strong, resolute voice, till he learns what you mean and obeys.



DOUBLE SAFETY ROPE.

The double safety rope is for throwing horses, for teaching them to stop at the word "whoa," and for stopping and breaking runaways and kicking horses. Put a strong strap or surcingle around the animal's body just behind the forelegs. Buckle a hames strap with a ring in it around each foot, between the hoof and fetlock joint. Have a rope 30 feet long, the thickness of a clothesline. Tie one end of it in the ring of the strap on the near side. Pass the rope up the leg and through the surcingle, from the front, then down the off leg and through the ring in the strap in the off foot. Then up again through the ring from the front, and back, to hold the end in your hand. Stand on the near side when you begin. It can be used on a runaway horse with the harness and held in the left hand with the reins. When the horse starts in run or kicks, pull on the rope. The safety rope will bring him to his knees in a moment.

Finally, if you ever have an opportunity to go and see Gleason at his work, you will get invaluable information about the management and breaking of horses.

Cultivating Corn.

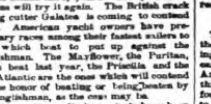
He who says that shallow cultivation or deep cultivation is always the best for corn, that the ground cannot be stirred too much, or that it should always be used, simply shows that while he may be able to give corn on his own land the proper cultivation he is not fit to instruct his neighbors. Cultivation should vary with the soil, the season and the stage of growth of the plant. Further, while it is thoroughly conceded that in general the toothed or shovel cultivator should be used rather than the double diamonds, I am yet certain that in some seasons the use of the latter is the better.

Each person must exercise his own judgment, and yet there are some general principles laid in reaching a conclusion. That, upon heavy, clayey soils the cultivation should be deeper than upon light, sandy ones. On the former deep cultivation is necessary in order that it solid will not warm enough and where cultivation does not reach the ground will be so solid that roots will hardly penetrate. Deep cultivation in such soils is also essential to proper drainage, and stagnant water in the soil is always hurtful. But in light, sandy soils deep cultivation, instead of being beneficial, will be hurtful. For these are liable to be too dry, and deep cultivation will break them up until the sun and air will take away too much of their moisture. Shallow cultivation is better, for it will not reach the moisture drawn from below by capillary attraction. For the same reason shallow cultivation is best suited to a dry season, and it should be frequent.

As far as the profitableness of corn has been made it is thought the Atlantic will be an easy winner. She was built expressly for this cup race.



LAUNCHING OF THE ATLANTIC.

To the minds of most American nautical men the contest of last year demonstrated the superiority of the center-board system of building over deep hulled models. American sailing yachts are shallow and have a center-board to let down below the keel line for deep water. British ones are deep and narrow.

The Atlantic, with her one mast, was built by Capt. Phillip Ellsworth. She is owned by a partnership of certain members of the Atlantic Yacht club. She is 95 feet 7 inches long and 23 feet 2 inches wide. Her model illustrates well what British yachtsmen deem a "yellow skimming dish," being broad and shallow rather than deep and sharp. She will be a typical racing yacht, according to American principles. Her wood work is very light. Her outside planking is of Oregon pine. The frame is made of oak and black larch.

The yacht will draw 8½ feet of water. She is to carry an enormous quantity of sail. The sails were especially woven for her. Her mainmast is 80 feet high, while her spinnaker boom is 77 feet long, and carries 4,400 square feet of sail.

The race for the cup this year will excite more interest than even that of last year did. The Atlantic was built at a shipyard in South Brooklyn.

Strange Beast in Havre.

The Havre aquarium has put on exhibition one of the most curious, and especially one of the rarest of animals—the prehensile tailed coendou Synethere prehensitile. It was sent from Para to Havre by Mr. Equidaara, the commissary of the steamer Colombia. Brehm says that never but two have been seen—one of them at the Hamburg Zoological garden and the other at London. The one under consideration, then, would be the third specimen that has been brought alive to Europe. This animal, which is allied to the porcupine, is about 3½ feet long. The tail alone is 1½ feet in length. The entire body, save the belly and paws, is covered with quills, which disappear under the fur. Upon the back, where these quills are longest (about 4 inches), they are strong, cylindrical, shining, sharp-pointed, white at the tip and black at the base, and brown in the middle. The animal, in addition, has long and strong moustaches. The paws, anterior and posterior, have four fingers armed with strong nails, which are curved and nearly cylindrical at the base.

Very little is known about the habits of the animal. All that we do know is that it passes the day in a number at the top of a tree and that it prowls about at night, its food consisting chiefly of leaves of all kinds. When it wishes to descend from one branch to another it suspends itself by the tail and lets go of the first only when it has a firm hold of the other. One peculiarity is that the extremity of the last part of the tail is prehensile. This part is deprived of quills for a length of about six inches. The coendou does not like to be disturbed. When it does it advances toward the intruder and endeavors to frighten him by raising its quills all over its body. The natives of Central America eat the flesh and employ its quills for various domestic purposes. The animal is quite extensively distributed throughout South America. It is found in Brazil, Venezuela, Columbia, Guina and in some of the Lesser Antilles, such as Trinidad, Barbadoes, Saint Lucia, etc. It seems to be porcupine, opossum and sloth combined.

Explosive Sawdust.

The Belgian government has made a series of successful experiments, proving that sawdust may be made a powerful explosive. The powder is simply sawdust, treated with a mixture of nitric and sulphuric acids, and afterward formed under powerful pressure into cylindrical or prismatic cartridges. These cartridges are prepared for commercial use by covering them with parraffined paper, in which precaution they are moisture.

The instantaneous production of the gases arising from the primer and the explosive, and the simultaneous action of these gases in every direction, is claimed to be due to the with the face surface of the cartridge to act to some extent as a light tamping, and the power of the explosion is directed to the other faces.

In comparative experiments made upon a rail with wood powder and dynamite with cellulose, it was demonstrated that for equal weights charges of the first substance were at least as powerful as those of the second, and that the results were more constant, and more regular.

But it is especially with reforence to transportation with an army that wood powder possesses remarkable advantages. It is well known what precautions are essential in order to protect dynamite cartridges in pack trains from projectiles which might strike them and cause explosion. With cartridges of wood powder this danger need not be feared, since when they are placed against such plates, and struck by bullets fired at a distance of fifty metres, they do not explode.

Private Yachts.

New York millionaires, not knowing what all to do with their money, are spending it in building magnificent steam yachts to go around the world in. Mr. Astor has his Nourmahal, Jay Gould the Atalanta, and now W. K. Vanderbilt, son of W. H., is building one in some respects more magnificent than either of the rest. Such yachts, so called, are as large as small ocean steamers. Mr. Vanderbilt's is to be 285 feet long. Any of those private steamers can carry 250 to 400 passengers. The Vanderbilt yacht is a steamer of over 1,000 tons burden. Her owner also belongs to the American Yacht club. He has made a new departure for a Vanderbilt, and ruled that he is not to be known as a boy, and the old commodore before him, when he was a boy, were obliged to swim after the commanding passengers from Staten Island to the Battery. This was a tremendous row and gave the Vanderbilts such a distaste for salt water that none of the blood has heretofore owned a yacht. Now W. K. has changed this. These private steamers can go around the world. If necessary they are built and fitted up in the most luxurious manner, at an expense of many hundred dollars. They have been built solely for the pleasure of the magnate who owns them that they and their families and friends need not associate with common people even in traveling and recreation tours.

Industrial Training in Kansas.

The great west is outstripping the east in the attention it is giving to industrial training. The effects of such superior culture cannot help showing before many years. At the Kansas State Agricultural college this training is pursued steadily through a four years' course. Young men are required to take the regular term in the carpenter shop and on the farm and gardens whatever the industrial chosen. Young women are required to take up the work in the kitchen, dairy and one in the dairy, though other industrials may occupy their course. During the spring term daily instruction and practice in the various branches of dairying is given the ladies of the second year by the instructor in household economy.

Too Many Doctors.

The United States has a larger proportion of physicians to its population than any other country in the world, averaging one to less than 600. To keep up this proportion, taking into consideration the natural increase of population, an annual increment of less than 1,000 men would suffice for some years to come. It is evident that a large part of the yearly graduates must starve, or live by quackery, or struggle for a very moderate subsistence.

The remedy for this is to make the requirements for admission to medical colleges more severe. Would-be doctors should at least know how to spell. This is not required of them at present.

Homemade Ash Sifter.

A lady writes in The Scientific American: To sift cinders, cover your sifter with an old apron or shawl. In that case, shovel, and shake without lifting the edge of the rag.

In case of wind tread on the edges to keep them down. A few stones applied at the corners will do as well.

I have found the above device a thousand times more practical than any of those cumbersome and dear apparatus which are found in most hardware stores.

Feats of Interest.

About 83,000,000 worth of American made locomotives are sent abroad every year.

It is now believed that coal dust suspended in the air of mines is alone sufficient to cause an explosion.

A genius has in vented an "odometer," a little machine to attach to a vehicle to register the distance traveled.

The world uses 40,000 barrels of petroleum a day. America has enough on hand to supply the demand for three years.

Professor J. Norman Lockyer recommends that offly silt spectroscope be used for photographic registration in eclipses.

When subtle drushes are washed in a weak solution of pure phenic alcohol, and afterward in warm water, the moth worms will not eat them.

An industrial and social revolution is progressing in Japan. It is remolding itself according to the ways of western civilization. An effort was made some time ago to throw aside the cumbrous Chinese characters in which the language is printed and adopt the plain Roman letters, as used in English. The effort is meeting with great success.

The Law Business Not Profitable.

"There are several reasons why the law business is not so profitable as it used to be," said an old attorney from an interior town the other day. "One is that the mercantile agencies and collecting agencies have almost monopolized the collecting business, which used to be a very large factor in the lawyer's returns. These claims are all in a row with his other business, and, without taking very much of his time, made a handsome addition to his income during the course of a year. But now the large reporting and collecting agencies have their representatives all over the country, and mercantile collections are nearly all made through them.

"The abstract offices have also taken away a large amount of business that used to be done by the lawyers. Some years ago the tracing of titles and making of abstracts was entirely the work of attorneys, but it has now passed wholly out of their hands into the hands of men who make it a distinct business of its own. Years are spent in abstracting all the land records and judgment dockets of the county and making a complete abridgement of them in the books of the abstracter's office, and after that the entries are kept up from day to day. To attempt to duplicate such a picture of time and labor, to begin with, but the books of such an office in time become extremely valuable and the business highly profitable.

"A third reason for the decline," he continued," is that there is not as much cause for litigation as in old times in a new country. Titles to property become securely settled in the course of time, but while the country is new conflicting claims are often asserted and defended, and cases carried by an appeal to the courts. I think, too," he added, "there is less disposition to litigate in old communities than in new ones."—Chicago Journal Interview.

The Agony of a Rag Time Clerk.

When I was a young man I had an experience that imprinted a degree of care in me that has probably been worth thousands of dollars to me since. I was a clerk in a drug store at Grand Rapids, Mich., and my duties kept me there from 7 in the evening until about 2 in the morning. One night just as day was breaking I was all over for head cases in, and, giving me a prescription, told me to put it up quick. I hurried it through and she paid me and went out. About half an hour later I met the family physician of the place came rushing in and said: "Did you put up a prescription for a sick woman on Ottawa st. a few minutes ago? Did you do it in a hurry?" "Yes," I answered again, with a pang of fear. "Give me some tartar emetic, quick!" he exclaimed, "the man it was for is dying." I got the drug mechanically, and he tore out, leaving me in an agony of doubt and fear perfectly indescribable.

A man poisoned through mistake, a coroner's inquest, jail, trial, penitentiary, a ruined reputation, my wife and children beggars, all passed in gallopping defile before my whirling brain. I thought of suicide or flight; I paced up and down the store and gnawed at my nails. A couple of hours elapsed and Dr. Victor came in again. "How is that man?" I gasped. "Oh, he's dead," he replied indifferently. My mind I have never recalled. I staggered back toward the stove while I stood dazed by the door. Presently he strolled up and said: "You put up that prescription, I believe?" "Yes," I said, "I—I—I did." "Did you get the bottle I sent?" "Yes,

JOTTINGS.

—The Casino rink was utilized for a picnic last evening.

—The colored people of the city gave a strawberry and ice cream festival in Masonic Hall on West Front street, Wednesday evening.

—A hive of bees alighted on a post at the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street yesterday afternoon, covering the entire surface of the post.

—It is said that the New Jersey G. A. R. will not hold any encampment this year. The membership of the 201 Posts throughout the State is now 6,157.

—A boys' missionary meeting will be held in the Congregational church this evening, when a missionary from Japan will be present and address the meeting.

—The case of Frederick Dugraw of Roselle, convicted of salesmen, which was to have come up in the Union County Circuit Court Wednesday, was adjourned for one week.

—The Gaslight Company announced a reduction in the price of gas from $3 to $2.50. This reduction they are enabled to make in consequence of the newly-improved machine recently introduced into the works. Read their advertisement.

—Elijah Dubay, a track-walker on the Pennsylvania railroad at Lindon, was struck by a train on Wednesday night and instantly killed. Both legs were broken and his body horribly mangled. County Physician Green of Elizabeth will hold an inquest.

—The eighteenth annual picnic of the Union County Board of Agriculture was held at the farm of William Woodruff, one of the members, one and a quarter miles to the northwest of the Roselle station, yesterday afternoon, between the hours of two and seven o'clock.

—The three boys who were arrested by Officer Lynch on Wednesday afternoon for soliciting alms, were discharged from custody by Chief Dodd this morning. The Chief telegraphed to Allentown, Pa., where it was thought they hailed from, but received no information from the authorities in that city.

—Thirty-five suits of furniture, including new carpets, crockery, glassware, etc., are being sold by the sheriff at Laing's Hall. The sale will continue all day to-day and to-morrow as well. To-morrow, besides the furniture, a fine piano, a safe, billiard table, beer glasses, etc., will be among the articles to be sold.

—There was somewhat of a one-sided game of base ball Thursday between the First and Second Division of the Third Class, Grammar School, which led to a victory for the latter by a score of 19 to 9. The best batting was done by the Second Division, but the fielding and batting was fairly good on both sides.

—Charles Graeder appeared before Justice Mattison in the borough this morning to answer to a charge preferred by Mr. Vail on behalf of his wife, who is in delicate health, and who resides in the immediate neighborhood, for using loud and demonstrative language. He pleaded non vult and was fined five dollars together with $2.35 costs, which he paid.

—The commissioners appointed to select a site for the Soldiers' Home were received at Rah's way recently by the Board of Trade, Board of Trade, Barry Post, Mayor Daly, Assemblyman Chamberlain and others and escorted to the Joseph T. Crowell property on Hazelwood avenue, which is now the property of the State. The commissioners expressed themselves as very much pleased with the site.

—A temporary organization of the Union County Press Association was formed in Elizabeth on Tuesday night, with the following officers:—President, Joseph D. Lowden of The Journal; secretary, Edgar F. Watson, Jr., of The Elizabeth Daily Herald; treasurer, Herbert A. Pierson of The New York Herald. The club adjourned to meet on Saturday evening, June 26, and the secretary was authorized to invite all newspaper publishers, editors, reporters and regular correspondents of the press to be present and participate in the permanent organization. The list comprises about forty persons.

THE Y.'S TEMPERANCE.

The First Reception of the Y. W. C. T. U.—A Grand Success.

The latest innovation in the temperance work in the organization known as the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union, comprising the daughters of Christian families who feel that they can by banding themselves together do effective work in aid of the temperance cause.

Plainfield has a number of men whom there are no fairer nor better, have recently caught the spirit of organization so prevalent throughout the land, and but a few weeks ago effected an organization, starting off with one hundred and five young women members, and now the list is full to the limit. The number is said to exceed that of any other organization in the State at the outset.

At one of the meetings held recently the following were elected officers:

President—Miss Lillian Paul Burnett, daughter of Dr. J. B. Burnett of Broadway.

Vice President—Miss Lilian Paul, daughter of Mr. Paul of West Fourth street.

Corresponding Secretary—Miss Lillian Dorman, daughter of Eben E. Dorman of Central avenue.

Recording Secretary—Miss Carrie E. Lowrie, daughter of Dr. H. H. Lowrie of Park avenue.

Treasurer—Miss Frankie H. Waring, daughter of Otis T. Waring of Park avenue.

The remaining list are Vice-Presidents in each of the churches represented and an Advisory Board from the W. C. T. U. The Advisory Board consist of Mrs. William Taylor, Mrs. Walter Haviland, and Miss Clemmie Yates.

The organization was originally started in this city by Miss Barnes of New York, assisted by Miss Mary Campbell, who is also a charming young lady, and hails from Y's of New Brunswick, of which organization she is the President.

The Plainfield Y's have held but three meetings since organizing, and in the autumn expect to take up social lines of work and make such other efforts for temperance as are considered for young women.

Last evening they gave their first reception, and the affair proved a grand success in the opinion of many a more delightful affair has never been given in Plainfield.

The Union Club rooms, where the reception was held, were tastefully decorated for the occasion. Chinese lanterns were suspended around the spacious verandas and in the immediate vicinity the foliage and in distance indicated that some pleasant event was happening. As a frontispiece on the arch under the main hall was a huge letter Y, made of white roses, the stars and stripes festooned to form a background.

The parlors, brilliantly lighted, presented a scene long to be remembered, of young, beautiful women, elegantly and tastefully attired, and a host of young men who had availed themselves of the invitations to be present. Everyone was very happy, and greetings were most cordial and general.

The musical part of the reception was according to the following:

Misses Swazy, Green, Treasure and Tyler.

Miss Lathrop, who made the address, is a decidedly beautiful and able young woman of Columbus, Ohio. She spoke with much animation and very effectively, captivating all who heard her by her wit and pathos, as she related the wonderful history of the new organization, which had grown with such wonderful rapidity throughout the country, and, commencing so but seconds, bids fair to enlist all others, in numbers at least, if not in influences for good.

Miss Lathrop is a vigorous writer, as well as a good speaker, and a regular contributor to the leading religious papers of this country. She has traveled extensively with her parents, and showed by her address that she was a close observer of events and has sensible views, which she knew well how to express most pleasingly.

The closing portion of the reception from the piano introduction by Miss Gavett to the conclusion by the Benedict Quartette of Brooklyn was not the least, Miss Holmes of this city winning new laurels and applause as a vocalist. The Benedict Quartette, of Brooklyn, who, as well, was the substitute for Mr. Brady, who at the last moment could not come.

After the conclusion of the program refreshments of ice cream and cake were served, and the hum of voices in merry chat showed that the evening was being greatly spent that few realized that it was 11.30 o'clock before the affair concluded.

"Musical Mornings" at the High School.

All of the available space in Assembly Hall was filled this morning by the parents and friends of the scholars who had assembled there to take part in their "musical morning" exercises. The hall was decorated for the occasion with flags and bunting and about the platform was a fine display of choice flowers. Miss Principal Baisley, Prof. Miller of the Senior Class and Miss Josephine Shrieve, organist and pianist of the primary department, occupied seats on the platform. Prof. Miller led the singing of the school, which at choral compound of some twenty of the scholars from the higher classes rendered excellent selections. Miss Alice Holmes sang a solo and in answer to a prolonged encore she reappeared and sweetly sang another selection. Miss Shrieve was expected to have been present and aided in the musical rendition of the program, but a note from her was received expressing her regrets at not being able to be present.

Contracts Awarded.

The several contracts for the enlargement of the Union County Jail at Elizabeth have been awarded and the terms of the successful bidders have been duly executed. The total cost will amount to about $73,635, and the contracts awarded are as follows: Stonework, T. Wilson, $21,000; brick work, $7,000; Van Sonnenberg & Clark, stone work, $4,700; Bonnell Co., iron work, $11,000; H. Brodt, Elizabeth, carpenter work for the female department, $600; Michael Byrnes, carpenter work for the male department, approximately, $1,194; John Heins of Brooklyn, skylights, $200.

Borough Council Meeting.

The North Plainfield Borough Council held a special meeting in the council chamber last night called at the last evening. There were present Mayor Van Winkle and Councilmen Arnold, McCutchen, Rider, Slater, Thickstun and Weaver—all.

The clerk read the call which was to consider the propositions made by the various water companies to furnish the borough with a system of water works.

There were representatives present from three separate water works firms, and each one was allowed a half hour to lay down his plans and be subject to a rigid examination as stated, with reference to the firm's proposal—its anticipations, expectations, etc. During each man's remarks all other water works representatives were excluded from the council chamber.

Mr. Lockwood, representing the firm of Geo. H. Borman & Co. of New York pens the first gentleman to speak. He referred to the original proposition of his company offering to furnish the borough with a system of water works; also to furnish free for three years the use of 40 hydrants for city purposes; the time for completion of the work immediately in the advent of obtaining a franchise, and offered a bond in the sum of $2,500 for the completion of the same by Jan. 1st, 1887. It was optional with the firm whether the bond be $5,000 or $5,000.

Mr. Lowe was then introduced as the "Plainfield Water Company." His firm intended to erect a standing pipe with a capacity of 2,000,000 gallons of water, the pipe to be used would be of 16, 10, 6 and 4 inch diameter, and the aggregate amount of pipe to be laid was 56,000 feet. He would furnish eight "sprinkling plugs" free for a limited period or would place in position 40 (or 80 if desired) hydrants for the free use of the borough for a period of three years. If required the firm would give bond for the completion of the work within one year from the time of signing contract.

Mr. E. C. A. Woltman of North Plainfield was the last gentleman who spoke in the interests of his firm, that of H. Bulkley & Co. of New York city. He offered an ordinance embodying the firm's proposition, which he said the Council would necessarily have to adopt if the company accepted the franchise. The paper was a lengthy document and was read by Councilman Rider. It was proposed to form a local company. It offered the borough the free use of sixty hydrants for two years and also to furnish free of charge water for churches, public schools, engine houses and other public buildings. The company also offered to furnish free two public drinking fountains, also one ornamental fountain. The company proposed to erect an attractive looking building and substantial works at an outlay of about $65,000. The company would begin operations within sixty days after signing the contract and agreed to have water turned on within six months. Bonds to the certified check for $5,000 would be filed as a guarantee for the fulfilment of the contract.

Each proposition was subjected to a series of questions, and each thought that a sewerage system was unnecessary in the borough for the present. Two of the companies had prepared maps for the location of the mains and also for a system of sewerage. The Council took no further action leading to the granting of a franchise, but laid the matter over until the next regular meeting. The meeting was then adjourned.

PERSONAL.

Hiram Deats of Pittstown, Hunterdon county, N. J., was in the city to-day on business.

The commencement exercises of the North Plainfield Public school will take place on Monday evening, June 21st.

Chancellor Runyon of Newark is mentioned in certain circles as the Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial honors.

Mrs. James McGowan and daughter, Miss Tillie, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are visiting the family of Justice V. W. Nash on Park avenue.

John Palmiteer, a former employe in Mayor Rockefellow's store, left the city to-day to accept a lucrative position at Asbury Park.

The Rev. Joseph M. Thomas and his sister, Mrs. Bullock of Mount Holly, are visiting Mr. Thorp of West Front street for a few weeks.

Mrs. I. W. Rushmore, who has gone to Lake Mahopac for the benefit of her health, is somewhat improved. Townsend Rushmore, a son, is suffering from an attack of diphtheria.

William Dunning, a son of John Dunning of this place and a graduate of the Plainfield High School, was last week conferred with the degree of Doctor of Philosophy by the trustees of Columbia College.

Rev. Dr. Pingry who has taught school in Elizabeth for fifty years, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his advent to that city as a teacher to-night, when his pupils will have a reunion at Library Hall.

The interior of the Park Avenue Baptist church presented a pleasing appearance at five o'clock yesterday afternoon when Wilbur J. Chamberlin, son of Mr. O. E. Chamberlin, and Miss Laura Moffett, daughter of Amos Moffett, entered that edifice arm-in-arm and preceded by the ushers, Harry Green and Harry Herrington. Ernest O. Chamberlin, a brother of the groom, and Robert Lowrie marched down the right aisle to the inspiring strains of a wedding march rendered by David Lyon and took their position at the altar where Rev. Dr. Dilts, in the presence of a select few, performed the marriage ceremony. The bride, a lovely brunette of about twenty years, wore a travelling dress of old-gold colored cloth with bonnet to match, and in her hand she carried a bouquet of fragrant roses with the ribbon streamers of white. The groom was attired in a neat-fitting suit of black. Rev. Mr. Dilts read the marriage service, the bride answered in the affirmative in a noticeably clear and distinct tone, after which the happy couple passed through the church to the front entrance. There a carriage was in waiting to convey them to the depot where they took the 5.30 p. m. train for New York. The bride was the recipient of many rich and elegant gifts, showing the high appreciation in which the young couple are held by their many friends. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlin will take up their residence in this city, when a reception will be tendered them at the home of the groom's parents on Madison avenue.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

A Tribute.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—I often wonder whether the young men of Plainfield realize how many beautiful girls there are in our thriving little city. Anyone of the great number of fair faces at the young women's reception at the Union Club Rooms that evening, a gentleman told me that in all his travels through the East, and he is accustomed to thirty-two hours of it, he never saw the habitants in the New England the Middle Atlantic States, at least once a year, he had never seen so many beautiful faces as were to be seen here in Plainfield.

Young men of Plainfield live up to your opportunities. JUDEX.

Mr. Wren at Reform Hall.

Notwithstanding the oppressive heat last evening Reform Hall was comfortably filled. The customary music was rendered by the volunteer choir under the direction of Miss Alice Smith, who acted as organist. Judge Harper opened the way by one of his characteristic addresses, replete with facts and figures, and at its conclusion, President French, in a felicitous manner introduced the lion of the evening, Oliver W. Wren of Brooklyn, who, brimming over with health and good-nature, mounted the rostrum and entertained the audience with renditions happily blending in the pathetic and comic—fragrant with memories of the village school house and the "decent church that topped the neighboring hill," "At the Camp Fire," a scene in the late conflict, brought back to the "boys in blue," who were present days which were passed in piscantrips with ballets whistled around them and life's chances were few. The Dutch Comedy with music by the comedian that he was vigorously applauded. In his Southern negro melody he was par excellence, and plantation days in "Old Virginny" loomed up before the audience, and brought a delightful and enthusiastic rapture with rolling eye-balls and remarkable execution stood out in full view. Owing to the high temperature, which evidently told on Mr. Wren, he was compelled to leave out many good things, which under other conditions he would no doubt have willingly fired off to the intense delight of the audience. However, the audience were compelled to retire laughing with the music of "Dot Leadle Baby" ringing in their ears, which was Mr. Wren's final effort last evening. A vote of thanks was tendered the gentlemen for his kindness in coming out on such a warm night and the hope expressed that he would appear in their midst on a future occasion. It is expected that Von Boyle and his busy bee will visit the club next Thursday evening and sweeten the audience with honey and the honeycomb.

The Amateur Entertainment.

St. Mary's Hall was crowded last evening with the friends and invited guests of the members of St. Mary's Amateur Dramatic Society to witness a program of amateur theatricals and music which had been prepared for the occasion. The entertainment was opened by the singing of a solo by Edward Harding, which was loudly applauded. A play entitled "Fortune" was then put on the stage and participated in by Miss Nora Casey, Miss Kittie Carney, Miss Kinney, and Messrs. Mack, Whelan, Tobin, McNally and Hibbitts. After the rendition of the above play an intermission of thirty minutes was taken, during which time refreshments were served. Upon reassuming a piece entitled "A Golden Wedding" was admirably rendered by Miss Nora Casey and Messrs. Harding, Tobin, McNally and Whelan. Much credit is due Mr. Harding and Miss Casey for the able manner in which they performed the difficult parts of the much-abused soubrette and the fun-loving wife. The Misses Hyland and O'Connor of New ark delighted the audience with a remarkably well rendered duet which received loud applause. The musical portion of the program was under the direction of Miss J. L. Anderson, and reflected credit upon the participants. The entertainment was by far a greater success than the friends of the project had anticipated. The members of the society are said to be arranging for a number of similar entertainments to be given at short intervals during the summer, at which a nominal admission fee will be charged.

VEGETABLE AND MORAL PRODUCT.

A Curious Analogy Said to Exist in Certain Districts of the Globe.

There exists a curious analogy between the vegetable and moral product of certain districts. In the land of the Apaches all nature seems to become sanguinary. Maguiles and will rose-bushes, with an undergrowth of brambles, cover white hillsides. Cactus thickets make the ravines almost impassable. Mosquitoes and cactus appear to have a marvelous faculty for drawing their nourishment from the arid soil; but the chief secret of their survival is perhaps their armatures of fang, enabling them to maintain a much-disputed claim to existence.

Near Carrizo in the Gila valley, a plantation of 18,000 young chestnut trees were destroyed by cutting and browsing "grasshoppers" in a single year. Cabbage could there be raised only in a rat proof house, but the same mosquitoes which destroyed vegetation without any visible leaves, can freely express itself on the open prairie. The animal cone-coalitants are equally safe. Tarantulas, centipedes, and those horrible and rapidly undisturbed. Rattlesnakes thrive like wrigglers in a mill pond. Coyotes literally send their howls to the moon. Tanner would perish. Nay, like their congeners, the Aztec and the hyena, they seem naturally to gravitate toward man. Indeed, it appears to be the habitable earth, to regions apparently unable to promise them either shelter or food.

And the brigands seem to follow the tendency of the same law. The border of the old Atlantic coasts Spanish despoliation, i. e., depopulated districts are haunted by robbers as rank as the soil which produces them. In all worn-out countries the outlaw's knife gleams among thistles and thorns. For armed self-help is mostly nothing but a reaction against the tyranny of law and social construction. The Bedouin and the bramble-bush ask nothing but to be left alone. To the wood the wolf is welcome. Wisely granted, but nature has a way of her own for hampering the storm to destitute lambs. Wool, too often shorn, turns into bristles.—Dr. Felix L. Oswald.

Lime Cartridges for Blasting Purposes.

Lime cartridges are coming into use for blasting in mines. A hole is bored, the finest rock-dust is inserted, and water is poured over it. The increase in volume of the slaked lime splits and cracks the substance which it is desired to blast.—Iron Age.

The Savannah News says that the real reason why southern men wear their hair long is to keep the sun from burning their necks.

To do a kind act is the proof of a good man, not bragging about it afterward, how ever, is the proof of a noble man.—Jud Lafagan.

THE TARIFF VOTE.

MR. MORRISON'S BILL FAILS TO REACH CONSIDERATION.

Four Republicans Support the Measure, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio Democrats Cast the Deciding Vote. Another Effort will be Made.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—In anticipation of a ballot on the Morrison bill the house yesterday morning was crowded with members and spectators. Mr. Morrison, at 1.30 p. m., moved that the house go into committee of the whole on revenue bills. On this he demanded the yeas and nays, and Mr. McKinley, reading the opposition, joined in the demand.

The yeas and nays were ordered unanimously, and the roll was called, resulting, yeas, 154; nays, 157. The detailed vote is as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Carlisle, Adams (N. The fate of the bill was not a surprise. One more Democratic vote was cast against it than was expected—Ward, of Illinois, who is a Morrison man, but upon the last roll call he yielded to the persuasion of his colleague, Mr. Lawler, one of the most determined of the Democratic protests in the west. Mr. Morrison knew ten days ago that there were at least thirty-two Democrats committed to Mr. Randall's leadership and to the Mills bill. Besides, he had expected more from western Republicans than was realized. Instead of twelve Republicans, as he had counted, to vote with him, there were but four—James, of New York, and Nelson, Strait and Wakefield, all of Minnesota. Mr. James, however, was not in time to vote on the final passage of the bill, but favored the part written by M. H. Watt.

Mr. Morrison felt the defeat even worse than he did the downfall of his beloved bill in the last congress. Ohio stood true to the promises made to the committee, that if wool was placed on the free list a majority of the democratic representatives would vote with the high tariff people. There were three, however, who stood with Mr. Morrison to the last—Jones, of Kentucky, in the New York delegation there were ten Democrats in the Randall column—Arnot, Bliss, Timothy J. Campbell, Dowdney, Merriman, Miller, Pindar, Purcell, Stahlnecker and Weir. From the Pennsylvania delegation there were five Democrats—Boyle, Curtin, Errett, Kelly and Scott. Louisiana had four—Gay, Irion, St. Martin and Wallace. Of the Ohio delegation there were Campbell, Kinsley, Poran, Geddes, Lowery, Bergh and Wilkins. Of the Michigan delegation Pidcock and Green of New Jersey, Beasley of California, Findley of Maryland, Martin of Indiana, Lawler and Lawler of Illinois completed the list.

Mr. Morrison gave notice to the house that on next Tuesday he would again call up the bill for consideration and discussion. Mr. McKinley said he would be there also. One of Mr. Morrison's friends stated that the question on the tariff discussion now rested in the hands of the president. Mr. Morrison, he said, had called upon the president yesterday morning to urge upon him the necessity of bringing the New York delegation to the support of the bill. Mr. Morrison said the president that the salvation of the Democratic party depended on this section of the house in relation to the tariff question at this session. The president seemed disinclined to act, and told Mr. Morrison that he would prefer to see the tariff bill not be taken up without his intervention. The notice of Mr. Morrison that he would renew his effort to consider the bill on Tuesday is taken to mean that he expects the president between now and then to bring over nine of the opposition.

Water Mail Routes.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Postmaster General Vilas, in answer to a resolution, has informed the senate that there are 109 inland water routes over which United States mails are transported, for which the total compensation is $379,971 per annum, and also 11 coast wise routes, which cost $66,756.

Gotham's Credit Good.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Bids for $2,000,000 new city revenue bonds were opened. The bids aggregated $14,000,000, and ranged from 101 to 105.35. The latter is the larger premium ever offered for city loans.

THE MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

Thompson Had Lied All Round, and Dreaded Exposure.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Coroner Levy broke Thompson's sachel open to take an inventory of its contents. In a leather pocketbook were a number of pawn tickets. One of them bore the date of the shooting, June 15, and was for $2.60 on a watch. This was the money with which he bought the miserable Schultzer watch which the cowardly crime was committed. Three days before that he pawned an opera glass for $5.62. There was one other ticket for two rings bought in March, 1885, and an extra ticket of the Sturtevant house on June 10 for two friends. A look of his wife's hair was also found in his pocketbook. His memorandum of borrowed money was also found: Shaw, $250; Crane, $25; King, $15; Yard, $20.

This letter, written by his father in pencil on soft paper, was also found. It was received by young Thompson two days before the tragedy. It read:

K. C., June 10.

DEAR WILL: Don't you get my letters? You give no address and so I send to Twenty-fourth street. I hope you are doing well at night, but I have told you my marriage is postponed and is not to come. Now I must just wait and see. My dear people have voted me an extra $1,000, so I have telegraphed May to get ready, and will take her. She is all ——. Is in chic now. Too busy to write. Hope you have not started. Meet us on morning of 20th. Your DAD.

This letter would indicate that the Rev. Dr. Thompson had a new bride in store for his marriage to pretty Jennie Kahler, and was expected wedding in Kansas City.

This fatal family complication, together with his own financial embarrassments, may now be accepted as the motive for the murder. The young man had represented himself to his bride and her family and to other acquaintances in this city as having abundant means for the matrimonial step which he had taken. There can be no doubt, now that he is penniless, that the waterer money he had had, and was as much ashamed to expose himself to the ridicule and scandal of his own new responsibilities. Thompson, therefore, took the most cowardly means of escape from a dilemma that might simply be regarded as embarrassing.

BUNKER HILL ASSOCIATION.

President Cleveland Elected an Honorary Member.

BOSTON, June 18.—The annual meeting of be Bunker Hill Monument association was held yesterday. Gen. Charles Devens delivered the annual address. It was stated that nearly 60,000 people had visited the monument the past year. Hon. Robert C. Winthrop presented the association with its crayon portrait of Webster taken in 1840.

The following honorary members were elected: Hon. Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, and Maj. Gen. John M. Schofield, Alfred H. Terry and Oliver O. Howard. The following were elected new late members: Charles J. Adams, Jr., Oliver Ames, Frank M. Ames, Frederick L. Ames and many other Bostonians.

Celebrated Divorce Case Ended.

PORT HURON, Mich., June 18.—Margaret Walsh was today granted an absolute divorce from Robert Walsh, on the ground of treatment as brutal and beastly as, in the opinion of the court, to indicate monomania. The parties are wealthy and the case is celebrated, one incident in its history being a recent shooting affray in which Walsh was fired upon by his wife. The court grants $5,000 alimony and orders the defendant to pay the unpaid debts and the counsel fees of the complainant.

Belgian Strikers on the Rampage.

BRUSSELS, June 18.—The miners on strike at Mons number 9,000. At Quaregnon eighteen strikers have been arrested. Six hundred strikers from Quaregnon, carrying red flags, to-day marched to Jemappes, where they threw out the fires and a lot of workmen's tools found in sheds on the way. They then scaled the walls of a number of mills and forced them to halt to stop work. The strikers fled on the approach of gendarmes. Two battalions of troops have been ordered to the scene.

Bycicle Riders Beat the Record.

LYNN, Mass., June 18.—The ten-mile sweepstakes professional bicycle race for the world's championship, $50 aside and a $300 purse, between John S. Prince, Robert Neilsen and William Woods do, was started yesterday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. One of the conditions the ten miles were to be covered inside of thirty two minutes, or there would be no prize. Prince finished first, time, 30.8 2-5. Wilson second, 30.8 3-5.

Excited Down Austria.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Information is received here that the Austrian government has excluded the New York Staats Zeitung from circulation in Austria. The original publication of Bismarck's letter to Bill, late years has been a dead letter. Recent criticisms in the paper reflecting upon Austria's course, have led to the revival of the decree.

In Front of a Train.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 18.—While passenger train No. 4 was passing a siding near Hurricane station, on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, Mrs. Jane Layman, 71 years old, jumped in front of it, and was instantly killed. The old woman is supposed to have been temporarily insane.

McLane Throws Up the Sponge.

NEW YORK, June 18.—"Billy" Mackin, of New York, and "Tommy" Mclane, of Providence, fought twenty-one rounds on the Jersey bank of the Delaware river yesterday morning. When time was called for the twenty-first round Mclane was so badly punished that he could not respond, and his seconds threw up the sponge.

Insanely Jealous.

DETROIT, June 18.—News has just reached here from York, fifteen miles from this city, of a murder and suicide. Jacob Beard, an old farmer of 60, shot his wife, who had left him, twice through the head and then shot his mother-in-law in the same way. The wounds are mortal. Insane jealousy was the cause. Barnett was arrested.

A Long Lived Family.

NEW YORK, June 18.—There was a wake last night at Ellen Sullivan's shanty on the rocks off Fourth avenue, between Ninety-seventh and Ninety-eighth streets. Catherine Kinnesally had died there 104 years old. She came to New York in 1815. Three years ago her brother died in Ireland, aged 107.

The Princess Not Expelled.

PARIS, June 18.—The senate committee has reported, by a vote of 10 to 3, all of the government's proposals to expel members of former reigning houses from France.

Lieut. Greely Promoted.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The president has sent to the senate the nomination of First Lieut. Adolphus W. Greely, of Arctic fame, to be captain.

APPROPRIATIONS.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATIONS.

A General Reduction Recommended for the Survey and Signal Service Departments—Defining the Perquisites—The Public Printing to be Looked After.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Mr. Randall, from the committee on appropriations, has reported to the house the sundry civil appropriation bill. It appropriates $21,633,823, being $2,000,000 less than the regular estimates and 15,000,778 less than the aggregate regular and supplemental estimates considered by the committee. The amount appropriated for the same purposes for the current fiscal year was $36,235,747, being $5,151,925 more than is recommended in the accompanying bill for the fiscal year 1887.

Among the provisions of the bill is the following:

Affecting the coast and geodetic survey: no advance of money in charge of field parties under this appropriation shall be made unless to a commissioned officer or a civilian officer, who shall give bond in such sum as the secretary of the treasury may direct. No part of the money herein appropriated for the coast and geodetic survey shall be available for allowance to civilians or other than commissioned officers while on duty in the office at Washington, or to officers of the navy attached to the survey, nor shall there be expended any part of said sum in excess of salaries to officers of the navy attached to the coast and geodetic survey.

Under the signal corps it is provided that the whole number of enlisted assistants appointed and to be appointed from the sergeants of the signal corps under the provisions of the sundry civil appropriation act, approved August 2d, 1882, shall not exceed sixty, and the whole number of enlisted men in the signal corps shall not exceed 430; provided, that the appropriations herein made for the pay, commutation and allowances of the commissioned officers and enlisted men of the signal corps shall be in full of all pay, commutation and allowances to which said commissioned officers and enlisted men of the signal corps shall be entitled during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, that no part of the appropriations made for the signal service by this act shall be used for the maintenance or support of a school of instruction, nor for the military post at Fort Myer, Va.

Attached to the appropriation of $159,000 for the completion of the pension building in this city it is provided that as soon as completed the secretary of the interior shall cause to be removed to the building the general land office, Indian office bureau of education, the pension bureau of railroads, bureau of labor, and the office of the agent for the payment of pensions in the District of Columbia and office of the geological survey, and care to be taken for rented for and now occupied by said offices and bureaus, or portions thereof, and the pension office building shall be under the control of the secretary of the interior and subject to such rules and regulations as he may prescribe.

Attached to the appropriation for public printing it is provided that printing and binding for congress chargeable to this appropriation, when recommended to be done by the committee on printing, shall be so recommended in a report containing an estimate containing the cost thereof, together with a statement from the public printer of the number of ems in such manuscript, ordered by congress within the fiscal year for which this appropriation is made; and all printing for the executive departments, before transmitting their annual reports to congress, the printing of which is chargeable to this appropriation, shall cause the same to be submitted to congress, and shall exclude therefrom all matter including engravings, maps, drawings and illustrations, except such as they shall certify in blank forms to be transmitting such reports to be necessary, to relate entirely to the transaction of public business.

All of the above come within the definition of new legislation, and are therefore subject to points of order.

The total amount appropriated for the bureau of engraving and printing is $693,-540, the full amount of the estimates.

The coast survey gets $467,346, being $166,250 less than appropriated for the current year, and $100,008 less than the estimates.

The number of field officers is reduced from 94 to 48, the office force from 103 to 91, and the general office expenses are reduced $12,800. In addition to the amount appropriated for the coast survey in the bill there is also a provision for the survey of naval officers and 275 enlisted men of the navy whose pay and allowances come from the appropriation for the navy.

Eleven thousand dollars are appropriated to fit up quarters for the civil service commission in the court house.

The signal service gets $736,493, being $64,-506 less than the present year, and $367,338 less than the estimates.

The commutation allowances to enlisted men are fixed at 50 cents a day for rations, 8 cents a day to each man; fuel, 48 per month, and quarters at $15 monthly for each man.

No advances are made for the Mississippi or Missouri rivers commissions, although the estimates for the first was $100,000, and the latter $450,000.

Thompson's Father Arrives.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Rev. Dr. C. S. Thompson, of Kansas City, arrived here at 7 o'clock last evening, and went at once to the New York hospital. His interview with his son lasted about an hour. He declined to say whether the young man had revealed to him the reason for killing Mrs. Thompson and attempting suicide. The physicians said the young Thompson is in a dying condition, having rapidly grown worse.

For Keeping an Opium Joint.

BALTIMORE, June 18.—Charles Beard, indicted for keeping an opium joint in this city, was convicted of the charge. Judge Duffy sentenced Beard to one day in jail and to pay a fine of $100. This is the first time that persons have been convicted under the new law. Much dissatisfaction is expressed with regard to the sentence, which is owing to the views of many, is entirely to light.

Their First Dinner Out.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The President and Mrs. Cleveland took their first dinner out last night with Secretary and Mrs. Endicott. Besides the president and his wife, the other invited guests were Speaker Carlisle and Mrs. Carlisle, Postmaster General and Mrs. Vilas, Senator Sherman, Gen. and Mrs. Sherman, Admiral Rogers, Miss West, daughter of the British minister, and Miss Bradley.

A TRIUMPHAL MARCH.

Gladstone Greeted On His Journey In Scotland.

LONDON, June 18.—The train bearing Mr. Gladstone was met at Euston and Bedford by immense crowds of people, who cheered the premier until long after his departure. After leaving Bedford the train did not stop until it reached Crewe, where a large and curious crowd was assembled to meet it. When Mr. Gladstone made his appearance he was greeted with a roar of cheers, mingled with which were a few groans. The premier made no demur that the committee delegated to present an address made its way to the front with great difficulty. Gladstone thanked the committee for the address, and regretted that the time at his disposal did not allow him to dwell fully upon the great question now before the country. While pointing Ireland what you give the colonies with the greatest advantage—power to manage, not imperial, but Irish affairs? "During the fifty-four years of my public life," he said, "I have not seen enthusiasm everywhere equal to that which has been shown for this great cause. The eyes of the world are now upon us in a degree never before equaled. Not only the British race, but the whole of civilized mankind has testified the liveliest interest in the cause. I am sanguine, I believe it will, the verdict of the country shall be favorable to the people of Ireland, there will be nothing less than a thrill of joy throughout the civilized world.

"I place before you this noble object of human sympathy, combined with justice, and I commend it to your deep and deliberate consideration, for upon it never did any issue to determine more charged with good or evil to the future advancement of the great empire."

Mr. Gladstone closed his remarks amid the wildest enthusiasm. He arrived at Trent at 1.19 p. m., and was received much in the same way as he had been at Leicester. He was presented with an address, which he did not reply to it beyond expressing his thanks.

A SOURCE OF WASTE.

The Careless Manner of Distributing Public Documents.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Secretary Lamar, in a communication to the senate, calls attention to the enormous waste in the distribution of public documents, and suggests that by the establishment of depositary libraries and individuals, says that in a recent effort to supply deficiencies in sets of the United States Reports, 6,000 volumes were sent to individuals who were voluntarily turned over to the department. More than 600 copies of agricultural reports were sent to one person in Texas, and from another 400 copies of the patent office reports were received. The secretary submits a number of recommendations which, if adopted, he thinks will not only prevent duplication of public documents in the future, either to libraries or individuals.

Bunker Hill Day.

BOSTON, June 18.—Bunker Hill day, as usual here, was observed as a close holiday, but the only official observance of the 111th anniversary has been confined to the Charlestown district. The most interesting feature of the day has been the carnival and trades' parade, which started at 9.30 o'clock and paraded the principal streets in four grand divisions. There was also a parade beginning at 1.30 p. m. of military and civic organizations. The celebrations closed with fireworks and open air concerts in the two principal squares in the evening.

Heavy Verdict For A Cadet.

PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—George G. Merrick, a cadet at the Pennsylvania Military academy, has obtained a verdict of $30,000 against Dr. Charles Iszard for injuries sustained by him from the explosion of a cannon while he was firing a salute under orders. Gen. Butler was Merrick's counsel.

Killed by a Texas Cyclone.

FORT WORTH, June 18.—A cyclone occurred in Cook and Denton counties. Hallie Prigmore was fatally injured at Stoney, Denton county, and several lives are known to have been lost. Further west immense damage was done to crops and farm buildings.

Rates Reduced.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the rates on policies for $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to

per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an appraisement. There are no Membership fees or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy, and the contract is backed by assets of over $600,000.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $948,182.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over $30,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. NEW YORK'S YACHTS SAIL AWAY FROM THEIR RIVALS.

PRISCILLA AN EASY WINNER.

The Wind of Course was to Blame for All the Woes of the Defeated—The Mayflower, However, Is No Slouch and Will Yet be Heard From.

NEW YORK June 18.—The two races of this week have demonstrated that the Priscilla is much stronger in wind-ward than she was last year, that on the broads she is taking one day with another, she will win oftener than she will lose.

To new Boston here, the Mayflower, has a future full of promise if she gets a suit of sails to fit her, but it is a question whether she is not a little too tender even in a fresh breeze full and by. Some day the big mare will have a race with topsails in and then the Atlantic will show what she can do.

With one-third as many square feet of wrinkles as of smooth canvas the Priscilla sails, and with a base gap between her club topsail and her gaff, the Mayflower crossed the starting line near the Puritan, bound to have a trial trip with something alongside by which she could gauge her speed. The start was probably very satisfactory to Gen. Paine, for it gave him time for all to see what he could do with the Puritan.

They went down the bay close hauled, the Priscilla leading. The Mayflower came out abroad on the lee of a three knot breeze, and club topsail, passing the Puritan about a mile before the spit was reached, and overhauling the Priscilla a trifle. The Atlantic seemed lost in a fog of white canvas, all sheet and cutter sails, so far astern that the big fleet of pleasure steamers would not wait to see what blow she had in her. Outside of the Hook the breeze freshened until there was an occasional bright roll of foam on the tops of the waves, and here and there a dark flaw, which showed where the wind-gods starts to gallop to lucky yachtsmen. It was just such a wind as all the spectators had wished for, but not a capful to the mind of Joe Elsworth as he looked up at the white swell trimmed sails of the Atlantic, and then tried to see what had become of the others away ahead as they reached for the turning point.

As in the race of Monday this stretch out beyond the Hook was the only fair test of the big boats; but unlike Monday's reach, it did not run to the end of the leg. To the astonishment of everybody, except perhaps the men on the Priscilla, the scientific iron sloop, the Priscilla, pointed higher and logged off faster to windward than either of the Boat n favorites. With club topsail and small jib topsail set, she stood up to her work like a thoroughbred. By the bell buoy the Mayflower heeled over until she seemed ready to show the lead in her keel, and the Puritan was not doing much better.

It was apparent after two or three miles of the reach had been covered that the Mayflower had put several more breadths of sea water between her and the Puritan, and equally apparent that she was dropping rapidly astern and to leeward of the Priscilla.

At the same time the Atlantic was holding on to her canvas as well as the Priscilla, and pointing just as high, although not covering the ground quite as fast. She was certainly a magnificent sight. Boasts in a way that surprised even some of the people on board of her. The Boston boats took in their jib topsails, apparently unable to point up as high as the Atlantic did with them.

The run home was a fluke. The weather resembled the doldrums. Calms, flaws from all directions, and heavy rains succeeded each other with confusing rapidity. The Priscilla came in ahead, without the aid of her spinnaker, and the Atlantic was a good second, but to show that the race proved little, the Bedouin, a boat in the next smaller class, got in actually second, and paralyzed even the Priscilla when time allowance was counted.

The scene at Sandy Hook lightship, the outside turning mark, filled New Yorkers with pride. The Priscilla came up into the wind close under the lee of the red hulk, filled away on the other tack with a smother of white under her bows and a lengthening ribbon of foam astern, nodded three times over three long rollers as if in answer to screaming tugs and booming cannon, and spreading her great white balloon, flew away into a cloud of mist that was gathering in the west. She had gained six minutes on the Atlantic, more on the Mayflower, and still more on the Puritan in that eight-mile stretch to windward. The Bedouin boats had to reach up from a quarter to a half mile to get around the hulk, but the Atlantic rounded it as closely as the Priscilla did.

Phil Ellsworth, who made the Atlantic's model, saw the race from the Iron Steamboat company's Cygnus. He said after it was over:

"I am satisfied. The Atlantic lost the race in the start. The Gravling blanketed her for two full tacks, and she had no chance in all that time. She got by the end of the Hook she showed what she could do, and with five miles more of it she would have have led them all. All I ask is for wind enough, and the Atlantic will beat any of them. She can carry on with any of them. With a decent wind I would not count the Priscilla in the race."

The Priscilla people were delighted. "To my surprise," said Mr. Canfield, "the sloop did even better closehauled than she did sailing free. She showed to the best of her last year. The only boat I am afraid of now is the Mayflower. She showed a wonderful burst of speed going down."

"How do I account for the Puritan's getting left so far behind?" said Mr. Forbes, rather disconsolately. "I can't account for it at all. Why, even the Bedouin beat her. I want to tell you that the Puritan is a good stiff breeze. The Puritan was in the doldrums a good deal of the time. The Mayflower sailed very well and gained on all of us going down, but of course like the Puritan, went under her stern and outsailed her.

Nurserymen Elect Officers.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The nurserymen, now in convention, have elected the following officers to serve for the coming year; President, C. L. Watrous, of Iowa; first vice-president, M. G. Hunt, of Illinois; secretary, D. W. Scott of Illinois; treasurer, A. F. Whitney. Chicago was selected as the place of meeting for the next convention. It was adopted a ging congress to pass a law taxing oleomargarine, and a number of reports concerning trade matters were read and discussed.

Controller Durham Married.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—First Comptroller Durham, of the treasury, was married here yesterday to Mrs. Carter, a daughter of the late Governor Fletcher, of Kentucky. Judge Durham and his wife left for Washington on Atlantic City, where they will remain several days.

Suffering Troops in Egypt.

CAIRO, June 18.—Appalling mortality is reported among the British troops stationed at Assouan. One hundred and six men of the Dorset regiment have died within the past two months. Of 500 invalids on their way to Cyprus ten dropped dead from heat on Sunday last.

THE BELFAST RIOTS.

British Statesmen Concerned About French Acquisitions in the Hebrides.

LONDON, June 18.—In the house of commons Mr. John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, announced that the government had decided to delegate a commission to inquire into the Belfast riots and their causes.

Mr. James Bryce, under secretary for foreign affairs, said that M. de Freycinet, prime minister of France, had repeatedly assured the foreign office, in his recent correspondence respecting the New Hebrides, that France did not intend to attempt any measures which would affect the political condition of the islands, adding that France felt bound to respect their independence.

The official advices, Mr. Bryce said, of which the government was in possession concerning the seizure of the New Hebrides was a telegram from the British consul at New Caledonia, and a dispatch from the governor of South Wales, saying he had reason to believe that the French flag had been hoisted over the New Hebrides, and stating that he had protested against the act.

Lord Lyons, British ambassador to France, had been commanded to draw the immediate attention of M. de Freycinet to the affair, and the house might rest assured, Mr. Bryce said, that the government was fully sensible of the gravity of the matter.

THE SECRETS LEAK OUT.

Secretary Turner in Favor of Saving Paper and Postage.

PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—It is learned that the executive board of the Knights of Labor has issued a circular, dated June 12, warning the Knights against what the board considers to be a plot to pack with politicians the convent on to be held at Richmond in October. The circular says that it is a part of a conspiracy which is on foot to disrupt the order by underhand means. General Secretary Turner refused to speak about the matter when questioned. He grew angry over the fact that the circular had become public, and exclaimed that he hoped Mr. Powderly would adopt the policy of sending advice that it would save the expense of postage and paper to give such circulars to the press at once, since they always leaked out in some way

Oliver Wendell Holmes Lionized.

LONDON, June 18.—Honorary degrees were conferred upon Dr. Wendell Holmes at Cambridge university yesterday. There was a brilliant assemblage present, and Dr. Holmes was cheered enthusiastically when the degree was presented, accompanied by a laudatory speech in Latin by the public orator. The speaker described Dr. Holmes as possessing commanding talents in science and distinction in literature, and eulogized his gifts as a physician, his prowess in art and his eloquence in song. He remarked that to-day was the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, and also of the death of Addison. The eulogy which had once been applied to Addison, he said, might fittingly be applied to Dr. Holmes. The speech bristled with quotations from Dr. Holmes' poems.

The Fishermen Can Buy Bait.

MONTREAL, June 18.—The Dominion government has changed its policy in regard to the fisheries dispute. It has issued instructions to captains of cruisers and collectors of customs, ordering them to recall former instructions regarding seizure of American vessels for contravention of treaty. No mention is made in the last circular to the purchase of bait, transhipment of cargo, or shipping of men, as contravening the treaty. The question, therefore, seems to be narrowed down to the bait item. The change of course is said to have been taken in deference to the wishes of the imperial government for a conciliatory policy.

Bookmaking at Monmouth.

TRENTON, N. J., June 18.—The supreme court has affirmed the decis on of the Monmouth county court of oyer and terminer in McLean's case. He was fined $300 for selling pools at Monmouth park, and the decision practically puts an end to the betting or pool selling at that place. The case will be appealed.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—For the Atlantic coast states, generally fair weather, stationary temperature, with north and north west winds.

The subscription Book Business.

"There is a great deal of money made in books," said a printer, "and a good deal lost. I could name for you a half dozen persons in Chicago who have made from $50,000 to $20,000 in a few years publishing or handling books for the subscription trade If a book 'catches on,' and the agents who first try it are able to make good earnings, the thing goes like wildfire. Agents by the hundred then take hold of it, and the sales in a few months reach an enormous aggregate. Books which cost but 60 or 70 cents to manufacture in large cities are sold at $5.50 to $4 to subscribers, about one half of this going to the agent.

"The subscription book business has one great advantage over the trade business. In the latter the first edition must be published as a venture. Frequently the best of judgments on the salability of a book will be at fault, and in case of no sale there is an enormous loss. The subscription publisher prints no more books than are needed, and never go further than the manufacture of a few prospectuses if the work should fall flat on his hands. Authors of regular trade subscription books are not, as a rule, well paid. Many of the most successful works are more compilations or hodge podges, hastily put together under an attractive title and with good printing and binding."

Going to Unearth a Palace.

To a friend at Berlin Dr. Schliemann writes from Athens that after completing his excavations in Livadia and Boetia, which were to engage him in April, he intended to commence work in Archomenos, and that he had given up his design of returning to Berlin in May or June. "It is highly probable," he says to the doctor, "that in autumn I shall begin to unearth the stronghold of the Atrida at Mycenæ. This work will probably last three years, and be the last I shall undertake in Greece. But even now I venture to promise that I shall there unearth a palace, the plan of which has most resemblance to that of Troy or that of Tiryns."—Chicago Tribune.

MRS. CLEVELAND'S HOME.

THE DOMESTIC QUARTERS OF THE GREAT WHITE HOUSE.

Sandy About Mrs. Cleveland and Her Baby Life—How and Where She Lives. The First Lady of the Land and Her Duties.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The White House seems to fit Mrs. Cleveland as though it were made for her. In the eyes of the fashionable world, as fixed out by Washington society, and her little ears hear nothing but praises. She and the president are very loving, and their honeymoon is passing without a cloud, so far as can be seen, in the matrimonial sky. She is greatly interested in the country home, and she finds the White House not unpleasant. The quarters of the president's wife are far different from those of the president. The public knows all about the former. It knows very little about the latter. Mrs. Cleveland is now the head of the White House, and she has the entire control of its arrangement. President Cleveland was never a man of much domestic taste. He has not been in the basement of the White House more than once since the day of his inauguration, and he never goes down in the kitchen as President Arthur did, to have a word with the cook, or to direct the getting up of his dinners. President Cleveland has confined himself strictly to his office and his bedroom, and he has spent no more time in the other apartments than though the White House was a great hotel, and he was living in it.

The White House is, after all, much like a hotel. The president's family have only about one-third of it as their private quarters, and the public have every inch of the remaining two-thirds at will. The house has cost about $2,000,000 as it is a big, old-fashioned structure with lots of waste room. The ceilings of the ground floor are thirty-two feet high, and the front vestibule and hall with its glass wall and marble floor is as cold as a barn in winter. A half dozen mammoth fires are always present in it, and it looks more like an entrance to an art gallery than to the private quarters of the ruler of a great republic. The room would make a very nice ball room but it is of no earthly good except for grand receptions, and one might as well try to make a home of a two acre field as of it. Besides it is thrown open to visitors until 2 o'clock every day. Its chairs always stand back against the wall as those in the parlors of hotels, and the big chandeliers which light it, though they cost $3,000 apiece, look like icicles with their hundreds prismatic, crystal pendants, and from the life size portrait of Mary Lincoln, or half dozen people assembled below them. The Blue room, the Green room and the Red room are not enough, but they lack the home touches of bits of bric-a-brac, tidies and the thousand and one little nothings which make up home comforts. They are pretty enough and grand enough, but they are not what they ought to see that is a hair must kept straight while he sits in them, and it is hard to feel comfortable in cold surroundings. The result is that these rooms have never been home like ones, and the real home of the president is confined to the second story.

The east side of the second story of the White House is made up of offices. President Cleveland holds his cabinet meetings where Abe Lincoln used to sleep during war times, and his office is there. Next to it is the receives his business callers, the oval library which Fillmore's wife arranged and which formed the reception room. I think, Mr. Abigail Adams, the wife of John Adams had not been half finished when John Adams came into it, and his wife did most of her entertaining on the second floor. The East room was then used as a drying place, and Mrs. Cleveland was very much amused the other day when one of the attaches of the White House told her that it was here that Mrs. Adams hung out her clothes on rainy wash days.

Col. Lamont has one of the biggest rooms in the White House. It is just over the East room, and is like one in which Abraham Lincoln used to receive his callers during the war. There are four other rooms beside these in this part of the White House which were used by Mr. Lincoln. One of these is devoted to the bookkeeping of the presidential mansion; another has a telegraph operator, a type writer and files of the leading newspapers of the country, and a third is a big waiting room, where callers are sometimes shown who wish to see the president. All these rooms are off from Mrs. Cleveland. She could come into them if she wished, but she does not do so. She has been several times into the president's private office, finding her way to the book library, and taking now and then, one to her own room in another part of the house, but even these visits have been made when the president was alone.

If you could take a mammoth knife and cut the White House as you would a big cheese, you would find that the knife blade across it from north to south at the end of the library, cut off Mrs. Cleveland's part of the White House from that of the president. She has all the living rooms, they are all large and airy. Just off from the library there is a cozy room which used to be known as the girls' room, and in it was that Nellie Grant lived, and Nellie Arthur occupied it during the last presidential term.

The president's bridal chamber is the state bedroom, and I can tell you Mr. Aldrich grant now to what it did when Mrs. Cleveland first came into it. There are more home touches, and the dressing table always has its flowers. When President Arthur was here he had his wife's picture, which hung on one of these walls, wreathed with roses every morning. Now she comes and everything about the room and the gardener has done his best to make it look beautiful. There is a wide lounge, or divan, at one side of the room, and the bed is of rose wood with a great canopy of silk brocade in gold and silver above it. A rich Turkish carpet covers the floor and there are a number of easy chairs scattered about the room. Great chunks of wood lie upon the highly polished brass andirons, and the mantel is covered with a heavy velvet cloth of a sort Queen red. There is a lady on one of the arm chairs bearing the inscription in red, white and blue silk:

"God bless our country and our president."

I wonder if Mrs. Cleveland made it and whether, if she did not, she is jealous of the woman who did. Every thing matches here as this room, but the toilet table looks far different now from what it did six weeks ago.

It was in this room that the Prince of Wales slept, and it was refitted for his visit, and if Victoria dies soon enough the bridal chamber of President Cleveland will have been the only guest chamber in the United States that has slept a king.

Mrs. Cleveland's old room looks out upon the Potomac, and it may be that this will be time honored as the president's room. It is one of the most beautiful rooms in the house, and its furniture is made in imitation of bamboo with joints corresponding to those of a fishing rod. The chief objection to this room is the fact that Garfield lay here while he was sick, and one might fear that his ghost would visit its future occupants.

Mrs. Cleveland was as her guest chamber the room at the southwest corner of the White House. It is a very pleasant room and it contains the only specimens of the large bedroom furniture in the executive mansion. The bedstead is a tall four-poster, and over it is an old fashioned canopy with silken, satin cognizance. The bed is so high that it takes a step ladder to get into it and there is a little one here for that purpose. The corridor which runs through the center of the White House from east to west is shut off just west of the library by a partition, so that the women the bedrooms makes a very nice sitting room. This is luxuriously furnished and it has a window looking out on the state, war and navy department and giving a view of Arlington and the Virginia hills.

There is a reason for this room being the first to the second story of the White House, though very few people have ever seen it. It is a small affair nicely fitted up, and Mrs. Cleveland's friends say that they often in preference to the public stair way.

The kitchen of the White House is situated on the north side. It has rooms big enough for a ranche, and its ranges are large enough to roast an ox whole. There is a big pastry table in the cook room which would do for the manufacture of an austrian house, and the cooking utensils are of copper, and as they hang on the white walls they shine so that you can see your face looking out of them. The kitchen is presided over by the chief of the White House, and great piles of it are stacked up in the halls of the basement. It is a very clean establishment, this lower part of the White House. Everything is scoured and scrubbed as though the place was presided over by a Dutch housewife; and as you look at the floors you feel as you might imagine yourself to be in Holland. The stonework was whitewashed some time ago, and the whole, with its heavy columns and its massive arches, reminds one of the lower part of the Capitol building, a mile away on the hill.

There is a steam engine in this White House basement, and Mrs. Cleveland was interested when she was told that here, in this engine room, was the kitchen of Andrew Jackson. She looked at the twelve-foot fireplace, which still stands in it with its crane of iron, and she noted the mouth of the Dutch oven, in which the baking of the White House was done.

The laundry of the White House is in the front part of the basement, and as you walk up to and upon the president's throne by the window that open upwards you can, if you will glance down, see colored girls with caps on their heads ironing numerous garments, the names of which I would not like to mention here. The steward has an office down here, and so has the gardener, and there are some sleeping rooms for the servants, but the most of these board out of the house. There is a dumb waiter leading from the kitchen to the second floor.

The family now take their meals in the private dining room, and the colored waiters wear swallow tail coats and white vests and black trousers when they wait upon them. Flowers are always upon the table, and when Mrs. Cleveland has any guests the gardener of the White House sees that flowers are put in their chambers every day.

Mrs. Cleveland is fond of flowers, and she spends some time in the conservatory daily. The east side of the second story of the White House is made up of offices. President Cleveland holds his cabinet meetings where Abe Lincoln used to sleep during war times, and his office is there. Next to it is the receives his business callers, the oval library which Fillmore's wife arranged and which formed the reception room. # THREE CABINET LADIES.

PORTRAITS OF SOCIAL LEADERS AT WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. Manning, Mrs. Vilas and Miss Cleveland—They Represent New England, New York and the West. The Inventor of "Innocuous Dunstuds."

Of the historic twenty-six persons who gathered around the festal board at Washington's inaugural ball, the youngest of President Cleveland, four were wives of cabinet officers. These ladies, by virtue of their husbands' official social position when their husbands accepted the various portfolios of their respective departments. They appear to be a representative group of women on the whole. The country has heard less of that petty and disgraceful bickering about who shall go ahead of whom and which shall sit next the President than in former times, and usually gets to the public ear in such cases. The cabinet ladies have certainly done their duty. Even Mrs. President Cleveland's administration a social success. They seem to have been equal throughout to the arduous social duties required of them—duties so wearing that in the beginning, poor, weak Lent succumbed to the strain. They are courteous, dignified, handsomely dre and and hospitable. Our readers will be glad to see some of their portra ts.

By reason of seniority, the wife of Secretary of War Endicott is presented first. Her face is strong and cleancut. One would say it was the typical Boston face. Mrs. Endicott looks like the high-bred New England woman of long descent. She wore a red pompon in her handsome gray hair at the president's wedding. Mrs. Lamont is her husband's first cousin. Both are descendants of the Putnam family.

One effect of that wedding will be that no newspaper correspondent can no longer periodically inform the public who is the first lady in the land. We have a first lady in the land before, and one who, judging from her chin, will be able to keep Washington stiquette is solemnly peculiar, and, like the ways of Providence, hard to understand. Mrs. Lamont is of both sexes have it in their especial keeping, and believe the sun would not rise behind the dome of the Capitol if they did not prescribe which face the first lady in the land should put forward when she starts down stairs of a morning. It would give the country such a delightful thrill if some official lady should suddenly give all their fusty old notions a deliberate slap in the face, and do as she pleased.

Here we have a typical New York woman's face, and one may be pardoned for saying a very pretty one, too. Mrs. Manning is originally from Albany, a town which is the cream of its blue blood and old families as even Boston itself. It is not quite big enough to get into high life in New York city if one has money, but is most impossible for an outsider to do the same in Albany. The old Dutch element is stronger there than in the metropolis.

Mrs. Manning had not been long married to Daniel Manning, the secretary of the treasury. He was a widower before their marriage. The lady dresses richly and tastefully. Like most New York women she knows just the right thing to put on and how to wear it. Mrs. Manning is as handsome as her husband, who is noted for his personal appearance. Together they are a noble looking pair.

If an artist had sought the country over for the three types of women he has shown, the New England, the New York and the western, he could not have selected better specimens than Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. Manning and Mrs. Vilas. There is an earnest, kindly look in Mrs. Vilas' eyes that attracts one at once. She looks a hearty, pleasant woman, with character enough to impress herself upon any society. She and the postmaster general went to the capital from Madison, Wis., and dresses handsomely and is fond of blue go wns.

There is one, too, who, for a season, was associated with these ladies who stamped their personality upon Washington society more than any of them. That was Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland. She told herself bravely and well in Washington, and leaves it with the best wishes and the sincere good will of all the coun ty. She was not aggressive or did not attempt to revolutionize Washington ways.

She was a girl, modestly and with dignity, as mistress of the White House, holding still some what to the old ways and the old conventionalities which had been set her for a lifetime. One is only sorry that she yielded so far to the dictates of the old cats of both sexes at Washington as to allow them to put up and confine her artistic, short, curly hair and make it look as though it was "done up." Her own way of wearing it was her much better, and consequently looked better. She was a school teacher her friends called her "Rose" in Buffalo, and in spite of President Cleveland's mild statement that he invented the phrase "innocuous desuetude" himself, there will always be those who will believe Libbi did it.

Now that she resigns the sceptre of the White House to young Mrs. Cleveland, Miss Rose Elizabeth re ires to her home at Holland Patent, N. Y., to engage in literary work. She is a poet and writes much of the earnings of her book of essays. Success to her literary efforts, and we'll all read her move, the "Long Row," as soon as it appears.

It is said that she is to celebrate the completion of the sale of 80,000 copies of her first book of essays by a trip to Europe. If she does she will be doing something that not all of the ladies to her listen-ish her European trip may be delayed for some time.

ROOF LIFE IN NEW YORK.

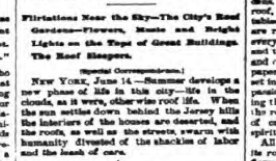
WHAT THE SUMMER BRINGS TO THE TOP IN THE METROPOLIS.

Flirtations Near the Sky—The City's Roof Gardens—Flowers, Music and Bright Lights on the Tops of Great Buildings. The Roof Sleepers.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, June 14.—Summer develops a new phase of life in this city—life in the clouds, as it were, other wise roof life. When the sun settles down behind the Jersey hills, the lower floors of houses are deserted, and the roofs, as well as the streets, swarm with humanity divested of the shackles of labor and the head of care.



CUPID NEAR THE SKY.

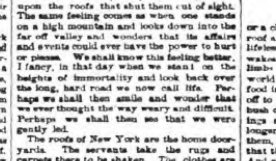
The enjoyment that country people find on grass-covered lawns and in lofty porches, the people of New York, those who cannot seek "the real, sure-enough country," find on the flat roofs of their dwellings. Better than from the street. A bird's-eye view of the city in the early evening would reveal many an interesting scene, with a background of chimneys, water tanks, skylights and telegraph wires. There Cupid disports himself, for, like death, he has all places and all seasons for his own. Thither Melancholy goes to brood on her sorrows, and the solitary retire to be still more solitary. And there, too, children laugh and romp and play.

As the heat of summer increases, the roofs are more and more utilized. It is a bit difficult to breathe inside, when canaries gasp and small dogs pant, the roof is the saving and comforting spot. Many families in New York are stifling that a breath from the bay may not be caught on the roof, and the heated body gradually cooled to an endurable temperature.

Aside from the physical comfort to be found on the roofs of this great city, an exhilaration of spirits is to be had there. The altitude gives a tinge of strength and power to the most despondent. The vexations, perplexit ss and even the sorrows of the day seem to drop away as they come upon the roofs that shut them out of sight. The same feeling comes as when one stands on a high mountain and looks down into the peace of valley and village. Then the cares and events could ever have the power to hurt or please. We shall know this feeling better, I fancy, in that day when we stand on the heights of immortality and look back over the long, hard road we now call life. Perhaps we shall then smile and wonder that we ever thought the way weary and difficult. Perhaps we shall then see that we were gently led.

The roofs of New York are the home dooryards. The servants take the rugs and carpets there to be shaken. The clothes are hung there to dry. The blankets and pillows are sunned there. The domestic economy of many a family has its origin there. In the flat buildings or apartment houses, the roofs are divided off into little yards, well furnished with all appurtenances for the laundress and the servants. Here the point of air and sunshine are needed to finish her work of purification. Each family has its day to fill the roof space with its linen. In the tenement houses, skylights are a fetish to all who want to make use of it.

Now here is a youth and his sweetheart. She lives in a cosy flat on the upper floor. Augustus and she slip away from the family, up the narrow back stairs, which in all nice apartment houses are kept as clean as a pin by the janitor and his assistants. There they sit and talk and plan, and exchange silly terms of endearment. They have something worth looking at, too, as the light comes on. They make a fine, serious illumination overhead; the moon, perchance, looks down and smiles in cold splendor, and the thousands and thousands of lights of the city sparkle and dance around them like monstrous jewels. Here and there a great white star among the countless yellow ones marks some park or great hotel, with its many-faceted lights. To the west lies the beautiful Hudson—or North river, as New Yorkers will call it—glimmers like a sheet of flame, lighted by the boats that glide on it like great water birds, and by the lights of the two great cities and the many towns that line its banks. And the long line of beautiful lights that stretches eastward from the southeast corner of the city. That is the great Brooklyn bridge. The waters of East river that flow beneath it are darker dark. It, too, reflects the lights of two great cities, and over its wide surface, on summer evenings, boats ablaze with light and merry with music move hither and yon.



A ROOF-GARDEN PARTY.

Augustus and his sweetheart will soon be able to see the triumphant torch of Bartholdi's bronze Goddess of Liberty, as she holds it aloft between sea and sky, thus lighting the way that the oppressed of other nations may here find home and shelter. And no matter in what part of the city's roofs Augustus and his sweetheart are located they cannot help but see the Casinos, the largest and most magnificent apartment house in the world. Looking at it from the top of a fifty story apartment house in tower story after story above one, into the very clouds. Its windows are glowing with light. Its roof garden is the highest in the city in this city of tall buildings, like a great continent. It is so high, so large, so massive, that it might well be mistaken for some monstrous castle stuck down among several hundred smaller ones. A light of New York from the roof at night is something long to be remembered and quite unequaled.

Some of the hotels have regular roof gardens. A tiled floor is put down over the roof, flowers are set out in pots and tubs, tables are permanently placed there, which are regularly dusted off and set in order every evening; electric lights hung there, and the roof garden is lighter than daylight and cooler than the seaside. Man read newspapers there, romantic girls devour novels set in stirring times, and learn the art of passion for wearing out their eyes and wasting their time in fancy work continue it on the roof. Sometimes there are social games of cards played there; sometimes very spiritied discussions go on.

All the world has heard of the Casino, with its roof garden, where, in the summer, among flowers, ladies and gentlemen promenade and eat and drink to the sound of delicious music, feeling that the real city is far, far below them, too far to remember it and its cares and worries. High as the Casino's roof is, the Normandie hotel, a square south of it, is still higher. It, too, has a roof garden, but one of a different sort.

Another and contrasting phase of roof life may be seen in the lower part of the city when the midsummer evening's work is done. The poor, the very poor, who are huddled together in hot and dingy rooms, take their mattresses and pillows to the roof and sleep there. Hundreds of them come to Brooklyn on the bridge at 4 o'clock in the morning can see the roof-sleepers spread out over the miles of flat roof like corpses after a battle. The sight is almost as pathetic. They are hard workers and ought to have the decent comforts of life. Instead, they have the burden of its discomforts. The roof-sleepers of New York are a sight to make an angel weep. Occasionally a man or a child, or perhaps a woman, rolls off the roof and is found the next morning with lifeless body and a broken skull. Then the weather changes, and they drag their wearied limbs below long, long are the prosperous heights of immunity and look back over the long, hard road we now call life. Perhaps we shall then smile and wonder that we ever thought the way weary and difficult. Perhaps we shall then see that we were gently led.

—Members of the Plainfield Turn Verein will give a exhibition of tumbling in Mt. Bethel 4 otbg the afternoon of July 5th.

—An adjourned meeting of the City Council will be held in the Council chamber on Monday evening at eight o'clock.

—The annual meeting of the Union and Middlesex Agricultural Society for the election of a Board of Directors will be held this evening.

—Work was engaged yesterday laying a new drain pipe to carry off surface water on Central avenue at the intersection of Third street.

—The regular Children's Day exercises will be held in the Dunellen Presbyterian church to-morrow and will include the anniversary of the Sunday School.

—The proceeds from the festival recently given by the colored people in Cutter's Hall was for the benefit of Thomas Martin and son for David Martin, his father, as stated.

—The number of school children in Somerville, according to the census just taken, places the number between the ages of five and fifteen years inclusive to be 881, an increase of 70 over last year.

—"Lips that touch wine shall never touch mine," is the motto adopted by an organization of New York girls, according to the New York Tribune. It has been suggested for the Plainfield Y.'s. A word to the Y.'s is sufficient.

—The stirrers at work on the wrecked Oregon have been very successful of late, and our lady readers will find at White & Son's some bargains which they secured at the under-writers' sale of wet goods. See their advertisement.

—A delegation from Granite Engine Co. No. 1 of this place went over to New Brunswick last evening as the guests of Liberty Hose Company of that city. The party were agreeably entertained and tendered a collation, returning home at an early hour this morning.

—Joseph Smith, a fifteen-year-old boy, employed on a farm at Bonehill, Hillsborough township, Somerset county, was lodged in the Somerville jail last night for maliciously assaulting a four-year-old daughter of a farmer in that place. The trial will come up at the October term of court.

—The horse which mysteriously disappeared from the pasture field of Mr. J. R. Voorhees at Bryan on the night of O'Brien's circus performance in the city, nearly two weeks ago, was found stabled on a farm near Bonehill-town, about eight miles to the north-ward of this city, yesterday, where the animal had wandered.

—A horse belonging to Jacob Krieny left standing in front of Spicer & Hubbard's mill on Madison avenue Thursday morning, ran away and emptied the contents of the wagon, a young son of Mr. Krieny being in the gutter at the corner of Sixth street and Madison avenue, fortunately without injury. The horse jumped a fence at that point and tore up loss than an acre of newly-planted garden seeds.

—There is now but little doubt that the borough of South Plainfield will adopt a system of water works, as a member of the Council remarked: "Oh, we shall have water works, but it's a matter of a little time." At the Council meeting on Tuesday two of the propositions from responsible parties to fulfill all the requirements of the borough authorities. The only question now is "which of the two companies shall be granted a franchise.

—For the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital, Mr. C. W. Schumann of 36 John street, New York, has generously given a handsome oil painting, recently finished, entitled his resignation, after a faithful service in that position for six years. The commissioners made the first applicant, A. G. Anderson, chief; L. M. Cullington, first assistant, and F. L. Day, the foreman of Somerville Engine Company No. 1, was appointed to control assistant chief.

CHURCH SERVICES.

JUSTICES' COURT NOTES.

The field case of Wentz vs. Naylor which was set down for to-day has been laid over for one week.

The writ in the case of Hansen vs. Udell, set down for to-day, was made returnable to Justice Nash on the 26th instant.

A writ served in an action upon contract brought by the New York and New Jersey Lead and Oil Company vs. Carpenter & Co., was made returnable to Justice Hetfield on the 26th instant.

The case of Smith vs. Mulford which was to have been tried by Justice Hugh Gaday has been adjourned for the second time until next Saturday, the health of the complainant not allowing his appearance in court.

Constable Smith on Thursday night served a writ on special process issued by Justice Hugh Gaday in the case before Justice Hetfield on Thursday morning next at 10 o'clock as defendant in an action brought by Michael Burke to recover $100 on the charge of damages sustained by the loss of said Burke's dog, alleged to have been shot by defendant without authority.

For the "Little Church Around the Corner."

The following explains itself:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 16, 1886.

CHARLES S. LEWIS, esq., treasurer "Church of the Heavenly Rest," Plainfield, N. J.

DEAR SIR:—We enclose check in full of the Amateur Dramatic entertainment given at Stillman Music Hall on the 27th ult., in aid of the "Little Church Around the Corner."

Our receipts were:

|---|---|
| From sale of tickets | $668.00 |
| " program advertisements | 25.00 |
| Gross Receipts | $678.10 |
| Deduct expenses as per Treas. report | $209.77 |

Net proceeds, check in balance.....$468.33

We trust that the amount remitted you may prove as great a blessing to the little church as we feel gratification in being thus able, by our united efforts and report rendered us, to instantly contribute to a cause, which several from every sectional tie, has become one of the evidences of the generous liberality of our friends and neighbors, to whom we return our hearty thanks.

We pray that the blessings of our heavenly Father upon the little church—the common Father upon the little church—the only of His great congregation—and wishing it the utmost prosperity, we remain

Sincerely yours,
JAMES D. GRIFFIN,
PHILIP B. MACHETTES,
JAMES M. WHITFIELD, JR.,
ROBERT RUSSELL,
D. EDGAR ANTHONY.

Unusually Addictive.

Ripans believes in the principle, when you have a good thing to sell the best way to do it is to let the public know it. He believes in but the finest and most desirable stock of dry goods, fancy goods, notions, etc., this side of New York, and he occupies in to-day's News two of its most valuable columns to inform the public of the fact. The house can be relied upon to fulfill all it promises, and for next week they are unusually attractive, and doubtless will bring the crowds to purchase to heretofore on such special occasions.

Somerset County Courts.

In the Somerset County Court of Special Sessions at Somerville recently Max Tonik was fined $10 and costs for assault and battery.

In the Court of Common Pleas the court revised the judgment in the case of John Wilson vs. Chas. Whitlock and gave Whitlock $67.50.

W. L. FORCE, P. M.

—According to the recent school census Rahway contains 1,788 school children, an increase over last year.

—The three Sunday schools connected with the Presbyterian church of Rahway have a total membership of 627 scholars.

—The street commissioner has given contract to a number of idlers who have been doing the work of cleaning the refuse from Park avenue. Yesterday afternoon he again accomplished the good work of sweeping that thoroughfare to the utter satisfaction of the residents.

—In presenting the annual report to the Board of County Freeholders recently Colonel Abbott of the Somerville Fire Department, tendered his resignation, after a faithful service in that position for six years. The commissioners made the first applicant, A. G. Anderson, chief; L. M. Cullington, first assistant, and F. L. Day, the foreman of Somerville Engine Company No. 1, was appointed to control assistant chief.

The Plainfield Cygnets.

The members, who last month served such an unqualified success in Music Hall in aid of the choir Church of the Heavenly Rest, last evening regularly organized as a Dramatic Association, and elected the following officers: President, Fred R. Gross; vice-president, Miss M. A. Bowen; secretary, Philip B. Machettes; treasurer, James M. Whitfield, jr.; editor, Mrs. D. Edgar Anthony; stage manager, D. Edgar Anthony; chairman executive committee, Robert Russell; chairman entertainment committee, Mrs. F. R. Gross; chairman dramatic committee, Miss E. S. Bowen.

The object of "The Cygnets" is to aid deserving charities in this locality. That the association will do this in a very material and effectual way is easily decided. The talk-treasured cygnet, which in the selection of a name has become the literal patronage of the club, alone has well earned its title of "cygnet," which is entirely discovered from the "ugly duckling" stage, by the fine, practical test of its charity, it will at its "singing" upon more than one of Plainfield's benefactions, and the fact that the club has such substantial aid may be hastened to the many deserving charities in our midst. Any one who remembers the splendid success of the efforts of those who made the recent affair such a success, will at once recognize the possibilities of the "Cygnets" in the future, and while wishing "The Cygnets" the long life of the patronage, congratulate Mr. Russell on his very happy selection.

Corset Rapids Consolidate.

The two bands heretofore existing in Plainfield and known as the Cadets and Corset bands have by consent of both been consolidated into one organization, and will hereafter be known as the Plainfield Corset Band with Prof. Nelson as leader and Mr. Wm. Hillyard, manager. Chas. H. Roper, secretary, and Chas. Gehm, treasurer.

Personals.

Dr. R. B. Matthews and Miss Sadie M. Ball, both of Round Brook, were married on Wednesday.

Mr. H. M. Burrows of North Plainfield will sail for European next week to be absent during the heated term.

Mr. A. C. Vail, daughter and infant son, of Madison avenue and Eighth street, are rusticating in the cool fish State.

William Backhaus, wife and child of West Front street, leave the city to-night for a ten days' sojourn in New York State.

A brother-in-law of Chief Sullivan, Eugene Morrile, a resident of Volusia county, Florida, is on a visit to the family of Mr. Saltzman here.

Mr. L. N. Crow and family of New York have rented for the summer the residence of Mr. L. L. Martin, corner Washington and Mercer avenues, North Plainfield.

Mr. J. K. Bonner, Fla., is the guest for a few days of Master James of Rockview avenue. He has a notice in our cent-a-word corner, which some may be interested in.

The will of the late Culver Barnslow, who died at Somerville recently, has been probated. There were no public bequests nor personal donations to individuals outside of the family.

Peter S. Bergen, the "silver-tongued orator of Somerset county," made an address before the Republican Club of Bonelle on Thursday night on the "Peculiarities of Great Men."

Miss Annie Lincoln of Park avenue, who has earned the best of musical reputation for her perfect skill in the arrangement of floral designs, is at present receiving orders for flowers to be used in connection with the commencement exercises. Miss Lincoln makes a specialty of cut flowers.

Post Commander Addis of this city on Thursday forwarded to Frank C. Cole of Jersey City the name of Capt. William Hand, 11th New Jersey Volunteers, to represent Winfield Scott Post at the erection of the monument in memory of the battle of Gettysburg, to take place with appropriate exercises at Gettysburg during July.

Cards have been received in this city announcing the marriage of Ethan Cutler, a former resident here, and Miss Bettie of Columbus, Ohio. The ceremony is to take place in Columbus on next Wednesday at noon. Mr. Cutler will be remembered by many as having been engaged in the book and store business on Park avenue some years ago, but later on he moved to Ohio where he has since been living.

The many of friends of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Rooney of Ninth street will regret to learn that they anticipate removing to Somerville Town. Mr. Rooney is to be employed in charge of a southern branch of the New York firm with whom he is employed. Mr. and Mrs. Rooney have been among the most active workers in the Congregational church here during the organization years ago, and the change will sustain a severe blow by their removal from the city.

Porter B. Miller of East Front street was on Friday a week ago taken down to his bed and his condition since has been such as to give his friends grave fears of fatal results. Typhoid fever has developed itself in the case, and this morning he was taken in a closed carriage to the residence of his brother at South Plains, in such a delicate condition that it was not thought at the time that he could survive the journey. Mr. Miller was formerly a resident of this city, owns Rink and is a brother in law of Mrs. J. M. Bettmen of Willow avenue, North Plainfield.

Miss Ida F., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor of Fifth street, and her uncle, Mr. George E., of near Mr. and Mrs. William Vandyke of West Front street, gave a lawn party yesterday afternoon on Mr. Van Syoh's couple of acres, at which upwards of one hundred young people were present and enjoyed themselves at various games. Refreshments were served and a most pleasant time spent. The lawn and grounds were thoroughly happy gathering it would be difficult to find. The affair concluded about seven o'clock. Mr. VanDyck, who is a member of one of the largest wholesale dry goods houses in the country, with large interests in New York and Brooklyn was present and took part with great zest, much to the delight of the young folks.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

A Plainfield Tourist at the Wing.

MANSION HOUSE SPRINGS, W. Va., June 4, '86.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—Now for the Yellowstone Region Park. We have a delightful location by cars along the Yellowstone River, 30 miles. The valley is beautiful, and we grow some of the finest cattle ranches we have ever seen, and by Devil's Slide, a wonderful curiosity, and the valley narrows down to the dimensions known as Devil's Gate, to the height of 11,120 feet. We arrive at Gardner, the terminus of the railroad, and thence by stage four miles, cross the line into the Park, thence up the wild Yellowstone four miles to the mammoth hot springs, and we put up at the Cottage Hotel in front of the mammoth springs, and scores of others beyond for three miles up that terrible, grand, beautiful, yet wonderful country that the hand would have moved forth in some other direction and leave a blank spot in the world's history, and yet inspire. Some of them are strong of sulphur and have a singular taste. Many of these springs are boiling hot, and flow for a distance of 100 feet, and then cool down to a comfortable temperature to appear again in other directions. They are wonderful to behold. The scenery about the park is beyond description, and is one to fill every heart and head to wonder and adore. The big hotels are not open and ready for visitors and will not open until the 15th, and then only the mammoth hotel will be open to any great distance, as we have to travel by carriage or saddle horse on our journey. We are now at the Mansion House Springs for the night, and will start early in the day. Hot, we are sure eight-nine and more as we stand on our porch at noon. The Mansion Springs are located at 4,200 feet above the level of the sea. Harris gurney 7,000, Fire Hole 7,182, Upper geyser 7,200, Yellowstone Lake 7,721, government headquarters 6,300, Mud Volcano 6,708, Devil's Slide 6,000, the highest pt. all, 11,120 feet. We expect to make 80 miles in length and probably 25 in width, and the whole of it is the finest pasture Territory and the balance in Wyoming, bordering on Idaho, and is to be reserved and forever held by the government. But I cannot give further particulars as our carriage is waiting at the door. TOURIST.

—The old North Plainfield public school house, owned by Lothian & Hatsmer, is being converted into two dwelling houses. Messrs T. Mair and P. G. Kline, having the contract for the work.

—Mrs. Fitzgerald appeared before City Judge Ulrich this morning to receive the sentence of the court which was reserved from last Saturday, on complaint of Mrs. Moran, who charged the defendant with having used foul and indecent language. In view of mitigating circumstances the Judge fined her three dollars, which she paid.

—Winfield Scott Post, No 72, G. A. R., of this place, accompanied by the Drum Corps, will leave the city on the 9 o'clock a. m. on Tuesday morning next for Trenton Junction, to attend the third summer encampment of Aaron Wilbur Post, No. 28, Department of New Jersey, at Lincoln Park, which began Sunday and will continue throughout next week.

—John O'Brien's circus, which exhibited here a week ago, has come to grief in several places of late. In Elizabeth one of the tents was broken and an aged lady and a little boy were precipitated to the ground, receiving severe injuries. In New Brunswick day one of the employes of the show was run over by the cars and has since died, and on Tuesday the circus was at Trenton and on the same day a saloon-keeper there brought an action in the Mercer court against Mr. O'Brien for damages, the woman's daughter, it is said, was struck by one of the attaches of the circus while passing near the tent, which is the cause of the suit.

—A short meeting of the new Republican club of this city was held in Association Hall Thursday evening. The club is to be known hereafter as the Republican Organization of the City of Plainfield." It is intended to issue and furnish the commodious room now occupied by the Dime Savings Institution on East Front street, the book intending to occupy. It is said, the same building recently occupied by Jersey Wells & Co., probably by August 1st next. The headquarters of the club are to be furnished with all the leading periodicals of the day, together with campaign literature, and the room is to be opened during the day and evening for the free access of the members of the club.

THE ISLANDS OF ST. VINCENT

The Mystery of Navigation—A Baron Lump of Lava—A Cottage.

After Lisbon came an illustration of the wonders of modern life. Our steamer with cut in two by a vessel that came out into the darkness and storm and ran to hit a narrow pass between the islands of St. Vincent, 1,600 miles away. On we went night and day, day and night, at the rate of 300 miles a day, pulling, rattling, till we passed the port of Timariffe, standing up in the clouds 12,000 feet. As I looked, I wrapped myself in my mountain hallcway up there was a naked, sharp peak towering above the clouds for a full mile into the clear sky. It seemed a bit of rock broken off from the earth, and that the long desired appear in the sky, above the clouds, beyond our reach.

But we did not, and steamed on and on, till by and by an officer said in a few minutes we shall see the islands and the passage between them to St. Vincent. Sure enough, soon his word came true. In my boyhood I wondered who guided the birds of passage as they went on over plain and forest, over lake and sea, and I used to lie in my hammock at the Cotopaxi shooting across the sea as if the sad a divine instinct in the grass. How can man can direct his course through so many days and nights over the sea, wide, trackless waste by the worlds above him and then refuse to direct his life by the divine instinct that is in his heart within him? Great is the mystery of navigation.

St. Vincent gave us the best orange we had ever eaten. Perhaps California has something in this way, but nothing after one has eaten from the trees of these tropical islands. We also received immense satchelfuls of fresh bananas, and other delicious adjuncts. This tropical fruit grows on the island of St. Anthony, which lies just to the northward of St. Vincent, and they from St. Vincent are ten miles away. Strange enough, St. Vincent is a barren lump of lava, where it never rains, or, if at all, not more than once a year. While on St. Anthony the rains are full and frequent. Above St. Vincent, on the side of the cinder, and therefore connected with the smelting business built a cottage as a summer resort. It has painted it white, and has painted the lava bed of sand around his house bright red. Mr. Carries arrived home from the steamer about 6 o'clock last evening, and complaining of being ill, immediately retired to his room. About 10 o'clock a physician was called coming from his room. Mrs. Hallowell, the landlady, went to the room, found Mr. Charles sitting in a chair with a bullet hole in his head. He died soon afterward. The cause of the act is unknown.

Knights of Labor to Politics.

MILWAUKEE, June 13.—Knights of Labor have called a state convention at Fort Howard and to nominate a full state ticket. A labor convention of

A HEARTY HANDSHAKE.

THE PRESIDENT GIVES A BRILLIANT GENERAL RECEPTION.

Thousands of People Flock to See the New Lady of the White House—Old and Young, High and Low, All Were There.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The public reception given last night by President and Mrs. Cleveland brought an immense crowd to the executive mansion. In point of numbers the reception to the Diplomatic corps has been given here. The decorations in the inspacious East room and in the parlors were, if anything, more elaborate than at Tuesday night's state reception. The chandeliers and plants and ferns adorned the lower rooms of the mansion as on that occasion; but the mantels had been banked with fresh flowers, while here and there additional flowers and potted plants had been placed in the windows and niches and corners of the public parlors. Before 8 o'clock the line, which the reception began, a long line of people, three or four abreast, extending out beyond the gates of the mansion grounds and for eleven Pennsylvania avenue, were waiting patiently for the time of admission. At 8 o'clock the doors of the mansion were opened, and the people began to pass into the President and his wife in the Blue room. Many on their way out loitered in the East room, which was soon densely thronged. There was a throng of people in the corridors—white and colored, old and young, men and women, girls and boys. Many people came in carriages, and the occupants, tired of waiting, took an opportunity to gain an entrance, turned away.

The night was cool, and the test of order, decorum and honor prevailing inside the mansion, notwithstanding the crush. When 11 o'clock came—the hour fixed for closing the reception—there was a large crowd yet waiting outside, and the President and Mrs. Cleveland graciously consented to remain and shake hands with all. It was within a few minutes of midnight when they shook hands with and bade the last visitor good night.

Four thousand people, perhaps more, paid their respects to the president and his wife during the night.

Furious Battle With Dirks.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 18.—A special from Braxton county to the Intelligencer of a desperate contest with dirk knives between Addison Dobridge and Thomas Jackson, two prominent young farmers of that county. Getting drunk at one of a number of dances and both men went heavily armed, both expecting a conflict. Last evening they met on the highway, and, meeting, renewed the quarrel, which finally resulted in a furious battle with dirk knives, lasting over a quarter of an hour. Dobridge was the fatally hurt, receiving over fifty wounds on his body and limbs. Jackson was also seriously injured, but managed to escape and is still at large.

Mixed on the Mixes.

MONTREAL, June 19.—Blood may be spilt over the $1,500 local bundle scandal. F. X. Archambault, Q. C., a deserter from the Liberal ranks who has given the story away, has been arrested in New Ulm on a charge of Senator Thibaudeau as a traitor and a liar. The two met at lunch yesterday. Blows were not struck, but words flowed. Both parties are bellicose, and coffee and pistols are spoken of. In the meantime a fare-thee-well dinner of three has been appointed to declare who is in the wrong. The case of proving where the money went still remains with Alderman Profontaine of this city.

With a Single Barreled Pistol.

JONESBORO, Ills., June 19.—John C. Ware, a resident of this place, shot his wife in the left side and then shot himself through the stomach. He died in a short time. His wife is still living, but there are little hopes of her recovery. Mr. Ware was about 70 years old, and Mrs. Ware 60. The shooting was done with a small single barreled pistol.

Sam Not Inviting.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—It is reported that Mr. Cable, author of, is tired of the climate, the people and the customs of that country, and is anxious to get back to Missouri again. There is said to be no particular wrangle for the office of minister to Siam.

CONDENSED NEWS.

J. W. Perkins, a Kentucky evangelist, has addressed a letter to Sam Jones in reference to statements made by the latter about Mormonism, in which he proposes to meet Mr. Jones and decide who has lied in a personal controversy by which it is assumed that one of the two has done so.

John Carroll, a son of a wealthy merchant of Ireland, loved Annie Sheehy, his father's servant girl. His was driven from home and disinherited. He came to America and earned his living as a laborer. Annie followed, and they were married at Castle Garden.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bond, of Jackson, Mich., has sustained life for ninety-one days on two spoonfuls of port wine a day. She is afflicted with internal cancer.

DIED WITH HIS SECRET.

No One Will Ever Know Why Thompson Killed His Wife.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Winfield S. Thompson, who shot his bride of a few days and then himself in the apartment house on Tuesday, at 7 p. m., died in the New York hospital just before 12 o'clock last night, after enduring three days between life and death. He did not rally.

There had been no hope for his recovery all day. Drs. Thomas and James, the house surgeons, remained as to the advisability of sounding the wound and removing the blood which had coagulated about the location.

It was decided that he was too weak to undergo the operation, and the idea was abandoned. The Rev. Dr. Thompson, who, with his son Vance, had been at the wounded man's bedside at intervals during the day, called again last evening at 8 o'clock and remained until 9 o'clock. He was requested to make a new statement of his views on the case for publication, but firmly declined to do so.

Winfield, his son, adhered to his determination to say nothing, and died with his secret.

DREW THE CAPITAL PRIZE.

An Illinois Farmer Successfully Played for a Section.

PEORIA, Ills., June 19.—A special from Galesburg, Ills., says Jacob Hickman, a well-to-do farmer of 70 years, living near here, has been victimized to the extent of $2,500. Two strangers, one representing himself to be a preacher, called recently into his good graces. The latter said he wanted to invest $40,000 in land for his sister. They induced the farmer to go with them to look at some land. On the road they met a confederate, who said he was an agent for the Louisville lottery. They finally induced the farmer to draw. He drew the first prize of $25,000, but had to put up 10 per cent. before he could get the prize. He drew in town. Drew $2,500 from the Second National bank and gave it to the lottery agent. On the way back the three confederates gave him the slip, since which time they have not been seen. The police are very reticent. A reward of $200 is offered for the capture of the swindlers.

South American Methods.

PANAMA, June 19.—A terrible affray has occurred at Bolago, the capital of the republic, between the guard of the palace and the members of one of the National battalions. One general, several officers and thirty soldiers were killed. The affray is stated to have arisen out of the old grudge between the guards and the soldiers, and without any political significance whatever.

A Footnote on the Equator.
She wears a great big bonnet
With a bunch of roses on it,
And 'tis tied beneath her chin
In a bow;
Ahh! she looks so shy,
I sometimes catch her eye,
As the restless crowd goes slowly
To and fro.

Now, do you think she'd care
If some day I should dare
To speak to her, and ask her
What's her name?
Alas! the fates, I'm afraid,
Should never bend my suit—
For she's nothing but a picture
In a frame.

O cow, where'er you browse for food,
Assume a bolder attitude,
And turn thy nook and dreamy eye
Triumphantly to scorn sky!

At lemon maid switch not thy tail,
Nor overturn in rage the pail;
In short, by action dignified,
Display to man thy proper pride.

Graze on, O cow, and chew and dream!
The milk you give will give its cream;
The cream to churn
Which gives the butter in its turn.

To market will the butter go
In golden balls, in tier and row;
No oil, nor grease, called butterine,
Shall in thy borrowed garb be seen.

Feel on, O cow, in sunshine bask,
Thou hast a mission in this task;
And artful man shall not compete
With thee. Thy victory is complete!

Couldn't See His Faults.
He was a most emphatic, wilful, stiff-necked, systematic, mental, spiritual, erratic and a most degraded sinner;
He was given to frivolity and most unseemly jollity, and had not single quality as a redeeming feature.

He was full of injudiciousness and insolent officiousness, and counted kinds of villainy defined his reputation.
A supine imbecility, a lack of strong virility, a monstrous inclivity and moral obfuscation.

Yet his steps were all attended, all his freaks and whims defended by a retinue of splendid, rapt extravagant existers.
For this vicious, malicious, cracked, irascible old crooker was a rich and bonded broker and was worth a million dollars!
—S. W. Foss in Lynn Union.

The Man Who Advertises.
He's just a bit ecstatic, but not a whit rheumatic, and he does it up emphatic when he sends a business "ad."

And he cuts a knowing caper, saying: "Put it in the paper, sit top of highest column, if you want to make me glad.

Start it with your biggest letter, cut it up a little better, than that other fellow's ad. across the way.

I want it fixed up nice at the cheapest kind of prices, or I'm going to see if advertising doesn't pay."

Then the paper man sits down and scratches on his crown, and hits his scalp a fearful kind of thack.

He's thinking as he's winking: "Were columns made all top my business I could drop, be fat and sleek and rich as any man."
—S. W. Foss in Lynn Union.

He Called Not It Came.
He severely played Abigail's guitar
To serenade
The dearest one to him by far—
A little maid.
Above his head a winking star
In cloud ritz played.

He sang a song ne'er heard before,
In accents mild;
He notes a tender cadence bore—
Love melted;
There were some neighbors lived next door;
And they were wild.

The cold moon 'neath a cloud had fled,
So dark and thick;
"Oh, come," he sang, "and we will wed;
Come to me quick!"
And then it came and struck his head;
It was a brick!

CHICAGO'S "FLYING MARIA" A TERROR TO EVILDOERS.

Grand Values of the Police Telegraph and Patrol Wagon System During Riots. "The Hurry's" First Appearance in a Tough-Infested District.

Special Correspondence.
CHICAGO, June 12.—"What would we do without our telegraph?" Chicago police officers almost hourly asked one another during the late labor and Anarchist troubles. Without the patrol wagons, they declared, the force would be fully one-half of the efficiency which in those trying times made it the pride and hope of citizens and gave to the police organization the world-wide fame. Without the wagons such rapid movement into districts wherein the danger signal had come, such prompt massing of forces, such quick and safe expeditious removal of the dead and wounded bomb victims in Haymarket square would have been impossible. Moreover, the lives and general efficiency of every officer in the city was increased by the general knowledge of the lawless or idle crowds that the police patrol was ready, at their every beck and call, hundreds more were virtually at his back, ready to spring to his assistance almost with the speed of the wind.

"THE HURRY" RESPONDING TO A CALL.

"I can safely say," remarked Chief of Police Eberoll the other day, "that but for the patrol wagon system Chicago would have suffered the loss of millions of property and hundreds of lives during the late troubles. No police force that ever patrolled a city could handle such mobs as we had to deal with, and keep the destruction of property and loss of life within reasonable limits, were it not for the aid of this system. Our aim was all the time to suppress every outbreak in its beginning. We never permitted a mob to get the upper hand of an officer or a squad. We maintained the dignity of the law and the supremacy of the force, even at the trouble of sending a half dozen men to the assistance of scenes of slight disturbance. We handled our forces upon the theory that every outbreak was like the beginning of a fire. In itself it might be insignificant, but allowed to gain headway, and obtain a foothold over the officers on the ground, there is no telling what conflagration might follow. Our aim was to cover this city as an Irishman's stick covers the ground in front of him when in search. We never have covered Chicago with our clubs in time by long days without the aid of the trouble makers but could subdue their ability to maintain order everywhere in the city, riots would have followed immediately."

Chief Eberoll spoke knowingly, and in his comparison of the mob danger to the danger of fire he hit upon the very fact which gave birth to the police patrol and telegraph system which has been adopted in nearly all of the large cities of the country. Ten years ago the Chicago fire department was loitering for a half hour in its fire alarm telegraph office at Chicago's old city hall. Its system was a replica of the fire alarms, noted the perfection of the system between signal boxes and engine houses, scratched his head a few times and then blurted out:

"Hey, Barrett, why can't we get up a thing like this for the police department?"

That was the germ of the idea—the beginning of a great work. It was said that chief of detectives—Bonfield now—and Electrician Barrett put their heads together. Years passed. Chicago was dared up for cash, and official jealousies were never quiet, and aldermen were always cold. But the good idea did not die.

The telegraph system of the force that surrounding the Twelfth street police station. Gangs of hoodlums and thieves amused themselves by laying in ambush for their enemies in the blind alleys and dark streets. Joyed the rare sport of using a policeman's star for a sharp-shooting target. Whenever a Twelfth street officer, on his midnight round, came upon a gang of roughs it became second nature for him to spit on his hands, take a firm grip on his night stick and wade in. Many a fight of this kind would be left for his widow to weep over. When the telegraph system was started, and the start was made largely by contributions from the saloon-keepers and gamblers and by stealing wire and instruments, the first boxes were located in this region where the police force was so poor and the fighting so frequent. The very first night a gang of roughs lay waiting in a dark alley for an officer, and listening to thump the life out of him, until they should hear the click of the box. Suddenly turned in an alarm and walked toward his foe with club uplifted. In two minutes the hoodlums were piling upon him, and were just beginning to enjoy themselves when there was a sharp clang, clang, clang, a rattle of wheels and hoofs, a cloud of blue coats, a dozen clubs flashing angrily, and before the surprised hoodlums knew what was the matter with them they were lying handcuffed in the bottom of Chicago's first patrol wagon, and being whirled away to safe cage from the beginning. In six months the Twelfth street district had been cleaned out. The wagon, which the police nicknamed "The Flying Maria," and finally "The Hurry," was too much for them.

"The Hurry," as it is still called in some localities in Chicago, began its work exceptionally well and good luck has been with it ever since. In the wagon on the first raid were Capt. Doyle and Lieutenant, both of whom have been given to the honor of chief of police, and Lieut. Bonfield, the famous mob fighter of the Chicago force. Mother Jones, the detective, who terrorized, or at least kept in the shade, the system, also was in the wagon and for a time was the only female member of the force. Mother Jones, the American knight, died of Cook county, without the wagon which he directed carried in 200 officers and officials, headed by the bands of Anarchy. The fame of the new system has rapidly spread. Though only four years have elapsed since the first rude fire telegraph was established, the patrol has been adopted in St. Louis, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, Detroit, Baltimore, Washington and Boston. Last year alone a delegation from Paris, France, was here to make an investigation of the system. Boston has just taken the plunge, and will have in operation by Jan. 1, 1887, a splendid system.

What is this police patrol and telegraph system? It is a fire department for the detection of crimes. It is a device by which the police of a city can bring all their backers-up almost within instant communication with their superiors, and by which the commanding officers are able to send responsible police officers to any point of knowledge of the crook to be done and the number of men needed, to any part of the field. In Chicago the system is divided into 19 districts. There are upon the street corners in this city 250 meter or signal boxes, in which are located 19 different signals, one for each district. The citizen's key cannot be removed until an officer arrives to release it from the trap lock, and as all keys given out are numbered and registered at headquarters there is no effective check upon letting. Inside the entry box is an iron box containing a telephone and electric signal clock. Every officer on the force knows how to use this box, and may send in an alarm by simply pulling the projecting lever. This done, he has but to remain near the box and wait until he is gladdened by the ding, dang of the gong with which the patrol wagon heralds its swift approach. A pull of the hook reverses the engine and it stops. Before responding the telephone the patrolman may summon all of the twenty wagons belonging to the department, which is done in such cases, should the emergency require so many. The dial never needs time and trouble, for by setting the hand at the proper point on the dial the wagon may simultaneously with the transmission of the alarm itself send information as to the character of the trouble. For a single drunk the horses whip up the wagons are not urged to breakneck speed, while in case of riot officers are piled up on the way and all possible haste made in reaching the seat of disturbance.

In each patrol wagon are handcuffs, coverings, clubs, blankets, stretchers, canvas, ropes, etc. There is also room for the men and the officer in charge of wagons have been so often and so carefully instructed by the department surgeon that they are now quite familiar with the use of the stretcher. These wagons are pretty famous for their convenience and speed. They often travel a mile in five minutes, and it is said that when all the wagons in the city may be manned at one point.

If the telegraph and wagon system has been found so useful in the cities of Chicago it is because it has already been a greater blessing to society than its fond inventors ever dreamed of. In Chicago last year the officers in charge of the patrol wagons, over the department telephone received 1,600,000 reports from patrolmen on duty. The patrol wagons answered 300 alarms a week, and during the year traveled 65,000 miles.

But the system, admirable though it is, is not yet complete, even in Chicago. Had the late Haymarket meeting been held in the usual quiet, when there were five reserve officers at the station house, many moments must have passed before reserves could be collected in numbers small reach the scene. Each officer patrolling a beat is required to report by telephone every half hour, but in the meantime a bomb might reach the crowd

JOTTINGS.

—The City Council will meet in adjourned session at eight o'clock this evening.

—The Linden Reformed church held its anniversary exercises in the church yesterday.

—The summer schedule of trains on the Long Branch Division of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad went into effect yesterday.

—An action of contract on demand brought by Cramer vs. Udahl, in which a debt of $25 was incurred, will come up for trial before Justice Nash on the 30th instant.

—On Saturday afternoon a little girl came near being run over near the post office by a careless rider of a bicycle. She fell to the pavement in her fright, but was not injured.

—A couple of toy balloons passed over the city on Saturday evening going to the north, ward, and were watched by a large number of people horseback until they were lost in the distance.

—Rev. A. R. Dills, jr., preached a short and effective sermon in the Park Avenue Baptist Church last evening, at the conclusion of which seven candidates presented themselves for baptism.

—A festival, the proceeds of which are to be used in connection with the furnishing of the Eagle Rock & Ladder Company's new truck house at Metuchen was held in that place recently and netted about $150.

—Tickets have been issued for the reception of Hon. Hugh Hastings, of class '66 tendered them by the class of '84 and '85 to be given in Assembly Hall from 10 p. m., to one a. m. on the evening of Thursday, June 24.

—Special Policeman Scribner on Saturday night arrested W. S. Holmes, an old offender, for being drunk and disorderly. The City Judge suspended a two months' sentence, provided he would leave this section of the country before ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

—Constable Smith on Saturday night served a notice on Mrs. McCarty and Richard O'Neil, two of the heirs to the late Lawrence O'Neil, to appear before the Orphan's Court in Elizabeth on Wednesday, the 30th inst., and show cause why James O'Neil should not be appointed administrator of his father's estate.

—Contractor Sattler is erecting a dwelling house on Carlton avenue between Broadway and Putnam avenue. During Saturday night or Sunday some miscreant unknown perpetrated depredations about the building to the amount of about $15, by tearing down a part of a brick partition and depositing the bricks in the cellar.

—Lewis Hunt Barnes, the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Barnes, of Washington avenue opposite Prospect street, North Plainfield, fell from a cherry tree on the Hagaman Villa, a distance of about twenty feet, Saturday morning about nine o'clock, striking upon a pile of stones and fracturing his collar bone, with which fracture he is laid up under medical attendance.

—A temperance conference of the Catholic and Protestant temperance organizations of Elizabeth was held in the Red Ribbon parlors at that place on Saturday evening. The object of the conference was to get the various temperance organizations to unite in a crusade against the liquor traffic. The pastors of the churches will co-operate.

—Constable Moffett on Saturday night brought to a close the sheriff's sale of the furniture formerly in the City Hotel, which was in progress for two days previous at Laing's Hall. The sale is said to have been the most successful one ever given in Plainfield. Throughout the sale the bidding was more or less spirited, and most of the articles went at good prices. [illegible]

—The success of the entertainment and reception of the "Ts" having been largely due to the kindness and untiring efforts of Robert N. Martin, through whom the services of the celebrated Benedict Quartette of Amphion Society, New York, were secured, the "Ts" desire to give public acknowledgment thereof hereby. The names of the quartette is a sufficient eulogy of the delightful character of the music rendered.

THE HISTORY OF AN UNSAVORY CASE.

The Sale of the City Hotel Furniture by Sheriff Stiles.—How $6,500 Dwindled to Nothing.

Justin McCarty of New York was an Irishman who by industry and thrift had accumulated $6,500, which at the time of his death a few years ago, was on deposit in New York banks. Ellen McCarty was a servant in the family of Justin McCarty. She was of five children, stepsmand brothers, deceased being one of the number, Maurice Daly and Ellen McCarty had both been born in the same county in Ireland, and when her brother died, Maurice became administrator, and Ellen administratrix, jointly, of his estate.

Later, Ellen was induced to loan the $6,500 to furnish the City Hotel in this city, and Daly promised to secure her by a chattel mortgage on the furniture. Maurice came to this city about three years ago, and opened the hotel at a rental of $2,000 per year from William F. Moore, the owner. About a year afterward suit was begun against Maurice for the recovery of a claim of a large sum of money. It is said that Maurice, the debtor, but Maurice defeated it on the ground that he had sold the furniture to his brother-in-law, Daly, his son being the real owner of the hotel furniture. It was urged that Maurice had taken out a license in his own name, but this, it is claimed, that he only had the bar from his son. Then Maurice was arrested for selling liquor on Sunday, but upon swearing that he was not in the hotel at all at the time the offense was committed, and corroborating the oath upon similar testimony under oath of his bartender, a man named Kelly, now bartender at Parce's Hotel, the jury acquitted him.

It was quietly understood, however, that the suit in Sunday selling was pushed by a New York carpenter, who had a claim against Maurice of $300. It was thought that Maurice would not resist the trade responsibility by claiming that he did not own the bar, only the hotel, it never being supposed that he would dare to deny the fact of the selling as he did.

The matter was then brought to the notice of the grand jury, which indicted both Maurice and his barkeeper for perjury, on the testimony of six witnesses of the sale of the liquor.

It appears that the mortgage, which had been given to Ellen was not forthcoming, and early last year she is reported to have become uneasy about the money on account of the delay in the suits, and became of her brothers and sisters demanding their share, which she was unable to give, Maurice having it all, and they being satisfied that everything was not right.

A payment of $4,000 is said to have been made on the time to pacify her and show that everything was straight, but shortly afterwards Maurice, who is an ignorant woman, was induced to lose the sum, Dennis Daly, a son of Maurice, to invest in the City Hotel livery stable. The venture was not a success and a few months later there was a fire there, supposed to have been of incendiary origin, and many of the stables were destroyed, thanks to the promptness of our firemen. The insurance company repaired the stables, and everything was running smoothly again when the fire came. ### MR. ROSS' LITTLE DOMAIN.

A Petition for a Telegraph Cable—An Interesting Community.

The English government was considerably surprised a while ago to receive an application from the little group of islands in the Indian ocean, known as the Keeling islands, for a telegraph cable to connect them with Batavia. These islands are so small that during the three cyclone months the heavy surf beating upon their southern shore shakes them to their very centre. The twenty coral islands form a circle within which is a lagoon. Darwin visited them during the voyage of the Beagle, and they furnished him with his typical example of a coral atoll. They have only 300 inhabitants, including one English family of the name of Ross, who have lived there for forty years, and have grown rich in their little work.

The English were both amused and interested by this petition, coming from these little specks in the ocean, to be joined to the great world by an electric cable. They decided to send a vessel to visit Mr. E. Birch to report on the islands and their inhabitants. In the report he has brought back he says that the wife of Mallys and Japanese are very industrious, and that they live happily under the rule of Mr Ross, who is also the white man who in Indian and Pacific islands is almost absolute monarch of his little domain.

Mr. Ross said, in behalf of his plaintive cable petition, that during the past three years' had exported over $140,000 worth of copra, to make which they had raised 11,000 cocoanut trees, not to exceed. They were large importers of provisions and clothing, the most of their imports coming from Batavia, although in 1885 they imported from the world at large to the London firm. He thought it about time that his enterprising community had improved facilities for doing business, even though their island is only 12 miles long, and the smaller ones are merely mounds of coral sand.

What reply his petition will elicit has not yet been announced. These islands were visited a while ago by Mr. Forbes, the naturalist, and one of the most interesting portions of his book relates to the many additions that have been made to the flora of the islands since Darwin was able to count only twenty-five or thirty species, over fifty years ago.—New York Times.

The Coming Yeme of the Future.

The imagination of a 5-year-old boy is often a stupendous thing. One can't help wondering how much a child of that age believes of his own big stories. Take one for example: "I went out in de front yard dis morning," said Benny, "and I saw 'nawful big horse tie in a tree' and I looked a-gain and I shouted it out to de house and my mama picked de feddars off it and cooked it for breakit."—Boston Record

TWO OF A KIND

CLUTCH IN MID-STREAM AND SINK TOGETHER.

A Sensational Ending of the Career of Two Criminals—Each Afraid to Trust the Other—Once Partners in Crime, Justice Self-Imposed.

DETROIT, June 21.—"Turf" Grogan, of Boston, and "Jakey" Bienheim, o England, two notorious thieves, came to Detroit a few months ago. They had been concerned in a bank robbery at Hamilton, Ills., and as they were wanted for a crime committed in London, Ont., they did not dare cross over into Canada. Grogan had been in prison in Boston, and Bienheim, although many times arrested, had never been convicted. About three weeks ago the pair quarreled over a woman, and Bienheim was pounded by Grogan until he was unconscious. The former then swore to be revenged, and Grogan, knowing the full extent of his former companion's villainy, decided to beat him. He found himself so closely watched in Windsor that he determined to cross to this side. Meanwhile Bienheim had got into trouble. Saturday afternoon he met a well-known ball enthusiast, and fleeced him out of $700. The Chicagoan pointed Bienheim out to a Pinkerton detective, who accompanied the Chicagoan to Windsor. Inspector Dell and Bienheim, fearing arrest, resolved to cross to Windsor.

By a singular chance the two villains met in mid-stream. The meeting and the struggle that followed were witnessed only by the Pinkerton detective who was "shadowing" Bienheim. As soon as Grogan recognized Bienheim met a boat containing a single person, who hailed him. The stranger was Grogan, who, as he drew near and recognized Bienheim, ordered him to stop. Instead, he put on more steam. He pulled alongside, therefore, and struck at Bienheim with an oar before the latter recognized him. Bienheim, who could get his own oars from the locks, Bienheim saw that it was to be a battle to the death, and boarded "Turf's" boat. The two struggled for possession of the oar which Grogan had, and finally went overboard. They struggled desperately with one another in the water until, locked in one another's embrace, down to the bottom and were drowned just as the detective's boat was coming to their rescue.

David Davis' Days Numbered.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., June 21.—Ex-Vice-President David Davis is slowly but surely sinking. "A point has been reached in his illness," said his physician, "when it is thought best by his family to give the public a statement of the gravity of his condition. Mr. Davis is very ill indeed, and will be but little less than a miracle if he should rally." Mr. Davis was taken ill at Chicago on March 21 with a carbuncle on his shoulder. Up for two weeks ago, he remained, though at times alarming, seemed to be one of improvement. Two weeks ago, however, his physician, Dr. Wyman, of Chicago, was summoned. For some weeks, too, his sufferings have been intensified and complicated by Bright's disease of the kidneys. Several consultations have been summoned for a consultation to-day.

Coal Burned in Bulk.

TROY, N. Y., June 21.—Stone & Crandell's large coal elevator, on Green island, was destroyed by fire last night. After being drawn from the canal boats by steam and soon the four large buildings which comprised the elevator were burning fiercely, and the firemen being unable to check the flames, the whole was destroyed. The large frame barn near this elevator also caught fire, but the twenty horses were rescued. There were 30,000 tons of coal in the elevator, which ignited. The loss will be about $7,000. The fire was the work of an incendiary. A short time ago an attempt was made to burn the flour mills in this city.

Robbers in a Church.

RAHWAY, N. J., June 21.—This city was visited between 1 and 3 o'clock yesterday morning by a gang of burglars, who made a raid on the Catholic church, robbing it of its communion service, silver candlesticks, golden chalice, and other articles, although many times arrested, had never been convicted. About three weeks ago the pair quarreled over a woman, and Bienheim was pounded by Grogan until he was unconscious. No leads the police think they have a clew in the suspicious actions of a man and woman who were noticed about the neighborhood with a horse and buggy late Saturday night.

"Trotting the Old Camp Ground."

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., June 21.—The state camp at Peekskill yesterday the 13th remember regiment N ding in the afternoon. The first call for revalle was heard at 4:45 a. m., the revalle was sounded at 5 a. m., and the Assembly immediately after. At about 10:30 the different companies assembled under the trees for divine service, when Chaplain Peck of the regiment delivered a sermon on "Moral and Brute Courage." There were about 150 men in the different companies who stayed over night at the Church of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin.

To Picture Niagara Falls.

BUFFALO, June 21.—Paul Philippoteaux, the French scenic painter, has been engaged by Buffalo capitalists to paint Niagara Falls on the scale of Pool Court Harbor. Mr. Philippoteaux will remain a week [illegible] a thorough inspection of the Falls and points of interest on the river, and has agreed to furnish the painting in two years from date. It will cover about 40,000 square feet and will cost $50,000. Mr. Philippoteaux will remain at the Falls for a month or two, finishing the work in New York. The painting will then exhibit the Niagara permanently in London.

After Hanging Five Days.

FORT WORTH, Texas, June 21.—News received from Rock Springs, Comanche county, where Weaver [illegible] was hanged on the 11th inst., for the murder of Sheriff Baker, states that an inquest was held yesterday. The body was cut down and buried after hanging five days. John Morris, the man who murdered Sheriff Baker, has been released on a recognizance for the murder. The community is divided in regard to the matter. A Druid, a strong faction being in favor of lynching Morris.

Too Eager to Get Off.

NEW YORK, June 21.—While the propeller Bay Ridge, with the J. F. Oddenbrg association, of New York, on board, was making a landing at Pier No. 1, Fort Hamilton, on the west shore of Staten Island, John Hess, 30 years old, attempted to jump from the steamer to the wharf. He missed his footing, fell overboard, and was drowned. Efforts were made to recover the body without success.

A CHAPTER OF CRIME.

A YOUNG WOMAN ARRESTED ON HER WAY WEST.

Miss Maggie McDermott Called on to Explain What She Did With a Bottle of Arsenic—A Sunday Night Tragedy in New York.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., June 21.—In response to a telegram from Beverly N. J., Miss Maggie McDermott was arrested here and committed to await the arrival of an officer from Beverly, where she is wanted on a charge of having poisoned Mrs. Lobel Lounger, who died recently. The young woman took her arrest quietly, claiming that the whole thing was a mistake. She says that Mrs. Lounger was ill for about a year and a half ago, when she went west, and resided at Evanston, Ill. There she acted as nurse for Mrs. Dwight Goodrich, and subsequently accompanied to Beverly, N. J. A month after arriving there she entered the service of the Lounger family, Mrs. Lounger being at the time under the care of Dr. Taylor, the attending physician. Dr. Taylor, who was called on the 4th inst., prescribed a preparation of arsenic for his patient. The nurse was directed to administer it to relieve the skin eruptions of the patient. Vomiting having resulted, the doctor some days later ordered the medicine stopped. The nurse packed up what she had left during the greater part of a week. At the suggestion of the nurse a home-pathic doctor was called in, after which the patient stopped taking the medicine. She is now improving.

The prisoner states further that she then began using the medicine herself, and had taken a dose before leaving the house for a drug store of Dr. Taylor, the dismissed physician. Her motive in using the medicine was to improve her complexion. The doctor found a bottle with arsenic in the store, where it had been left to be refilled, and retained it, afterward going to the Lounger residence, where he demanded of Miss McDermott if she had given all that medicine to the sick woman. She replied that she certainly did not, as, knowing the delicate condition of the patient, she was well aware that it would have killed her. Afterward she asked Mr. Lounger if he imagined that she had given all that medicine to his wife. He replied that he thought she might have such a thing, leaving her under the impression that he did not believe she had. The nurse then told him that she proposed to leave, thinking probably that a change of nurses and physicians would be beneficial

On Thursday morning, when Miss McDermott left, the sick woman seemed to be better than for some days past, but she died soon afterward. After stopping a short time with a sister in Philadelphia, the accused woman reached here on Thursday morning. She is a very pretty blonde, and it will be only wrong she is guilty of in the folly of having used the arsenic herself. She claims that she liked the invalid lady very well, but that she detested the husband. She attributes the origin of the charge against her to Dr. Taylor, whom she suspects of a desire to get control of the practice of the fashionable people in this city. Dr. Taylor was instrumental in having the change of physicians made in the Lounger family. The young woman has some prominent relatives who are highly respected in this locality. She expresses her entire willingness to go back to New Jersey without a requisition. She has strongly impressed all who have talked with her with the innocence of the serious crime charged against her.

A SUNDAY SPREE

Winds Up With a Murder—The Victim and His Slayer.

NEW YORK, June 21.—People in the vicinity of Thirtieth street and Broadway at 8 o'clock last night were attracted by sounds of a scuffle and fall. Immediately afterward a man rushed out of a hallway and ran rapidly along Thirtieth street towards Fifth avenue. Policemen Johnson and Gallagher entered the hall and found Thomas Flannigan lying in the unconscious on the floor with blood oozing from a wound in his left thread. He was removed to the station house and an ambulance summoned from the New York hospital, whither he was removed. He died at 1 o'clock this morning. Patrolmen Hogan pursued the man who fled from the hallway, and succeeded in capturing him at the corner of Fifth avenue and Thirtieth street, and returned with him to the station house, where he gave his name as Charles H. Wilson, and denied all knowledge of the stabbing. Flannigan had not yet been removed to the hospital and his statement could not be obtained. Wilson was taken before him and identified as his assailant. The prisoner then admitted the assault, urging the excuse that some men were beating him and he struck blindly in self defense. He refused to give his residence, and was locked up.

Among the contents of an ordinary memorandum book taken from the self-styled Wilson was a newspaper clipping relating the proceedings before the supreme court, Brooklyn, in the case of the punishment of Henry W. Coles for contempt in failing to pay alimony to his wife, Emma L. Coles, upon a decree of divorce granted last November. The clipping further stated that Coles was employed as a bookkeeper by H. B. Claflin & Co.

Flannigan leaves a wife and six children. He is highly spoken of by his employers, with whom he worked for the past six years, and was generally regarded as a sober, peaceable man.

Among the things found on the prisoner's person was a piece of black bone, shaped like the handle of a knife, and broken at one end. Policeman Jagels remembered to have heard a noise while chasing the prisoner through Thirtieth street like the breaking of bone. He went back and found the [illegible] revealed the blood-stained blade of an ivory [illegible] terminating at one end with a piece of bone similar to that in the handle of the knife found in the prisoner's possession. On the handle of the eraser were rudely engraved the letters H. W. C.

Nurserymen Want Cheaper Postage.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—A committee appointed by the American Association of Nurserymen, Seedsmen and Florists met here to-day, have formulated a plan by which they will endeavor, through farmers' clubs, agricultural and horticultural societies, to have such amendments made to the postage-secret for each two ounces—on plants, seeds, cuttings, etc. The committee have had a number of interviews with congressmen, and have found that the congressional department exists in favor of the reduction. All persons interested in the matter will be appointed to by the committee to use their influence in behalf of the proposition.

A Political Leader Dead.

COLONEL BUCKYE, La., June 21.—Col. John W. Caughman died at his home in this city from stricture of the bowels. He was editor of The Newspaper from 1866 to 1884, and was county treasurer four years and for eight years United States marshal. He was a recognized party leader in state and national politics, and was elected mayor of Council Bluffs last spring. He also served two terms in the Nebraska legislature.

Perished in the Flames.

PARIS, June 21.—The residence of a timber merchant at Dessandre was set on fire and burned to the ground. Five persons perished in the flames.

IN ERVIEWING INTERVIEWERS.

Correspondents Before the Senate Committee on Public Lands.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The Senate committee on public lands had another meeting to-day for the purpose of hearing additional testimony from some newspaper correspondents who testified in February last that Secretary General Dement, of Utah, had stated to them that certain United States Senators were being controlled by land and Mormon rings in Utah. Those who testified to-day were Messrs. John A. Corwin and Fred Perry Powers, of The Chicago Times; George B. Bain, of The New York World, and W. E. Curtis, of The Chicago Inter-Ocean. Each reaffirmed his former statement, which has been denied by Dement, whose nomination is yet before the senate for confirmation, and who alleges that the newspaper correspondents conspired to defeat his nomination. Mr. Bain refuted the charge that there was a conspiracy, stating that he did not know Dement or Corwin, Curtis or Powers, or any of the correspondents before he was directed by The New York World to interview Dement. He said he told the latter's first interview slandering the senators was published.

"Dement impressed me," said Bain, "as a man seeking newspaper notoriety. He asked me, during our interview, if I would not work into my dispatch some complimentary remarks about Lake newspaper about himself and the administration of his office. I told him that I could not, as I just had an interview with Land Commissioner Sparks, who had lauded him highly and paid him a greater compliment, and that I had intended to publish that. This seemed to please Dement immensely, and he asked me if I would not incorporate some complimentary observations about Sparks as coming from him (Dement). I told him that Dement was trying to organize a little mutual admiration society through me and I told him that I could not publish it.

Illinois People Make a Modest Claim on New York.

CHICAGO, June 21.—A local paper says that a valuable estate, said to be worth from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000, is just now being made the subject of investigation, and if claims of alleged heirs can be established several millions of dollars are likely to come into possession of Illinois claimants. The property is partly located around Mercer street, in New York, covering a block between Broadway and the Jersey shore. It was owned by one Moses Mercer, a native of Scotland, about the year 1700, and was leased for ninety-nine years. The last of the leasehold terms has also been long since entered suit for its recovery. William H. Vanderbilt came into possession by lease or otherwise of a part of the property, and some time ago, it was claimed, filed a bill to quiet title, and both the lower and upper courts decided that title was vested in Mercer's heirs.

P. F. Mast, of Springfield, O., has a power of attorney to act for the heirs, getting 10 per cent. of all he recovers, and has retained distinguished counsel in defense of the original Mercers in this country, and is confident he has a good case.

Connecticut Apple Crop.

NORWICH, June 21.—Never before was there such a year for apples as 1885. In this state fine winter apples were sold last fall for forty cents a bushel. There were so many that there were not barrels enough to pack them in. Thousands of bushels rotted on the ground. The Connecticut cellars still are filled with them, and there is no sale for them. Many farmers are cutting them to the mills and grinding cider to dump into the river, or use in their land, using them for fertilizers. The farmers have no desire to see another big apple year in Connecticut. The apple crop promises to be unusually large this season.

Work For the President.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—There will not be much rest for Mr. Cleveland during the remainder of the session of congress. He had on his table nearly sixty bills, the constitutional time for his examination of which expires to-day, and he had not been able to examine more than a dozen. Here is another batch which will become laws on Tuesday unless he vetoes them, and another lot on Wednesday. On Thursday and Friday last the senate passed 216 bills, about half of which have also passed the house, and will now go to the executive for approval.

His Last Trip Made.

GREENVILLE, Tex., June 21.—H. C. Shepard, traveling salesman for Marcy Brothers & Co., of Fort Worth, Texas, registered at the Beckham house Saturday. He did not come to breakfast, and a search revealed him lying on his bed, dead. He was lying on his back in his night clothes, partly covered, and had been dead several hours. A bottle partly full of morphine was found on the table by his bed. The cause of suicide is believed, as he was suffering from consumption. There were $28 in his pockets.

Secretary Manning Doing Well.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Commissioner of Internal Revenue Miller, who has been stopping at the Springs, has with Secretary Manning, has returned to the city. He says the secretary is rapidly improving and eats and sleeps well. Mr. Miller is of opinion that the secretary will be physically able to resume charge of the treasury department in October, unless he makes some other arrangement in the meantime.

Her Stern Out of Water.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 21.—The British steamer Miranda, from New York for Hull and Leith, ashore on the west side of Point Judith Saturday night and lays in a bad position, with stern high out of water. Steamer Judith and a schooner are near her ready to assistance.

Governor Murray Sustained.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 21.—The Territorial Supreme Court has affirmed the judgment of the Third District Court, sustaining the right of appointees of Governor Murray to the office of territorial auditor and treasurer against the Mormon holdover incumbents.

Railroad Officers Elected.

TOLEDO, June 21.—The Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City railroad has organized by the election of the following officers: President, R. M. Quinby, New York; George L. Boardman, vice-president; J. W. White, New York, secretary and treasurer. Will H. Peterson will remain general superintendent.

A Southern Penitentiary Burned.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 21.—A special says: A fire broke out in the prison at this city this morning and completely destroyed the penitentiary and seven frame buildings. Three convicts, [illegible] the penitentiary property, except the account books and records of the office, was saved.

Perished in the Flames.

PARIS, June 21.—The residence of a timber merchant at Dessandre was set on fire and burned to the ground. Five persons perished in the flames.

THE ROGERS' SUIT.

Pan Electric Controversy to be Heard in Court.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—J. Harris Rogers, the inventor of the Pan-Electric telephone, has brought suit in the equity court here against ex-Secretary Frelinghuysen, Senator Harris, Indian Commissioner Atkins and Col. Casey Young to recover money, stocks or certificates of stocks, which Rogers alleges they have in their hands by combination, and $100,000 besides to recompense him for what he has lost through breach of contract on their part; that has he made over to his enterprise, and that he has built of complaint, says that with a view to putting his telephonic inventions into practical operation he arranged to organize a Pan-Electric company and secure the cooperation of several comparatively obscure, but highly honorable citizens, the Rev. John Rockford, Gen. Bruce, of Utah, Mr. Gilbert, of Kansas, R. G. Wentersmith and Geo. Rasi Duke. The defendants, he alleges, subsequently became connected with the project, making the condition that they should choose all their associates in the enterprise, to which the complainant agreed, promising to allow to each of them $50,000 of the stock to be issued, and that these conspirators were discarded by Messrs. Harris, Atkins and Young, and in their places Gen. Johnston and Mr. Gilbert were chosen. The fifth person was never chosen, it being agreed that the $500,000 which would be thus allotted should be left in the treasury. The complainant says that he organized the company in corporators $1,700,000 in stock and he stipulated "with his present friends, the defendants," that this amount should be paid. This was never done, and the complainant has urged it again and again as a matter of honor that the defendants were bound to pay.

The defendants have ten days time in which to put in an appearance and thirty days in which to prepare an answer.

IMPORTANT LAND DECISION.

Texas has Given Titles to Land It Never Owned.

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 21.—The Greer county boundary commission, which consisted of Major Powell, of the United States army and four citizens of Texas, convened in secret session at Austin on the 15th inst. The question under consideration by this commission is of very important one to the people of Texas, since it involves the ownership of a snug little back yard, some 1,628,000 acres in area. Each member seems to have been sworn to secrecy in the meeting. Your correspondent is able to make the positive announcement that the commission has come to the conclusion that Greer county does not belong to Texas, but that it is part and parcel of the lands belonging to the Federal government. It is learned that the decision was reached by a unanimous in the conclusion, but no official announcement can be made until the report of the federal branch of the commission has been submitted to the secretary of war, and by him approved. Greer county for years has been by many Texans considered part and parcel of the Lone Star state, but a well informed member of the legislature is authority for the statement that there never was the smallest grounds for this presumption on the part of Texas. This is certain, the state of Texas made a big mistake when it presumed to give patents for land it never had. The shadow of a legal claim for such a thing over 300,000 acres of the grazing lands in Greer county is now located upon by veteran land certificates issued by the state of Texas. The decision of the commission nullifies these land certificates at one stroke, and the parties holding them will be compelled to vacate them. The prospects are that veteran land certificates can be bought pretty cheap in a few weeks.

BEACH IS SEVERE.

He Bitterly Denounces the Government's Policy.

LONDON, June 21.—Sir Michael Hicks-Beach addressed the electors of Bristol. He denounced the government's Irish scheme for local government in Ireland. He [illegible] tions to Ireland, and declared that they must inevitably lead to separation or civil war.

"The rights of Ireland," he said, "in regard to government, are neither more nor less than those of Great Britain. We ought to equalize, as far as possible, political privileges and disabilities, for which object the imperial parliament in Ireland, as in Great Britain, is supreme both in practice and in theory. Ireland, he says, at present has full representation and accruing influence. Political organizations cannot be permitted for the purpose through intimidation backed by outrage and crime. There is not coercion but vindication of constitutional freedom. The political instincts of Ireland are strong, and cannot long be made to deprive her sons of a full share in the government of the empire, and concession, would only promote further disintegration. In such a crisis the old party lines ought to be forgotten in one great effort to preserve the unity upon which depends the strength of the empire.

HYDROPHOBIA IN KENTUCKY.

Children Affected from Drinking the Milk of a Mad Cow.

CINCINNATI, June 21.—The people in the neighborhood of Hebron, across the river in Boone county, are terribly excited over a case of hydrophobia in the family of a farmer there. A dog belonging in the household went mad last week. Without a knowledge of the condition it was allowed to run around as usual. It finally bit a milch cow. The cow showed no signs of sick ness, like the bite of a snake, and broken out. Yesterday the cow showed unmistakable signs of hydrophobia. About the same time a child of the farmer became similarly affected from nourishment it received from the cow. The symptoms are most pronounced, and the sufferings of the child are most horrible. Two other members of the family are similarly affected, but there is hope of their recovery.

A Wild German.

HARTFORD, June 21.—Ernest Straus, a German, aged 40 years, attempted to shoot Dr. William M. Booth yesterday afternoon. The doctor was in his office, when the shot was confined, when he rushed into the room and fired two shots at the doctor and then fired at himself. The shots missed their mark. Straus was arrested and subsequently taken to the police station. Half an hour subsequent to Straus' being lodged in a cell a policeman found him hanging by a rope made of his clothes. He was cut down and would have died in a few minutes.

Mr. McClane's Recent Visit.

WASHINGTON June 21.—A writer in The Sunday Capital has [illegible] that the recent visit to this country of Mr. McClane to France—Hon. Robert M. McClane, of Maryland—has some connection with the probable vacancy which will sooner or later occur in the secretaryship of legation. An article on the subject strongly intimates that according to information received it will not be surprising if, when Mr. Mandeville's resignation takes effect, Mr. McClane will be his successor.

Rates Reduced.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on a policy of $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $22.50 to

per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an assessment. There are no dues, fines, or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy. The risk which we treat is backed by assets of over $600,000.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and the Reserve Fund was $363,192.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over $600,000, it has paid claims to the amount of over time amounting to over $700,000. ## IRELAND'S FRIENDS.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE CALLED TO MEET IN AUGUST.

An Address by the Officers to All American Branches of the National League to Send Delegates to Chicago. The Basis of Representation.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 21.—The officers of the National league have issued the following: "We say to the sufferers and members of branches: We are glad to be able to congratulate you upon the splendid progress our cause has made since we last addressed you. In a parliament elected on two different issues, the bill granting home rule to Ireland was only defeated by the narrow majority of thirty votes. After the general election now about to take place we believe that Mr. Gladstone will be in a position to undo by an overwhelming majority the scandalous union which they gave Chamberlain, in his recent address to Midlothian, so truly described as a paper union, obtained by force and fraud and never sanctioned or accepted by the Irish nation. The measure of home rule proposed by Mr. Gladstone will, we believe, be productive of permanent peace and goodwill between Ireland and England, while the twenty years coercion alternative of Lord Salisbury and the marquis of Hartington could result only in a more deadly feud than any that has ever before existed between the two countries, accompanied by consequences which every lover of liberty, every friend of humanity must deeply deplore. The provincial committee's scheme of Mr. Chamberlain's is unworthy of serious consideration. In face of the desperate and disgraceful attempts of Salisbury, Churchill and Chamberlain to foment religious strife throughout Ireland, our people have acted nobly, and with the exception of a handful of misguided loyal fanatics in Belfast, they have shown to the world that the days of stupid religious bigotry and intolerance among Irishmen have forever passed away. The home rule fire in Ireland is now fairly before the English people, and we feel confident that the great mass of fair minded intelligent Englishmen will support Mr. Gladstone and, by sending him back to parliament with a large majority, enable him to solve beneficially for England as well as for Ireland her greatest and most dangerous problem that the British empire has had to deal with during this century.

In pursuance of the powers conferred upon us by the national executive committee of the league we hereby summon the third regular convention of the Irish National league of America to be held in Central Music hall, Chicago, on Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 18 and 19, 1886, and we earnestly trust that every branch of the league will be fully represented thereat. All branches and societies affiliated with the league that have subscribed regular dues for the current term of 1886, and contributed to the parliamentary fund a sum equal to the amount of dues shall be entitled to representation, and the basis of representation shall be as follows: For delegate for every fifty members in good standing; provided, however, that in country districts where the number of fifty members cannot be easily reached, any number from twenty-five to fifty shall be entitled to one delegate. We look for the attendance of an important delegation from the home league and parliamentary party. All arrangements for the reception of delegates and all other details of preparations for the convention shall be under the sole charge of the committee of arrangements of Chicago, already organized, and of which Ex-President Alexander Sullivan and the officers of the league for the city of Chicago are members. Every branch of the league should set to work promptly to prepare for the coming crisis and should remit all funds due the national treasurer, P. A. National treasurer at Detroit, Mich., so that the money may be forwarded by him to Ireland and be made available, if necessary, for the coming contest. All true friends of Ireland should by active and earnest organization endeavor to make our approaching convention one worthy of the sacred cause in which we are engaged—the cause of Irish liberty. We remain yours very faithfully,

PATRICK EGAN, President,
CHARLES O'REILLY, Treasurer,
J. F. SUTTON, Secretary.

A Grand Protest.

CHEYENNE, W. T., June 21.—The proposed repeal of the desert land act engenders strong opposition among residents of this territory. The most discouraging part is Col. James A. George, special agent of the land office, one of Sparks' own appointees, is circulating a petition for the repeal which, by reason of official encouragement, is being generally signed by the people. The protest will travel all over the territory for signatures.

Opening Powder With a Pick.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 21.—At Posterville coal mines David and William Williams, brothers, engaged in mining, used a pick to open a keg of powder. An explosion followed, killing both and tearing their flesh in a horrible manner. Surgeons were summoned, but their death is hourly expected. Each has a family.

MISSION OF THE RED CROSS.

President Clara Barton Desires to Make a Statement.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Miss Clara Barton, president of the American Association of the Red Cross, furnished to the press the following card respecting the recent doings and utterances of "The Brothers of the Red Cross" of Chicago:

WASHINGTON, June 20.

To the People of the United States:

After all which has been written about and done by the American Association of the National Red Cross, founded in 1881, during the last seven years, further explanation could scarcely seem necessary under any circumstances. But, clouded with pain that a body of men recently announcing themselves in Chicago as "The Brothers of the Red Cross" are giving utterance to language both shocking and dangerous to the community, and to which utterances sufficient attention is paid to be repeated by the press at large, a word also through the same may be due to the people, as well as to the Red Cross itself.

It will be remembered that one of the first public moves, following the recent riots in Chicago, was a telegraphic dispatch from the Red Cross expressing sympathy and offering aid, if needed, to the wounded policemen of that city, which dispatch was properly and gratefully responded to.

The province, however unintentional of an assumed guise, is to mislead, and in view of this we beg the people to bear in mind that the real and legitimate Red Cross of this country knows nothing of the body of that name. That it was not wound, but masks to hide whose witness has wounded. That today it marks every military hospital in the civilized world. That, by national law, it is worn by every duly detailed attendant, man or woman, serving the sick or wounded of any field. That, being of the government, it is true to the government; that, being of the people, it is true to the people; that, being of humanity, it is true to humanity; that, by the articles of the treaty under which it exists, and its own principles, it can have no part in politics; it can never assimilate with anarchy, hostilities or violence, but that when and where the threatened work of such as these leaves off the work of the real Red Cross must forever begin.

CLARA BARTON,
President of the National Red Cross of the United States.

A COLLISION ON THE RAIL.

Several People Injured and Property Demolished.

EAST PEPPERELL, Mass., June 21.—The northbound passenger train, No. 69, on the Worcester and Nashua division of the Boston and Maine railroad, due here at 7:51 Saturday evening, consisting of a baggage car and two passenger coaches, collided with an extra southbound freight train of seventeen cars, about thirty rods south of this station. Engineer Whittemore of the passenger train and fireman Potter jump off. Whittemore escaped with slight bruises. Potter was badly injured in his left hip. There were no passengers on the freight train, but they were all violently shaken up. Mrs. Granville Parker, of Pepperel, was thrown over the seat in front of her and received a short deep gash over the right eye. She was also injured in the shoulder and rendered unconscious from bruises and internal injuries. Vincent Tredey, of Ayer, was severely injured in the right hip. Mrs. Samuel Beverly, of Nashua, was in the rear car and was thrown completely over the seat next to her, receiving serious injuries.

The engineer and fireman of the Lancaster jumped, and were but slightly injured. The engine and seven cars coupled to the freight took house. Both engines were badly wrecked, the engine of the freight train being almost completely demolished. The passenger train crashed completely through the forward freight car, demolishing both. The property loss will amount to several thousand dollars. The conductor of the freight train, it is said, was under orders to side track at this station for the passenger to pass, and was within fifty yards of the switch when the collision occurred.

The Richmond-Strong Tragedy.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 21.—There are no new developments in the Richmond-Strong shooting affair. Dr. Richmond is at home guarded by policemen, and though a warrant has been read to him charging him with murder his physician will not permit his removal to jail. Assistant Prosecuting attorney has consented to allow him to remain at home under police surveillance until he can safely be removed. The coroner's jury gave a verdict in accordance with facts already given. The board of trade also passed resolutions of regret regarding Col. Strong's death. Col. is a member of the press in the city. Col. Strong will be buried on Monday.

Bad Work With a Razor.

CRESTON, Ills., June 21.—Jacob Swingley, of this place, killed his little daughter, 3 years old, by cutting her throat with a razor, and then his 10-year-old boy in the same way and then cut his own throat. A lady who kept house for him and another daughter were sleeping up stairs and did not know what it all meaning, when they were found dead but the boy, who is not expected to live. Mr. Swingley was suffering with malarial fever and did not have watchers. Swingley's mother was in an insane asylum for some time. The immediate cause was the death of his wife last summer and financial troubles.

In the International league the Syracuse Stars are in the lead.

A New Method of Suicide.

BROOKLYN, June 21.—John Johnsen, a partially insane man, was placed in a station house Saturday night. He was discovered yesterday morning lying unconscious on the floor of his cell. He had stuffed a handkerchief down his throat, and had also forced straw, five feet long, partially down his windpipe. He died soon after.

Gone Back to Boston.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The yachts Puritan and Mayflower have sailed for Boston to take part in the Eastern Yacht Club regatta June 23. They were escorted out of the bay by a large fleet, and both were heartily cheered as they moved away.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—For the Atlantic coast states, fair weather, followed by local rains and northerly winds.

SHE LOST HER FAITH.

IT WAS AN "UNCOMMONLY QUIET AND ORDERLY NIGHT."

The Ways of a Lover Whose Habits Were Not Such as a Maiden Wants in a Man She Is to Tie Up to for Life.—How She Made the Discovery.

I have a young friend who has lost most all of her faith in masculine human nature. She probably still believes in her self, but her confidence in her self is no confidence in her favorite clergyman is unimpaired, but as for the rest of the sterner sex she thinks of it as I should dreadfully hate to have any one think of me. And I must hurry to tell you just how it all happened. My friend Miss Flora never mind her other name went to Europe about five years ago to study music, and generally artistic courses in Italy. As a school girl of 16 she formed a fond attachment for a young Knickerbocker. They exchanged rings and, as they both thought, their alleged hearts in the bargain. While she was away she was a great deal more steadfast to her troth, as girls usually are, than he was, I think. At any rate, she got a good many hints from friends at home that he was not true. But she made her doubt whether his habits were just such as she wanted in a man she was to tie up to for life. The consequence was that when she heard that he had come back Charley was going wrong she did something different from sitting down, as most girls would, and having a good weep. First she wrote to him that she had heard, and he, preferring to lie rather than lose her and her half million, wrote back that he was a saint, and whoever said he wasn't was a liar, so to speak.

A DARING SCHEME.

She didn't believe him, and she wrote to me, and I coming home, she said, "with the most daring scheme that I ever had, and you and your cousin Bob are in it." I knew it would be something to her credit, but I was hardly prepared for what it turned out to be. She wanted to get male toggery for herself and me, and then have Cousin Bob to introduce her to the young fellow's supper as "Charley," as she always called him. I was like Artemus Ward during the war, perfectly willing to sacrifice all my wife's relations, but would not go myself. My figure is not exactly the sort for male attire, my dear," said I, "but you'll do, with your hair clipped, and we'll have Cousin Bob." She wanted to put in a night around town with her Charlie, and, as Bob knew him very well, it was as easy as an old shoe to him. I told her of it at first, but "I kick," he said. "All right said I, "kick if you want to, but you'll either do what I want or you don't go anywhere with me or my friends next season." Well, he did it, but he said I'd regret it the longest day I lived.

Flora got herself up in the style of a law student—one of those buttoned up things in black, with a mouth and the hands of a cane always in it, and eye-glasses, and the effect of it was that she looked like an old bachelor. She's a born actress, and she looked true to life. She went with Bob and Charlie and had a "down others, mostly gold-plated young snots, to see a burlesque. Flora pretended to be just from France and unable to speak English, so that no nobody tried to talk to her, and so he

AN HOUR OF WICKEDNESS.

Her plan worked to a dot. She saw and heard enough to satisfy her. To use her own words, "It was awful. I never in my nowhere I'd have had more than my share of wickedness just from that night." Every one of the young men, except Bob knew some of the others, and as they got to talking about them, she says, just as jockeys might be supposed to talk about horses. One of the young men flirted with a woman in the theatre, and he later on play and went away to supper with her, while the rest strolled to an all night chop-house on the corner, where they drank champagne for an hour. She drank Rhine wine, to which she is accustomed, but the conversation of the young men, the stories they told and the things they did were a revelation to her. She attended them caused her to beg Bob to take her home. He told me that he had been very much relieved from the fact.

"It was nothing extraordinary," said he; "in fact, it was an uncommonly quiet and orderly night the boys were having, but they looked ready and although I should have thought nothing of it ordinarily, still when I knew that a sweet and innocent girl was a listener and looker-on there I suffered such agonies as I never did before in my life. It gave me a new view of life, and ever since then I have been half ashamed of myself in feminine company."

As for Flora, I can't tell you what she said. She came and flung herself on my bed and cried, the next day, till I thought she would never leave off. "Fiends" and "brutes" were the only words she could find to apply to her companions of the night before, and she went on to tell me that the French novels all the criminal reports and all the startling talk she had ever read or heard she had never conceived a tenth of the perfectly awful horribleness of these young men.

TO CAP THE CLIMAX.

Well, that is not all. There is more to Flora's case, and in fact more in here myself. Flora wrote to her Charley, telling him that she was the French student who spent that evening with him. He tried to see her, but she said she would rather touch a toad. Then he wrote to her that he was far better than an average young man; in fact, that he was rather a model—sober, honest, industrious, and without being addicted to any vice except smoking. To cap the climax, her own people took his side, and she had acquiesce that he is not uncommonly nice young man from—whom do you think? Why, from two clergymen, from our cousin Bob, from a private friend, from a college professor, from a banker and from male relatives a score in number.

Flora is disheartened and disgusted. She has not given up the art. She means to find some decent, clean, manly, self-respecting, ambitious fellow who leads one life, as open as a book and who means to point to with, and tell all who he's served her in the contrary that it is not impossible to be decent and be a man at the same time. But, say what I will, I am a revelation!—Clara Belle in Cincinnati Enquirer

Blue China an Artistic Luxury.

Nothing in real old blue china can be "picked up" in London for less than $5. Blue chinas like old pictures by old masters, be it understood, never goes a begging, thus the high price, its value and fascination for the connoisseurs. It is said that rich Americans have exhausted the London market of Dutch treasure and another artistic luxury. Spanish leather has been called for until ancient Holland is no longer able to supply the demand for the leasure. Skillful imitators in Paris are offering their best, however, to make good this old deficiency.—Boston Herald.

THE LIME KILN CLUB.

Some Changes in the Labels of the Famous Archæological Collection.

When the lights had been turned up strong, and Elder Toots had coughed a pasut chunk out of his throat, Brother Gardner arose and said:

"I find lodged on my desk a heap of mottoes, watchwords and maxims which hev bin gathered together by de committee on judiciary in de view of replacin' de ole now hangin' on de walls. I has bin keerfully considerin' de matter in my mind for a week past, an' I doesn' like de idea of a change. De pipes we has now I view to one motto for one hundred years, an' I don't see how one can be depended on to stick by a feller no dan one.

"If I is sent to cash, friendless, laid up in a garret, I wants a motto hangin' up right on an specific order day to be toted off to de pore house. I don't know but I might furnish de motto myself, but it would look all wrong, for it would hev to be under some such circumstances. About a month ago I began frailin' wid a fo'ce who had hung up in his shop de motto: 'Live and Let Live.' It struck me dat de idea was a good one. He wanted his dues, an' he would grand de same to orders. In about a week he slipped a plug of quids in her mouf in change, two days later my two pounds of beef was short three ounces, de next week he charged me up wid forty-eight cents' worf of sass which I nebber had. I doan' rade dem any mo', an' my respect for his motto has dropped fifteen pegs.

"If we am any members of de club who can't keep a motto, I shall some motto least industrious enuff one, who can't pay dey honest dues wid dat motto hoat honesty will be cast. I shall also suggest dat wives and fathers write on some appropriate quotashun pasted in dere hats, an' a possess had better never be encouraged to once."

THE MUSEUM.

The quarterly report of the keeper of the museum was then submitted and accepted. From it is extracted the following matters of interest:

The museum now contains relics of historical value as given below:

| Name. | No. |
|---|---|
| Cleopatra | 1 |
| Napoleon | 3 |
| Cæsar | 1 |
| Oliver Cromwell | 1 |
| Washington | 1 |
| Shakespeare | 1 |
| Job | 1 |
| Queen Elizabeth | 1 |
| Jefferson | 1 |
| Lafayette | 1 |
| Queen Anne | 1 |
| Plato | 1 |

In addition to the above, which range all the way from quarters to broadswords, the museum has a fair display of curiosities from foreign lands and remembrances of great events. The keeper reported that two of the three skulls which had formally been labeled "skull of Capt. Kidd" had lately been relabeled—some for Marc Antony, and the other for Nero. While this move did not detract at all from the reputation of Capt. Kidd, it added increased value to the collection. In these hard times one skull per man should be the rule.

The committee on the interior, through the chairman, Judge Chewsaw, then reported back the case of Professor Ashford Smith, an honorary member residing in Milwaukee. He had been charged with being an Anarchist, and an investigation had resulted in the discovery that he believed in and contended for—

"No taxation."

"Death to the rich."

"Equal division of all property."

"Neither laws nor prisons."

The committee were unanimous in recommending that his name be stricken from the rolls.

"Which the same will be did to once," said the president, "an it may be not down as de sentiments of de club dat de government should take sich sckahun as will prevent conspirators, Nihilists and criminals from 'Murp dindin' a safe asylum in de United States."—Detroit Free Press.

Unfinished Business.

A congressman's daughter had been receiving a young man's attentions, until the father thought it was time he was knowing something about it. "Celestine," he said last night, when the young man was announced, "isn't it about time some definite concession was being arrived at in this matter?" "Quite time, papa," she replied, in a matter-of-fact way. "Well, daughter, is there any prospect of a conclusion?" "I can't say, really, papa. You see, he is on the exact ice as unfinished business, and"—"Enough, daughter, enough," he interrupted, putting up his hands, and the girl went down stairs to complete the quorum.—Washington Critic.

Story-ettes.

All the world has heard of Bill Travers, the Head of Wall street. He stutters terribly, but the stammer embellishes rather than detracts from his stories. It was Travers who recently received the Baltimore Twins for a quarter of an hour and then said: "Je-je-je-brothers, I pp-pp-presume?"

A story is told that a clergyman of the Church of England, on accepting a country benefice, urged a friend to make him a visit as soon as he got settled, remarking, in perfect good faith: "I have a new little green field in which to feed the horses, and to keep a couple of sheep, and we shall have mutton chances from every morning for breakfast."—Argonaut.

The Latest Thing in Cigars.

It is called the last straw, and is a cigar very much in demand. The conversation goes:

"Have I got an interesting cigar you're smoking?" he asked.

"An interesting cigar! What's that?" queried the stranger.

"Why, one that you can smoke in Maine and make the people in Texas hoot their noses."—Washington Hatchet.

One Was Quite Enough.

"No, said the henpecked husband, as he scratched his head lonesomely, "I am not a believer in Mormonism, not by a long chalk."

"Why not?" asked the Mormon sympathizer with whom he was conversing.

"Because," replied the henpecked man, "I don't believe in having two wives. No man can serve two masters."—Boston Courier.

WHERE THE TALLEST STATUE IN THE WORLD IS TO STAND.

The Native Health of Ex-Eyed Daisies and Mosquitoes—The Old Lady Who Runs the Route—A Cleopatra Face—Toes a Foot Thick.

The other morning some of us took a run down to Liberty island to see how the statue of Liberty was getting on. A year ago the little seven by nine spot of earth in the sea was called Bedloe's island. Its name has been changed, and it is now Liberty island. At any time in the spring steamboat leaves the Battery, New York city, every hour to convey passengers over to the famous spot. The last craft to proceed alongside the United States barge office in days agone it was a steam canal boat, and conveyed freight from one point to another. A good natured, sweet-faced old man supervised the office of the day on deck when he was not mending his fool flanks, over which passengers stepped on board the Jas. Field. The craft was so small, so quaint and such a family-looking affair that one could not help asking:

"How many does it take to run this boat?"

"Well," said the neat ordinance man, "there's four on us—me an' Eva with the children in the cupboard—"

"The little new live on board, canal boat fashion."

"The pilot, he's the captain's son," continued our friend, "and the engineer is his brother."

"The old lady" does the cooking and probably runs the boat.

"What kin are you to the family?" we asked.

"Oh, I ain't any kin," said the weather-beaten man.

THE SHORE OF LIBERTY ISLAND.

Presently we were rubbing and dancing over the rolling waves of the bay towards the shore of the spot we see in the picture. It is a mile and a half from the battery, and the ferry is one of the most commanding spots this side of Coney. I crossed in America for a year, coming to this country flag fly. Otherwise, Ellis is anchored in New York harbor at present, so Governor Ellis Peirce's grandson, the governor of New York, may see the sights of the world without city. The Brazilian emperor's second daughter married a Bourbon prince, the Duke of Saxe, and this is their son, fair haired and lofty like his father. He is serving as a ... midshipman on board the man-o'-war.

But the crew of the Admirante Barroso are not fair haired and blue eyed. A dozen or more dusky youths, rowing the captain's gig ashore. They wore picturesque white blouses and flat blue caps, and were every one of them as black as the average American negro. I wonder are the Brazilians black or white, the common run of them? We observed that the officer pacing the deck was a white.

"There's a time," said our weather beaten friend, when you don't care about going onto Bedloe's island."

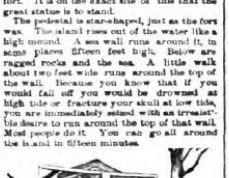
"Why?"

"Mosquitoes," he answered. "They fairly eat the face off you. They get after our passengers in swarms and drive 'em down on the dock, and bother 'em till the wind drives them away."

PEDESTAL AND PORT.

One Bedloe was formerly owner of the whole island. He ceded it to the United States government for purposes of defense. Officers of the government used to live there, and there was a fortification called the Old Star fort. It is on the exact site of this that the great statue is to stand.

The pedestal is star-shaped, just as the fort was. The island rises out of the water like a high mound. I see wall runs around it, it seems places fifteen feet high. Below are ragged rocks and the sea. A little walk about two feet wide runs around the top of the wall. Because you know that if you would fall off you would be drowned at high tide or fracture your skull at low tide, you are immediately seized with an irresistible desire to run around the top of that wall. Most people do it. You can go all around the island in fifteen minutes.



INSIDE OF THE FACE.

The most striking portions of the model of figure are in view upon the island as pedestal. The giant face is 10 feet 6 inches from chin to forehead and the mosquitoes proceed to pull toward its works. Our friend the weather beaten photographer, who was getting to be now a fixture, took photographs of the views from the newspaper office windows. The topographical name of the face can be seen by the insignia of the tall crown man who stands in it.

It is a stalid face majestic and Egyptian, that's a fact, beautiful as a Greek goddess. It is plainly an Egyptian face, straight brow and deep eyes, a most decided Cleopatra face. It is said, by the way, that Barthodi modeled this countenance after that of his mother.

The wonder is how it could be made at once so gigantic and so beautiful.

Only for the demoniish mosquitoes, Liberty island would not be a bad place. The air sweeps up the bay from the real sea when the wind is right. In it there is a smell of salt and sea weed which is like a magic draught to a weary invalid. It is only at intervals that one can catch that rare sea smell so near New York city. The wind itself lies in heaps all about the seaward shore of the island.

FACE OF LIBERTY.

Up to about ten years ago army officers and soldiers lived here. There is a tiny graveyard in the southern part, shaded by a great, splendid weeping willow. There are no more than a dozen graves in it. Some of the tombstones are of that old red sandstone so common in Trinity churchyard. They are very ancient, for America. The stone has cracked off in flakes, and is partly crumbled into decay. We tried to read the worn inscriptions. You may believe it or not, but the mosquitoes would not let us stand still long enough to do so. We made out "Sacred to the memory of ——," when zip! zing! slap! came, and that ended the pursuit of archæological knowledge. As we walked forward the creatures rose out of the grass in a great swarm and laughed, actually laughed. They don't sing, like decent mosquitoes, but just settle nose-easily down upon any exposed part and commence operations without a note of warning, like the sneaking, treacherous scoundrels they are. This is the regular Jersey mosquito.

A second time we tried to read the inscriptions, it is hard to say why. We didn't know the people buried there. But even as we did so the mosquitoes were on us. They raised on rebates, like the American navy on Decoration day. But they didn't run their noses into one another, as the navy did, they ran them into us. This time we made out "Wife of" in the unfeeling marble, and then ran for our lives.

The products of Liberty island are mosquitoes and ex-eyed daisies. We made a note of that. Then we observed a stout, bushy haired, dark complectioned man gesticulating furiously, and shouting as if a thousand mosquitoes were pasturing upon his ears at once. He was talking in French.

"Who is he?" we asked a good-natured workman.

"He's the boss. He took the statue down in Paris, and he came over here to see about setting it up again.

"Is he angry?"

"No, he isn't mad. That's only a way he's got. He's Mr. Bonquet. That's the name of a flower, you know."

TOES AND BALCONY AROUND TORCH.

In one spot repose together several of Liberty's toes and the railing around the torch. The toes are as large as a good-sized log of wood. The railing is a balcony around which half a dozen to ten persons may walk at once. This will be the highest point to which visitors can ascend. Above it is the flame of the torch. The statue is lying in gloriously keeled over upon the ground near the sheds where the packed up goddess lies. Of itself it is large enough for a small fort. The top of this torch will be the highest point of the statue, 309 feet from the sea. It will be the highest statue and one of the most commanding works of man in the world. It is hoped now that the statue will be in its place and the labor all finished some time in September. The rays that will exist from Liberty's head are to be studded with electric lights. About forty workmen are kept busy finishing the pedestal and doing other work.

President of the International Typographical Union.

WILLIAM ADDISON

The International Typographical union is the oldest, most conservative and most powerful of the labor unions. It is composed of journeymen printers of the United States and Canada, who hold a convention annually to elect officers for the government of the organization for the ensuing year. At the recent convention, held in Pittsburg, Pa., Mr. William Addison was chosen president. Mr. Addison was born in Marseilles, France, in 1839, and came to this country when quite young, settling in Nashville, Tenn., where he learned the printing trade. He is the only living member of the typographical union organized in that city in 1853, and of which he was twice president. He served in the Confederate army throughout the war. He was elected to the Tennessee legislature in 1879, and has been continuously re-elected since. He is a man that is universally liked where known, and it was his popularity rather than ambition that carried him into politics. He possesses the cool and fair judgment which is essential in the chief officer of a labor organization which is always under the critical eye of public opinion.

Constructed for a Spider.

She was story as Roman Cato, she had studied Knox and Plato, and for "Wisdom's old potato' dug in every soil and slime;

She'd no time for beads and bangles, and for silks and worsted tangles, while by logarithmic angles she foretold the next eclipse.

She could lecture by the hour, and with much forensic power, upon Locke and Schopenhauer and the mediæval monks;

And she thought it was her mission and the height of her ambition just to scatter erudition, and to leave it 'round in chunks.

She was like a knowledge bottle from which poured, as from a throttle, views of Bacon, Aristotle, Reid, Ricardo and Keman;

But no crazed swain tried to get her, for she couldn't fry a fritter, dress or cook a leg of mutton, broil a fish or sew a button; for she never was constructed on that good old plan.—S. W. Foss in Tid Bits.

A Drama and Tragedy.

[In the Orchestra Seats. Drama.]

He—Good evening.

She—And how did you come here? Very nice, this is! If a poor persecuted girl can't come to the theatre with her father in safety——

He—A theatre is a public place, isn't it?

She—Yes, but how did you get the seat next to ours?

He—By misapplied ingenuity and a slight acquaintance with your first night habits.

She—I shall have to introduce you to papa as soon as he is through talking with Mr. Bilton.

He—Delighted. Why didn't you answer my note?

She—Well, you see, since poor mamma died papa has been very particular with me, and I only knew you at Monterey, you know.

He—I supposed that as the Trethericks presented me to you I was sufficiently indorsed. But, of course——

She—I had no right to meet me every time I went shopping. You know it was not all just accidents.

He—This is the most extraordinary town for accidents, though. I meet people all the time.

She—I thought you were going back to the mines!

He—I was, but I waited to see you first.

She—Oh! But the curtain is going up now.

He—I can whisper.

She—Yes, but I can't listen to the play and hear you at the same time.

He—Never mind the play!

She—But I must mind the play. Is it very important?

He—Yes. May I call?

She—No.

He—Not if I can make your father's acquaintance down town?

She—But you can't. Why do you want to call? There are plenty of places to go in. There is your club.

He—Yes, but you don't belong to my club!

She—Propose me.

He—Proposals are not easy. I want to make one to you and can't.

She—Nonsense.

He—May I or may I not?

She—No. Of course I can't help it if you hate to call.

He—I don't quite understand.

She—Well, suppose a gentleman I barely knew, just knew by name, should lose anything and I should pick it up, what ought I to do?

He—Send it to him, I suppose.

She—Suppose you lost your card case; or no, suppose I left my fan lying here, and you knew me very slightly, you wouldn't call with it, of course?

He—Certainly I would. How could you think that I would be so discourteous as to do anything else?

She—Very well. I may leave my opera glass here—mind I don't say I will.

He—How good you are!

[End of Play. Tragedy.]

Papa—Where is my umbrella—oh, yes—here it is under your seat, my child. And here is your opera glass, too. How careless you are.

She—Yes, papa.—San Francisco Inglesida.

The Country Goose and the City Gander.

When the farmer comes to the city in winter he is systematically robbed by everybody.

And yet, when the city man goes to the country to board in summer, he complains bitterly of the farmer's extortion.—The Judge.

The Fearful Side of Retaliation.

"We should retaliate, sir—retaliate on Canada for this outrage, sir, upon our right of seizing our fishing vessels!" he exclaimed, as he waved his umbrella around his head.

"War is a dreadful thing," said one of the group.

"Who's talking about war?"

"I, on how would you retaliate?"

"Why, sir, induce their capitalists to invest in American railroad securities, and bankrupt the Dominion inside of five years."—Wall Street News.

JOTTINGS.

—There were but few visitors at the Council meeting last evening.

—The first watermelons of the season appeared on the stands of the city to-day.

—A new organ has been placed in the Presbyterian church at Basking Ridge.

—The Knights of Labor held a meeting in Democratic Hall last evening.

—Central avenue at the intersection of Third street, is being covered with crushed stone.

—Several new dwelling houses are being erected on Short Second street, near the Potter Press Works.

—Subscribers leaving the city for the summer can have the EVENING NEWS mailed to the address by leaving the same at this office.

—The Turners and Athletics will play another game of base ball on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock on the Somerset street grounds.

—A sign in front of Charles Giese's eating saloon on Somerset street was knocked down at noon to-day by a large stage coming in contact with it.

—The Council seem to have plenty of money at their disposal. A newspaper representative picked up a cent from the floor of the Council chamber last evening.

—Tickets of admission will be required for the graduating exercises of the North Plainfield Public School, which takes place in the Warren Mission Chapel on Thursday evening.

—The Bicycle Club's new building on Sycamore street, is nearing completion and painters are now engaged putting on the "finishing touches" to the exterior of the building.

—At the corner of Front street and Park avenue this morning as the drum corps were marching up the street the noise from the drums frightened a horse belonging to Lawyer Arthur P. Miller, left standing at that point, and in trying to free himself he broke the bridle.

—Yesterday afternoon while Christine, the youngest daughter of Jacob Voehl, the New Brunswick baker, was playing herself in company with her neice, Addie Carney, she fell from a hammock and dislocated her knee joint. Under the efficient care of Dr. Fritts she is doing as well as can be expected.

—The Young Men's meeting last evening in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association was a most interesting and helpful service. Seventy young men were present. A. Stuart Patterson, who led, took for his subject "Be Not Discouraged." The singing by the male choir was a very attractive feature.

—About twenty of the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. of this city, preceded by their drum corps, marched to the depot this morning to take the 10.19 a. m. train for Trenton Junction to be present at the Summer Encampment of Aaron Wilkne Post of Trenton, now in session at Lincoln Park.

—Rev. Mr. Moody, the evangelist, who in company with Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan, conducted a most successful series of revival meetings in this place a few weeks ago, is to conduct four services at Seabright, N. J., beginning on Saturday night next and continuing throughout the following Sunday.

—The Electric Light Company, which is to furnish the city with light, is said to have purchased the land on Madison avenue north of the railroad bridge, where they intend to locate their plant. It is said that the work thereon will be begun in a few days and pushed forward rapidly so as to allow the latter to meet the provisions of the contract.

—In the army one of the most laughable pastimes indulged in by the soldiers in camp during Thanksgiving and Christmas was chasing a shaved pig, the captor roasting it for a holiday feast. An illustration of this will be one of several attractions among them a sack race, at the picnic for the benefit of St. Joseph's church, to be advertised later on, and which promises to be one of the most successful ever held in this vicinity.

Pensions for the Veterans.

[From the Hackensack Republican.]

The veterans of the late war all over the country, and especially those of New Jersey are fortunate in having represented in the U. S. Senate by a true hearted soldier like John Sewell. No matter how much some people may differ with him, all admit his fidelity and broad-gauge views, particularly where the welfare or the old soldiers is concerned; his sympathies are strong and he has worked for them, and his efforts are ceaseless in their behalf. Especially is he active for the veterans who carry about in their own persons the honored marks of their gallantry in the face of the enemy, and their devotion to their country. In the accomplishment of his efforts to secure for them what they have merited and deserve, Mr. Sewell is as much the statesman in the Senate as he was the brave soldier on the field.

These remarks are called out by his recent success in passing through the Senate his general pension bill, which so amends the pension laws as to increase the amount now received by our one-legged and one-armed heroes. It proposes that all persons on the pension-rolls, and all persons hereafter granted a pension, who, while in the military or naval service of the United States and in line of duty, shall have lost one hand or one foot, or been totally or permanently disabled in the same, shall receive a pension of $36 a month; for the loss of one leg at the thigh, rolls, and all persons hereafter granted a pension, who in like manner shall have lost either one leg at the thigh or two legs at or above the knee, or been totally or permanently disabled in the same, shall receive a pension of $36 per month; and that all persons hereafter granted a pension who in like manner shall have lost either an arm at the shoulder joint or two arms at the hip joint, shall receive a pension at the rate of $45 per month. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to repeal section 4700 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, or to affect the rate of pay for disabilities therein mentioned to be proportionately divided for any degree of disability established for which section 4699 makes no provision.

In the brief debate which followed Gen. Sewell said:

This bill while general in its character, is limited to the men who have lost limbs in the service. The classification under the existing law is:

1. For all amputations below the knee or ankle joint.....$24 00
2. For all amputations above the knee or stiff.....30 00
3. For all amputations at the hip or shoulder joint.....37 50

The committee had a great many bills under consideration, from which they framed this original bill, preserving the present classification as I have stated it for those in injuries, but raising the $24 class to $30; the $30 class to $36, and the class receiving $37.50 to $45. The increase has been based on a plan made by the pension office, from the pensioners themselves and medical certificates in connection with their claims as to the increase of suffering by reason of these amputations. As they grow older they become less able to work and more feeble, and as a consequence ought to be more of a burden on the generosity of the Government. The number of pensioners and the amount of money involved in this bill is as follows: The class now receiving $24 per month numbers 15,032, the amount on the pay expended, $4,326,912, and the increase proposed is $1,-084,728. The class receiving $30 per month numbers 4,787, the present amount of their annual value of their pensions is $2,872,720, and the proposed increase is $570,744. Of the class now receiving $37.50 there are 1,-384 pensioners, and the annual value of their pensions now is $1,245,600, and the increase proposed by the bill is $42,360; making the total increase by this bill $1,694,772.

Mr. Harris—That is the annual increase?

Mr. Sewell—An annual increase of $1,694,-772.

I submit, Mr. President, that this is a well-defined class that is not capable of increase, that the number is diminishing every day, and that we ought to do justice to them when we propose to vote for a bill of this kind. The increase is one that ought to be made. These are the men who, I think, it may say, of the war who carry about with them apparent to the eye of everybody their disabilities; and if there is any class of pensioners to whom we ought to be liberal, these are the ones.

The bill was amended so as to include those wounded so near the joint that an artificial limb cannot be used.

In the preparation, conduct and passage of this bill Gen. Sewell has performed a service for the veterans of New Jersey which they are not likely to forget.

Fell from a Scaffold.

About four o'clock yesterday afternoon Peter Haught, a man about sixty years of age, who is employed on the new building in course of construction by Messrs. Cook Bros., on Park avenue, fell from a scaffold and sustained painful injuries. The scaffold on which the man was working was erected at the foot of a deep hole and within about eight feet of the ground. He had been admonished to the more caution in passing along the scaffolding, but at the time of the accident facing the schute when he is supposed to have lost his balance and toppled over backwards to the ground striking on his head and right shoulder. The injured man was taken into Reynolds' drug store, when it was found that severe bruises had been inflicted on the right cheek. Dr. Carman was in attendance and dressed the wound and the unfortunate man was taken to his home. The shoulder was thought to have been badly fractured, but a hasty examination failed to discover any other than the injury mentioned.

The New Soldiers' Home.

The commissioners appointed at the last session of the Legislature to select a site for a soldiers' home in this state have not yet completed their labors. The committee have visited a number of places, but the result of their visits have not been made known. As a large number of bills have been suggested the selection may not be made in some time. There were 268 inmates in this institution at the close of the last year, and the total cared for during that period was 574. Of this number 454 served the government in New Jersey regiments. The cost of maintenance during the past fiscal year was $30,-349.06.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

Twelfth Meeting — Short Session — Netherwood Hotel Licensed.

The City Council convened in adjourned session in the Council chamber at half-past eight o'clock last evening. At that time there were present Councilmen Bowers, Cook, Dunham, Dumont, Gallup, Shipman and Vorhees—7. The absent members were President Beguelin and Councilmen Cox, Goddard and Marsh—4.

On motion of Mr. Dunham Mr. Dumont was elected president pro tem.

The clerk called the roll, and upon motion of Mr. Cuthbert the reading of the minutes of the last meeting were dispensed with.

The clerk read the petitions of John H. Haskard and Callahan & Co. for peddler's license, and they were referred to the License Committee.

A petition from Morgan Bird was read asking permission of Council to move frame building on East Fourth street, near Park avenue, to make room for a proposed brick barn. The petition was referred to the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee with power.

A petition was referred to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee with power, from John A. Benner asking the privilege of erecting a frame shed at No. 66 East Front street on the premises owned by Jacob Voehl, said shed to be used for the shelter of animals.

The clerk read a petition from Mr. E. V. Shotwell asking permission to repair the frame dwelling at No. 14 Elm Place, also to build new frame house on the same lot. Mr. Bowers asked to be enlightened as to what the fire limits included, and the clerk read off the boundaries. The petition of Mr. Shotwell was referred to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee with power.

A petition signed by Messrs. A. B. Dunlap, J. R. Miller and others was read, asking Council to widen three walks at the intersection of Broadway and Third, Fourth and Sixth streets (east) and was referred to the Committee on Streets with power. At this juncture of the proceedings Councilman Goddard entered the Council Chamber and took his seat.

The clerk read a petition from L. A. Rheaume & Co., asking Council for the privilege of covering with iron shingles the roof of a building already erected at the corner of Peace and Fourth streets. The petition was granted.

A petition was read signed by Messrs. F. C. Langhorne, Chas. S. Guion, A. D. Cook, Job Male, B. O. Bowers and others, property owners, asking that La Grande avenue from Crescent avenue, east, be macadamized with crushed stone to the depth of 4 1-2 inches by eight feet wide, and property owners agreeing to pay within ten cents per lineal foot of the entire cost. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The following claims were presented and referred to the Committee on Streets:

|---|---|
| George M. Angleman | $313 50 |
| Joseph T. Vail | 42 94 |

The bill of W. J. Force & Bro., $77.30, was referred to the Committee on Printing and Stationary, where it remained over until the regular meeting.

Mr. Bowers from the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee, in whose charge a petition from H. M. Bartlett was placed, at a former meeting been intrusted, asking for permission to erect a frame building at 24 West Fourth street, had no favorable report to make and the request was not granted.

The License Committee reported favorably on petition of Callahan & Co., and J. H. Haskard for peddlers license. The report was received and the licenses granted.

Mr. Voorhees from the Committee on Streets presented a report recommending the laying of crosswalks at Sycamore and Fifth streets and also at Sycamore and Fifth streets. The recommendation adopted.

The Street Committee reported on an alleged nuisance in the shape of an artificial stagnant pond at Netherwood. The report was received and laid on the table.

The Street Committee reported correct bills of George M. Angleman and J. T. Vail and they were ordered to the Auditing Committee for final signature.

Mr. Bowers moved to take from the table the Netherwood Hotel license. Carried.

Mr. Cowperthwaite moved that the license be granted, and it was so ordered by a vote of 6 to 2.

Mr. Voorhees called up the bill of M. Udall $165, which was laid over at a former meeting. The bill was for work done on Farrington avenue and was thought to have been Committee.

Mr. Simpson from Auditing Committee reported correct all bills referred to said committee. The report was received and the bills ordered paid warrants on the treasurer. The Council then adjourned.

DUNELLEN NOTES.

Rev. Mr. Krantz, pastor of the M. E. church, is away on a visit for a few days. Rev. Mr. Krantz was supplied on Sunday morning by Mr. Miles.

There will be a public Prohibition meeting held this evening in the rooms of the W. C. T. U. hall, and a cordial invitation is extended to all. Good speakers will be in attendance and address the meeting.

The Sunday school picnic of the Presbyterian Sunday school were held in that edifice on Sunday evening. The interior of the church was filled to overflowing. Miss Maggie Swackhammer presided at the organ and was accompanied by Mr. Bodine on a cornet and Mr. Purse on a clarionet. The old efficient service in the rendition of the musical portion of the program. The exercises were very interesting and entertaining. Especially was the "Teacher's Dream," which was creditably enacted by Miss Addie Thomas, with seven young ladies representing a "circle of stars." Remarks befitting the occasion were made by the Rev. Mr. Samson of South Jersey. The decorations were both neat and tasty.

Patents to Jerseymen.

The following patents have been issued to residents of the State during the week ending June 19:

D. F. Davis, Jersey City, governor for engines; P. F. Guthrie, Franklin, pumping and paraffin; Joseph Hoffman, Hoboken, manufacture of tubes; John W. King, Hoboken, shade fastening; Charles Lindley, Paterson, suspender attachment; F. B. Mallory, Orange, shutter worker; J. E. Opp, Jersey City, vegetable cutter; C. V. Pool, Newark, making nitro cellulold; F. B. Stanford, Elizabeth, car coupling.

Further Particulars in the Daily Matter.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—Several inaccuracies appear in your account of the McCarthy-Daly litigation printed in yesterday's EVENING NEWS. In justice to all parties, please make the following corrections:

Bloor she began her suit, Ellen McCarthy has already received from the late Daly's estate cash on account of her mortgage, the sum of $3,416.97.

Mr. Moore's claim for rent was $616.64. In consideration of Mr. Moore's consent stating in open court that the evidence of Miss McCarthy satisfied him of her honesty in taking the mortgage, an amicable settlement was made with Mr. Moore, by which he accepted $200 without costs.

In the City Court, Maurice Daly was not acquitted on the charge of selling liquor on Sunday, but, on the contrary, was convicted by the verdict of the jury and fine was imposed upon him, which fine to be paid after first appealing the cause.

There was no order of court allowing Mr. Moore $250, or any other sum for charges, and, on the contrary, it was agreed in open court that the costs should be retained by Mr. Moore without any charge for storage upon his giving security in the sum of five thousand dollars for the production to answer the decree of the court.

The final decree of the court directs that the balance of the proceeds of the $250 sale be said be applied as follows to pay unto the said complainant, Ellen McCarthy, the sum of $4,538.61 on the interest and for costs. This is in addition to the $2,416 already obtained by her.

Yours respectfully,

ELLEN A. MARSH.

[In unraveling the intricacies of the above unsavory case reported yesterday, we get, through the above communication, further particulars not before known, putting, through the efforts of counsel, a slightly better aspect on the case, and we gladly publish it to get the record straight. If Daly's property could be got at, the decree of the court, through the efforts of counsel for Ellen McCarty, might restore her property, but as only $1,294.97 were realized from the sale under the mortgage, if she receives even $300 of that amount in addition to the $3,416.97 already received, we think she will be lucky, as the court expenses will probably exceed $1,000.—ED.]

PERSONAL.

Councilman John S. Dumont returned on Sunday night, after a three weeks' business trip through the West.

Mr. F. M. Darby of East Second street is at present registered at The Wachusett House, Princeton, Mass.

Master Fred Miller of Peace street recently underwent a successful operation as a permanent cure for an impediment in his speech.

Mrs. John M. Agans of Three Bridges, Hunterdon county, N. J., has been on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. James Martin, of West Second street.

Mr. S. C. Rooney of East Ninth street left the city to-day for Knoxville, Tenn., where he will permanently reside. The family of Mr. Rooney will remain in this city for the present.

President of the Board of Education, John W. Murray, arrived home on Saturday per steamer "Elder," after an extended trip through Europe. Mr. Murray experienced considerable sea-sickness on the return trip.

Corporation Counsel Marsh and wife will sail for Europe on Friday of this week, to be absent several months. Ex-Judge George F. Baydam will act in the capacity of corporation counsel during Mr. Marsh's absence.

Rev. Dr. N. E. Smith, formerly pastor of the Trinity Reformed church here, but now of Brooklyn, N. Y., was on a visit here a few days this morning, called by his wife, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Dumont, corner Sixth street and Crescent avenue.

Rev. Mr. Koechli together with his wife who has been ailing for some months past have gone to Martinville, where the change of air it is thought will prove beneficial to them in health. The reverend gentleman will return in time to conduct services on Sunday next.

Daniel Conway died at his home on West Fourth street at about four o'clock this morning after a three days' illness from hemorrhage. Deceased was 66 years old at the time of his death and had always been known as a hard-working and industrious citizen. About a year ago he sustained a severe blow in the loss of his son, another having died about six months ago. The funeral will take place on Thursday. Interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Mary Jane Rawley, widow of the late Judge John Rawley, died suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. E. Faber, with whom she had been stopping, on Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, at about eleven o'clock yesterday morning, from heart disease. Deceased had apparently enjoyed moderate health up to the time of her death. Yesterday morning she arose as usual, and during the forenoon rode into *town with her daughter. Shortly after re*turning from her morning ride the old lady was stricken down with death and Dr. Carman all aid could be summoned. Private funeral services will be held from the residence of her daughter to-night, after which the remains will be taken to Clavarack, Columbia county, N. Y., for interment.

STATE NOTES.

A Rome Rule meeting will be held to-morrow night in the Academy of Music in Newark. Governor Abbett and Mayor Cleveland will be among the speakers.

William J. Simpson, driver of an ice cart, was arrested yesterday on a charge of manslaughter. While he was driving through Oak street, Jersey City, Friday Minnie Rogers, age five, darted in front of the horses and was run over. She died a few hours later.

The body picked up in the river near the Pennsylvania railroad at Jersey City on Saturday was that of Henry Gee of No. 194 Ludlow street, New York. The boy was eight years old and had been missing for a week. He was out of work and is supposed to have drowned himself.

A dog cart, with four persons, driven by the eldest son of J. F. Freeman of East Orange, passed over Main street on Saturday evening at a rapid gait. In turning the corner of Prospect street the shafts were broken off and the vehicle was thrown to the ground. The coachman received severe injuries to his spine and a bad scalp wound. The others escaped unhurt.

Under the caption, "A German Poison," The Republique Francaise says: "There is an article on the markets of this city, Paris and throughout France to which we desire in the most earnest manner to call the attention of the sanitary authorities of the Republic. It is a liquid preparation to the express purpose of the falsification of genuine and delicious cognac, Jamaica rum and like ones. Its name, as expressed on the labels of the blue flasks in which it comes into trade, is Suine essence of rum, and is composed out of the lees of wine. A sample of it seized by the sanitary police and analyzed at the municipal laboratory shows that its base is cheap alcohol, which has been subjected to the action of nitric acid, and afterward ethereified with a mixture of ethylic, amylic, and methylic alcohol. It is calculated that 10 grams four ounces or the oil mixed with the proper quantity of best rout spirits alcohol from the beetroot will make a barrel of fine cognac brandy."—The Argonaut.

I had to laugh at some of the encounters to the fight. Some of the fellers that had breathed heavily. The writers evidently did not know that I always expand my lungs to their fullest capacity after I have fought a few minutes, and have learned to use one a man half his lungs in breathing. When I fight a while I expand some full, and I get a great deal of great value to me."—New York Journal Interview.

NEW ENGLAND MANUFACTURERS AND MECHANICS' INSTITUTE BURNED.

A DOZEN MEN PERISH WITH IT.

The Great Building Which Covered About Five Acres of Ground Reduced to Ashes in a Few Minutes—Four Hundred Horse Cars Destroyed—Paints and Oils Feed the Flames.

BOSTON, June 22.—At 2:30 yesterday an alarm of fire summoned the department to the immense New England Manufacturers and Mechanics' Institute building at the extreme western end of Huntington avenue, recently purchased by the Metropolitan Horse railroad and used by the company as a storage and repair shop. A second and general alarm was immediately sent. Within fifteen minutes the entire building was a mass of flames. The fire caught in the front right corner on Huntington avenue, directly under the dome. Before the first engine reached the shop the oil and paint stored therein spread over an immense space and proved a speedy carrier of the flames.

There were many men inside when the fire broke out, and all rushed to the rear windows. Most of them were helped out, but while a rush was being made to one of the windows at which a scorched and bleeding face was seen, the poor fellow fell back into the seething torrent and was past all help. Others, it is feared, have been went back into the burning building to save property and was never seen to come out. Chester L. Hamilton and E. L. Farrar had charge of the property at the time, and endeavored to pull out some of the cars and were most frightfully burned. The roof fell in, and the upper part of the building, and five minutes later the sides of the building nearest the roof fell. The iron work offered no resistance to the flames, and the strong bands were pulled and twisted. All that could be done was to play upon the burning walls and inside, as there was no hope of saving anything. In less than two hours the building remained a charred mass and broken, crumbling walls. While the thousands of spectators from neighboring roofs were looking on in helpless impotencia, a horrible tragedy was being enacted within, all out of sight and unknown to the throng. After the flames had been subdued there were found in the ruins, among the charred ruins for possible victims, and up to 9 p. m. eight dead bodies had been removed, most of them nurses' bedding, though it is believed that there are at least four more bodies in the ruins.

Inside the building were 400 horse cars, fully repaired, worth over $700. The repairs and refurnishing of the building amounted to about $50,000, making the total loss, with the building itself, about $400,000. The insurance on the building was one of the grandest sights seen in this city since the great fire of 1872. Firemen worked bravely, but fought against odds which could not be overcome. The wind blew freshly and added much to the power of the flames as they rapidly swept from one part of the building to the other. The New England Manufacturers and Mechanics' institute building was erected in 1881, and in the autumn of that year its first industrial fair was held in it. Preparing toward the close of August and continuing till the close of October. This was a gratifying success. The financial statement presented at the annual meeting of the corporation, held the succeeding winter, showed that it netted about $16,000.

The exhibition building of the institute covered about five acres of land. Its area for its available floor space for exhibition purposes exceeded eight acres. The main entrance opened on a ample vestibule, which had a depth of 134 feet and a lateral extent of about 250 feet. Three broad avenues extended across the width of the vestibule. One directly in front of the main avenue of the main building and the others led diagonally toward the other two aisles, extending the full length of the main floor parallel with the main or central aisle. The interior construction of the main building was without partitions, so that the view was unobstructed. Two galleries, each sixty-three feet wide, extended lengthwise of the building, built parallel with the side walks and at a distance of sixty-three feet from them. There were galleries also at the front and rear of the building constructed in the ordinary way. The front gallery was especially appealing with the dimensions of the vestibule below. The space bounded by the gallery fronts was 440 feet long, 126 feet wide, cease of columns and up to the roof, a height of fifty feet. Grand exhibitions were held in the building during the autumn of 1883 and 1884. During the winters of those years it was utilized as a skating rink, for which purpose it was admirably adapted for the dimensions of the floor space. The building was without heating apparatus

CONGRESS REPROVED.

THE PRESIDENT GIVES PENSION LEGISLATION A HAULING OVER.

Fully Six Hundred Bills Passed During the Present Session and the Executive Disgusted With Such Lavish Liberality—Hard Hit at Absentees.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The president yesterday sent to congress three veto messages. Of these, six were addressed to the senate and nine to the house of representatives. All but two of the vetoes referred to pension bills. The two exceptions were bills providing for the erection of public buildings at Zanesville, O., and Sioux City, Ia., respectively. In his message vetoing the bill granting a pension to Elizabeth De Kraft, the president says his objection is that it is of no possible advantage to the beneficiary, as the present pension laws give her all the advantages she would receive under the special act.

In concluding his message on this case, the president says: "I am so thoroughly tired of disapproving gifts of public money to individuals who, in my view, have no right or claim to the same, notwithstanding the apparent sympathy which prompts the act, I impose with a feeling of relief in cases where I find it unnecessary to determine the merits of the application, thus sparing of the prompt censure and ill-advised grants of pensions which have lately been presented to me for approval, I have spoken of their 'apparent unconscious sanction' in recognition of the fact that a large proportion of these bills have never been submitted to a majority of either branch of congress, but are the result of personal sessions held for the express purpose of their consideration, and attended by a small minority of the members of the respective houses of the legislative branch of government. Thus, in considering these bills, I have not felt that I was aided by the deliberate judgment of the congress, and when my duty to disapprove many of the bills presented, I have hardly regarded my action as a dissent from the conclusions of the people. Nevertheless, I have not been insensible to the suggestions which should influence every citizen, either in private station or official place, to exhibit not only a just but a generous appreciation of the services of our country's defenders. In reviewing the pension legislation presented to me many bills have been approved upon the theory that every doubt should be resolved in favor of the proposed beneficiary. I have not, however, been able to entirely divest myself of the belief that the public money appropriated for pensions is the soldiers' fund which should be devoted to the indemnification of those who, in the defence of the Union and in the nation's service, have worthily suffered, and who, in the day of their dependence resulting from such suffering, are entitled to the benefactions of their government. This reflection leads to the bestowal of pensions a kind of sacredness, which invites the adoption of such principles and regulations as will exclude perversion, as well as insure a liberal and generous application of grateful and benevolent designs. Heedlessness and disregard of the principle which underlies the granting of pensions is unfair to the wounded crippled soldier who is honored in the just reception of the government bounty. A man should never find himself side by side on the pension roll with those who have been tempted to attribute the natural ills to which fell the lot of all who bore arms to the service. Every relaxation of principle in the granting of pensions invites applications without merit, and encourage those who, for gain, large bounty meet for secession. There is the demoralizing lesson taught the people that as against the public treasury the most questionable expedients are allowable. During the present session of congress 613 special pension bills have been submitted to me, and I am advised that 111 more have received the favorable action of both branches of congress. I will be presented within a day or two, making over 600 of these bills which have been passed up to this time during the present session, nearly three times the number passed at any entire session since the year 1861. With the pension bureau fully equipped and regulated by the most liberal rules in active operation and supplemented in its work by constant special legislation, it certainly is not unreasonable to suppose in all the years that have elapsed since the close of the war, the majority of the meritorious claims for pensions have been presented and determined. I have now more than 130 of these bills before me awaiting executive action. It will be impossible to bestow upon them all the examination they deserve and many will probably become operative without should be rejected. In the meantime I venture to suggest the significance of the startling increase in this this kind of legislation and the consequence involved in its continuance.

Standing by Civil Service.

BOSTON, June 22.—Governor Robinson has vetoed a bill giving the preference in appointments to office to honorably discharged soldiers and sailors, without civil service examination. The veto message concludes over 3,000 words. The governor thoroughly reviews the operation of the civil service reform law during the two years since its enactment, declares that the system has worked effectively and smoothly and is sustained by public sentiment, and he refuses to participate in any move "which shall tend to the impairment of the system or tear it down by piecemeal in response to a claim, unfounded and unsupportable, that full and just recognition is not secured to the veterans of the late war." The governor reviews and combats every argument advanced against the civil service law.

A BIT OF A SCANDAL.

Parson Mesmares Held In Bail For Alleged Assault.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—Rev. Waldo Mesmares, the well-known pastor of the Northwestern Independent church of this city, was arrested yesterday and held in $2,000 bail by Magistrate Clements, charged with attempted abuse of Mrs. C. W. Coulston, who is identified with many charitable enterprises and a leader in the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity.

Mrs. Coulston, who is a member of Mr. Mesmares' church, testified that the clergyman made insinuations to her. When she ordered the room she found Mesmares seated on the sofa. He invited her to a seat beside him. She replied that she would sit on the piano stool. She had hardly seated herself there when, as alleged, Mesmares grasped her about the waist and pulled her over on his lap.

Mrs. Coulston broke away and screamed for help. Her cries were responded to by Mr. Coulston. Mr. Coulston immediately went to the assistance of his wife. When she ent

BILL NYE ON GALILEO.

Some Hitherto Unpublished Facts About This Inventor from Wayback.

Galileo, commonly called Galileo, was born at Pisa on the 14th day of February, 1564. He was a man who discovered some of the fundamental principles underlying the movements, habits, and personal peculiarities of the earth. He discovered things with marvelous flimsey. Born, as he was, at a time when the rotary motion of the earth was still in its infancy, and astronomy taught only in a crude way, Galileo started in to make a few discoveries and advance some theories of which he was very fond.

He was the son of a musician, and learned to play several instruments himself, but not in such a way as to arouse the jealousy of the great industries of his day. They came and heard him play a few selections, and then they went home convinced with their own music.

Galileo played in the band.

At the age of 20 Galileo began to discover. His first discoveries were of course clumsy and primitive, but by very close application he began to turn out great and durable discovery that would stick like paste.

It was at this time that Galileo noticed the swinging of the lamps in a church, and observing that the oscillations were of equal duration, he inferred that this principle might be applied in the exact measurement of time. From this little accident, years after, came the clock, one of the most useful of man's dumb friends. And yet there are people who will read this little incident and still hesitate about going to church.

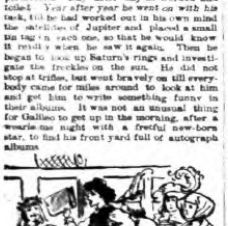
Galileo also invented the thermometer, the microscope, and the proportional compass. He seemed to invent things, not for the money to be obtained in that way, but solely for the joy of being first on the ground. He was a man of infinite genius and perseverance. He was also very fair in his treatment of other inventors. Though he did not personally invent the rotary motion of the earth, he heartily indorsed it and said it was a good thing. He also came out in a card in which he said that he believed it to be a good thing, and that he hoped some day to see it applied to the planets.

He was also the inventor of a telescope that had a magnifying power of thirty times. He presented one to the Venetian senate and it was used in making appropriations for river and harbor improvements.

By telescopic investigation Galileo discovered the mountains and valleys in the moon, but was unable to do anything for it. I have spoken of Mr Galileo all the way through in his active informality, calling him by his first name, but I do not wish to convey the impression that though there was such a striking likeness in our ages that I am ashamed to be using his given name while talking of him.

Galileo used up nights and visited with Venus through a long telescope which he had made in town from an old bamboo fishing rod.

But Galileo was by a very enervating branch of science, and his family came down to terrible ruin with red, heavy eyes, that were always full of unshed tears. Still he persevered. Day after day he worked and toiled. Year after year he went on with the task, till he had worked out in his own mind the satellites of Jupiter and placed a small tin tag to each one, so that he would know it if it should ever be saw it again. Then he began to look up Saturn's rings and investigate the freckles on the sun. He did not stop at trifles, but went bravely on till everybody came for miles around to look at him and get him to write something funny in their albums. It was not an unusual thing for Galileo to get up in the morning, after a wearisome night with a fretful new-born star, to find his front yard full of autograph albums.



Galileo's book sold well on the trains.

Galileo was the author of a little work called "Il Dascarsi e Dunas-Tragioni Matematiche Intiorno a due Muove Scienze." It was a neat little book, of about the medium height, and sold well on the trains, for the Pisan newsboys on the cars were very affable, as they are now, and when they came and looked at arrival time, books on a passenger's leg and poured a long rate into his ear about the wonderful beauty of the work and its great value. He could see the book from the rear of the last car, where it had been hanging on behind, the passenger would most always buy it and enough of the name to keep up the fun.

He was discovered the isochronism of the pendulum. He saw that the pendulum at certain times was slow, and looked around under the eves, and that it dropped and did not interfere with its work with the old rest. He began to apply the one with the aid of his new idea, and it worked all right, only more northwardly. As a result, in ten days he had the pendulum on the back again.

Galileo was ordered to be liberal in his religious views, and was personally in the matter of the text praises, claiming that there were passages in the Bible which did not literally mean what the translator said they did. He also was where God was pleased it. So long as he discovered stars and isochronisms and such things as that he succeeded, but when he got into religion he got people's feelings beliefs he got into trouble. He was cedity fly from Pisa, we are told by the historian, and we are assured at the same time that Galileo, who had always been far, far ahead of all competitors in other things, was equally successful as a flier.

Galileo received but sixty cents per year for his salary at Pisa, and a part of that he took in town orders, worth only sixty cents on the scud.—Bill Nye in Chicago News.

THE LATE MR. HOE.

ONE OF THE CELEBRATED INVENTORS OF THIS CENTURY.

A Name That Will Remain Inseparably Connected with the Development of the Printing Press—The Simple Device Which Brought Him Fame.

THE LATE RICHARD M. HOE.

The recent death of Col. Richard M. Hoe in Florence, Italy, closes the career of one whose name is known wherever the news paper is used to spread intelligence. He was the senior member of the firm of printing press makers, and one of the leading inventors and developers of that great lever of public opinion.

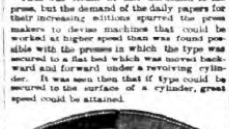
Col. Hoe's father was the founder of the firm. He came to this country from England in 1803, and worked at his trade of carpentry. Through his skill as a workman he was sought out by a maker of printers' material named Smith. He married Smith's sister, and went into partnership with Smith and brother. The printing presses of those days were made chiefly of wood, and Hoe's skill as a wood worker was valuable to the firm. In 1823 Peter Smith invented the hand press, of which we give an illustration, and which will be recognized by many an old printer, though many are in use to this day.

THE SMITH PRESS.

This press was finally supplanted by the Washington press, invented by Samuel Rust in 1826. From the manufacture of the Smith presses Hoe made a fortune, as the inventor died a year after securing his patent, and the firm name was changed to R. Hoe & Co. The demand for hand presses increased so that ten years later it was suggested that steam power might be utilized in some way to do the pulling and tugging necessary in getting an impression. At this time the late Col. Hoe, one of the sons of the founder of the house, was an attentive listener to the discussion in regard to the possibility of bringing steam power to aid the press. Young Richard M. Hoe was born in 1812. He had the advantage of an excellent education, but his father's inventions possessed such a fascination for him that it was with difficulty he was kept at school. He was a young man of 20 before his father allowed him to work regularly in the shop. He had already become expert in handling tools, so that he soon became one of the best workmen. He joined with his father in the belief that steam would yet be applied to the printing press, and the numerous models and experiments they made to that end would, in the light of the present day, appear extremely ridiculous. In 1830 Sir Napier had constructed a steam printing press, and in 1830 Isaac Adams, of Boston, secured a patent for a power press. These inventions were kept very secret, the factories in which they were made being guarded jealously. In 1830 a Napier press was imported into this country for use on The National Intelligencer. Old Maj. Noah, editor of Noah's Sunday Times and Messenger, and also colleague of the port of New York in those days, and being desirous of seeing how the Napier press would work, sent for Mr. Hoe to put it up. He and Richard succeeded in setting up the press, and worked it successfully.

The success of the Napier press set the Hoes to thinking. They made models of its peculiarities and studied them carefully. Then, in pursuance of a plan suggested by Richard, his father sent his partner, Mr. Newton, to England for the purpose of examining new machinery there and to secure models for future use. On his return with ideas Mr. Newton and the Hoes projected and turned out for sale a novel two cylinder press, which became universally popular and soon superseded all others, the Napier included.

Thus was steam at last harnessed to the press, but the demand of the daily papers for their increasing editions spurred the press makers to devise machines that could be worked at higher speed than was found possible with the presses in which the type was placed on a flat bed in which the type moved forward and backward under a revolving cylinder. It was seen then that if type could be secured to the surface of a cylinder, great speed could be attained.



SIR ROWLAND HILL'S DEVICE, 1835.

The above diagrams illustrate Sir Rowland Hill's method of accomplishing this. The type was cast in wedge-shaped, that is, narrower at the bottom. A bevel "mitre" was cut into its side, into which a "lead" fitted. The ends of the "lead," in turn, fitted into a slot in the chase. These rules and these latter were bolted to the cylinder. Anyone who knows anything about type will see the difficulty of using such a system. The inventor, Sir Rowland Hill, the father of penny postage in England, sank, it is said, $30,000 in the endeavor to introduce his method.

In the meantime Col. Hoe had succeeded to his father's business and was giving his attention largely to solving this problem of holding type on a revolving cylinder. It was not until 1840 that he hit on the method of doing it.

After a dozen years of thought the idea came upon him unexpectedly, and was startling in its simplicity. It was simply to make the column rules wedged-shaped instead of the type. The above diagram furnished by Mr. S. D. Tuckee, the surviving head of the firm of Hoe & Co., is a fac-simile of the original drawing in their office. It was this simple device, by the introduction of "lightning presses," that revolutionized the newspaper business of the world, and made the press the power it is. It brought Hoe fame and put him at the head of press makers. His business grew to such dimensions that he has in his employ in his New York factory from 800 to 1,500 hands, varying with the state of trade. His London factory employs from 150 to 200 hands.

And yet the great daily presses craved still faster presses. The result was the development of the web press, in which the paper is drawn into the press from a continuous roll at a speed of twelve miles an hour. The very latest is a machine called the supplement press, capable of printing complete from paper rolls from eight to twelve pages, depending on the demand of the day, so that the papers slide out of the machine with the supplements gummed in and the paper folded ready for delivery.

Of late years many other remarkably ingenious presses of other makers have come into the market, but still the genius of R. Hoe has left an indelible mark in the development of the printing press.

THE WEBSTER STATUE.

(Photographed by Mr. Kimball).

It was but fitting that a monument to Daniel Webster should be unveiled on the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, for few Americans appreciated the result of that battle to the full one that did the great mind of Webster. He has left his thoughts on the matter in the two orations he delivered over the commencement and completion of the Bunker Hill monument, and these two efforts of his shall always remain classics in our literature. On June 17, in Concord, the capital of Webster's native state of New Hampshire, will be unveiled a statue to the sturdy statesman.

The oration will be delivered by President Bartlett, of Dartmouth college. There will be present all the military of the state, and representatives from all the Dartmouth alumni associations in the country, and it is expected that there will be a greater gathering in the city on that day than has ever been together there on any previous occasion. George W. Nesmith will preside, and among those who will make addresses are William M. Evarts, of New York; Congressman Bingham, of Pennsylvania; Gen. B. F. Butler, Robert C. Winthrop and Richard Olney, of Boston. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the Dartmouth alumni will meet, and Mr. Mellen Chamberlain, of the Boston public library, will deliver an oration.

The bronze figure is eight feet in height and weighs 2,000 pounds. Its pedestal raises ten feet above the ground. It cost $12,000, and is from the design of Benjamin Pierce Cheney of Boston, to the state of New Hampshire. No imperishable bronze was needed in this case to keep the memory of his people. But is well that he should be brought often before the youth of America as an example to emulate.

A Blind Man of Ohio.

From Youngstown, O., comes the story of a blind man, who is as remarkable in his way as the late Peter Fawcett, the British postmaster general, was. The careers of both show what a man can do who has a determined will, though he is deprived of the first and great est of the five senses.

THE BLIND MAYOR.

Walter Lowrie Campbell was born at Salem, O., in 1846, of Scotch-Irish parentage. When he was 3 years old the children at school where he was one day began throwing lime at each other during recess. A piece struck little Walter in the eye and cut a deep gash. He lost his sight from the accident.

But he studied music so industriously that at a very early age he became an expert pianist and organist. He was a music teacher a while. He received his early education at the institution for the blind at Columbus, Ohio, and at Philadelphia. Later he attended the Western Reserve college, in Ohio, and graduated there. He afterward studied for the legal profession at the Harvard Law school.

Neither Latin, mathematics nor law offered any impediment to this victorious blind athlete. He was lawyer, editor and business man. He writes with his own hands by means of grooved paper. He was mayor of Youngstown, O., a while, and made a remarkable record as a municipal reformer. He is married, and has two beautiful children. By his own efforts he has amassed a comfortable property. He finds his way alone through the streets of the large cities solely by his cane. He has a gentle, slightly melancholy manner. No wonder the melancholy is there!

DOGS HAVE THEIR DAY.

A Haven Where Vagrant Curs Live in Pampered Luxury.

HARITY covers a multitude of strange notions, and is exhibited in many curious ways. The Ellen M. Gifford House for Vagrant Dogs illustrates one of those freaks of the charitably inclined

THE HOME FOR DOGS.

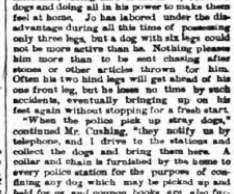
This institution is situated at Brighton, on the outskirts of Boston. The estate comprises one and a quarter acres, on which is erected a handsome stone and brick edifice, designed expressly for its present use. The building cost $15,000. On the ground floor is the office, reception room and kitchen, where the food for the canine inmates is carefully prepared by a trained cook. In the rear of the main building are the kennels, connected with a series of yards, in which the favored brutes may exercise.

This home was established two years ago by Mrs. Ellen Gifford, of New Haven, and it was then presented to the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, but the society did not pay much attention to the institution as it seemed to need, so Mrs. Gifford resumed control of it herself recently. Besides a very efficient superintendent the home is possessed of an assistant superintendent, in a three-legged terrier named Jip, whose portrait is given in the initial letter of this article. Jo, said the superintendent, Mr. Cushing, was the first home of the house two years ago, and he had remained as a sort of assistant superintendent, taking care of the newly received dogs and doing all in his power to make them feel at home. He has lately developed the advantage during all this time of possessing only three legs, but a dog with six legs could not be more active than he. Nothing pleases him more than to see two dogs engaged in stones or other articles thrown for him. Often his two hind legs will get ahead of his one front leg, but he loses no time by such accidents, but merely bringing them on his feet again without stopping for a fresh start.

"When the police pick up stray dogs," continued Mr. Cushing, "they turn us by telephone, and I drive out to the stations and collect the dogs and bring them here. A collar and chain is furnished by the home to every police station for the purpose of confining any dog which may be picked up and held for us, and coupon books are also furnished so that the police may authorize individuals to send stray dogs to us. We won't receive dogs unless somebody vouches for them as being homeless."

"During the past two years, while it was under the care of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty, we cared for about seventy-five stray dogs and seventy-five or one hundred others. The organized system of collecting such animals was maintained, but we simply took such as were brought to us. Homes were found for some of them, and others were killed, but the present intention is to kill no animals unless they are sick and incurable. If they are in good health or can be cured we keep them and sell them if any one will buy them. If no one will buy them we give them away to persons who will take good care of them, and if no one will take them as a gift we will keep them and care for them indefinitely. Mrs. Gifford has expressly declared that she doesn't want this home to be a slaughter house.

"No dogs will be killed unless they are incurably diseased, and then it will be done without pain by administering cyanide of potassium.



THE APARTMENT OF AN INMATE.

"The dogs are housed at night in their kennels, which are kept clean and well ventilated, and during the day they are turned into yards for exercise. A new pigeon kennel is to be built, and then the capacity of the home will be about fifty dogs. The dogs are fed on meat, curry, vegetables, bread and hasty pudding, and a good many human beings don't fare so well as that."

"We used to take some animals to board, but now we haven't accommodations for boarders, and besides, boarders require a great deal of extra attention. You've no idea how some people care for their pets and feed them, and they expect us to treat them the same if we take them to board. One lady brought a cat here to board while she went into the country, and she wrote me later to learn that her pet had lost its appetite and was homesick. It turned out that the cat had been used to eating fish on a quail and a half pint of oysters every day so it is no wonder that the cat had no appetite for ordinary milk and fish and meat. We used to charge $5 a week for boarding cats, and $1.50 to $2 for dogs, and we had at one time eighteen dogs and seventeen or eighteen cats boarding here."

"We take stray dogs, now, but we used to take in cats as well—either stray cats or boarders. It requires a good deal of room for cats, however, for they can't be kept in pens readily if they are confined too closely, or if they are all kept together. They need yards for exercise, and they multiply so rapidly that we should require very much more land to accommodate them. It is the design ultimately to receive stray cats as well as stray dogs, but more land must be first obtained."

"In this city human beings are daily begging for assistance and committing suicide for the want of it," said a refined looking poor wash woman whom your correspondent met outside the gate, where she was resting a huge bundle of clothes. And so it is, but then we may not criticise the direction by which the founder of this home has displayed her sympathy for suffering for she certainly instituted it with a charitable motive.

JOTTINGS.

—No dry news to-day the weather is too wet.

—The Board of Education held a special meeting last evening.

—To-morrow will finish the final examinations in the public schools of the city.

—The public schools of the city will hold but one session daily during this week.

—A few days ago a horse belonging to John Bonner of East Front street was attacked with colic. The animal died.

—It is stated upon good authority that the New Jersey Central Railroad is to be reorganized, and it is thought that the work will be accomplished by the first of August.

—The Union County Courts will re-convene at Elizabeth, Monday, June 28th, at ten o'clock. The first case to come up is the second trial of Steadman for keeping a disorderly house at Linden. The jury in the first trial failed to agree, hence the second suit.

—The lodgement weather of the past few days has had a deteriorating effect in the progress made in the improvements on Warren Methodist chapel, but as soon as the weather will permit the work of enlarging the chapel is to be pushed forward to completion.

—Somerville Lodge I. O. O. F expect to have a grand time at the Fair Grounds in Somerville, July 5. There will be trotting, foot races, jumping, dancing, and all kinds of amusements. The committee will spare no pains to make it pleasant and agreeable for all visitors.

—The regular semi-monthly excursion via Philadelphia and Reading Railroad to Mauch Chunk and Glen Onoko which was to have taken place to-day was indefinitely postponed on account of the inclement weather. The next excursion of the season to this favorable summer resort will probably take place on July 4th.

—Preparations are being made by the Catholics for a second grand Home Rule mass meeting which will probably be held in St. Mary's Hall during next week. The object of the meeting is said to be for the purpose of aiding the Parnell Parliamentary Fund. Prominent speakers are expected and are expected to be present and address the meeting.

—A slight difficulty arose between property owners on Fifth street on Monday afternoon. Painters who had been engaged to paint a new dwelling on Fifth street near Peace placed their ladders on the grounds of an adjoining resident, much to the detriment of the lady inmates of the house. The matter was amicably adjusted without publicity in the police courts.

A Horse Stolen.

Some time during last night a thief entered the stable of Mr. Gerrit Van Nest Sherwood by prying open the lock on the door and stole therefrom a heavy gray horse, six years old, and about sixteen hands high. Mr. Johnston says that he resides on the premises, but heard no noise whatever about the stable. The horse was the property of Mr. Sand in connection with his coal business, and at the close of the day's work had been returned to the stable and properly cared for and the door securely locked. Early this morning the lock was found to have been pried open and the horse, as stated, missing. A description of the missing animal has been given to the police and a reward of $50 has been offered. Mr. Johnston valued the animal at $300.

Temperance at Millington.

An enthusiastic temperance meeting was held in Millington church on Sunday evening under the auspices of Bonnie Dundee Division, No. 97, Sons of Temperance of this place. Addresses were made by Messrs. W. B. Ayers, S. R. Scribner, C. Jones and John H. Sayers of this place, and a number of signers to the pledge was obtained. A choir furnished excellent music for the occasion and all those present appeared themselves as highly gratified with the meeting and believe that good will result from the meeting beyond what has already been manifested.

THE APPROACHING CAMPAIGN.

More Important than any Election Held for Years.

The Newark Evening News says: Not only is a Governor to succeed Leon Abbett to be elected in this State in November, but there are many other important offices to be filled. The campaign is the most important occurring in four years, as upon the result depends not only the political complexion of the legislature and the chief executive, but in the Congressional delegation, and in a measure the other, the judiciary and many State and county officers. The election of a Republican Governor and a Democratic Legislature would change nearly half the officials in the State government.

A THREE-CORNERED CONTEST.

In the three-cornered gubernatorial contest the most interest is taken. General Clinton B. Fiske, heads the Prohibition party and his campaign is already mapped out. The Democratic and Republican conventions will be held, it is thought before a great many weeks. The Republican nomination appears to lie between General William Ward, ex-Congressman Howey and William Walter Phelps. The Democrats will probably nominate either Attorney-General Augustus A. Hardenbergh, Attorney General Stockton or some dark horse.

The fight for the gubernatorial nomination contest for seats in the Legislature is most important. Upon their body depends the election of a United States Senator to succeed William J. Sewell, and many minor State officers and commissioners.

There are seven State Senators to be elected, who will have a voice in the selection of a successor to United States Senator John R McPherson, whose term expires in 1890.

THE NEXT ASSEMBLY.

Sixty Assemblymen are to be elected in place of thirty-one retiring Republicans and twenty-nine Democrats. It is virtually conceded that in the event of a Republican majority in the Legislature Senator Sewell will be chosen to succeed himself. If the Democrats are successful Mr. Abbett will receive the caucus nomination for United States Senator.

All the districts in the State elect Congressmen in November.

CONGRESSMEN WHO WILL RETIRE.

Those retiring with their politics are as follows:

First District, George Hires (Rep); Second District, Henry Bacon (Rep.); Third District, Robert S. Green, (Dem.); Fourth District, James N. Pidcock (Dem.); Fifth District, Wm. A. Phillips (Rep.); Sixth District, Herman Lehlbach (Rep.); Seventh District, Wm. McAdoo (Dem.)

The Democrats have good fighting chances in five districts presented by Mr. Hires and Mr. Lellbach, where the majorities were small two years ago, and the Republicans have a good chance of success in the district now represented by Mr. Green, and a slender show in that represented by Mr. Pidcock.

Three of those retiring from office are Democrats and two Republicans. The retiring Democrats are Senators Bogart of Bergen, Brinkerhoff of Hudson and Vanderbilt of Passaic, and Assemblymen Warner of Atlantic, Nichols of Cumberland, Youngblood of Morris and Cranmer of Union. Of the counties not represented by Democrats, the Republicans have a fighting chance, namely, Bergen and Hudson. Both counties have most always, however, elected Democratic senators by small majorities. In Cumberland and Morris the Democrats with their antagonists in Morris and Cumberland counties. A Prohibitionist ticket in Atlantic and Cumberland might defeat the nominees of both the other parties, so strong is the sentiment there in that cause. In general, Senate standing will be between Republicans and eight Democrats, and it is improbable that there will be a change of more than one either way, unless Cumberland county should elect a Prohibitionist.

OFFICES TO BE DISTRIBUTED.

The patronage and appointments of the new governor during the first year of his administration will be tremendous. Most of his appointments and nominations are subject to confirmation by the Senate elected this fall. He will nominate a Secretary of State in place of Henry C. Kelsey, Democrat, whose term expires in April, 1887.

An attorney-general in place of John P. Stockton, Democrat, whose term expires in 1887.

A chancellor in place of Theodore Runyon, Democrat, whose term expires in 1887.

A clerk of the Supreme Court in place of Benjamin F. Lee, Democrat, whose term expires March 31, 1887.

A State prison keeper in place of the temporary appointee, whose term expires March 31, 1887.

Supreme Court Judges in place of David A. Depue, Democrat, of Monmouth; Joel Parker, Democrat, of Monmouth, and William J. Magie, Republican, of Union, all of whose terms expire in 1887. A judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals, in place of Jonathan B. Whitehead, whose term expires in 1887. A District Court Judge in Camden county, one in Union, three in Hudson, one in Passaic and one in Mercer.

Also, the commissioners in place of Amzi Dodd and Arthur G. Ogilby; a sinking fund commissioner in place of Eugene B. Dougherty, deceased, for an unexpired term, two railroad commissioners in place of Abraham M. Reynolds and Alexander C. Cattell.

He will also nominate during the session of the next Legislature law judges for Camden and Passaic, a lay judge in Atlantic county, one in Bergen, one in Burlington one in Cape May, one in Cumberland, one in Essex, in place of Judge Ludwick, one in each of Gloucester, Hudson, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Ocean, Salem, Somerset and Union counties, and three judges of pleas in Middlesex, Monmouth and Ocean counties.

The Legislature in joint session will elect two commissioners of pilotage in place of Thomas S. Negus and Robert Simpson, members of the Board of Health, three managers for the Morris Plains Asylum, two of the Board of Managers of Reformatory, two trustees of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, two trustees for the State Industrial School for Boys, and an unlimited number of commissioners of deeds and police justices.

SMALLEYTOWN.

John Wendell was on Saturday presented with a set of double harness by the citizens of Somerville and his nephew, Frank Webster of Raritan.

Some dissatisfaction is expressed by members of the Warren Congregational church with reference to the new pastor, Rev. Augustus Lanman, who was installed about two weeks ago and a "split" in the congregation is likely to follow.

But little work is being done on the roads leading to and from this village. The Sterling road is in a horrible condition and complaints have already been made to Road Overseer John Wendell. The Township Committee will be held responsible in case of accidents which are likely to result from the present inferior condition of this thoroughfare, and there is talk of appealing to the courts to compel the committee to at least make a change in the present hazardous condition.

Mysterious Fatal Shot.

Mr. T. J. Hals and Jerry M. Campion occupy quarters over Irwin's hardware shop on Park avenue. About half-past six o'clock on Monday evening while Mr. Halstead, who is an old man, was standing in the doorway to his room which is in the front part of the building, conversing with Mr. Campion who occupies the rear room, he was startled to hear the crash of glass, at the same time experiencing a sharp sting on the second knuckle of his right hand. In an instant another crashing of glass thor oughly aroused the old gentleman and he sought a place of safety until the fusillade had subsided. Upon recovering from the fright, Mr. Halstead made an examination of the place and found that two holes had been pierced in the front windows, one in each of a set of double panes of glass, and each large enough to admit the passage of a ball from a 22-calibre revolver. The first shot upon entering the room grazed the papering on the wall, and struck the handle of a saw which was suspended from the wall, leaving an indentation thereon. This is thought to have checked the course of the bullet and, glancing off, struck Mr. Halstead, as stated, on the right hand, but without other injury than that stated. Had the progress of the shot not been darted off by coming in contact with the saw handle, Mr. Halstead, who was in a direct line, must certainly have been struck on the head and in all probability killed. The second bullet imbedded itself in the room and failed to find its way to the depth of over an inch.

Inquiry as to the cause of the shooting failed to unravel the mystery, but it is thought to be the result of careless practice in the rear of some of the buildings on the opposite side of the street.

The Result of a Fishing Expedition.

On Monday afternoon Mayor Rockfellow, Clarence Teale, General Freight Agent Joseph Haines, Ticket Agent Edward Nelson, Drugger Thomas Armstrong, and Hardware Arthur Griffen left the city for Lake Hopatcong for the purpose of waging war against the finny tribe with which that lake is said to abound. The party were admirably equipped with broad brimmed hats and other necessary articles of war, and might have been taken for a party of cowboys. But they weren't. The greater part of the night was spent in making the preliminary arrangements for a wholesale onslaught, and it is said that not a single fish was drawn up on the bank of the beautiful lake under command of Pilot "Joe" Haines. Three boats were secured and in couples they embarked for a tour of the lake, which is perhaps thirteen miles in circumference. After fishing for several hours a severe rain storm set in and a council of war was held. The party decided to return to the starting point, where a raid was brought into requisition and suspended from the shoulder of two of the party, the string of fish, about 6 pounds in all, was carried to the train. The fishermen arrived in this city on the 6:03 p. m. train last evening well stuffed with their day's sport. Thomas Armstrong is accredited with having caught the largest fish—a black bass weighing just three pounds. Most of the fish captured were bass, with a few perch and pickerel. One of the fishermen intimated that there is no chance for the fish caught at the lake, and emphatically declared that they had not bought out a fish market on the route. This is the way of all fish stories.—veritable, very.

Narrow Escape of an Express Train.

Engine No. 165 on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad attached to the Philadelphia express train which passes through this city at great rapidity on its way to Philadelphia, daily, had a narrow escape on Monday afternoon from plunging into Newark bay through an open draw. The engine only makes one stop between Jersey City and Plainfield, and that is at Newark. While running at a high rate of speed the steam valve gauge on the engine bursted, rendering the engineer powerless, the throttle valve being wide open at the time. The train kept along at a frightful rate and for momentarily reached the bridge just as it had been closed after letting a vessel pass through. Had the train reached that point but a few seconds earlier an appalling disaster must certainly have resulted. The engine continued its mad flight until midway between Elizabethport and Elizabeth when it makes its first stop. There the steam became exhausted and the train was brought to a stand. Engine 165 was then detached and a fresh substituted, when the train proceeded on its journey. The passengers were not aware of the miraculous escape through which they had just passed.

PERSONAL.

Mr. I. L. McVoy of East Front street is confined to the house by throat troubles.

Mrs. J. T. Ellis, Secretary of the State W. C. T. U., recently organized a Woman's Christian Temperance Union at Cranford, with a membership of 14.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Opdyke and family of West Seventh street started to-day for Sidney's mountain, where they will remain during the summer months.

Prof. John Leal of this city was present at the fifty-fifth anniversary of Dr. Pingry's career as a teacher, which took place in Library Hall, Elizabeth, on Friday evening last. Among the pupils taught by Dr. Pingry during his fifty odd years of tutorship is Sheriff Gen. M. Stiles, William D. Craig and others of this place.

Private funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Mary Jane Rawley who died suddenly on Monday morning, were conducted by the Rev. T. Logan Murphy from the house of her daughter, Mrs. A. E. Parker, on Rockview avenue, last evening. The body was taken to Clavarack, N. Y., on the 7.58 a. m. train this morning, from which place public services were held this afternoon.

An evening sociable was tendered to Mr. A. L. Wilmont, at his home in Metuchen last evening, the occasion being his birthday anniversary. Among those present from this city were Mr. and Mrs. S. C. M. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Houseman, the Misses Grace and Minnie Randolph, Miss Mary L. Allen, Miss Ida Barnes and the Misses P. Schneidenmeuder, Joseph C. Allen, Harry Meeker and Theodore F. Randolph. Music was furnished from this city and the evening was spent in dancing and other amusements.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

What was Seen and Learned in Crossing the Continent—Interesting Water Items.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—A few notes about Denver and her water supply, etc., may be of interest to some of your readers. Denver and the plains of Colorado depend largely upon irrigation for crops, beautiful lawns and gardens, as they get but little rain during the summer months. The city is beautifully laid out city, situated four miles from the foot hills of the Rocky mountains. Her streets are broad, her walks sixteen feet wide. Many of her streets have lawns 16 to 30 feet wide on the sidewalk and drive, with two rows of shade trees, one on each side of the lawn. Denver has a population of about 40,000. Her water supply is from four artesian wells, and is forced up by immense pumps, every lawn and garden has its tap for irrigation. Three times each week, and lawns are so irrigated that they are as green and fresh as if they had daily showers. This water seems to be in the city on the same level and then helps to irrigate and flood the lands for grass or other crops. The supply is constant, and there is no way to be afraid at the time and seasons seen to demand.

TOO FAST.

[Plainfield is "the Colorado of the East." It will be especially interesting at this time to know something about the water supply of Denver, the capital of the Colorado of the West, from the pen of a well known Plainfielder, just from Denver. We refer to Ethan Lanphear.—Ed.]

WESTFIELD.

Louis Buddell of Oakland returned Saturday from Europe.

Mr. H. Thompson will close his residence here for a few years. He expects to sail for England next Saturday.

The question of having a public exhibition of fire works on July 5th is being agitated very strongly.

Mr. E. Anderson of Central avenue is going to sell out as soon as possible and remove to the West for the benefit of his health.

James L. Miller has been putting over one hundred yards of crushed stone on his road running by his property on Elm street at his own expense.

There is danger that Sam Godshalk will lose his eye. Frederick Charles Miller, the news just getting out that he took unto himself a wife. Miss Mary J. Fay is now Mrs. Miller.

STATE NOTES.

St. John's Commandery, K. T., of Elizabeth, will take part in the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the Masonic Hall at Orange on next Thursday afternoon. The Grand Lodge of Masons of New Jersey will have charge of the affair.

Janitor Van Hise of the Newark Court House, who has officiated as the New Jersey hangman for the last ten years, was sentenced to three years in the State prison for having induced one of his fellow's subordinates to make false oath to a bill for seven dollars for whitewashing.

Mrs. Catherine Baxter heard strange footsteps in her rooms at No 50 York street, Jersey City, Monday evening and on the close of her chief mates. She procured a revolver and surprised a thief in the closet. She kept him at the corner of the child's bedroom for policeman. The thief gave the name of Stephen Moran. He had no chance to secure anything.

Charles Kaylor, the driver of a night scavenger's wagon, was driving up Newark avenue, Jersey City, about one a. m. yesterday, when he was startled at a knock made by John Hurst. Before a hose he jumped from the wagon and knocked Hurst senseless to the ground. Hurst was removed to the Hospital, where it was found that his skull was fractured, and that he would probably die. Kaylor is held to await the result of his victim's injuries.

THE REARING OF CHILDREN.

Home Training and Early Influence—Influences Related to False Lessons.

If it were true, as is often asserted by some, that the rearing of children is the merest matter of accident and that our boys and our girls may get back a century or two ago and be none the worse for the change then it would be indeed better that the generation be wiped away Fortunately we know that some things of a serious and enduring vast weight in determining the future of all young persons. It seems highly improbable that the child of virtuous intelligent parentage, or of any thing subjected to proper training, should turn out a murderer or a thief on reaching manhood. We do not look to see the child of too indulgent parentage or too strict discipline equally pernicious. It is impossible not to believe that our children are plastic clay, and that what we mould them they will become. If a boy is allowed in early youth to consider that he has certain physical privileges which make him a sort of nuisance ground, the mistaken parents must expect to reap the result of their fallacies.

A young man, employed by an influential firm, is found guilty of his accounts in confusion. His friends, who liked him for his pleasant manners and general liberality, say that they find his accounts all wrong and that he has betrayed the trust of his employers. They think from thinking of him as a criminal, and yet they find that his income is not in keeping with his income. Defalcation long since ceased to be considered as an individual income depending on one man and not something that may not approach us or ours. It is more the outgrowth of false training and opportunity than one would ordinarily suppose. Dishonesty as a quality it is true, find a man incorruptible by nature and to whom a substance from crime of any degree in pecuniary, but such instances are rare. But it is true that only a very little and the avoidance of vicious associates will keep a young person free from contamination. Certain traits of character the result of a love of ease, a disposition to shake trouble, rather than a deliberately laid scheme to plunder. This certainly accounts for the number of young men who fall by small amounts when they know that defalcation is perfectly certain.

We have no right to give our children false ideas. If the girl who works for her living and toils with her hands could be impressed that finger rings were only suitable when labor of this sort was not necessary, if she could be induced to believe that over dress in her case was not only improper but a stamp of her station, we should have fewer fallen women, they are recruited from this class.—Kansas City Journal.

In Oregon many deer are being killed for their hides, no use whatever being made of the venison.

A LIVELY TILT.

THE TARIFF DEBATE BROUGHT TO THE FRONT AFTER ALL.

Messrs. Morrison, Bragg, Hewitt and Randall Heal Each Other Over the Coals—The Democratic Warhorse Says His Says-A General Shaking Up.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Yesterday's session was a very unusual one. Though it was by some believed Mr. Morrison would not bring up his tariff bill many went through the drenching rain to the Capitol earlier than usual. The galleries were uncomfortably well filled at an early hour. At 11 o'clock Mr. Morrison arose to address the speaker. There were not a dozen present who doubted he was to again call up the tariff bill. Mr. Randall was not in his seat. The morning prayer had been delivered. Upon his desk lay a bundle of papers. It was his tariff bill. If Mr. Morrison had called up the bill, Mr. Randall was offered his as a substitute. It was very once opinion that the bill in question was to come at last. Mr. Morrison, however, did not call up the bill and he attempted to haul Mr. Randall on to the floor when his reached up for a morning speech. Randall pretended not to hear this. Finally Morrison, who was evidently annoyed at the delay of the Republican leaders, Reed and Hiscock. It was a consultation, quick, curt and lively.

The objections from the Republicans was that it was unjust to the soldier element to couple taxation with pensions, advocating the theory that if taxation be necessary, let it be applied to claims of another character, some citing the river and harbor bill, other the southern claims.

When Mr. Henderson, of Iowa, arose the most supreme silence prevailed. He is blessed with a voice almost as loud as the blast of a locomotive. His speech was much after the pattern of those he delivered in the debate on the pens on appropriation bill, full of defiance, and accusing the Democratic party of the right to attempt to create revenue, which he characterized as un-Democratic and unworthy of American statesmanship. Unfortunately for Mr. Morrison gave no measure of his time to Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin, who had no sooner taken his place than he charged Mr. Randall with being a deserter from his party, to be received in open arms by the enemy. Bragg was in his usual sarcastic mood. He passed the lash in a dramatic way, his left hand pointing toward Mr. Randall in a menacing manner, all the time arraigning him for having, as he said, violated the pledges made in 1884 and 1885. Morrison's platform in voting as he did upon the tariff bill last Thursday.

Mr Randall sat quietly in his seat, never taking his eyes from Bragg, but with a look that meant volumes. Bragg's ten minutes expired. Randall was immediately upon his feet. His eyes sparkled and flashed as they never did in the Republican days while rushing to the Democratic side. Democrats rose to their feet. The faintest whisper was audible. Angered and nervous, Randall stepped from his seat, his left hand with his clutched hands raised aloft, with a quick step down the passageway, then turning quietly toward Bragg, said: "I am not one of the gentlemen from Wisconsin, and neither he nor anyone else dare charge me with deserting my party." He continued at some length, but in the main, as he said he had a contempt and supposed it was mutual. He was upon the floor for eight minutes. The longer he spoke the madder he became.

After finishing with Bragg he put on the gloves with Morrison, and attributed to that gentleman a lack of sincerity in his efforts to reform the tariff by not having long ago reported a bill that might have passed. Mr. Randall was opposed to income taxation, and accused Mr. Morrison of a disposition to violate the pledges of the party, when at no time had it ever favored an income tax. At Mr. Randall's conclusion, Mr. Morrison was in a frame of mind to hear from Hewitt, who was that of his antagonist. He dealt in personalities more bitter than those who had preceded him. Mr. Hewitt was more emphatic than usual. He took the ground that this kind of taxation would compel the bondholders who had grown rich from the government to pay their share of the burden of the taxes of the country, as they should do in the matter of pensions, for those who fought while others gathered in the gains.

During the delivery of Hewitt's speech Mr. Randall had an interesting controversy over the pledges of the Democratic party on tariff reform and whether the Morrison bill was in harmony with the platform. Mr. Hewitt contended it was. Mr. Randall accepted the issue, and invited Mr. Hewitt to come and partake of the canvass with his district in November next. Mr. Hewitt replied that he would be glad to go to Mr. Randall's district and talk to his workingmen.

Mr. Hiscock defended the conduct of the gentleman in the Chicago convention. I know this—that neither he nor any other man went on the stump in his state and declared in the platform upon which he did receive it to be from the committee on ways and means. On the contrary, I not only was in town, but I heard him invited there and stumped your state in the exact line of the declarations I make here now. I know that when Governor Hill's canvass came that fall he took care to invite me again, and invited many other men who agreed with me in their conception of that platform, and failed to invite any man to speak there who did not believe in the tariff. The Democratic majority of the state of New York increased from 1,000 in 1884 to 10,000 in 1885, and it was not on any free trade doctrine that was ever announced. I am ready, and I am willing to vote with any one who will seek intelligently to reform the inequalities of the tariff. But I do not choose to be led in that particular. We have had to take one particular bill or nothing. It is asserted that we cannot put on a revenue bill anything that looks to a repeal of internal taxation. I am in favor of internal taxation in the American and not democratic. It was so pronounced by the fathers of our country, and I shall never waive in seeking its repeal in part or in whole.

Mr. McMillin (Tenn.)—Did you vote for the tariff bill of 1883?

Mr. Randall—I voted for it because I believe the people of the United States should be protected from fraud.

At the conclusion of the debate Mr. Morrison moved the previous question on the adoption of his resolution to provide the means of payment in each general pension bill. Mr. Randall moved to lay the motion. The latter was defeated; 126 to 120. Before a vote could be taken on the original motion Mr. Reed moved an adjournment, and the Republicans, by dilatory tactics, consumed the time up to 5 o'clock, when the speaker declared the house adjourned.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—The governor has signed the Sunday law recently passed by the legislature. It goes into effect January 1 next.

NINE MORE VETOES.

Some of the Reasons for Not Granting Pensions.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The nine veto messages sent to the house of representatives by the president were not laid before that body until yesterday morning. They all relate to pension bills. The president disapproves of granting a pension to John Hunter, on the ground that the record shows that Hunter was in the hospital undergoing treatment for rheumatism at the time he alleges he was wounded in a skirmish.

The bill granting a pension to Elizabeth Lace is vetoed for the reason that her husband was discharged from the army incapacitated through a disease which he admitted had been contracted before enlistment.

James W Farris was pensioned sixteen years after he had suffered for chronic diarrhoea. He afterward filed an application for increase of his rate, alleging that in 1885 his eyes became affected in consequence of his previous ailments. The president says: "The ingenuity developed in the constant and persistent attacks upon the public treasury in these claims is unexampled. Although a discharge

THE ANARCHISTS' OATH.

A DETECTIVE INITIATED INTO THE LODGE AT HULL.

Some of the Inside Workings and Counsels of a Dangerous Order—Bills Burned in Order to Make Work For Members—Chicago Connexions.

OTTAWA, June 23.—It has been whispered about for some time that a Socialist order is or about to be established here—numbers, but until the past day or two no person has entertained an idea that there was a lodge within almost a stone's throw of the government buildings. A few weeks since a detective from a neighboring city put in an appearance, and has since been here at work. He has succeeded in unexpectedly unearthing in Hull, the farming center of this county, which lies just across the Ottawa river, not more than a quarter of a mile from the parliamentary building, a society in full blast, with upward of fifty members, most of whom are of the Herr Most stripe, all laborers of the poorest, most ignorant class of French Canadians engaged in the lumber mills, which constitute the only interests of this little city. The detective became in some way a member of the order, and the oath which he was obliged to take was substantially as follows:

"As we and ours have been daily oppressed and robbed, and murdered, so shall we blast, hunt, kill and avenge. As we have been despised, so shall local tyrants, preaching hypocrites, soulless monopolists and scoundrels be assisted by dynamite, by lead, rope, fire or any other means or manner devised and ordered by this group. My friends shall be your friends, and your enemies mine. We shall battle only on sure, refuse mercy to all and have nothing but swift destruction for traitors. I promise, I swear, I will perform and keep this oath. Heaven shall witness and hell shall testify to the righteousness of our cause and to the fidelity of each member."

On the walls of the room referred to were the following and similar mottoes: "Down with the church, state, capital and other villainies," "Liberty or death," "Long live Socialism," "We shall conquer through blood," etc.

The order first started about two months ago with eight members. They meet once a week for instructions and initiation. So far as known no instructions have been received in the practice and use of deadly weapons although in the following letter, received by the society, dictates how they would like to accomplish the end they aim at.

15 SOUTH CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, June 7.

DEAR COMRADE: I write to give you full instructions for the making and handling of dynamite bombs we want for our fête. The materials are not expensive and there is certainly no danger in experimenting with it, and you will find it a very powerful argument at the right time and place. Let your suggestion of trying its strength in the river a good one. Glad to hear of your success and would be pleased to hear from you again should you accept my terms. Must not register the letter. The money will come all right. C. F. LANDTMAN.

This offer was not accepted because of the expense. There has also been a brisk correspondence with 54 West Lake street, Chicago, as the following proves:

"It will simply repay you to send one of your number here. I would introduce him to say number of skilled Anarchists, and show you about the manufacturing of the invincible arguments in dynamite."

"W. R. DONNER."

The detective, being seen by a United Press reporter, said: "In time of peace these desperate villains are the most soft-acting, peace-prophesying al les are perfectly harmless, but let labor troubles extend, or a general uprising of Socialists take place and these fifty, at others which they can count on, would make terrible havoc. Monday night was their meeting, but by mutual understanding it was postponed when Mr. Beckeley they have had their suspicions aroused. There is every reason to believe that through this order lumber mills, which were recently burned, were fired for the purpose of obtaining work for members of the society."

The name of every member is known to the detective. So far no action has been taken to break up the society by arresting the members, and it is doubtful if there will be. The order, knowing their secrets are out, will probably disappear for the present. The object of the detective is to find a certain man who is wanted in Chicago for several crimes, but in this he has been unsuccessful.

Hard to Find Twelve Fools.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The work of selecting a jury for the trial of the indicted Anarchists bids fair to be long and tedious. Thus far only one juror has been accepted, and he by exhaustion. Thirty were examined. Nearly all of them had formed an opinion. The peculiar provisions of the law of this state, which shall exempt from service any ordinary intelligence disqualified for jury service in criminal cases, are being taken advantage of to the utmost in this case.

CONDENSED NEWS.

Mrs. Rachel Rhodes, wife of a farmer near Beaver Falls, Pa., committed suicide by hanging. She left a note to her husband confessing a crime of twenty years ago as the cause of her action.

Judge Nott announced to the Albany (N. Y.) county court that he had been approached by Superintendent McEwan, of the Albany penitentiary, with a proposal of $50 each for every long term prisoner sent to that institution.

Moses A. Dow, founder and proprietor of The Waverly Magazine, published at Boston, is dead.

Uriah Shulkum, a Texas farmer, was taken from his house and severely thrashed by vigilantes for owning cattle with orphan girl.

Henry Harrington, a boy, was crushed to death on the Fort Wayne road near Canton, O., while stealing a ride on a freight train.

Isaac Mace has been looking for gold in Scott county, Ind., for twenty years, and his friends thought him a crank. He has just found the object of his long search, and much excitement prevails in that locality. It is said to be a rich find.

It is reported from Kansas that the railway mail agents are organizing to prevent the discharge of any of their number without just cause.

Brooklyn grand jury has returned indictments against all the bookmakers at Brighton Beach and Sheepshead Bay races.

George McDaniels, at Clinton, Ky., has been ill for some time, and, as was supposed, died. He was put in a coffin, and after twenty hours of watching he said he was conscious all the time but could not speak. He heard the doctor pronounce him dead and heard his friends weeping.

Salesmen's and "spotters" for the temperance people engaged in a shooting match at Clinton, Ia. Several persons including the town marshal were shot.

Mrs. Tyler shot and killed W. B. Roberts, at Denton, Tex., for speaking evil of her. She gave herself up to the sheriff.

HANDSHAKING AN ART.

Mrs. Cleveland an Expert—Her Hand Survived.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Extensive handshaking produces some queer results. Some curiosity was manifested as to how Mrs. Cleveland stood shaking hands with 3,000 people on Tuesday evening. 5,000 on Friday. She said to a friend that she did not feel the slightest soreness in her right arm, but next day her left arm, which she had not used at all, pained her cruelly. This was exactly similar to Gen. Grant's experience, who said that after a public reception he always suffered agonies in his left—the unemployed hand. It is explained by the inequality of the circulation, which revenges itself next day. Mrs Cleveland is a perfect picture of physical health, and her endurance last week, when she went through two receptions, a visit to the Schuetzenfest, a dinner and a daily drive, without showing the slightest sign of fatigue, shows what kind of stuff she is made of. She has adopted Miss Cleveland's sensible plan of seeing personal visitors on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 12 to 1 o'clock. No woman ever in the White House so economically divided her time and accomplished so much with so little effort as Miss Cleveland, and if Mrs. Cleveland adopts her predecessor's hours, as she seems inclined to do, it will be the wisest thing she can do.

NOVEL MORMON REMEDY.

The Latest, if Not Best, Plan to Break Up Polygamy.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 23.—Attorney General Hord has just returned from a visit to Utah. He thinks that the present anti-polygamy laws serve only to solidify Mormon sentiment. All who are under indictment because of these laws are looked upon as martyrs to the Mormon church. "The Mormon women," he says, "are sincere believers in the alleged revelations to Joe Smith, and they enter into polygamous relations from a religious act. The only way, I believe, that Mormonism can ever be reached is to enact a law enabling a woman who has been 'sealed' to a Mormon to recover a proportionate share of his possessions and to obtain a divorce whenever she becomes dissatisfied. Then encourage a few consummate fools to go to Utah, become 'sealed' to the wealthy Mormons and in a few weeks as a purely business transaction, become dissatisfied and demand a division. You can work it through. Only their pockets quicker than any other way."

Henry Failure at Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The New York creditors of Riegel, Scott & Co., wholesale dealers in dry goods at Philadelphia, have received a circular calling them to attend a meeting of creditors, to be held in Philadelphia on Thursday. The house was an old established one, and no less than six partners have been admitted during its existence, taking out in the aggregate over $1,000,000. The firm did a large business, their sales for the past year being over $1,600,000, and J. Dallas Wood, manager of Philadelphia, bought out the entire stock of the firm, which, on January 1, inventoried $775,000 at the first value, and the firm began to liquidate their affairs. It is now learned that the firm had paid drafts upon them up to last week, but had since allowed them to go to protest. No statement of the liabilities has yet been received by the New York creditors, but estimates place them at upward of $500,000.

Town Sergeant Killed.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 23.—J. P. Thatcher, town sergeant of Moundsville, was shot and killed at 7 o'clock last night by Eugene Johnson, a desperate character, who committed a fatal assault on James Porter a few days ago, and whom Thatcher was trying to arrest.

A Boycott to Go to Court.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—The Basket Makers' Union No. 2 have ordered a boycott on the firm of C. Goebert & Son, willow ware manufacturers. The firm intend to take the matter into court and will resist the boycott vigorously.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Local rains will continue for Thursday throughout the middle Atlantic states.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

The Bulls Take a Hand in Forcing Values Up.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Money at 3@4 per cent. Exchange, quiet but firm at $4.84@4.85. Governments, firm, except 5s, 109½ bid. State bonds, 120½ bid, steady. Silver, 110½ bid.

The stock market opened steady, and during the first half hour little or nothing was done; but at the first call the bulls realized the lecture they have resorted to for several days—passed and bid values up. At noon the gain ranged from ½@1 per cent. The market then lapsed into a dormant state, and so continued up to the close.

WOMAN AND HOME.

SUGGESTIONS CONCERNING THE SURROUNDINGS OF THE HOMESTEAD.

Poison in the Sleeping-Room — Robust Young American Women—Life in Paradise—After the Honeymoon—Hints for the Housewife—Notes and Items.

Nothing in a country landscape shows so much the taste of the inhabitants as the adornment or the lack, displayed in the surroundings of the homestead. A friend once said to me in passing two homes of very opposite appearance, "one does not need to go inside to tell the character of the inmates and her judgment was correct. The bare house makes the home what it is and its affluence is forever stamped upon those who live by the hearthstone, and will live in the memory of the children through all after years. The adornment of a country home by planting trees, shrubs and fruit trees, by keeping a well-cut greensward, and flowering vines and plants, can never be over estimated. But it must be done with system and with a view to what the result will be when they have grown larger and take more room.

I know a cottage where one fine spring the owner planted a row of Mountain ash close to the parlor windows. In a few years they grew so strong and dense as to overshadow the house, the branches tapping on the panes of glass at the bed-room windows, and last year he cut them all down and the house stands now bare and desolate. If these trees had been planted outside the sidewalk, they would still have been near enough to the house and a shade to every passer by. Nothing gives a better tone to the appearance of a country home than a well-kept lawn—but it needs persistant effort, a good lawn mower, and a will to work it. Boys as a rule object to the lawn mowing as much as a dog does to churning, and generally have a dozen other things on hand if wanted for that purpose. But if the lawn is not too large and there is a promise of regular, if small, remuneration every time the mowing is used, and the boy's pride in the neatness of the homestead is aroused, it is very likely there will not be any difficulty. There should, if possible, be a little variety in flatness in the uninteresting, and shrubs that flower at various seasons can add great beauty at little cost. It is always a mushy way to add all the charm and grace to adorn the home. It is the individuality of the inhabitants impressed by their work upon the land, as the touch of the artist gives character to the picture he paints.

The home exerts an influence for good or evil upon the young, and after years children will remember the time spent there as the brightest or darkest years of their lives. How important then to make the surroundings pleasant, and if they are taught to help plant the grounds, to tend the garden and to plan for home improvement, they will have an added interest in it.

"This is the tree I helped papa plant on Nellie's birthday," "That is the vine we put in when Harry was 10 years old," are land-marks in a life history that live to its latest page.

I know an orchard, too, that was planted by the grandfather of the present owner at a time when help could not be procured, and they take greater pride in it than in any of the older orchards that were planted by hirelings. It is remembered by them as a result of their work. So let the children be taught to embellish the home, to learn the art of adornment, to keep neat fences, and doors and to get rid of throwing rubbish about or allowing unsightly objects to be about the premises. It is just as easy as the other way, and forms habits of neatness and thrift that will be a lesson well learned. Not those homes where the most money is spent, but those where the most good taste is displayed are the ones that charm. A country home is amply repaid with interest for every hour spent on useful and beautifying improvements.—Annie L. Jack in Our Country Home.

Evils in the Sleeping-Room.

It is an altogether too common a practice to keep the accumulation of soiled clothing during the week in some receptacle within the sleeping room, or in a closet opening therein. Some even go so far as to provide something ornamental for the purpose, thus drawing attention to that which betrays great ignorance of the laws of health and cleanliness. A close closet is even more objectionable, because every thing in it must share the impurities and it has not the same chance of regular and accidental ventilation which the larger room has.

Another source of evil is the heating of our bed-rooms to the point of extreme comfort at all times. No one can dispute the agreeableness of such indulgence, but it takes from the air vital qualities and renders them unsuited for ventilation absolutely necessary. It would be much better to dress and undress in another room and depend on the bed-clothing and the natural heat of the body, which very soon brings the temperature up to a comfortable point and keep it there throughout the night.

A recent avoidance of those mentioned is that of keeping vessels containing excrement of any kind in the sleeping room during the night, or for any time in a sick room enough cannot be said in condemnation of the most common practices in regard thereto. I will admit that their temporary disposal is a matter of convenience, however a thorough appreciation of the case and a moderate degree of painstaking will enable most people to depart from these old-time habits. If one is restricted to the use of only one room, there may be a screen fixed in some part of it where a window can be easily raised to draw off the poisoned fumes, or, what is better, an open fire-place with the screen standing before it, but under no circumstances should the bed be used as a hiding place for anything unclean; the thought of a mattress gathering such pollution from year to year is disgusting, and a sleeping on such a mattress must, in time, poison the blood of the unconscious victim.—Cor. Good Housekeeping.

Robust Young American Women.

Some years ago a young woman rather coveted a delicate appearance, valuing it as an evidence of refinement, and associated fresh and blooming cheeks and a vigorous appetite with a dairymaid style of beauty that seemed to her coarse or inelegant. She was also taught to look on little hysterical fears and tremors as prettily feminine and, of all things, she must avoid what is to be regarded as a tomboy or a hoyden. She might dance all night in a tight and long gown, but she must avoid the outdoor sports enjoyed by her brothers, and regard the mortal terror of cows and mice. Therefore it happened that the typical American girl of those days was a delicate, and sometimes a sickly one, besides whom her English sister seemed robust and rugged. She was a pretty but a fragile specimen of her sex, whose good looks were likely to be soon replaced by the lines of chronic ill-health, or destroyed by the cares of motherhood.

But all that has changed since the time when Dio Lewis began to preach his doctrine of what he called physical culture. The girls of this period vie with their brothers in outdoor exercise. They wear stout boots, easy clothing, and garments appropriate to the weather, and health has made with careful regard to the protection of their health. First, croquet took them out upon the lawns, and then tennis, and meantime they learned to row, to ride, to drive, to practice archery, to take long tramps and to endure exposure, so that it has come to pass that girls, like boys, are ashamed to be ignorant of any kind of physical exercise. They want to be healthy and strong, and mice and cows no longer terrify them as of old.

The result of this is that the well-trained American girls who are now approaching maturity, or who are already in the first flush of womanhood, are distinguished for the symmetry and beauty of their physical development. Their lungs are stronger and their voices better than those of the women who preceded them. The race has grown taller and far handsomer, so that now we can say without boasting that the handsomest types of beauty in every city can be found are the young American girls of to-day.

Of course Dio Lewis only helped to bring about this happy result, for many causes contributed to it, but we accord him great praise for the part he took in inspiring our young women and their parents with enthusiasm for health and physical exercise.—New York Sun.

Women Who Sleep in their Clothes.

Lady Shiel, in her "glimpses at life and manners in Persia," says: "I went to see the shah's half-sister, a beautiful girl of 15, who lived with her mother in an obscure part of the ante room, neglected by the shah, and consequently by every one else. She was really lovely, fair and with indescribable eyes and a figure only equaled by some of the chefs d'œuvre of Italian art. This is one of the many Persian ladies whom that she was one of the few persons I saw in the country with an approach to a good figure.

"She was dressed in the usual fashion of trousers on trousers, the last pair being of such stiff brocade that if put standing up right in the middle of the room it would remain. Her hair was curled, not plaited, and she was literally covered with diamonds. She was quiet in her manners, and seemed dejected. She was most anxious to hear about European customs.

"And what seemed to surprise her most was that we undressed every night before every night going to bed—and she asked me was it true that we put on a long white dress to pass the night in.

"All the women were astonished at this custom, and are quite unable to account for it. They never undress at night, they untie their thin mattress from its pillion cover, draw it down from the divan against the wall, and roll themselves up in the wadded quilt which forms their blanket. The only time they change their clothes is when they go to bathe. If they go out to visit they of course put on their best garments, and take them off at night, but generally they lie down just as they are, and even in cold weather they wear their chadour, or out-of door veil, at night."—Exchange

Woman the Rose Traveler.

"If you want proof that a woman is more cautious than a man," said a drummer, "just keep your eyes open while traveling. A woman never forgets to look for a train so early that she will have forty minutes to wait. She never forgets to ask her husband or make sport if her trunks are corded. She never forgets to pause with one foot on the car-step and one hand on the car rail to inquire if she is on the right train. She never forgets to ask the conductor if she has to change cars before reaching her destination, and if she is sure to make a connection, and if the train stops at the place she would like her friend to meet her. She never takes a ticket or a train check, never drops her hat out of the window, never permits herself to go to sleep within 100 miles of her destination for fear that she will ride by, never fails to get a whole seat by herself and another for her luggage, never walks from one car to another unless the train is standing still, and never gets up from her seat to leave a train without turning to look and see if she has forgotten anything. Ugh! but on a woman for traveling, every time."—Chicago Herald.

Mrs. Stanford's Liberal Benefaction.

Mrs. Stanford, wife of Senator Stanford, has purchased 15 Albany, N. Y., the old house in which her family resided prior to her marriage, and also a large piece of property adjoining it. On this ground it is her intention to build a comfortable, fire proof building which will afford a home, during the working hours of the day to the children of widows and dependent females who are compelled to go out to work. It is said that enough homeless women will be cared for in the institution to attend to the wants of the children. On a visit to New York not long ago Mrs. Stanford was impressed with the good results accomplished by an institution of this kind, and, being anxious to do some act of charity for the poor people of her early home, she determined to carry out this project in Albany. The building and grounds will cost about $200,000 and it will be entirely maintained solely at Mrs. Stanford's expense.—Washington Letter.

Ought Not To Be the Case.

Marriage is sometimes said to be the door that leads deluded mortals back to earth, but this is not always thought not to be the case. Certainly love may end with the honeymoon if people marry to gratify a repugnant ambition or for the sake of more outward beauty, which is like a glass soon broken. Of course the enthusiastic, tempestuous love of courting days will not as a rule survive marriage. A married couple soon get to feel towards each other very much as two chums at college, or two partners in a business who are at the same time old and well-tried friends. Young married people often think that those who have been in the holy state of matrimony twenty or thirty years or more outward beauty, which is like a glass soon broken. Of course the enthusiastic, tempestuous love of courting days will not as a rule survive marriage. A married couple soon get to feel towards each other very much as two chums at college, or two partners in a business who are at the same time old and well-tried friends. Young married people often think that those who have been in the holy state of matrimony twenty or thirty years or more than themselves are very prosy, unromantic, and by no means perfect examples of what married people ought to be.—The Quiver.

Thought the Braids Were False.

A writer in London Truth pronounces Mrs. R. Ogden Doremus, of New York, "the most astoundingly fine-looking and attractive woman to be seen anywhere. Her most enthusiastic over her hair, which M. Augustus, the leading Paris hair-dresser, declared to be the finest he had ever dressed. "I shall take the liberty," said he, "of remarking that madame has a charming little face, but the load of hair she wears is almost too much for the window or crowd to be false braids to that extent." And then, as he let down coil after coil and found that every hair grew straight out from the scalp, he fairly gasped with wonder.—Chicago Tribune.

Powder Injurious to the Skin.

Some time ago I formed one of the chorus in an opera given in this city. It was necessary for all to make up somewhat for the stage, and we helped each other in the process. A young society belle attended to my case, and with the first touch she exclaimed: "Why, Huma," your face is just as soft as a baby's." I replied that some other lady performed the operation and made the same remark. I had not thought of it before, but I could tell them the reason why. No woman can have a soft, fine skin who habitually uses powder. She may say "Oh, some kinds are not injurious." But those kinds have acids in them," and whether it be a liquid or the simplest of powders, the result is inevitably to close the pores of the skin, roughen it, and cause it to be wrinkle prematurely, and take from it the freshness and expression which form the greatest charm of a countenance. Does it pay to be old to make the proper thing.—Cor. Detroit Free Press.

To Keep the Mop Board Clean.

Dingy mop boards are unsightly, and yet the cleaning of them is a muscle-straining labor to be avoided. The causes of premature dinginess in the mop board are the washing the floor not to go near enough to the mop boards to touch them with the mop or splash them with the scrubbing brush, who proceeded them. The race has grown taller and far handsomer, so that now we can say without boasting that the handsomest types of beauty in every city can be found are the young American girls of to-day.

Of course Dio Lewis only helped to bring about this happy result, for many causes contributed to it, but we accord him great praise for the part he took in inspiring our young women and their parents with enthusiasm for health and physical exercise.—New York Sun.

Before the Vice Chancellor.

In the Chancery Court at Newark there is pending a suit against Isaac Littell and others in Fanwood, brought by the Importer's and Trader's Bank at New York. The suit is brought to set aside three conveyances alleged to have been made by Littell, on the ground that they were fraudulent and for the purpose of preventing the bank from collecting an any due to it by the defendants.

Muhlenberg Hospital and Its Work.

The following furnished for publication gives a comprehensive idea of the work at Muhlenberg Hospital:

At the annual meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, held May 31, 1886, at which officers for the ensuing year were elected as heretofore announced, reports of the treasurer, the medical staff and the managing committee of the Board, were presented, from which the following facts of general public interest appear.

At the close of the last Hospital year, in May, 1885 the hospital was in debt to the amount of $1,441.47, and the treasurer, testifying to state that during the year just closed this debt has been extinguished, and after paying all bills presented to the treasurer, he begins his new year with a balance in bank of $357.53.

The Out Office opens at 7.00 a. m. and closes at 7.15 p. m. Saturdays close at 6 p. m. Sundays—Opening until 9.30 p. m. to accommodate box holders.

$ 381.10

Besides the expenditures by the Board of Governors shown by the above statement the Ladies' Auxiliary Board has expended during the year for bedding, linen and kitchen utensils $126.70, making the actual current expenses of the hospital for the year $3,-1085.70. The Ladies' Board has also retained for future use part of the moneys realized from the Fair.

It is, therefore, be stated in general terms that the current sources of the year have been in round numbers.....$3000.00
While the receipts from paying patients have been.....1500.00

Leaving a deficit of.....$1500.00
Which has been met as follows:
By Ladies Auxiliary Board..$285.00
" Trinity church—on account from Legislature.....900.00
" Church collections.....315.00
" Individual donations.....900.00 1500.00

The $1,000 received from the fair may be said to be paid of the $700 debt with which the hospital began the year and left the amount now in bank, say $300.

If the hospital is subjected to extra expenses during the coming year for painting, plastering, heating, etc., it is quite probable that further contributions from outside sources will be needed to meet the outlay, and it is hoped that the increased demand will be cheerfully met.

The number of indoor patients treated by the hospital during the year was 70—25 males and 45 females. The number of out door cases treated in addition was 31—9 males and 15 females. Some patients were treated for long periods, and the average period of residence of patients in the hospital was about three and one-half weeks.

The hospital is doing an extremely useful and important work and needs the sympathy and active support of the community. Donations of money, provisions, vegetables, fruit, linen and other articles are always acceptable. The hospital has among the numerous charities of Plainfield this will not be overlooked.

The Poisoned Picnickers.

Ice cream is now thought to have been the cause of the wholesale poisoning, which resulted from a picnic given on Thursday in honor of Pastor Schaaf of the German Reformed church at Peterville, on the third anniversary of his pastorate there. Six of the poisoned persons will probably die, and twenty others are in a precarious condition. Whether the inside of the cream freezers was coated with sulphate of zinc, or whether arsenic was put in the cream purposely, still puzzles the doctors. Those who ate several spoonfuls seem to have suffered almost as badly as those who ate a plateful.

The ice-cream was made on the grounds, instead of being purchased of some reputable dealer. Nearly every family who attended brought a quart or a half gallon of milk, a half dozen eggs, sugar and the other ingredients of ice-cream. At the bearer of the milk reached the grounds he or she would empty the milk into one of the cans until it was filled. The milk came from all sorts of breeds of cows, and was of every stage of sweetness and sourness. Several analyses have been made, but nothing positive has been settled.

Fell on His Head.

Jacob, the twelve-year-old son of George Sheppard, who resides with his family on Manning avenue, North Plainfield, was seriously injured while playing at the public school on Somerset street, shortly after eleven o'clock yesterday morning. Eye witnesses say that the boy was standing on a flight of stairs in the basement of the school, and in leaping for an iron pipe, a few feet distant, missed his grasp, and fell to the ground, striking on his head. The injured boy was taken to his home, and there had a vomiting spell. Later in the afternoon he talked at random, and at intervals was more or less flighty. His injuries are thought to be of an internal nature.

Closing Exercises in the Public Schools.

To-day brings to a close another successful year in the history of the Plainfield Public schools, and in compliance with the usual custom special exercises were held in Assembly Hall at the opening of the morning session. A large number of visitors occupied seats in the rear of the hall and listened attentively to the rendition of a carefully arranged program. The school filed into the hall to the accompaniment of a march played on the piano, by Miss Laura Baker, and took their accustomed seats. Principal Miss Julia E. Belkley opened the exercises by scripture reading and the school joined in prayer, followed by singing the "Morning Song." Miss Flora Randolph followed with a piano solo, which elicited much applause. The school sung "Pastorale" and the principal announced that during the year two classes in the 8th grade in the Grammar Department had taken an active interest in the study of Mineralogy; they had gathered minerals from far and near, and at her request compositions relating to the study had been handed in; no prize had been offered; the compositions had been referred to Miss Hollis, whose experience in that particular line of work was somewhat extended, and it was decided that for originality that of Miss Mabel Gillies, on the subject "Quartz," was the first to be selected. As a token of appreciation of the great interest Miss Belkley presented the author with a handsome book by Rev. E. R. Hale, entitled: "How To Do It." Special mention was made of the compositions by Miss Evilena VanCourt and Charles L. Hubbard. Miss Emma Bridges was presented with a substantial token in the shape of a book for an elaborate display of leaves, ferns and grasses, collected by her, some of which came from Santa Barbara and from remote foreign lands, including the tombs of Westminster Abbey. A collection of leaves artistically mounted with sentiments, the property of Edward Perrine, received special credit and a book entitled "The Age of Fable," by E. E. Hale was presented him in appreciation for his endeavors.

Theodore L. Doane was awarded a book, "Bird's-eye View of a Civil War," for his untiring efforts to serve the school; for a long time he had taken charge of and arranged the books and benches in the hall for the comfort and convenience of the scholars and conducted the daily assembly there. The Principal announced a number of private contributions from the alumni of the different classes graduated from the High School, which, it was intended, to include in the school library. Miss Belkley made the closing address, in which she alluded to the work accomplished during the year and also the work in store for the future. "Do right though the heavens fall" and "be patient in well-doing" were mottoes which she admonished the scholars to persue. "Success cannot be attained without willingness to work" she said, and to strive for a noble, honest and uprightous place of usefulness was the endeavor of the school; the school had done good work, and there was room for more. The valedictory closed her remarks by a fitting tribute to the graduating class, in which she said that the class of '86 was the first to immediately enter college, two of the members already having their appointments. The school joined in singing "Farewell," and the Principal announced that the school would re-assemble on the first Monday in September. The exercises then came to a close. Similar exercises were held in the primary department and the Fifth Street school and also in the North Plainfield public school.

An Alleged Detective Arrested.

Michael J. Clinton, an alleged detective and deputy sheriff of Brooklyn, N. Y., was arrested in Brooklyn on Saturday and lodged in jail. Subsequently he was taken to the Middlesex county jail at New Brunswick upon a requisition from Governor Hill of New Jersey to have him extradited in default of $1,000 bail demanded by Judge Cowenhoven.

Clinton is said to have gone to the home of Mrs. Joseph Peterson at Dunellen on the 19th ult., and demanded certain articles of furniture alleged to have been bought from a house in Brooklyn, and in which he claimed to have been deputized to ascertain their whereabouts. A statement was made that Clinton had no warrant for charging the defendant with having taken improper liberties while she, (the complainant) was asleep (a flight of stairs) also that defendant followed her to a barn on the premises and there made insulting proposals to her, and that she caused his arrest. Clinton's affidavit followed her to a barn on the premises and there made insulting proposals to her, and that she caused his arrest. Clinton's affidavits are couched in language unfit for publication are included in the statement, and which bid fair to send Clinton to the State Prison.

Electric Light for Rahway.

Although at present bankrupt the city of Rahway has for some time past been considering the advisability of adopting an electric light system, and to this end a contract has been made with the Twin Electric Light Company to light the entire city with electricity. The old-fashioned but reliable gas lamps are to be totally done away with at the expiration of the present month. Forty electric lights are to be substituted to light the streets and take the place of the present mode of lighting the streets by gas.

STONE, THE RUNNER,

HAS CHANGED HIS PROGRAMME AND RUN FOR A WIFE.

Elopement and Pursuit, Which Has Broken Up the Peace of a Dakota Town—Sketch of a Novel Career—After a Living Prize.

PIERRE, D. T., June 24.—This town was thrown into a wild state of excitement by the announcement that Fred Stone, the celebrated foot racer, had eloped with Miss Carrie McGibbons, a beautiful young lady whose parents are wealthy and respected. The girl's father was greatly distressed at the news and at once put officers on the track of the runaway couple, who will probably be captured and brought back here. Stone departed for New York, and are said to be very wealthy. Stone came here some weeks ago and joined the celebrated George W. Harris base ball team. He is a champion of fast runners, and which, it is expected, will win the state tourney for base ball.

Probably no American foot racer is so well and so widely known as Fred Stone. He has run races in every state in the union and nearly every city and town in the western states as well as in Old England and Liverpool in England, and in Sydney and Melbourne in Australia. In part of the habitable globe where sports are encouraged Stone is known either personaly or by reputation. Handsome and accomplished, he is the very man to inspire admiration and love of a class of would-be backer of foot races. Of all professional foot racers Fred Stone has had the most varied and exciting career. He has taken chances for all he threw races to the west, when it was really wild, that were foolhardy in their daring, and he had never been known to finish in time of danger. Stone again and again had been shot at by disappointed bettors and several times he was wounded, but he invariably escaped dangerous injuries.

Like Ed. Moulton, "the father of foot races," Stone was called "old" by those who knew him best. "Old Fred" or "Old Stone" was the name he heard most often by. He is about 38 years of age, six feet half an inch tall, and of blond complection. Straight as an arrow, supple as a cat, handsome and youthful looking, he cannot be than 30 years old. In addition to his good looks, he is well educated, a fine conversationalist, and a story teller who would delight and interest the hearer by the hour. He has been a professional foot racer for nearly twenty years. In 1870 he visited Australia, and on March 17, 1871, he ran his last half of the distance with F. Hewitt, when the latter ran a half mile in 1 minute 53 seconds. This has never been approached. It was during this visit to Australia that the Melbourne cup, an emblem of the all-around athletic championship. Of the cup and its disposition Stone tells the following story: "Soon after my [illegible] and I then started on my return to the states. I had the trophy in my trunk, and was happy at the thought of being able to show my folks by exhibiting to them so handsome a prize. But off the coast of California the ship got wrecked, and the cup was lost in the wreck. King Brady, who is champion runner of California, and now prominent in dramatic circles, has, it is asserted, seen the cup which Fred lost at sea in the window of a Montgomery street jewelry store. Stone in the west he passed through many scenes more thrilling than those which cowboys are accustomed to seeing.

He was at Leadville when Ben Kettleman and Campbell ran and when John Cozar, the referee, was killed for an unsatisfactory decision. Stone had sometimes been fired upon and once he was shot at. Stone has run in southwestern Colorado, near the Mexican mountains. The last gathering was one of the largest that ever met. People from Denver, Durango, Gunnison, Salida, Pueblo and Las Vegas were delegations of gamblers and bad men. They lined the path of the contestants, and many of them all had bet against Stone and on Archie McComb, his antagonist. They held revolvers in their hands and threatened to kill Stone if he won, but in spite of their threats he ran through and won. He did not stop when he treated the tape, but ran on to the end of the course, jumped into a wagon was driven to a place of safety.

Stone had been a member of many base teams in the west, and was famous for doing good work "on the bases." He had run on the Bates Rose team, of Denver; of Rescue Hose, Muscatine, Ia., of the Colorado Springs and Manitou Springs clubs, and of the Pueblo team. About a year ago he ran a professional handicap at Pittsburg, and twice ran 100 yards in 10 seconds. In addition to his fame as a foot racer Stone was also a fine jumper and general athlete. It is related of him that, having an uncle in Salt Lake City, he used his relatives as a backer and bet $1,000 against him what it known as the "double." Stone was in New York last March, and left for the west early in the middle of April. He had come east to arrange matches for Skinner, the Ogdensburg fiver, and to see H. M. Johnson off to England. The latter won the Eastertide handicap at Sheffield.

A Crazy Desperado Killed.

FARRAGUT, Ia., June 24.—Tom Golden escaped from the asylum at Mount Pleasant on June 13. He had previously written his wife that he "covered seven in hell" and intended to fill it with twenty-eight more, near Farragut. His wife's father, Mr. Dewell, was advised by telegraph of his escape and engaged William Martin to guard the house. Yesterday Golden made an attack on Martin with a knife. Martin tried in vain to elude the madman, and as a last resort shot him dead. Coroner Hatton held an inquest and the verdict justified Martin's action and released him. The verdict was a general satisfaction, as Golden was a Missouri desperado for many years.

Death of an Old Jockey.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Daniel Pfeiffer, the once widely known driver of trotting horses, died at the Jefferson hospital from Bright's disease. Pfeiffer, who was 63 years old, was a familiar figure to all frequenters of the race tracks in America a quarter of a century ago. Driving his own horses as a driver he handled the reins behind many famous trotters, among them Lady Thorne, American Girl and George M Patchen.

Turkish Honors in Hobart.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 24.—The body of Hobart Pasha will be received at Genoa by a Turkish gunboat and conveyed to this city. The funeral will be conducted with great pomp, and the interment will be made in the cemetery of Scutari, in the Bosphorus, opposite Constantinople. The entire expense will be borne by the Turkish civil list.

Dreadful Accident at Prague.

VIENNA, June 24.—A dispatch from Prague, Bohemia, states that a terrytrol capsized while crossing the Sazawa river, throwing fifty persons into the water. The exact number of those drowned has not been ascertained, but twenty-five bodies have been recovered.

REASONS FOR REJECTIONS.

People Who Expect Pension Legislation May Take Notice.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The president has sent to the senate seven messages vetoing a like number of private pension bills which originated in the senate. Senate bill 1,000, granting a pension to Alfred Dewey, is vetoed on the ground that there is not a particle of merit in the claim and no facts are presented which entitle it to charitable consideration. Dewey served after his discharge Danny applied for a pension, alleging that he was, while in the line of duty, thrown from a car on the Fitchburg road, causing a rupture. The president says: "The number of instances in which our soldiers rode horses during the war and were similarly injured indicates that the saddles were very dangerous contrivances."

Senate bill 1,338—Granting a pension to Harriet Nichols, widow of Benjamin F. Welch, who was killed by falling from a train, is disapproved upon the ground that this claim was rejected by the pension bureau because of the finding of the medical examiners failed to find the claim justified.

Senate bill 343—Granting a pension to Marcella Parsons, widow of Daniel P. Parsons, enlisted in 1861 and died of consumption in 1864, is vetoed for the reason that there are no facts stated in support of the claim that the sickness was caused by exposure incident to the service.

Senate bill 2,005—Granting a pension to Mary J. Nottage, widow of Thomas Nottage, was disapproved on the same grounds.

Senate bill 1,400—Granting a pension to William R Beck, who claimed a pension by reason of "jar in the back and heavy lifting," is disapproved for the reason that six months after the "jar" he re-enlisted upon a medical certificate of soundness.

Senate bill 1,000—Granting a pension to James Butler, is vetoed on the ground that the claimant was not injured in the line of duty. It appears that while on a furlough he fell into a pot-ash and fractured a leg, which is now shorter than the other.

ENGAGED OR NOT ENGAGED.

That's the Question Just Now Agitating Emil Macholdt.

NEW YORK, June 24.—In a morning paper on Tuesday there appeared this statement:

ENGAGED.

Macholdt—Schlosser—June 22, 1886, at the residence of her parents, Cornelia Schlosser to Emil C. W. Macholdt, both of New York city. Cards later.

In the same paper yesterday appeared this:

ENGAGED.

Macholdt—Schlosser.—The notice of June 22 of engagement of Miss Cornelia Schlosser to Emil C. W. Macholdt is an error.

CORNELIA SCHLOSSER.

Emil C. W. Macholdt is a young man who is engaged in the real estate business. Miss Cornelia Schlosser is the daughter of Jacob Schlosser, who enjoys the reputation of being very wealthy. Mr. Macholdt was somewhat agitated last evening when spoken to on the subject of the two curiously contradictory announcements. He said that he was engaged to Miss Schlosser, and that he had spoken to her mother on the subject, but had not spoken to her father. He understood, however, that the father was opposed to the match. He had been neither the young lady nor any of the family since the advertisement appeared; he was, in fact, just about to telegraph to the father, asking if he objected to his intended son-in-law's marriage with his daughter. He did not intend to marry Miss Schlosser. "Of course," he added, "with her father's consent." Then he would not marry her anyway; that he was bound to marry her. He referred to a number of reputable people, who, he said, would vouch for his good character. The whole affair, he declared, with warmth, was a "blackmailing scheme."

Mr. Schlosser was seen at his home. He said that his daughter was not engaged to Mr. Macholdt, and was entirely satisfied with the advertisement denying the engagement. He intimated that Mr. Macholdt had been too hasty.

Irish Delegates Are Coming.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 24.—Mr. Patrick Egan, president of the Irish National League of America, has received the following from Timothy Harrington, M. P., secretary of the league in Ireland:

DUBLIN, June 23.

Patrick Egan, Lincoln, Neb.:

Mr. Parnell an horizes me to state that an important delegation will attend the Chicago convention. Assure the American league of our wearmest thanks for its continued and glorious support.

TIMOTHY HARRINGTON.

Mr. Egan has requested the league officers in New York to arrange a suitable reception for the delegates on their arrival.

The Telegraphers Have Become Knights.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mr. Thomas O Reilly, who has just been re-elected president of the Telegraphers' union, and yesterday that he should not stop on his general tour all over the country before July 4. He will go to every city as far west as California, and all over Canada where there are branches. He said there was a deal to be at quite true, that the Telegraphers' union had gone over in a body to the Knights of Labor, although they maintain their distinct organization, of course. This action was taken on the 12th of the month at the national convention in St. Louis where representatives from over 100 counties were present.

An American Fisherman Warned.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 24.—The fisheries cruiser Lansdowne left this morning for the bay of Fundy, where she will warn the American fishermen that they are violating the treaty. The Lansdowne will then proceed to Boston, where she will be docked for repairs. She will probably return to the bay of Fundy in a few days.

Death of an Old Jockey.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Daniel Pfeiffer, the once widely known driver of trotting horses, died at the Jefferson hospital from Bright's disease. Pfeiffer, who was 63 years old, was a familiar figure to all frequenters of the race tracks in America a quarter of a century ago. Driving his own horses as a driver he handled the reins behind many famous trotters, among them Lady Thorne, American Girl and George M Patchen.

The funeral will be conducted with great pomp, and the interment will be made in the cemetery of Scutari, in the Bosphorus, opposite Constantinople. The entire expense will be borne by the Turkish civil list.

Dreadful Accident at Prague.

VIENNA, June 24.—A dispatch from Prague, Bohemia, states that a ferryboat capsized while crossing the Sazawa river, throwing fifty persons into the water. The exact number of those drowned has not been ascertained, but twenty-five bodies have been recovered.

Insect Powder on Their Rath.

BARNOW, June 24.—Eleven men at Waterville sprinkled insect powder on their bath in mistake for pepper and they all have a slim chance to live. The servant carelessly left the poisonous powder on the table.

AT IT AGAIN.

LAKE SHORE SWITCHMEN AT CHICAGO RENEW THEIR STRIKE.

Loaded Cars of Perishable Freight Left Standing on the Tracks—Violence Resorted to by the Strikers—Other Railroad Matters.

CHICAGO, June 24.—The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern company failed to discharge their part of the now famous supposed agreement, and as a result the switchmen to the number of seventy-five struck. A committee of strikers waited on Superintendent Amsden and demanded the removal of the eight objectionable men which the switchmen named two days ago. This removal at the end of sixty days after the strike in May was settled. The company refused to accede to the request, but stated a willingness to remove Wheeler and Chaffee, two of the most objectionable men. The strikers would not receive the proposition. When the strike was declared at the Forty-fourth street yards messengers were sent to Packingtown and other towns to appoint switchmen of the fact. Engines 467 and 468 are being brought to the 63rd yards. James Berger, a "scab," had charge of engine 33. At the request of the strikers he gave up his engine. Berger soon after made his appearance at Forty-third street and proceeded to assist in getting up a train. He was warned to desist, but refusing, was set upon by the strikers and kicked out of the yards. Benjamin Baldwin, a colored man, attempted to make up a train. He was also requested to desist, and a shower of rear like volleys of musketry was the command. Armour & Co. had eight cars of beef ready to send out. The engineers, at the request of the strikers, left them behind. Hank White, of engine 286, was the first to the west side, was notified of the strike. He delivered his train and then quit. The switchmen declare that they have been all out and that some official received hoodle. The shipping department at the stock yards was ordered to receive no more stock for shipment, and all stock in the yards billed over the Lake Shore was turned over to other eastern lines. The dissatisfied men held a meeting last night and unanimously decided to stand out for their demands. W. L. Stahl, now of the sheriff's office, who represented the switchmen in the strike of two months ago, was present at the meeting.

MUSIC FOR MUSICIANS.

A Boycott that is Not Likely to be Repeated.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The trial of Paul Wittig, chairman of the Carl Sahm Musical club, for instituting a boycott against George Theiss' concert hall and extorting $1,000 from Theiss as a condition for removing the boycott, was ended in a verdict of guilty. The extreme penalty is imprisonment at hard labor for five years. Judge Barnard deferred sentence until to-day. It is confidently expected that he will impose the maximum penalty. The ground taken by the defence was that the boycotters supposed they had a right to do what they did, and that the $1,000 was not extorted, but voluntarily given by Theiss. There was no attempt to contradict the overwhelming evidence produced by the prosecution, showing that Wittig and his companions of the club demanded the money, and that Theiss and musicians and employ members of the club in their places at salaries stipulated by the club; and that he pay $1,000 to cover the expenses of the boycott.

George Ehret, the brewer, who has a mortgage on Theiss' property, testified that Wittig and his companions called on him and requested him to foreclose, but that he did not use his influence with Theiss to bring him to terms with the club. They wanted to make an investment for a few years on the mortgage. Ehret, in fact, gave moral vous over the matter, and advised Theiss to settle. Theiss, therefore, in Ehret's office, drew up his note for $1,000, payable to the Carl Sahm club. He took the precaution, however, to insert in the check the words "to pay expenses of boycott." Ehret refused to indorse the check with those words upon it was the money handing evidence against him, and practically settled the case. The actions against five other members of the club indicted with Wittig will be probably determined by the result in Wittig's case. If the second defendant is found guilty, they will doubtless be speedily tried and convicted, as Wittig's was the test case.

His Letters Gave Him Away.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Concerning the unseating of a lodge of Socialists, at Ottawa, Illinois, on account of forged letters in the lodge room from C. W. Landtman and W. R. Donner, of this city, it is learned that the former worked for Patrick Mingues, a shoemaker, in Ottawa, since 1885. Mingues was a quiet, studious and intelligent Swiss, who seldom spoke to anyone. Recently he has been employed in the West Side [illegible] shop, but yesterday morning left work and did not return. Where he went his employer did not know. His fellow workers discovered that he might be in Ottawa, but he always maintained a discreet silence whenever Socialism or bomb throwing was discussed. Donner was one of a group who on May 14 went to the street their headquarters up to May 4 last.

Commander Johnson Court Martialed.

BOSTON, June 24.—A court martial convened at the Navy Yard hyesum for the trial of Commander Henry F. Johnson on charges preferred by Admiral Jouett. The charges are of scandalous conduct and disobedience of orders. After a forty minute session the court adjourned until noon to-day.

Commander Johnson entered the service from Burlington, Vt., on Sept. 1, 1859, and received his present commission on Sept. 30, 1876. He has been on the retired list on waiting orders. His last cruise ended in January, 1885, as commander of the Monongahela. He is now awaiting orders.

A Monarch in Exile.

PARIS, June 24.—Prince Victor Napoleon, with several friends, arrived here, left Paris last evening for Brussels. They were followed to the railway station by a large crowd of people. Cries of "Vive l'Empereur!" and "Vive la Republique!" were frequently uttered by persons who stood or walked side by side, but there was no violence. The prince left Paris with regret. Tumbridge Wells on Friday, June 25. Upon his arrival there he will publish a manifesto protesting against his expulsion and defining his future programme as monarch of France.

The Open Session Resolution.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The caucus order of business of the senate has been changed by placing the land grant adjustment bill above the open session resolution. This makes it again doubtful if the latter measure will be reached this session. Its chances of passage, if reached, are said to have been somewhat improved of late. Among the number of senators now known to be favorable to open executive sessions are Messrs. Sherman, Blair, Coke and Voorhees. Mr. Voorhees will make a speech in favor of the Platt resolution when it is taken up again.

HUNGRY AND COLD.

The Bitter Experiences of a Woman in Gotham.

NEW YORK, June 24.—About 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning Policeman Adams found a woman and three children crouching for shelter in a doorway at the corner of Duane and Centre streets. They were comfortably if not expensively clad, and in the appearance which is suggestive of spending the night was something unusual for them. The policeman took them to the station, and made them an object of curiosity for all in the station. The woman said she was Mrs. Carrie Davis, wife of Benjamin K. Davis, a leather manufacturer of Peabody, Mass., and the children, a boy and a girl, whose ages were 6, 8 and 10 years, respectively, were hers. She had come, she said, to the city on June 4 to make a trip around, recommended her by physicians, as she has been for many years in a delicate state of health. On her arrival she stopped at the Cosmopolitan hotel, on West 23d street, and Clarendon court, and about two weeks ago she went with the children to visit a friend in Hoboken and remained there a week. Yesterday she came back to the city. She put up at a large uptown hotel. All the money she had taken with her from home was spent, but she gave the clerk as security for her bill a couple of prizing necklaces, rings, gold pins and other such things. At the same time she sent a telegram to her husband, saying that she wanted more money, and that it was valued at about $100, and Mrs. Davis told the hotel people she was confident of getting a letter from her husband, with plenty of money, either on the morning or the evening.

She was, with her children, given accommodations until Tuesday afternoon, when, there being no sign of the letter, she was ordered to leave. They stayed near the hotel all the rest of the day, and each time a postman was seen going in the little girl went in also to see if he was the bearer of the expected letter. But it did not arrive that evening, and in despair they all wandered hungry and tired around the streets, until at length they found what was called in the doorway. The children were brought to the Tombs court, and Officer Burland, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, was ordered to investigate the case. The first discovery he made was that the expected letter and money had arrived at the Cosmopolitan hotel. Justice Patterson allowed the cold mother to depart, and in a few hours after she took the cars for their home in Peabody.

THE FISH ARE DYING.

An Unexplained Phenomenon On the Shores of Albemarle.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 24.—The people of this vicinity are perplexed over a phenomenon that is observed along the southern coast of the state. An oily scum on the water extends for several miles out to sea and affects the rivers for a long distance inland, making the surface smooth and calm. Fish are dying by thousands, and floating like chips on the surface of the water. It is supposed that they are poisoned by this oily scum, but whence the destroyer comes nobody knows. Many of the fish are of a kind unknown to the fishermen who have sounded in the vicinity is scouted because, from Lockwood's Folly all the way to Little river the scum is found and the coast is strewn with dead fish all the way. In the salt water about Shallotte and Tubb's inlet are immense quantities of the dead fish, and it is greatly to be feared that there are no live fish left in the Shallotte river or within ten miles of its mouth. The water appears to have become as oil, and the wind seems to make no impression on it.

A Lunatic's Frank.

BROOKLYN, June 24.—James H. Leonard, who came from Denver a few months ago, purchased the house 65 Garfield place, this city, married a young English servant, and who was afterward declared insane, and he is now at the asylum on the water. An old woman in the ward of the asylum has been pronounced insane, and he will be sent to an asylum. He has another wife in Colorado and is worth $125,000. He is afflicted with a religious mania, but he has had a faculty for making money. His has been successful in almost all his enterprises. He is said to have at one time had a strong desire to kill off all the men so that he might marry all the women. It he had not been declared insane he would have been prosecuted for bigamy.

Official Envelopes.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The contracts for supplying the post offices throughout the with official envelopes, under the readvertisement of May 19, has been awarded. The Morgan Envelope company and the Plympton Manufacturing company, of Hartford, Conn., were united in a bid, which was the lowest in the aggregate. There were three other bidders, the Whiting Paper company, of Holyoke, Mass.; the Springfield Envelope company, of Springfield, Mass., and George F. Nesbitt & Co., of New York. The Holyoke Envelope company is the present contractor, and the only bidder under the first advertisement, did not put in a bid.

Two Heavy Boston Verdicts.

BOSTON, June 24.—In the supreme civil court in the case of Sawyer vs. City of Boston for an assessment of $1,000 for taking 1,968,870 square feet of plaintiff's land for the West Roxbury park, the jury returned a verdict of $365,091.91 for the petitioner. Mahala B. Smith, a colored girl, in an action against the South Boston Railroad company to recover damages for personal injuries caused by the starting of a car which pinched her between it and a car on Oct. 16, last, obtained a verdict of $14,000.

Exact Number Who Were Poisoned.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 24.—There were exactly 214 persons poisoned by the ice cream at last week's church picnic. It is now believed that six of them will die. The symptoms are those usually attending cases of arsenical poisoning. The milk from which the ice cream was made was contributed in small quantities by hundreds of different persons. If arsenic was introduced it must have been done after the freezing of the cream.

Genial Ben Starved Out.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Congressman Ben Lefever published a card to-day that he intends to retire from congress, because "no congressman can live on his salary and pay his expenses and be honest." The genial Ben, as his comrades call him, has been offered a position in the management of a railway company, at a salary of $10,000 per year, which he will probably accept.

Edison Goes to Schenectady.

NEW YORK, June 24.—It is announced that the works of the Edison Manufacturing company, employing about 700 men, will be removed from this city to Schenectady, N. Y. This step is taken in the hope of evading strikes and boycotts, as the workers are attributed largely to the influence of professional agitators in this city.

Died of an Overdose of Medicine.

KEY EAST, N. J., June 24.—The young wife of Mr. John Palmer, of this place, died suddenly yesterday of an overdose of medicine. The circumstances were such that an inquest was considered indispensable, and it will be held in Asbury Park to-day.

Rates Reduced.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on its $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the provisions of this policy. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an assessment of the surviving members, or annual dues; nothing but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy. And the contract is backed by assets of over $600,000.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased in assets, and its Reserve Fund was $983,182.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over $700,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. ## THE CRAZE FOR DOGS.

A BOSTON WOMAN ENTITLED TO THE MEDAL

As Being the Champion Dog Fancier of All the Dog Fanciers—Not to Be Outdone by Either "Cop" or Station Agent—Traveling Under Difficulties.

New York, June 24.—Sergt. Darcy, of the Long Island City police, was aroused from a reverie on Tuesday evening by a medley of yelps and howls outside the door of police headquarters. A moment later a queer, elderly little woman burst on his vision and he rubbed his eyes to make sure that what he saw was not the baseless fabric of a nightmare. The presence of Police-men Carney and Hayes reassured the sergeant. Following the queer little woman were thirteen dogs, of several different sizes, muzzled and unmuzzled, attached to a short cord which she held in her right hand. On one arm she carried a watering can and on her other arm two satchels.

Her left hand was engaged, also, holding a bag, and an upraisal of yelps and squeals that added to the intermittent howling of the thirteen dogs on the string.

The little woman dumped out the contents of her apron upon the floor. They were six pups, and the thirteen dogs immediately surrounded them. Then she turned the bag upside down, and ten more chunky little fellows, with eyes fast shut, rolled out and over one another like a lot of rubber balls. Barks and howls and yelps were as thick as mosquitoes in a swamp for a minute or so. When the little woman had got things calmed down she made herself sure that the animals were all there. She then told the sergeant that she wanted lodgings for herself and bench show.

She said she was Loretta J. Whitman, and that she had just come from Boston, with infant dogs, she said, had come into the world on the way. She had missed the train for Eastport, L. I., whither she intended to go and dispose of the pack of pets, for such she declared the dogs to be. The sergeant suggested that she should take the dogs to a livery stable. She said she belonged in the station house was the safest place for the animals, and she offered to pay for their lodging. The sergeant finally consented to allow the dogs to remain in the corridor without pay, and when he learned that she was going to stay with the dogs he offered to rig her up a bed. She refused his offer, and slept all night in a chair, with the dogs surrounding her. She remained in the station until noon yesterday, when she put the pups away in tag and apron, and hearing that the Long Island railroad depot followed by Policeman White and the thirteen grown dogs on a string. The depot master attempted to put her out of the waiting room, but she stayed there all the same. She said she would pay passenger rates for her dogs if it was necessary. She dropped the bag in her excitement, and it began moving around like a bewitched cat or an animal without head or legs. In grabbing for the bag she spilled the six pups out of her apron. They all began to cry, and then all the big dogs began to howl.

She was soon mistress of the situation again, however, and then she resumed negotiations with the Long Island Railroad company. The depot master told her that her dogs could go in the freight car for $7.25, but she would not have them go that way. She finally secured a baggage car, and thus, at 5:30 o'clock, started for Eastport in the car with her setters.

Let's All Go to Honduras.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The department of state is in receipt of the following information through the United States minister at Guatemala concerning the mining industry at Honduras:

The gold and silver mines of Honduras consist of nearly 2,000 known veins, besides the placer gold washings north of the Cordilleras. The alluvial deposits forming the latter average thirty feet in depth and cover large areas of valleys and plains, well watered and heavily timbered. Experts pronounce the placer country, particularly in the department of Aancho, equal to the best California hydraulic workings, and it will pay handsome profits on large investments, but is too poor to pay the pan miner. Gold quartz veins abound on the north and south coast, while between these lies the great silver belt of the country, which is over fifty miles wide and extends across the country.

To Fight Convict Labor.

PITTSBURG, June 24.—A movement is on foot to incorporate the Iron Molders' union of North America in the Knights of Labor, the proposal coming originally from the latter organization, but being supported by prominent members of the former. A series of resolutions advocating the change have been printed, signed by leading members of the union, and sent to each local union for adoption. The principal object of the union has been on the decrease for years, owing to the making of stoves by convict labor. One object of the change is to fight the employers of convict labor.

A DEADLOCK PROBABLE.

Republican Representatives Prevent Action by Absence.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The republican members of the house say they are positive that the majority cannot get a quorum in the house under three or four days, and that if Mr. Morrison brings the question on his resolution to amend the rules they will continue to resort to parliamentary tactics to prevent its adoption. The impression among Republican members is that Mr. Morrison will yield the floor for the purpose of allowing the house to proceed with consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

David Davis No Better.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., June 24.—The condition of ex-Vice-President David Davis shows no change. He is still lying in a critical condition. Dr. Stringfield, the visiting physician, said there was no telling what a change might bring, but at Mr. Davis' advanced age the chances would be against his recovery, even should he continue to take what little nourishment has been administered to him during the last twenty-four hours. His condition, judging from the statements of the family, is worse to-night than at any time since his illness.

The Pennsylvania's Bank Account.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company's statement for May, 1886, as compared with May, 1885, is largely in favor of the former, a new kind of an animal without head or legs. In grabbing for the bag she spilled the six pups out of her apron. They all began to cry, and then all the big dogs began to howl.

EATING AS A FINE ART.

Delicious Breakfast Is a French Epicure—Aiding Digestion.

The other day I had occasion to be very far down town at the hour for luncheon, and dropped in with a friend at one of the elegant French restaurants which are now so generally scattered throughout our city. Everything was exquisitely neat, and a foreign air, which is a pleasant change, pervaded everything. The French waiter is always courteous, and when the polite Jean had gone to fulfill my order (for I was not long in the habit of taking my meals at these restaurants, and I was not at the time sufficiently hungry for a lengthy course) he informed me, I looked about, and observed in the center of the room a long table laid with covers for ten or twelve people.

Presently the proprietor entered, took his place at the table, and the other seats were soon filled; then the breakfast, for breakfast it was although the hour was about 1 p. m., began, and was duly proceeded in regular course. Nothing was ordered, but the waiters came and went, serving each course, and if any one didn't desire a certain course, he simply waited, eating nothing during the time until the next course was served. It was just like the order of things at home if you only had a dance one on the programme—you can not dance the one beyond, but must sit still until the dance you do dance has come. I will say, however, that I looked about, and the breakfast refused any of the courses. To have the proprietor sit at the head of the table is, of course, following out the original idea of table d'hote, although that feature of it, in sitting down with the host, is now rarely carried out. I watched the guests. First strawberries, nothing else, not even bread—plenty of jollity, and time for digestion. That was cleared away, the stewed kidneys and bread and a bottle of white wine. Next course served eggs in tiny tin pans, each wrapped, to hide the tin, with a dainty napkin. Radishes were served with them, and bread.

Another clearing away of everything, then the pieces de resistance, a sirloin beefsteak, an inch or more thick, and mushrooms, fried potatoes, green peas, just a taste, as it were, and an omelet with rum on fire, and a small cup of coffee. A party of French gentlemen will never go to a first-class restaurant in this country for breakfast, but native Americans—some stationers, iron and steel men, wholesale drug men, and from other occupations. I write of this breakfast to show how the more refined ways of eating are becoming common, how pleasant companionships and plenty of time aid digestion, and more than all how French customs are promoting our own country. I would have liked to have had at that table one of the good, old fashioned New England housekeepers, who for breakfast gave baked beans, fried hasty pudding, apple pie and coffee, sweetened with molasses, and who expected it all to be eaten in fifteen minutes, or to get at the head's ness of the day. As if any business of the day could be more important than one's health and comfort! Verily, the height of fool is the extreme of unrefinement.—New York Cor. Hartford Courant.

Corporation Notice.

To macadamize, by spreading stone, Front street from Plainfield avenue to the westerly boundary of the city.

Whereas, the owners of property fronting on Front street between Plainfield avenue and the westerly boundary of the city, have petitioned for the macadamizing of Front street hereinafter directed, and have agreed to pay or cause to be paid to the City Treasurer, amounting and the costs and expenses incurred the sum of two thousand dollars.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That Front street between Plainfield avenue and western boundary of the city line be and the same is hereby ordered to be macadamized by spreading crushed stone to the depth of eight inches; and crushed stone to be of good quality, to be thoroughly laid and compacted and properly rolled; and the roadway completed the entire shall be smooth and even. All of said work and macadamizing shall be done under the supervision of the Street Commissioner.

SECTION 2. That the owners of property fronting on said Front street laid or about to be laid into the City Treasury the sum of two thousand dollars said owners having agreed so to do; and after applying the sum toward the payment of the cost of work and labor aforesaid, the balance, if any, of the remainder of such cost shall be at the general expense of the city and be paid as provided by Chapter (CXXI) of the laws of New Jersey for the year 1883.

Adopted June 7, 1886.
Approved June 16, 1886.

Fees $4.30.

AN ORDINANCE.

Providing for the repairing and permanent improvement of the paved road of a part of Fifth street and Plainfield avenue in the city of Plainfield.

The Common Council of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

That the road bed of Fifth street, from the middle of Central avenue to the southerly line of Plainfield avenue, and the paved bed of Plainfield avenue, from the middle of Fifth street to the middle of Seventh street, be forthwith repaired and put in with a broken stone for a width of eight feet each side of the center line of said street and avenue, and for a depth varying from two to six inches as circumstances may require, under the direction of the Street Commissioner and the general expense of the city, to be paid for out of the moneys raised by tax for the improvement of streets as provided by the act of the Legislature, entitled "An act to authorize cities to make permanent improvements to the road beds of the streets of the same," approved May 13, 1884.

A Paris Green Sprinkler.

It is painful work to dust a large field of potatoes with Paris green, or to spray it from a sprinkler by hand. This fact has given rise to the following machine for performing this work. It can be readily made at home:

Take two old kind wheels of a wagon and fasten a platform above them as shown in the picture. Upon this fix an ordinary water-tight barrel with a cover at the top.

FOR SPRINKLING POTATOES.

Make a mixture of one pound of Paris green or London purple to forty or fifty gallons of water. At the bottom have a hole with a screw cock. Attach to this a piece of rubber pipe about five feet long, with fine nozzle for spraying at the end. At a convenient distance below and behind the barrel a smaller platform is fixed, for the operator to stand on.

The London purple is cheaper than Paris green, and just as effective. The powder, being a mineral, is heavy, and will sink to the bottom, unless frequently stirred. In order to get it thoroughly dissolved make a paste of the powder with a little water before putting it into the whole volume of water. These powders are both deadly poisons, remember!

The water is put in at the top. Have the hole here large enough to admit a stirrer. With this agitate the mixture occasionally, to keep the mixture from settling to the bottom.

The effect of this arrangement is to save both labor and time. The operator can with it spray three rows of potatoes during one drive across a field, in the manner shown in the picture.

Blindfolding Rams.

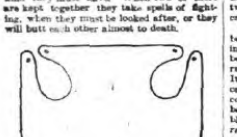
Here is a very simple yet ingenious arrangement to prevent them from fighting. A writer in The American Agriculturist describes it. Rams are usually kept separate from the flock during late autumn and winter. They will stay quite contentedly with calves or hogs, but company of some kind they must have. When two or more are kept together they take to fits of fighting, when they must be looked after, or they will butt each other almost to death.



BLINDER FOR RAM.

They have two attacks of the fighting fever, once in the spring, just after shearing, and again in the fall.

The writer says that if they continue to show a quarrelsome disposition take a piece of leather about seven inches square; any kind of leather will do, and cut it with a sharp knife in the shape shown in the picture. Fit the leather over the face. The rounding places that are cut out fit about the horns. The thong firmly around the horns. The leather will thus serve as a blinder in front of the sheep. At the same time he is able to see out the sides quite well enough to pick grass. If he does undertake to butt his enemy he will miss fire and shoot off sideways when he takes a flying lean, much to his own discomfiture. Holes for the nostrils may be cut in the leather, and it can be tied by strings still more closely beneath the under jaw.

A Marker.

Reuben Townsend, a New Jerseyman, sends to The Rural New Yorker an illustration and description of the accompanying implement.

It is intended to mark the rows and the places for planting potatoes, cabbage, beans, sweet corn, etc. The ground is prepared in the usual way, and smoothed with the harrow and drag. The marker is then wheeled over the rows. The indentations made for the seed depth at the same distance apart. The frame of the implement is made very similar to a wheelbarrow. The wheel is of any convenient size, say two feet in diameter. The fellow of the wheel is punctured with holes as near together as the closest plants will be planted. The markers can be inserted in any of these holes, so as to give any desired distance between hills. These markers are made of wood, with the part which enters the wheel made to fit closely into the holes, while the hole-marking portion is made egg-shaped, so that the soil will not readily adhere to it. The depth of the drills is regulated by a bag filled or partly filled with sand or stones, the weight to be regulated to suit the depth of trench required.

Lucerne or Alfalfa.

Charles S. Plumb describes his experiments with what will prove a very important addition to our pasture foods. It is rich in nutriment, and a heavy grower. He has proved that it will grow in a cold climate. He says:

Lucerne or alfalfa (medicago sativa) is a very well-known forage crop in the far west and south-west, in certain dry, arid regions. The plants belong to the leguminosæ or pea family, in which are included the clovers, peas, beans, etc. Its stem is erect, succulent in its growth, branching, round, smooth, and produces leaflets in sets of threes. The flowers are small, and pale blue or purplish. The roots are tough and stout, especially the main or tap root. The plant produces an abundance of foliage.

As a result of several season's trials I have found alfalfa to make an abundant, vigorous, healthy growth in northern New York, where the soil is cold and the thermometer will drop to fifteen or more degrees below zero in winter. On good, well-drained plots begin a vigorous growth, and in July 2 the first cutting is usually made. One plot yielded at the rate of over ten tons per acre of green fodder; another seven and one-half tons per acre. On July 17 the plots were again cut, and yielded at the rate of over six tons per acre. On September 3 another crop of over three tons per acre was harvested, and on October 2 one plot was yielding nearly a ton at the rate of over three tons per acre. These plots have made good growth for three successive years. The foliage is very succulent, and the stock of the farm relish it very much. The average height of the plants just before making the first cutting was two feet four inches, as near as could be ascertained, though some plants attained a height of two feet nine inches. The plots were not mowed.

Our July 10 I made a root washing bed from a bed of alfalfa. The roots descended quite vertically into the soft, and many of them were large and stocky. A foot below the surface one root measured three-eighths of an inch in diameter, and at two feet depth nearly one-fourth of an inch. Fibrous roots were not at all abundant, though penetrating to a depth of four feet below the crown, where a bed of hard, tenacious clay was encountered. One large tap root was traced three feet ten and one-half inches below the surface. Yet in sandy soil or sandy loam the roots of alfalfa penetrate to a greater depth than almost any other forage plant, and Mr. Gould mentions an instance in which the roots were traced to a depth of thirty-six feet. Its ability to penetrate to a great depth in search for food and moisture which makes this plant of so much value in those regions where shallow rooted plants can not be grown except by irrigation.

In conversing with farmers who have endeavored to grow alfalfa, in northern New York I have been told that they find it difficult to make a "catch." I have had no difficulty in this respect. Sowing about twenty pounds per acre, in May, the seeds germinate and produce plants that do not attain a cutting size the first year, but after the first year the crop is a generous one, as four hay crops have been cut in twenty-four months. The ground is not plowed after the first year, but is tread three feet ten and one-half inches below the surface. ### Men and Women Who Are on Friendly Terms with the Muses—Rhyme and Reason Sweetly Blended—Personalities of Poets.

(Special Correspondence.)

MILWAUKEE, June 21.—Mrs. Hattie Tyng Griswold is a native of Boston, but a western woman by virtue of her many years' residence in Wisconsin and the genuine breadth and vigor of character she fives in Columbus, is a happy wife, and the mother of three beautiful daughters, who inherit both her poetic talents and her sturdy good sense. Mrs. Griswold, beside being a writer of verse, is a woman of fine social qualities, large practical benevolence and general clear-headedness. She has the gift of adaptability, and she not only has it, but has it about her. She can write a poem or make a pie on demand. In her religious faith she is a Unitarian. In her life she is in full accord with all that helps for this life or that which is to come. In her home she is most hospitable and charming. All the quill folk of the state have found their way to her doors, and whoever comes in the manner of poet or preacher from the east is sure to find her out. Mrs. Griswold writes good poems, but better prose. She writes both with a high moral purpose. She is a thorough worker, a good talker, a staunch friend. I do not know that she has "a single redeeming vice." She is tall and fair, with a delicate yet strong face, full of calm thought and power.

Mr. A. L. Carlton is one of those writers whose happiness is neither made nor marred by the dictum of publishers. Writing is his vocation and recreation, not his profession. His poems are composed in the office, woods, fields, on the train, anywhere, and are rarely committed to paper till complete, word for word, in his own mind. They are characterized by the freshness and vigor of the great out-of-doors, by fine simplicity and classic finish. They have appeared in the best periodicals, and would in all probability if his ambition was equal to his abilities. Mr. Carlton is a native of New England. A graduate of Andover. He is a practical business man, with the culture and traits of the litterateur. His home is in Wauwatosa, Wis.

Decidedly the most versatile of the Western literary sisterhood is Mrs. Marion V. Dudley, of Milwaukee. She is very tall, very stately, dignified almost to frigidity, with a fondness for elegant bodies and a perfect taste in all matters pertaining to the same. Her complexion is as delicate and as fitful in color as a girl's of 16. She wears nothing but her frizz, nor wears that brushes her dark hair smoothly back from her forehead in a fashion that not one woman in a thousand can bear, but which is the one of all others for her. Fifteen years ago she came to Milwaukee to take an editorial position on The Sentinel. Two years later she married the late Dr. L. L. Dudley.

Since then her literary and social life has broadened. She seems to have the rare ability to serve two masters. She takes fewer classes with the Concord philosophers; the wise men and women of the east are her fast friends and frequent guests. She is an advocate of woman suffrage, and has spoken wisely and well before the state legislature on that subject. Emerson clubs and conversazioni spring up in her path. Various societies of humanity, art, science and tendencies owe their existence to her efforts.

At the same time all the conventionalities of social life are as an open book to her. She would never turn down the wrong corner of her calling card. Her dress is clear and strong and sonorous. In her conversation she has learned the "art of blotting." In her verse she shows a little tendency to "dig for the infinite."

Taking all in all the gods have been very generous to Mrs. Dudley, putting in her hands almost every means toward the attainment of a wide usefulness.

Miss Sillar is the youngest of the Wisconsin poets. She is a bright young lady. Although given to the writing of poetry she has a strong vein of practicality in her composition. One is almost tempted to say that she has no nonsense about her. Miss Sillar writes good, pure sense, is something of a linguist, a fine musician, and can "vote." Among her characteristics is a total indifference to matters matrimonial.

She has recently gone for a year's visit to Europe.

Mrs. Elizabeth Baker Bohan, of Milwaukee, is a woman whom women call nice and sweet. The adjectives are well deserved. She is a woman of gracious manners, under which there is a quiet strength and courage, as positive as they are unobtrusive. Mrs. Bohan is artist as well as poet, and paints her poems or writes them according to fancy.

Charles Noble Gregory, the young postlawyer, of Madison, Wis., is the librarian of the state university, a man of fine culture, delicate tastes and irreproachable life. He has spent some time in travel abroad and is a brilliant and quietly pleasant talker. Aside from this affectation he seems a very agreeable, sensible gentleman. Mr. Gregory has written some excellent poems, of the objective order; the kind he is best in he has not a tendency to polish the life out of his verses; is unassuming and in society he is a shining light.

Mrs. Louise Phillips, of Madison, Wis., is round, dimpled and rosy. Sparkling with wit and a little given to sarcasm, the person who talks with her wants to have his wits about him.

Mr. Otto Soubron is a poet of marked ability, resident in Milwaukee. He is well known in the best literary circles, and has gaining admirers among English readers. He is blonde-bearded and handsome.

Mrs. Grace S. Wells, of Chicago, is a dainty little lady, quiet and retiring in all her tastes and habits, with an unwise leaning toward self depreciation. She has not the sensitive susceptibility of the poetic temperament. It is only by resolute persistence that her friends make the discovery.

She writes little but well. She has an excellent critical ability, which, however, is directed chiefly against herself. Mrs. Wells is a widow, young, and possessed of ample means.

She writes clever verses with a dainty freshness about them that is delightful. There are many more who are winning their way as writers, but I have written enough to show what dangers attend the careless firing of guns in Wisconsin.

These are a few of the riders of Pegasus who reside in Wisconsin soil. There are still more to follow, and their name is legion.

HENRY S. BARKER.

You can only oppose successfully the evil thought of others by throwing out toward it the thought of good will. Good will, as a thought element, is more powerful than the thought of hate. It can turn it aside. The "shafts of malice," even in thought, are real things. They can and do hurt people on whom they are directed, and make them sick. The Christ precept, "Do good to them that hate you," is based on a scientific law.

ANCIENT HISTORY REVISED.

How Cincinnatus Received the News of His Election.

When the Roman senate elected Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus consul by a handsome plurality, notwithstanding the Tammany defection and the fact that a Prohibition candidate was sprung on them at the last moment, they appointed a committee to visit the noble Roman on his farm and announce to him his election.

They found him engaged in doing his spring plowing. As they approached with all the dignity which would command while stumbling across plowed land in their long togas, he stopped his oxen to ascertain who they were and what they wanted.

"Most noble Roman," said the chairman of the committee, in that deep sonorous tone suited to the occasion, "we are here——"

"Most noble Roman," said the chairman.

"So I see," said Lucius Quintus, eyeing them suspiciously, "but I signed a contract for some of their pasteboard, I'll be cussed if I know how I ever will pay for it, but it had to pay at the bank. You can't play the green game on me twice."

"That's not our mission altogether," said the chairman with offended dignity, "we are——"

"Lightning rod men, perhaps. But I don't want any lightning rods, nuther."

"Deign, most noble Cincinnatus, to give me your attention for a few brief moments——"

"Well, hurry up, old hoss, and make it short, for I'm busy's a mule's tail in fly time," and he sat down on his plow beam, fanning himself with an old straw hat.

"The republic is in danger," he began, reading from a long roll of MSS. that he produced.

"That sounds sort o' familiar. 'Nuther 'lection comin' on, I reckon. You're goin' to sound the tocsin, ain't ye? And mebbe you'll wave the bloody shirt."

"The Roman senate, realizing the exigency of the situation, has elected you——"

"If there ain't them pesky colts in my garden patch again! Gee! whiz! cinnamon, spring to his feet. "W-h-o-a, there! Git out of that!" he yelled, as he grasped his ox goad and started across the field to drive them out.

When he returned he was perspiring and swearing like a Roman trooper. "Blankety blank them blank colts," he cried, "they'll jump any fence but a high one, and that's the one of all others for her. Fifteen years ago she came to Milwaukee to take an editorial position on The Sentinel. Two years later she married the late Dr. L. L. Dudley.

"Now, you paralyze us."

"I was about to say, when, for a competent commander, every way adequate to the emergency that has overtaken us, the eyes of the senate have turned toward you."

"Shet up your jaw, you old hoss."

"Your steadfast championship of the rights of labor, your position on the silver question, your uncompromising opposition to the Chinese, your refusal to sell yourself of the franking privilege, and your scornful rejection of a railroad pass while a member of your house, the old countenance that you gave to the early closing movement, your defiance of Canada on the fishery question, your——"

"Come now, boys, let up!"

"Your services as a volunteer fireman, the ability you displayed as captain of a militia company, your having never written communications to the papers, or shown yourself in an open hack in Decoration day processions, your never sending proof slips of your speeches to the daily journals, never making a false return to the tax assessor, or wearing pointed-toed shoes, or parting your hair in the middle, or crying "chestnut" and, above all, your having had the full of going to the polls and voting the old ticket without a scratch, have induced the senate to call you to the highest office in their gift, the Roman consulship!"

Cincinnatus was so overcome by this time that he could only press the speaker's hand silently and lead the way to the house, where he tapped a fresh barrel of cider and invited them all to join him in a dance.

Mrs. Cincinnatus joins in the festivities.

The above cut is from a sketch by our special artist on the spot. The lady in the picture is Mrs. Cincinnatus, who availed herself of every opportunity to trip the light fantastic with Roman senators when her husband's interests were involved.

A Man from the Country.

An Atlanta reporter who once "pulled a hayseed" on a country weekly tells this:

One day while the paper was being worked off a man from the country came in and walked all around the room, finally stopping near the press and watching the work very earnestly.

"Anything I can do for you?" asked the man at the lever, pausing between impressions.

"Naw," was the reply. "I don't want nothin'; jis came in to see ye edit."—Atlanta Constitution.

THE DRY GOODS TRADE.

VENTURING INTO THE DOMAIN OF FEMININE SHOPPING.

A Phase of Retail Trade Reserved from the French—How Goods Are Sold to the Women on Credit—Other Tricks of the Trade.

Venturing into the domain of feminine shopping, I have been astonished to learn of the extent to which the credit system is expanded in this city. The ease with which dry goods can be purchased on credit is marvelous. There are several concerns where materials are sold on the instalment plan; but aside from that curious phase of retail trade the regular credit system is carried in a manner that seems reckless. Not only are the wives and daughters of comparatively moneyless men thus accommodated, but men on that basis are encouraged to trade them.

"Oh, yes," said a dealer in reply to an inquiry, "we have borrowed that from the French, and it seems surprisingly well. All we want to know about a woman is who she is and where she lives, and then we are willing to heap up a counter load of goods for her and send them out. Women are not cautious or foreboaded as men are. They lack what you might call that sense of responsibility which a man dread committing himself to debt. Women who will walk half a mile to save a cent on a cash purchase will buy recklessly if payment can be indefinitely delayed. They look to each other in the presence of our clerks. "Well, dear, I'm going to buy that. I don't have to pay for it for a year, and you don't knows how I ever will pay for it, but it will come out all right." "Oh, yes," the other replies. "I would too; of course it's got to come out all right."

IT COMES OUT ALL RIGHT.

"But don't you lose a great deal of money in this way?" I inquired.

"Oh, no, practically none at all, except through adventuresses who would fool us just as much under any system. No, the women are right. When they buy an article that they can't see just how they can afford to buy it out comes out all right. There's a man somewhere who has got to come to. Maybe it's her husband, her father, her brother, a rich uncle or somebody or other who may storm and swear a little, but who will let the lady assume a low suit or even let her cry her eyes very red or beg very hard or coax very sweetly before he relents and squares the bill. All that was found out in Paris long ago. We are infants here compared to the French in dealing with women. A half dozen dressmakers in Paris, a score of fashionable milliners and jewelers, florists, and, in short, all kinds of persons who cater to women in Paris, do business in this way. They very much prefer a woman who deals 'on tick' to a woman who pays money down, and they have made vast fortunes by that plan. Why, all our stores here are petty things beside the Bon Marche and the other big ladies' stores in Paris, and our ways of buying goods as well as of selling them are mainly learned from them."

"Yes," I said, "but to get back to the women. Suppose I hadn't $100 in the world and my wife bought a $200 dress; I couldn't pay for it, that's all, and what would you do then?"

"I'll warrant you would pay for it," said the shoe-house [illegible]. "But it is hardly a question. Women do not go in quite as steep as that. They do not wholly lose their heads and purchase things they cannot buy a little more or pay a little more than they would do with cash. They know their husband's purse and bank accounts and temperament, and do not overstrain them. them at all, they just strain them a little, that's all. It's only once in a while that we have a woman who buys food of a woman who buys without any judgement, and then we have a deuce of a thing getting our money. We get it and we do not keep an account with her any more."

OTHER TRICKS OF THE TRADE.

The devices for attracting and pleasing customers are various and ingenious. Some time ago a coffee house opened for free lunching. A neat maid serves out tiny sandwiches, cakes and coffee. She is an expert, however, and puts the dainties where they will do the most good to her employers. She discriminates between little and big buyers intuitively, she soon spots those who have their order ready to go often to be *filled, and especially is she kind to the chil*dren of liberal purchasers. For these young ones she has a special supply of pastry, and with them she opens the heart's soft purses of the fond mothers. Probably this luncheon counter does not cost more than $25 a day, and influences more than enough business to pay for itself.

A young assistant rector lately got into trouble, not serious but curious, because he served as a personal advertisement for a contuming concern. You must know that the masculine pets in religio-fashionable circles are those handsome fellows who are the lieutenants of aged pastors of rich congregations. The social duties of a pastorate become too heavy and irksome for old men to perform and are largely transferred to the active coadjutors who like them better, and are themselves better liked by the ladies of the church. These affable and favored juniors are privileged guests in affluent households, they lunch familiarly with the wives and daughters and are consulted in all matters of personal taste as well as of spiritual concern. Questions of costume are commonly referred to them, and I could mention several to me absolute authorities among the sisters in such matters. One has a fine collection of prints, showing the fashions of all ages in women's garments, and has constructed an undoubted expert in judging of the effects of colors and shapes in their relations to individuals. Consequently he is consulted in those nice problems of raiment that check the [illegible] of frivolous! Possible! Polite! Never a doubt of it, for he is the most popular assistant pastor in the city.—New York Cor. New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Pioneer Mining in New Hampshire.

One may go no further than Jackson, N. H., and find a genuine gold mine in operation, with pipe and hose for washing the banks into a sluiceway which has a long series of riffles, and where they do not "pick" slope, though on a small scale. The works are just completed and washing has begun. A handful of the dirt yields from half a dozen to a dozen little particles of fine gold of the very finest quality, and the operators hope to make a good thing of it.—Chicago Herald.

The Son of the Noted Sculptor.

Preston Powers, the son of Hiram Powers, of whom our readers know, now lives in Denver, mainly because the Colorado air is the best he can find round the globe's rim for his wife. Mr. Powers is an artist of talent and studies in marble, and still hopes to win a name worthy of his father's son.—Baltimore American.

THE TOURNAMENT.

A Modern Lochinvar Who Comes Up From the West With a Purpose.

A young, brawny fellow from out west, in all the bloom of his beard was the best (at least he said so, only the train dispatcher had made a mistake and shipped it to Boston) that ever have lived. Moreover he weapon had none; he came on a flat car and he rode all alone; so famous was Duncan, so dauntless, he par, that his fame went before him like the wind.

About the same time from the dreamy orient there appeared a Celt, who, seeing the flood, addressed him thus: "O, come you in peace here, or come you in war, or shall we hippodrome Zion, and take from aisles and sinners shekels enough to set us up in an honest business in the states, be gor?"

Then answered the Gael: "I long swung my broadsword, I long played the boys, I made a great noise; but the grass has grown over them all, and the world is now town red with our weather-stained paint!"

"We'll meet," said the Scot, "and see can we settle this matter by picking out the feints and the fire; we'll end in a quarrel and a new challenge give; we'll catch 'em a second time, sure as you live."

"Is it a match?" said the Celt. "The a good scheme, bedad, the softest opportunity broken meet ever had; and we'll play all the girls and boys from afar, and we'll divvy the profits right after the row."

Then the compact they sealed with a comical leer; one left at the front door and one at the back door, and surprisingly well, private they smiled; in furious threats they the public beguiled. They met in the lists with broadswords and scowl, and one claimed the victory as his foul; they divvied the profits and then shunk away, and we'll hear of them next at the next town they play. Here's three cheers from afar, and all the world, don't you know; it always has been and will always be so; and this Gael and this Celt will always do well so long as the public will catch at a sell.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Flirtation in Collars.

A Bouncing Bride.

There was a wedding the other night in a cottage on Benton street, and about 11 o'clock a number of boys got together to serenade the happy couple. They had horns and tin pans and various other musical instruments, and had just timed up when the groom came to the door and said:

"Boys, don't! This 'ere noise disturbs us."

A clod of earth hit him below the belt, and he retired for a few minutes. When he reappeared he announced:

"Now, then, this 'ere has got to stop or something will happen."

"What will it be?" inquired a voice.

"My wife'll come out and bounce the crowd."

He retired again as chunks of dirt began to rattle around his ears, but in a short time the door was thrown open and the bride jumped out with a club in her hand. She was all business from the start, and more than one serenader got a sound whack before he distanced her. In five minutes she had scattered the crowd over ten acres, and then locked herself in the door and clapped his hands and shouted:

"Go in, Mary! I knew you fellers would hear something drop if you kept on."—Detroit Free Press.

A St. Paul Man Locates Minneapolis.

"Hubby," said a St. Paul lady as her spouse came up on the piazza one evening, "an old friend of your's is inside, and he called on his way to Minneapolis."

The St. Paul man entered the house, greeted the gentleman quite cordially and said:

"Wife says you are thinking of going to Minneapolis."

"Yes, I thought I would."

"Ever been there?"

"No."

"Haven't, eh! Wife, where did we turn off to go to Minneapolis the last time?"

"At a little red school house on the left hand side of the road."

"Well, you drive out about nine miles and you come to a creek. Just after you cross this creek you strike a piece of timber, and a little beyond that you come to a clearing. Right at this clearing you'll find a red school house, and some of the children or the teacher, most anyone around there will be able to have Minneapolis located. It's only half a mile further, say way. You'll know the village when you come to it; there's a blacksmith shop, a drug store, postoffice and a couple of saloons. You'll be another one there—I haven't been by there in six months."—Merchant Traveler.

The Long and the Short of It.

First customer—I'm afraid the glove is too large.

Clerk—Oh, no. These "imported" gloves always run large. Perhaps you'd better try a smaller size.

Second customer—I'm afraid that is too small.

Clerk—Too small! oh, no; it will be just right. You know these best "imported" gloves always will give and stretch a little. —Texas Siftings.

She Was a "Hustler."

A California widow who put her all into a deal which, as it turned out, was not, called upon her broker and said: "When will this thing come out in the papers?" "To-morrow, doubtless." "How long can you suppress it?" "Why, I might keep it out two days, but not longer." "Only two days! That's pretty short notice, but I'm a hustler when I get my interest on. I'll spend on the two days." The third day the papers chronicled her loss and her wedding on the same page.—Wall Street News.

THE QUEER LOBBYISTS

FOUND IN AND OUT OF THE CONGRESSIONAL HALLS.

Money Made in Lobbying Past and Present—The Ladies of the Lobby and Some Rare Men—The Strikers—The Ex-Congressman and Others.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The last days of the session are fast approaching, and a few weeks more will decide the fate of every bill and act which is now before congress. The corridors of the great Capitol building are those of the busiest activity, and a pushing, crushing throng of crowd hangs about the doors of the house and senate, hurries this way and that through the corridors, and baffles the doorkeepers in the anterooms of the senate floor. The ladies' reception room is never empty now, and there are quite as many women as men in other parts of the congressional edifice. The galleries are pretty well filled all the time, and the session, when the public gets its richest cream is at its full.

The Washington lobbyist does not make as much money now as formerly, and the days when bribes were paid for a single vote seem to have passed away. There are scores of lobbyists here, but only a few of them make much money, and the term is now applied to any one who attempts to influence congress in any way in regard to any measure, whether it be in his own interests or in the interest of his friends. When Sam Ward was a power here it was not uncommon for sums like $10,000 and $25,000 to be spent to influence even minor matters, and John W. Forney is said to have received $30,000 for influencing a Pennsylvania congressman's vote against the Credit Mobilier bill. It is said that $600,000 were given to lobbyists to get this subsidy through, and of it is said that $500,000 went to congressmen.

An interview with Sam Randall.

Many of the lobby about congress are people who have their own claims to see after, and these seldom do work for outside parties. Among them are scores of widows in black weeds, who come to the reception room to push, if possible, their claims for pensions. Others are soldiers' women who have lost property during the war and want the government to restore it. I saw a and scene in the reception room to-day, it was that of a tall, well built old woman in black, with two little children standing beside her, a boy and a girl pleading with Sam Randall. She may have been a soldier's widow, or a soldier's mother. I only know that I heard the word pension as I passed out of the doorway, and that the woman's eyes were wet as she talked, and that Randall appeared to be moved himself.

One of the most indefatigable lobbyists, as regards her own interests, is Dr. Mary Walker, who struts around in the Capitol corridors in a Prince Albert suit and little bits of polished coin, with heels half way down the middle of the sole. She carries a plug hat in one hand and a lot of papers and a cane in the other. She buttonholes congressmen, even on the floor; and I saw her leaning over and whispering confidentially in the ear of Judge Holman, of Indiana, while at the same time she flourished her papers under his nose. Holman seemed annoyed, but he talked kindly to her, and when she went away, as I passed by his desk, he remarked: "That Dr. Mary Walker is a curious woman, but she really appears to have considerable ability."

A lobbyist.

Another woman lobbyist—and here I wish to say that in the use of the term lobbyist I mean nothing offensive or corrupt. I use it in the sense that it is used here, as the name of a person who attempts to influence action in the departments or at the Capitol in any way—is a woman lobbyist. I was going to say is a madam lawyer of Washington, who is a curiosity in the sense that she practices law, solely for charity. She does not charge a cent at all even when the Hon. Mr. Nardello, was about to hang, she bothered President Cleveland by her persistent appeals to save the poor wretch. She carries about through the corridors apparently on familiar terms with every noted man about the Capitol. She probably knows more about legislation than any of the congressmen themselves, and I would rather trust his judgment as to the passage of a bill than that of four-fifths of the others of the house. He lives in fine fashionable northwest part of Washington, and his daughters go into the best society. He reports the doings of congress to C. P. Huntington of the Washington office comes to Washington to confer with him. Last year when Huntington was here he was surprised that all the senators refused to come out into the lobby to see him.

The Pennsylvania railroad pays $10,000 a year to its agent at Washington, and this agent is a long faced Quaker, with red side whiskers, who used to be a Washington correspondent. There are a number of other men who get large fees for influencing and keeping track of congressional work, but among them you will find no Sam Ward. Ward lived at Washington for eighteen years, and he was the greatest dinner-giver the capital has ever had. He was a short, stout fellow, with twinkling, laughing eyes, a noble head and snow white imperial. His linen was always of the finest and his clothes of the best. He could speak half a dozen languages, and delighted in the studies of the classics. He wore a rose in his coat and diamonds in his shirt, and in one of his pockets he usually carried a copy of one of the Latin classics, which he read in the corridors while waiting for members of congress. He never asked men to favor his measures at the dinner table, but he treated them so well that they delighted to serve him. He was a high toned fellow, and his dinner expenses for the first work he did here cost $8,000. He spent a great deal of money, though he made a great deal, and there is a story that he spent some months in the kitchen of a French count studying the methods of his chef de cuisine to fit him for his after career

The two old ladies in the house gallery.

A word about some of the big lobby schemes of the United States. The Yazoo land frauds, away back in 1795, proposed to sell 35,000,000 acres of good state lands in Georgia to a company for 1¾ cents per acre. The company bought the Georgia legislature and the bill passed. It was afterward questioned and finally came to congress. Congress, under the influence of the lobby, paid out $8,000,000 to square the account, and gave those land sharks about 25 cents an acre for land that had cost them less than 2 cents an acre. Most of the early lobby schemes were land schemes, and in 1857 two New York congressmen had to resign because one of them had gotten railroad stocks for his vote, and the other had received seven square miles of land. When we bought Alaska it was charged that a great deal of money was unduly used, and when the Credit Mobilier came up, a number of congressmen received their political deaths by being connected with it. The Pacific Mail Steamship bill is said to have cost $800,000 for lobby expenses and of this $300,000 was paid to a single congressman. The Pan Electric Telephone company attempted to do some lobbying during the past year by using their stock where it would do the most good, and there are always before Congress measures which are favored and opposed by the lobbyists.

The lawyer who bowed the president.

There are some pitiable cases of Washington lobbyists who have been working for their own claims. Two old women have become known as characters of the house gallery. They have a claim before congress, and session after session they have come here expecting to see it called up and passed. They are plainly dressed, and they often bring their knitting with them to the sessions of congress. Day after day you may see them sitting there, one knitting and the other watching the legislation. The watcher leans over the railing and the least change in the business of the house attracts the attention of both. It is doubtful whether their bill will ever come up and it may be the case of either of them will drop dead while they are watching for it. Congress is the slowest machine in the country, and many a claimant has come before it with black hair and gone away with gray before his claim was acted on.

Billy McGarrahan is a case in point. He came here as early as 1852, and for many years ago he made his claim into a stock company of $5,000,000, and later on increased it to $10,000,000. The politicians, editors and lawyers of the olden times have slices of McGarrahan's stock paled away in their pigeon holes, and the most noted men of the country have been interested in the claim for the New Idria quicksilver mines of Lower California. Dan Sickles was Mc. Garrahan's lawyer when Lincoln was president, and he ran through these years from that time to this. Irish Billy has been fighting for his rights before congress. His hair is still brown, but I don't think he has a better chance of success to-day than he had thirty years ago. I saw him at the Capitol to-night. He is a clean, well-dressed Irishman, of 60, with a smooth, red face, a pleasant blue eye and a frank, open manner. He was talking to a new congressman, and was, I doubt not, pouring out into his ears the wrongs of Billy McGarrahan.

A class of lobbyists here are soldiers men who have lost limbs or other property during the war. I know an old fellow with a pinched up, misanthropic face, cold, perky-stricken blue eyes, ragged white whiskers, and straggling hair of spun silver. He follows closely, and tries to get a vote to locate his claim for the $500,000 which he lost in cotton. Another cotton claimant is a fine classical scholar who has worked long among the members of congress. He thinks congress is going to the dogs at telegraphic speed.

A great many of the lobbyists of Washington go by the names of attorneys, and some of them have held prominent offices in the past. Not a few of them have been in congress, and this fact gives them great advantages over other men, for the reason that they can go upon the floor during the session, and catch the congressmen in the cloak rooms. This better class of lobbyists seldom use money to influence votes. They trust to reason and their powers of persuasion. I suppose many of them would be shocked at the name of lobbyist, but it takes a fine mind to draw the line where the illegitimate and the legitimate lobbying begins and ends.

There is a set of lobbyists, however, known as the strikers of the lobby, who are a rule first-class frauds. They make their money from a pretended acquaintance with prominent men, and they are broken-down politicians and adventurers. They brag about the hotels greeting prominent men, often without an introduction, and they promise votes which they have no chance whatever of influencing. Your average striker of the lobby has a coat that is a little worn at the seams. He can talk well, and one or two of them I know can chew tobacco and talk at the same time.

There are some professional lady lobbyists at Washington, and a man and his wife need to work the business together. I doubt not that many a wife of a congressman and senator lobbies her husband's favorite measures on propitious occasions. A year or two ago there was a woman brought to the Black Hol on a bed to lobby her pension. She had lost her health in service as a nurse in the army, and had not been able to rise and walk from the bed for seventeen years. Certainly no one will criticise such a case of lobbying. In fact, the only objectionable lobbying, as far as I can see, is that in which a vote is attempted to be influenced by the payment of money or stock. All other action upon legislation, by reasoning, cannot be objected to.

FRANK GEORGE.

DEATH OF A SCIENTIFIC WOMAN.

Mrs. Erminnie A. Smith, Indianologist and Mineralogist.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, June 22.—This lady died recently at her home in Jersey City, aged 64 years. As an Indianologist and mineralogist she was at the head of the few scientific women in this country, and her death is a great loss. Mrs. Smith had been for some years an attaché of the Smithsonian Institution. Her line of work there was the folk lore and language of the six Indian nations. At the time of her lamented death she had nearly completed a dictionary of the language still spoken by the Iroquois.

She had also collected a volume of quaint Indian mythology and folk lore, which was published with illustrations by the United States bureau of ethnology. There is in both volumes much painstaking investigation and original research. The value of these studies to Indianologists is that they preserve for a record of a people now almost vanished from the earth. They will assist archaeologists to trace out the history and origin of the red man in America. In pursuit of her Indian lore the indefatigable worker went to the various tribes in person and lived among them a considerable time.

Mrs. Smith was married very young, having previously graduated at Mrs. Willard's seminary at Troy, N. Y. But she did not cease studying on her wedding day. On the contrary her intellectual work seemed only begun. She took a course of study in the school of mines of Columbia college, New York. Later she went to Germany and studied mineralogy in one of the universities there, being the only woman who ever did this. She visited the coast of Alaska also to investigate the amber fisheries. Ten years ago she founded the Æsthetic Society of Jersey City, an association mostly of young ladies, for literary, musical and elocutionary culture. It became very popular at once. Mrs. Smith was its president from the date of the organization to her death. It now numbers 500 members. It is said really to have changed the tone of society in Jersey City. The most distinguished men and women in the world of science and belles-lettres from both sides of the Atlantic have been guests of the Æsthetic club.

Mrs. Smith was the first woman elected a fellow of the New York Academy of Sciences. She belonged to the American Association for the Advancement of Science and to the English Anthropological society. When the British association met at Montreal our brave Yankee scientific woman read before them a paper on Indianology, which was greatly applauded. At her home, in Jersey City, she had what is said to be the finest private collection of minerals and Indian curios in America, gathered by her own busy hands. She was a prominent member of Sorosis, and for years was chairman of its committee on science. At her funeral the Daughters of Æsthetics, members of Sorosis and scientific men met to mourn their common loss. Distinguished professors of science acted as to carry her flower-covered coffin to its tomb.

Her home was a very happy one, and she was a devoted wife and mother. Her home as lovable as she was learned. One of the pleasantest pictures in her life is that of the time when she went to Europe with her four sons, to study all together.

Erminnie Smith was always learning. Her life is a steady inspiration and example to other women. ELIZA ARCHARD.

Your thought is your real strength. When you lift a weight you put your thought on the muscle that lifts. The heavier the weight the more of your thought do you put on it. If in so lifting, a part of your thought is turned in some other direction, if some one talks to you, if something frights you or annoys you, a part of your strength or thought leaves you.—Prentice Mulford.

County Collector's Report.

To the Director and Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Your committee to settle with the county collector respectfully report that they have carefully examined his annual report which is hereunto annexed, and have compared each item, dollar and cent with the accompanying vouchers, and find the same correct in every particular. A certified check was also shown that covered the difference between the receipts and disbursements.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
JOHN F. BAUER,
WM. HOWARD,
JOHN E. ASTFALK,
Committee.

May 6th, 1886.

To the Committee to Settle with the County Collector.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to submit herewith my annual report of the receipts and disbursements of the County of Union, from May 13th, 1885, to May 1st, 1886.

The tax levy for the present year was one hundred and thirty thousand dollars, which will meet all demands.

The amount of bonds falling due was twenty-six thousand dollars; of this amount twenty-two thousand have been presented and paid.

The State school tax for the next year will be $84,470.08, the amount of bonds falling due is $25,000, and the coupons of coupons and interest on registered bonds is $20,135.

Thanks are due you, gentlemen of the committee, as well as all the members of your board for the kindly feeling and support given me during the year.

Respectfully submitted,
P. SHERIDAN,
County Collector.

FRANK W. BAUER,
JOHN E. ASTFALK,
WM. HOWARD,
Committee.

May 1st, 1886.

STYLE OF SCHOOL LITERATURE KNOWN THIRTY YEARS AGO.

One of Bill Nye's Selections, Written by Himself—Arranged with Special Reference to the Manner of Choice, Delicate and Difficult Words.

One day as George Cawalt was going to his farm, and while passing through the wood, he spied a tall man approaching in an opposite direction along the highway.

"Ah!" thought George, in a low, mellow tone of voice, as he was wont to do:

"Good morning, my fine fellow," exclaimed the stranger, pleasantly. "Do you reside in this neighborhood?"

"Indeed I do," retorted George, cheerily, dropping his cap. "In yonder cottage, near the glen, my widowed mother and her thirteen children dwell with me."

"And how did your papa die?" asked the man, as he thoughtfully stood on the other foot awhile.

"Alas, sir," said George, as a large hot tear sole down his pale cheek and fell with a loud report on the warty surface of his bare foot, and was lost in a bitter gush. The good ship foundered two years ago last Christmastide, and father was foundered at the same time. No one knew of the loss of the ship and all on board was drowned until the next spring, and it was then too late."

"And what is your age, my fine fellow?" quoth the stranger.

"If I live until next October," said the boy, in a declamatory tone of voice suitable for a Second Reader, "I will be 7 years of age."

A LARGE FAMILY OF CHILDREN.

"And who provides for your mother and her large family of children" queried the man.

"Indeed, I do, sir," replied George, in a shrill tone. "I toil, oh, so hard, sir, for we are very poor. Ever since my dear sister, Ann, was married and brought her husband home to live with us I have to toil more assiduously than heretofore."

"And what means do you obtain a livelihood," exclaimed the man, in slowly measured and grammatical words.

"By digging wells, kind sir," replied George, picking up a tired ant as he spoke and stroking it on the back. "I have a good education, and so I am enabled to dig wells as well as most men. I do this in summer and rake in washing at night. In this way I am enabled to maintain our family in a precarious manner at best, sir, should my other sisters marry, I fear that some of my brothers-in-law would have to suffer."

"You are indeed a brave lad," exclaimed the stranger, as he spoke in a sullen tone. "And do you not at times become very weary and wish for other ways of passing your time?"

"Never, I do sir," said the lad. "I enjoy fair run and romp and be gay like other boys, but I must engage in constant manual exercise, or we will have no bread to eat and I have a mother and papa perished in the moist and moaning sea."

SAVED FROM A HURRIED GRAVE.

"And that if I were to tell you that your papa did not perish at sea, but was saved from a hurried grave!" asked the stranger in pleasing tones.

"Ah, sir!" exclaimed George, in a genteel manner, again doffing his cap. "I m too polite to tell you what I would say, and besides, you could tell a larger than I can."

"But my brave lad," said the man in low musical tones, "do you not know me, George. Oh, George!"

"I do," replied George, "that you have the advantage of me. Whilst I may have met you before, I can not at this moment place you, sir."

"My long lost son!" murmured the man, as the same time taking a large strawberry mark out of the valise and showing it to the lad, "do you not recognize your parent on your father's side! When our good ship went to the bottom, all perished save me. I swam several miles through the billows, and at last was obtained, gave up all hope of life. Suddenly a bright idea came to me and I walked out of the sea and rusted myself.

"And are my boys hearty," exclaimed the man with great glee, "see what I have brought for you." It was but the work of a moment for him to draw a short sword, which he held in his hand, and present to George's astonished gaze, a large 40 cent watermelon, which he had brought with him from the Orient.

"Ah," said George, "this is indeed a glad surprise. Albeit, how can I ever repay you?"—Bill Nye in Boston Globe.

A Case of Mutual Concession.

There was a large attendance at evening prayer-meeting at the Blue Light tabernacle. After the exercises were over and the benediction had been pronounced Jim Webster got up and addressed the pulpit as follows: "Parson, does you know dat dar sin gwinter be a cullered 'scursion to Brooklyn on de 4th of July?" "I has heard so, Brudder Webster." "Well, parson, a two-third majority ob dis congregashun am desirous ob descreratin' de sez' Lord's Day by gwine down to Brooklyn on dat occashun, and as de spokesman I has ter submit a perpersishun for yore consideratun." "What am dat perpersishun?" "De perpersishun am to dismiss de sez' dat of you will 'scuse dis congregashun from 'tendin' de services in de mawnin', dis congregashun will 'scuse you from 'tendin' de services in de ebenin'."—Texas Siftings.

The Vast Stores of Fertility.

The northern and western farmer must not forget that the bulk of southern arable lands have only been "scratched." The average of southern lands are not "broke" for over two or three inches deep, and vast stores of fertility lie accessible to better culture. Then there are millions of acres of the second growth preempted by the superficial tillage of the south—virgin soils the richest in the world.—Baltimore Manufacturers' Record.

RACERS ON THE SEA.

THE COMING CONTEST BETWEEN AMERICAN AND ENGLISH MODELS.

A Comparison of the Competing Yachts. The "Yankee Skimming Dish" and the English Cutter—The One Travels on Her Buoyancy, the Other on Her Ballast.

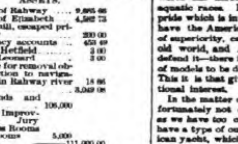
NEW YORK, June 22.—The yacht contests of this season promise to excel anyt1 ing the world has heretofore seen in the way of spanker races. The stake of national pride which is involved—all Europe eager to have the America's cup, which is the mark of superiority, captured and returned to the old world, and Americans asserting itself to defend it—there is the question of superiority of models to be decided in the coming races. This is it that gives the subject its international interest.

In the matter of yacht building we have fortunately not copied the English model, as we have so many times in other sports. We have a type of our own, a distinctive American yacht, which we claim to be the very best outdoors, and this is the question to be determined this season.

In this article some of the chief differences in the American and English type of yachts will be noted. The diagrams are taken in every instance from the construction drawings of the designers.



A COMPARISON OF SECTIONS.

As the resistance which a body will meet when pushed through the water depends on the area of its widest and deepest portion, a comparison of the submerged area of the largest transverse section of each yacht is of great value. This is plainly shown in above diagram. It will be noticed that the area of their sections increase in about the following order: The Priscilla, Puritan, Mayflower, Atlantic and Galatea, which means that, other things being equal, the Priscilla offers least resistance to the water and the Galatea the greatest. Of course, this compar

A Few Types of Boston Landladies—The Warm Interest They Take in Strangers. The Exceeding Inquisitiveness of the Vulgar—A Confectioner's Curiosity.

[Special Correspondence.]

BOSTON, June 22.—This is a study of a Boston landlady who has just taken a New York lady as a lodger and has been engaged, while the lady was out, in looking over her wife's apparel at the dressing table. She has not enjoyed herself so well for a long time, and it is a pity that the sudden and unexpected entrance of her new lodger should have interrupted such an innocent recreation. But accidents will happen in the best regulated families. She is now saying she thought it was an old gray bonnet, there is a crowd in her rear playing with the new lodger's things. It is composed of the landlady's children.

If the lodger had come ten minutes sooner she would have found the landlady trying on her garnet sarah tea gown, and that would have been a wretched row. She will wonder when she next wears that gown how its back seams got so strained and how the sleeves were torn. Landlady rather likes that garment, and has already made up her mind that if the lodger goes out of town for a night and leaves her extra clothes, she, the landlady, will wear that tea gown over to Mrs. Martinmuzzen's some evening, or also invite in a few people to ice cream, when she will play the hostess attired in it. She isn't quite sure which she will do.

There is an overpowering quantity of curiosity lying about Boston. It seizes upon the stranger and lures him full of holes before he has had time to accustom his digestion to Washington pie and hot brown bread. Nor is its thirst ever allayed. Every time you go and come, the people whose inquisitiveness is highly developed, and their name is legion, ask you the why and wherefore. It is very much of an ask you time, this. They don't consider it any trouble to ask questions, and they don't draw any very delicate lines around their interest in other people either.

Mr. D., from Chicago, spent last winter here. By some unhallowed luck he located in a social stratum that reeked with curiosity, and devoted the whole time to satisfying it. He and his wife constituted the family. They went to housekeeping on a second floor. The family on the lower floor plunged into their affairs with the zest of wild hunters. Every question under the sun relating to their personal or business affairs was fired off at them. No evasion, no change of subject, no tactics known to politicians warded off the dreadful invaders, who fairly demanded, with sword and gun, to know the innermost ramifications of their life. They sent a bill to Mr. D. for 50 to boldly ask what salary Mr. D. received.

Mrs. D. was a little older than her husband. The family lived and breathed with their respective ages over and over again. Not receiving anything satisfactory in answer, the "old lady" of the house, a veteran of the inquisitive corps, who ought to have been strung all over with medals for heroic service in her line, walked up to Mrs. D., saying:

"Did you ever see Daniel Webster?"

"No."

"Were you born in Webster's day?"

"No."

"Well, you don't look so very old."

"No, I'm not so very old."

"Well, how old are you, anyway?"

"Old enough to mind my own affairs and trouble nobody."

"Well, how old is that?"

"Some persons reach that point when quite young, and others never reach it."

When goods would come to the house for the D's the watchful lower family intervewed the messengers, asking where they were bought, what they were and what they cost.

When Mr. D. left the house, traveling satchel in hand, the lower family darted after him and asked him where he was going.

He always made the same answer: "I haven't fully decided," and yet their vulgar curiosity was never checked. When a carriage called for him they asked the driver if he knew where Mr. D. was going.

Very nearly like this family in deficiency was the landlady of a boarding house where an acquaintance of mine, a lady, boarded. She wasn't extremely young, and yet she didn't consider herself even in sight of middle age. A friendly crow had alighted on her face often enough to call her a track or two; but nobody thought of her as in the least elderly. One morning at the breakfast table, while all the boarders silently ate their scorched coffee and cold rolls, all were anxious to increase her stock of information, called out: "Mrs. C., do the members of your family wrinkle early?" Mrs. C. looked up in astonishment, not thoroughly comprehending the remarkable question.

"Do they wrinkle early?" reiterated the persistent questioner, "or do they not?" "I see you have a good many wrinkles, yet I don't suppose you're so very old."

Even the horse car conductors become inbued with a yearning to know all about their passengers. An acquaintance of mine was in a business that shipped a great many small boxes. Sometimes one of these would come in to be filled instantly. The shipping clerk would dispatch an assistant with it at once. Going so frequently on the same car line, each one of the crowd of a small box agitated the conductor's mind. One day he said to the clerk:

"What have you got in your box?"

"I don't know."

"Why, it's very strange if you have been carrying boxes like these for months and not know what's in them."

"It isn't my business to know what's in them. It's my business to carry them," said the clerk, who was English and knew nothing about anybody's business but his own, and considered it a bore to be forced to know.

I wouldn't say that all Boston was so fearfully inquisitive. Indeed, it would have exploded from curiosity long since if it had been. But a certain stratum of its society is highly developed in this direction. Occasionally one comes in contact with a bliss blood who has it as bad as any one.

PRENTICE MULFORD.

A Sketch of an Oddity in Letters and Character.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Prentice Mulford, whose portrait accompanies this sketch, is one of the oldest and most interesting individualities among the people of the pen. Born and brought up in a little seafaring town on Long Island he is thoroughly western in taste and character. Sixteen years of his life were passed in California, mining and striving for financial success in other difficult ways. It was there that he developed his talent for writing, which has since made him so well known to journalism. He was over thirty years old before he even thought of writing or dreamed that he had either taste or ability in letters. While living in a withered little mining town in Tuolumne county, California, on a Sunday under a pine tree, he wrote his first article for a newspaper. It described the annual fall spree observed by the river miners on their dams being carried away by the autumn freshet. It brought strongly out the horrible consequences of getting over a spree. It was signed "Dogberry," and published by The Union Democrat.

The editor, not being deluged with able contributions as eastern editors are suspected of being, wrote to beg more of the same kind of literature. Mr. Mulford obligingly complied, and for two years continued to furnish articles to The Democrat, which kept all that section of the state in a roar. He gained a local reputation, and was made a candidate for the legislature, but didn't reach it. Col. Joseph Lawrence, editor of The Golden Era, of San Francisco, noticed these articles, and, being one of those infrequent souls who have a talent for recognizing talent, was struck by the originality and charm of this unknown writer's work, and wrote him, offering him an editorial position on his paper.

Mr. Mulford accepted, left off pursuing the gold hunter's phantom at once and forever, and was soon the most famous newspaper man on the Pacific coast. His humor was so fine and subtle that it pervaded the country in extracts from his sketches and letters. It was not of the broad, presumptuous variety, which challenges the reader to "look out for something funny" in the next paragraph. It was delicate, and sprung up spontaneously in matter not heralded as humorous.

It was on The Golden Era that Bret Harte began his literary career. He was a typesetter in the office, and occasionally sent anonymous contributions down stairs. Col. Lawrence fervied him out and put the pen in his hand.

Most persons were astonished when they met Mr. Mulford. Instead of the dashing assertive young fellow they had pictured, they found a man of rather grave presence, modest in manner to the point of timidity. He talks delightfully well, though only when pushed forward by those who know his gifts as a conversationist. His naturally retiring disposition prevents him from ever taking the lead voluntarily.

A lady of a literary prominence who has known Prentice Mulford many years said of him. "He is the meekest and most conscientious man I ever knew, as well as the most able intellectually."

He has traveled much both in this country and abroad. He made a tour of the French provinces on foot, because he wanted to study the life of the common people. His letters descriptive of this trip were of extraordinary interest, and were largely copied. They told exactly what other letters did not tell.

Many men think they love nature, and talk and write glowingly about its joys and beauties, but Prentice Mulford is the only person I ever knew who loves nature well enough to see no face but hers for weeks and months. In California he for one prospected for weeks at a time, with no companion save a mule, and while in newspaper work in this city he was in the habit of breaking away from the confinements of too oppressive civilization, and going into complete solitude in some house of his own hasty building in the forest, there to stay till he "got better acquainted with himself," as he said. While in retreat he always does no end of writing, and still more thinking. Philosopher and mystic, he delights to delve into problems in mental science while away from the attrition of cities. "Woe shall minister to a mind diseased!" he considers the great question of personality, and while he worked upon it two years before he found a satisfactory solution. Then he evolved some theories on the management of the mind which he styles "self-help," and a practical system of phrenopathy, or mental cure. He believes that the mind is the only life of the body, and the only real and enduring thing in nature.

Mr. Mulford is a firm believer in a life after death and in pre-existence. He is a spiritualist of a very high order, and is himself a sensitive. He has been called a sentimentalist in his love of nature. He sees, yes, feels the soul of all natural things. He is spirit, related to the Indian, loving the solitude of forest and mountain, and finding more joy in floating over the waters of New York bay in a tide boat, than in all the fine society of the metropolis. Yet, when he does mix with people, he can be as companionable as any knight that ever ate in princely hall and can then be as witty as brilliant an after-dinner speech as Beecher.

Mr. Mulford spends his winters in Boston (recently) and in parts of every winter in New York. Usually he goes up the Hudson and rents some little fisherman's cottage, and does one year's thinking in a month, coming down to the city to spend his Sundays. Recently he has been devoting his time to metaphysical writing almost exclusively. As a lecturer he has much ability, and really prefers the platform to the pen. He is a charming story writer. One of his most recent stories, "The Bank of California," a serial of mining life, is now being published by the newspaper press and greatly praised. He was ten years on the editorial staff of The Graphic of this city. While there he invented and prepared the feature known as "The History of a Day," which for a time was so noticeably excellent. As a conversationist he is also superb. He can pack more matter into fewer lines, when he chooses to do so, than any other writer known to the American press.

He is of medium height, is rather on the autumn plan as to hair, has a considerable bronzed by the sun—he believes in the sun—and keep brown all over, as with brown eye. He is boyish in figure, though getting on toward what is called middle age, a fact that doesn't trouble him in the least, as he has theories on the subject of old age, or rather on the subject of doing away with it altogether. Youth is a matter of the spirit, he thinks. Old age need never be encountered if human beings will not invite it, and he carries out his theories, himself, which is more than can be said of most philosophers.

GERTRUDE GARRISON.

Fiber of Textile Fabrics.

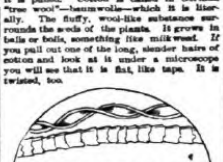
In these days of adulteration and deception, an easy way to tell linen and silk, cotton and wool are spun together and woven so adroitly that it is almost impossible to detect the fraud. A sure way is by the microscope.

Cotton is not at all like flax. That has a fiber, and hangs together like a thread when it is pulled. Cotton is what is called "true wool"—hairwoolie—which it is literally. The fluffy, wool-like substance surrounds the seeds of the plants. It grows in balls or fruits, something like milk weed. If you pull out one of the long, slender hairs of cotton and look at it under a microscope you will see that it is flat, like tape. It is twisted, too.



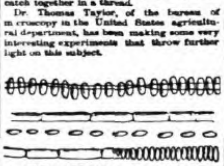
TEXTILE FABRICS.

There are fibers of four different textile fabrics in the picture. They are greatly magnified. Line 1, on top, shows the cotton fiber already mentioned, with its twisted ribbon appearance. Lines 2 and 3, next below, are ropelike hairs of wool. There are two kinds of wool. Line 4 is a fiber of flax, in joints. The last two crossed lines at the bottom show silk fibers, the finest of all.

In all these fibers there is a great roughness and softness which makes it possible for them to be rolled together and make a thread. They will stick together after they are twisted. If an attempt was made to spin a thread of hairs it would fall, for they would not cling together after the pressure was taken off. That is the difference between hair and wool.

The silk worm product has the same rough texture, hence threads can be made of it. But all attempts to spin a thread from the various vegetable silks and silk weeds have failed, because their product is a smooth fiber. The single spears would not catch together to form a thread.

Dr. Thomas Taylor, of the bureau of microscopy in the United States agricultural department, has been making some very interesting experiments that throw further light on this subject.



FIBERS TREATED WITH ACID.

He takes, for instance, a silk thread that is supposed to be pure cotton. He lets a drop of nitric acid fall upon the thread, and then examines it under the microscope. The silk part will be all shriveled up and destroyed. The cotton part will remain undestroyed.

Again, if one takes cotton or flax fibers, drops strong sulphuric acid upon them, immediately followed by drops of the transparent tincture of iodine, they will change to the appearance shown in the second illustration. They will turn a beautiful blue color, and look like beads strung upon a string. The top row in the illustration represents a cotton fiber, those underneath flax.

New Industry.

Three Oaks, Berrien county, Mich., takes pride in the fact that it is the only "feather-bone factory" on earth. What is featherbone? Briefly, a substitute for whalebone. Mr. E. K. Warren, of Three Oaks, several years ago decided that an excellent bone, equal to whalebone, could be manufactured from quills, and after months of study perfected his process, and constructed the necessary machinery. Quills of turkey and goose feathers only are used. The first thing is to strip the feathers of their plumage; rollers with knives attached will do the work in halves; the pith is removed by sand-papered rollers rapidly revolved; then a series of interlocking files reduce the quills to fiber, and in this state the material is fed to a machine which forms it into a strong, fine cord which is at the same time wound with thread. In another machine four of these cords are wound with thread in such a manner as to form a flat tape; a sewing machine sets a line of stitching between each cord, thus giving increased strength and elasticity, and it is finished for market by being passed between heavy rollers, which smooth it and give a uniform surface, and packed in boxes containing twenty-yard lengths.

Featherbone is absolutely unbreakable. Bent double, when straightened, it is as good as ever. It is made in all colors, and in several grades as regards fineness, the "extra fine" being, we should judge, best adapted for use in dressmaking. Castings are not needed, for featherbone washes well, and featherstone is simply sewed to the garment. The manufacturers claim it will not warp, and that it will not rust, nor injure by it. Genuine whalebone sells at retail at twenty cents for somewhat less than yard lengths, featherbone for fifteen cents per yard.

A large whip factory is the outgrowth of this unique discovery, and featherbone whips have already a high order of merit, famous for awakening and renewing the energies of a lazy horse.—Michigan Farmer.

Moth Proof Wool.

Professor Thomas Taylor, who has been experimenting in this direction, writes: Wool treated in mass in a bath of sulphuric acid, strength 5 degrees Twaddle, for several minutes, and afterward quickly washed in a weak solution of soda, and finally in pure water and dried, feels rough to the fingers, but is proof against moths. For myself, I have preserved a small quantity of wool thus treated for the last twelve years, my object being to ascertain whether the chemical action to which it was subjected would impair its strength. As far as I can observe, it seems to have retained its original tenacity. Wool thus treated seems to possess the property of resisting the ravages of the larvæ of moths. This specimen, although openly exposed for the period named, suffered no injury from them. Under the microscope, the imbrications appear to have resumed their natural position, and appear clear. From these experiments, it would seem most improbable that a new crop of insects more might be produced from wool thus treated, considering that it seems to be moth proof.

Glass plates have been substituted for copper in the sheathing of an Italian ship, the advantage claimed being exemption from oxidation and incrustation. The glass was cast, like iron, in plates to fit the hull.

An Armor Plate that Shed Cannot Pierce.

The latest victory in the long drawn struggle between the gun and the armor plate has been scored in favor of armor. At Spezzia a German chilled steel armor plate, five feet nine inches in length and three feet in width, was fixed against the face of the cliff, and battered with chilled shot from the 100-ton gun. A thunderbolt weighing almost exactly a ton was hurled against the face of the plate by the explosion of 750 pounds of powder without producing more than a slight indentation, and some rending cracks. The plate failed to make any serious impression on the plate, which has thus come off victor in the struggle. It would seem that no gun hitherto built will go through 42 feet of chilled steel.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Women Hear Better.

It has been found by Dr. Tait that the ear in women can perceive higher notes, that is, sounds with a greater number of vibrations per second, than the ear in men. The highest limit of human hearing is somewhere between 41,000 and 42,000 vibrations per second. Few persons have equal sensibility in both ears, but the right ear usually hearing a higher note than the left. The lowest continuous sounds have about sixteen vibrations per second.

Facts of Interest.

Do not eat much meat in hot weather.

When a rain cloud is more than 6,000 feet thick, hail is produced.

There is now telephonic communication between Philadelphia and Boston.

A Scotchman, Herbert Prang, has invented an electric machine which prints music as it is played.

A spring of magnetic water has been found in Hunterdon county, Ind. It was struck by some persons boring for coal.

It is thought that a dozen shots from the new German bomb, charged with dynamite shells, would destroy the strongest fortifications in the world.

Egyptian engineers have recently discovered the bed of the ancient Lake Moeris. They propose to utilize it as a reservoir for the overflow of the Nile. A canal will be cut from the river to the lake bed. This is the identical thing that Joseph in the Bible is believed to have done, 4,000 years ago.

A telephone miller 1,000 years is to be constructed under the Blore Ghauts, or mountains, which is to supply water to Bombay, British India. An aqueduct will be built to the city. It will require 1,000 men to do it. So ancient Rome was supplied from the Sabine mountains, so Glasgow is supplied from the Highlands to-day.

A cask of Scotch whisky was ordered by Governor Forsker, of Ohio, during the recent apprehension of danger from riot. The Spencer rifle is away behind the times, Gen. Alexander thought. So the United States soldiers are provided with it. The Martini-Henry rifle, used by European armies, is the only one up to the requirements of modern times.

Dr. Sandras, a Frenchman, claims to have discovered that by the use of different inhalations, bringing the larynx in contact with air impregnated with different vapors, the human voice can be greatly modified. Hoarseness brought on by cold may be cured in a few minutes, and the strength, pitch and character of the voice entirely changed by these inhalations, he declares.

The Luck of a Nevada Senator.

"I've always believed in providence since one day, years ago, when I was left all alone over in Shea county. It was a rooster of a day, and I was returning on horseback from a hunt for some choice robbers. I was slowly following a faint mountain trail, and the sun was just baking me, and the horse was in a lather. I came under the shade of a big rock, and dismounted to let the animal to get up and have a smoke. I sat down on a cool boulder, cut a pipeful from my plug, filled my pipe and felt for a match. Well, Joe, there was no match in my pocket, no flint, no steel. I searched and searched, but there was no match. I tell you, Joe, I felt worse over that disappointment than I've done since, when the first bear gone back on me and bit me for $100,000 at a clip.

"But while I sat there on that boulder wrapped in gloom, what should my eyes suddenly fall on? A match, by heaven, lying on the trail not six feet away from me. I used it—though; I was a little afraid to touch it at first—and had my smoke. So you needn't worry about how this political fight is going to come out. A man for whom Providence will go to the trouble of providing a match for a smoke in the wilds of the Sierra Nevadas, where man's foot scarcely ever treads, isn't likely to get left. And that's why a common, plain little thing like being elected to the United States senate. Ever since that time," concluded the Comstocker, "I've never refused a dollar to a person, and have generally done my best in a quiet, unobtrusive way, to make myself solid with the people who have to say on Providence.—Senator Jones in San Francisco Post.

Making Made But Little Difference.

"A little story" brings to mind with renewed force the old proverb, "truth is stranger than fiction." I was talking of what disposition to make of a kicking cow when our hired man said:

"I guess I can find a customer for her. There's a man down the line in Berrien who bought a cow from one of our neighbors. He told the Irishman that he must tell him one thing about the cow before he closed the bargain—that the cow would sometimes kick.

The tender "God-ordained protector" of the cow replied:

"That makes no difference; my wife does the milking."

I have often heard such things told, and have always thought they must be—or have been made up "to point a moral or adorn a tale." But this is a fact, for I questioned the man about it and he said he knew it was true.—Woman's Journal.

A Rich Woman's Recreations.

I could not but be struck by the variety offered to a woman like Mrs. A——, for instance, as I saw her quietly drop in after the gorgeous Chapman-Mortimore wedding to read for half an hour to that ailing and fabulous rubies in her ears to a quiet meeting of the Casserine, a small literary club to hear a paper read on jewelry and one on lace. The latter paper, Mrs. A—— told me, was very learned and most interesting, and the room was surrounded with the most beautiful collection of antique lace, much of it from Mrs. Astor's own collection. Mrs. Johnston herself owns a great deal. This literary, quiet afternoon, in the midst of the excitement of the winter week, with its riot of weddings and dinners, was most refreshing.—New York Letter.

Worse Than None at All.

Said a practical physician once: "Gymnastic exercise is worse than none. A woman who takes only such exercise as comes in the ordinary duties of a sedentary life does herself more harm than good when she wearies herself out by taking an absurdly long walk once or twice a month under the impression that exercise is always beneficial, and especially so when it leads to fatigue. A brisk walk of half a mile every day is far more advantageous than a five-mile tramp once a fortnight."—Medical Journal.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

GRADUATING CLASS OF '86—MOTTO "EFFORT, IF NOT SUCCESS."

The Sixteenth Annual Commencement—The Exercises at Stillman Music Hall—Prizes Awarded.

Made by the Seventh Regiment Band—Miss Edith H. Leonard's Valedictory.

In the merry month of June the Plainfield High School each year brings forth a fresh graduating class, some perhaps to bloom and flush in storm and "rain their sweetness on the inert air," but others to move on and on with determination and will that each cycle of the seasons will find them one rung higher on the ladder of fame and useful in their day and generation in whatever paths fate or fortune directs their footsteps. This year is no exception to the rule, except that the High School at "sweet sixteen" has adopted for its future cognomen the name of its founder and will be henceforth known as PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

The sixteenth annual commencement exercises took place at Stillman Music Hall last evening, an audience of about 1,200 people having been present.

Promptly at 7:45 o'clock Miss Julia E. Bulkley, Principal, advanced from between the wings at the front of the stage, followed by Vice Principal F. J. Miller, and the graduating class of five young women and seven of six young men, while from the left similarly advanced the members of the Board of Education, the President, John W. Murray, the Secretary, Judge Nathan Harper, and Messrs. Mason W. Tyler, Judge Leslie D. Wadsworth, and the ex-President of the Board, the Hon. Jacob Kirkner, the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut, the other member being absent attending the National Sunday School Convention in Kansas, he being one of the five directors of the National Sunday School Union, whose headquarters are in the United States.

Miss Buckley and her company and Mr. Murray and his met in the center of the stage, exchanged greetings, and seated themselves on the handsome cane sofas and chairs in a semicircle facing the large audience of applauding friends, while the Seventh Regiment Band superbly rendered the march "Le Prophete," by Meyerbeer.

The scenery was rustic, and made unusually attractive by fresh flowers in profusion, and tastefully arranged. President Murray as master of ceremonies, announced as first in order according to the program, an essay on "Bread and Butter" by Miss Flora E. Petrie, who showed that it was small from the highest to the lowest, battling for bread and butter, and that, principle guiding, even the lowly toolsmack, may rise to the most exalted station.

Miss Laura E. Runyon read an essay on "Monasteries of the Nineteenth Century," giving due credit to the Roman Monks of past centuries for the creation of modern music.

Fred W. Cuthbert descanted on the life of John B. Gough, who without the advantages of public school education, had by earnestness of purpose and energy conquered himself, and led thousands from the broad road of intemperance and ruin into the straight path of temperance and joy, and leaving a white warning in his dying words—"Young men, keep your record clean."

Now we'll sing, sang from Mattei, rendered by the band, was followed with an essay entitled the Galaxy, by Frank L. Clawson, who compared the galaxy of stars in the heavens forming the milky way to the galaxy of thirty-eight stars in our star spangled banner, drawing a glowing picture of the fruits of the patriotism, and lofty purposes which made the galaxy grow from the original thirteen States to thirty-eight, and still continues to grow.

"Shakespeare Analyzed," an essay, was treated by Miss M. Louise Karner, in a logical manner to show the vantage ground upon which this greatest of writers stood, and such a rich array of gifts to feast our minds upon as is presented in the names of the well-known subjects.

Frank E. Newman, in an able essay, drew from the lifelet of Thomas Alva Edison, the Wizard of Menlo Park, the value of the principle of his life "never to neglect anything."

Part of Chilbert's descant on the life of John B. Gough, who without the advantages of public school education, had by earnestness of purpose and energy conquered himself, and led thousands from the broad road of intemperance and ruin into the straight path of temperance and joy, and leaving a white warning in his dying words—"Young men, keep your record clean."

Part of Chilbert's descant on the opera of Ernani, by Verdi, and Theodore J. Gillies, Jr., followed in an essay, on the life of Hugh Miller, the poor stone mason who devoted to building up where others had pulled down, and who, as the father of geological research, laid the foundation upon which he are still building, telling history from the rocks ages back beyond that told by all other means, and which is the martyr's science.

In her essay on "Fairies" Miss Emma L. Adams did more than amplify children's long-lasting and delightful, portraying most gracefully the fairy lore as a primitive means of paying tribute to the Creator, and of influences in virtue, when religion was in its infancy.

"Is Corpore Sano," an Essay by Herbert W. Peck, was an able argument in favor of proper training in athletics, pointing out how the art of war had changed since the invention of gunpowder, prior to which, when men had to depend upon their own physical strength, the Greek had attained a great development that it is recorded of conspicuous men in their day, that they could run a race a distance of a mile with a four-year-old on his shoulders. Another so firmly gripped an iron bar that no man could withdraw it, and a third could hurl a quoit so that it would redound himself by tearing away from his hand entirely, that another resisted the combined efforts of eight horses to pull a limb from where he stood, while another wore a bracelet for a finger ring. With the invention of gunpowder such strength deteriorated, and until recent years athletics have been neglected by people, and only practiced now in brutal prize fights and the like. He hoped for a proper recognition of the necessity of such athletic training as would accrue to a sound mind in a sound body.

A waltz, "The Gypsy Baron," by Strauss, was rendered by the band, and Miss Mabel Thomas Horn, who eloquently told of "The Herald of History and Poetry." She had the honor of being the only child, the only one of her Kings whose crown was a free gift from the people, and who did in battle defending the people's liberties, and leaving behind the memory of an unspotted name for all coming generations to honor.

"Words, the Fortresses of Thought" with valedictory, was the title of the next production, which was rendered by Miss Edith H. Leonard, and which, while it contained noble sentiments, and the valedictorian, a remarkably gifted young girl, showed that she was not yet at the zenith of her fond thought, protecting and preserving them from destruction, withstanding the seiges of the ages, and the assaults of the foe without, and a word-fortress, she maintained, without its thought will no more withstand attack than a house without a roof will withstand a cyclone. Slang and nonsense will live for a season, but the garrison soon die a natural death, and the fortress like those reduced to ashes by Time's destroying fingers. She aimed to show that good thoughts never die, fortified by proper words, and at the conclusion of her essay continued with the valedictory as follows:

VALEDICTORY.

At the completion of any work the natural inclination always is to look back—to glance, if possible, an idea of what will be done in the future from what has been done in the past. And we could not do otherwise and violate the precepts of Harry Wadsworth's motto in so doing, for in discovering the second part of that rule we are but obeying the first letter of it. Look back; but look forward. True, we do look back; but it is only that we may look forward with a clearer and more far-seeing gaze, that we may learn in the language of the old Greek bard "voyrai a us hpovru kai oisiknu." We are saying farewell to all that only to meet many of our teachers and school friends, but to our school; and in saying farewell what more fitting could we say than a word of praise which has done for us and for itself in the sixteen years of its existence? It is more than a beginning now, and its future stands firmly fixed upon the solid foundation of its past. The greatness and serviceability of an institution of learning can be best seen by the lives of its alumni. Thus Harvard, Yale and Princeton take great pride in their catalogues and the names of persons with M. A., D. D., LL.D., etc., attached to them, and the oftentimes names without such honorary titles. And in this respect Plainfield High School has certainly no small evidence of its greatness in the course of training. Only sixteen years have elapsed since the first graduate started out in his career, and the extent of them all must be but a young man now, too young to be more than entering upon the life work which he has chosen for his own. Yet Plainfield High School has reason to be proud of even these beginnings. Among its alumni are many successful business men, and in the learned professions, physicians, clergymen, lawyers, teachers and college professors. The great work of its alumnae, too, must not pass unmentioned. To the executive ability and conscientious, energetic labor of some of these does that world-wide university, the Chautauqua Association, owe much of its business prosperity. And though they are no longer students, they have not forgotten their alma mater." Within the last year, indeed, we have had substantial proof of that. The prizes in language, whose awarding is even now awaited with beating hearts by anxious competitors, are the gift of one of Plainfield's graduates, who desired to give to others an incentive to study never offered to himself—for it will be noted that these are the first rewards of the kind ever received in the school. Then, too, many of us were surprised and delighted when we entered the school building one Monday morning some weeks since, to find a tastefully assorted cabinet of minerals to aid us in our geological labors, the gift of another alumnus of the school. Again, more heart-felt applause, perhaps, never made the old school-hall ring than was elicited by the friendly words and the counsels of another post-graduate who told us what he knew of the "great natural bridge" which separates childhood from manhood and womanhood. He said that he was too young to teach us; but certainly none of us are likely to forget that lesson of Purpose which he gave. Again, the reports which come from the American Institute of Mining Engineers, from the American Chemical Journal and from many another source, justify the recent proposal that one corner of the library shelves be set aside as the "Alumni Alcove," and devoted to the original work of the graduates of old. It is that Plainfield High School has a right to be proud of her foster children and of their affection and regard for her. But it is not only to her graduates that she must look for benefits. Certainly she never received a more valuable gift than that which came to her through the exertions of her undergraduates. The large addition to her already good library has made it one of the most important features of the school. The long rows of history, fiction, poetry, science, biography, travel and philology will all of information, amusement and an opportunity for thorough scholarly work. The new volumes have been especially welcome just at this juncture; for now our school seems to be at the beginning of a epoch in its history. Its field of study is broadening and widening in liberal culture. Where last year English literature was taught to only the Senior Division of the High School, today not one of the four classes is excluded from its share in the grander and loftier writings of the great-est and best authors of England and America. And this is but one of the improvements that have come to its various departments. Perhaps one of the most interesting features of the new curriculum is that which has been established at the beginning of this term where graduates of the school, who have been teaching are enabled to become teachers. And agian we may notice a great advance in the musical training of the school, the interest and the increasing pleasure with which visitors attend the morning exercises in the chapel. Now, too, we have a higher and better preparatory course for entrance to colleges has been completed at graduation, Yes, our school is steadily advancing year by year, month by month. What it has become we know. What it will become remains to be seen. The world will witness the day by the everbusy hand of the great founder of J. J. public schools, Dr. Charles H. Stillman, when it shall be said that it never can be forgotten or pass unmentioned at this glad commencement season. Daily and hourly developed into a stout and healthy young tree under the skillful management of wise hands and kindly hands. But though it is stout and hardy and though its branches are each year mounting higher and higher, yet still the promise of a full-grown tree is not to come is infinitely greater. If so great things have been achieved in the past sixteen years, what will fell be accomplished things will be accomplished in the next. It requires no very clear-sighted prophet to foresee that the graduates of this school and the community will be our school, and how it will go on and on from year to year, from year to year under the wise guidance of those to whom it has been entrusted. Then let us remember that we can call our selves her pupil, a sad one; rather let us rejoice in the fact that we are her pupils, and that she is for we shall never be cast off so long as we prove worthy children of Plainfield High School.

The band here played a selection from "Il Trovatore" by Verdi, and Judge Harper, assisted by Judge Wadsworth, awarded prize as follows:

FOR PENMANSHIP.

Two prizes, offered by Mrs. J. W. Murray, First prize—Bryant's Complete Library of Poetry and Song. Won by Miss Kittie C. Cox.

Second prize—gold pen and holder, won by Miss Julia E. Bulkley.

Honorable mention—Frank Martin, Sarah C. Sharp, Alice Quinn, Louise B. Runyon, Mary Bulkley, Nellie Bulkley, Daniel Dalzell, Lizzie Bird, Ariadne Gilbert, Annie Boone and Lloyd Polhemus.

MATHEMATICS

Founded by Dr. Charles H. Stillman, two prizes were offered by his widow, Mrs. Chas. H. Stillman, for the best, $15 in gold, which was won by Tiemann N. Horn, and the second prize, $10 in gold, by T. J. Gillies, jr.

Honorable mention—Daniel Dalzell.

Prize offered by Mr. J. W. Murray, and by Albert C. Phillips.

Honorable Mention—Ella C. Woltmann, Edward J. Patterson and Arthur G. Bensr.

COMPOSITION.

Two prizes offered by ex-President Kirkner. The first prize, $15 in gold, was won by Miss Ada E. Westervelt. The second prize, $10 in gold, was won by Walter Chamberlin.

Honorable mention—Fred E. Newman and Edward T. Perrine.

SPELLING.

A volume of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary was won by Alfred C. Phillips.

Honorable Mention—Nellie B. Crawford.

Two prizes were offered by Mrs. C. A. Ritter. The first was $15 in gold and was won by Miss Ada E. Westervelt. Miss M. Rose Lozzia winning the second prize of $10 in gold.

LATIN.

Two prizes were offered by Ernest R. Ackerman. The first, inclding Clarendon, in nine volumes, was won by Miss Emma L. Adams, and Miss Clara M. Burt carried off the second prize, a History of Rome in four volumes.

Miss Edith R. Leonard's excellent record in language deserves mention. Miss she only reviewed the classics preparatory to entering Smith College, she was not considered a competitor for the prize.

Col. Mason W Tyler, who was next introduced, made an address on "The office of the Public School in a Republican Government." He pointed out the great influence Russia, which paid $33 per year for her army for each dollar for her public schools, while the United States paid $2 for her schools to every dollar spent for her army. While the schools are sustained, he urged, the Nation will prosper. "Give me the history of your youth and I will," said he, "give you the character of your Nation."

Judge Harper then, when the population of the United States was 50,000,000, the children comprised 25,000,000 of that number, and the public school in their great school.

Gavotte—"Viola," by Bernstein, was the next selection by the band, and thereafter Mr. Murray presented the diplomas, accompanying the presentation by remarks replete with sensible advice to the graduates respecting them, if they did not wish to be of living themselves.

Some selections from the "Mikado" was the next school exercise, preceding the programs, as the audience dispersed.

As regards the graduates gave a reception to the class-room, admission to which was by ticket. By music, dancing and promenading and refreshments the large company of young people present were regaled until an early hour this morning, when as the lights went out, the sixteenth annual commencement of the Plainfield High School had become but a pleasant memory.

North Plainfield Exercises.

NINETEEN GRADUATES.

Diplomas Awarded. — Interesting Exercises.—Essays in Full.

Shortly after seven o'clock last evening a casual observer might have noticed small knots of people wending their way in the direction of the Universalist Church, on Chatham street, North Plainfield. The chapel is at present in the hands of a band of carpenters who are enlarging the edifice so as to accommodate the unusually large number of strangers who are drawn hither by the interesting services to which their every Sunday afternoon and evening. To say that a thousand people assembled in that building last night would not be exaggerating the fact in the least, for long before the commencement exercises of the North Plainfield Public School, advertised to begin at eight o'clock, people were wedged in there to a suffering extent. Principal Bone and the teachers were present in force, and certainly near the multitude, but their exertions were of no avail, for the seating capacity of the chapel was imposing. The entire back ground was a drapery of national flags, while at either end of the platform was a towering mass of ferns and flowers and a monument of roses lent fragrance from the "altar" directly in front of the speakers. Principal Bone and Messrs. H. C. Carroll, James McGee and H. Gardner, the Board of Trustees occupied seats on the right of the platform, while the graduating class, nineteen in number, were seated at the extreme end of the stage.

Following is the Paramasia of the graduates:

Miss Anna Hull is a daughter of Samuel Hall of Duer street.

David Bulkley is a son of John Bodine of Grandview avenue.

George W. Bird is a son of Louis M. Bird of No. 27 Chatham street.

Miss Adelaide P. Storm resides with her uncle, Mr. A. H. Faber of Rockview avenue.

Miss Lydia Colton resides with a relative, Mrs. Cornelia Mitchell, widow of the late James Mitchell, on Grove street.

Miss Emma F. Gilson is a daughter of Mrs. Jane M. Gilson, widow of the late James Gilson, and resides with her mother on Duer street.

Miss Margaret J., and Eli Long, jr., are children of Eli Long, Second Fifth avenue, I. Long of Grove street. Their ages are respectively 15 and 16 years.

George C. Worth is a son of Thomas Worth of Grove street. He will have acquitted himself in the rendition of his declamation upon the subject "Labor."

Miss Alice Woodland is a daughter of Mrs. Ann Woodland of Fifth avenue. The lady is possessed of a clear and distinct voice and rendered her recitation with much force.

The Misses Clara L. and Lillie M. Steiner are the daughters of the late John N. Steiner of Somerset street. Their ages are respectively 14 and 17 years, and they have been members of the North Plainfield Public School.

Miss Annetta C. Harrison is a daughter of James W. Harrison, formerly of New Dover, N. J., but now a resident of Jackson avenue. Miss Harrison is possessed of a loud and clear voice and her delivery is more than usually distinct.

Charles J. Weenas is a son of John Wilkinson and Mrs. Ann Weenas. The latter was formerly a scholar in the Plainfield High School under the tutorship of Miss Gavitt. For four years he has been a scholar in the school from which he graduated last evening.

Frank R. Searles is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Searles, and a grandson of Colonel L. Martin, and is at present stopping at Mrs. Gardner's on Front street. He was to have graduated last year, but sickness made it impossible, and Principal Bone graciously bestowed upon him another year's instruction.

Miss Fannie E. Mattison is a daughter of Borough Clerk and Justice Mattison, Cedar Grove Cemetery, Maple avenue, near Greenbrook Road. She is a niece of Hiram DeCamp for so long a time manager Irving's Hotel. On account of illness Miss DeCamp was unable to read her essay on "Unwritten Music" but it is hereunto published in full.

Miss Alice Nolan whose essay is published in full is a daughter of Mrs. Nolan, the boarding avenue. This lady is gifted with a delightfully free and clear delivery. At the graduating exercises of a year ago she read an essay on "The glory of North Plainfield," which with its originality elicited favorable comment. A miniature reproduction of the essay is given elsewhere.

Miss Lizzie DeCamp is a daughter of Albert DeCamp of Maple avenue, near Greenbrook Road. She is a niece of Hiram DeCamp for so long a time manager of Irving's Hotel. On account of illness Miss DeCamp was unable to read her essay on "Unwritten Music" but it is hereunto published in full.

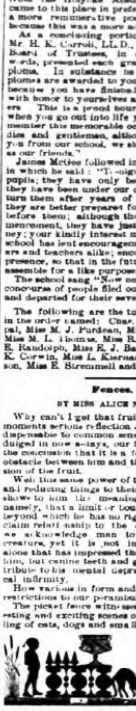
MINIATURE OF COMMENCEMENT LAST YEAR



scale its summit; of the miraculous contracting and unfolding of himself which an infamous man, closely pursued by a ferocious bloodhound, endeavors to be squeezed through pickets two inches apart.

Next our solos and imposing board fence. Very few solos, but many duets and trios, and gymnastic and acrobatic art that adorns its surface, and find if you can, a means of exploring the interior of the fence. Long live the wild taste of the young American that surpasses all. How suggestive are some of our boards! How they invite the eye to rest in gazing we feel the high and western winds; how they suggest to the mind the idea of romantic rail the lovers; while in and out the old stove fence, crawl countless, slender, delicate cats, and the sad reflection that the agony of these boundaries are those in the social and political world.

Then the fourth of July Independence gives free and equal rights to free American citizens, yet we all recognize definite grades and limits of a republic.

Though the lines of separation in this country are not marked as they are the castes of India or the nobility and peasantry of England, we have, nevertheless, cliques and upper tens.

What are the requirements for entrance to these charmed circles, you ask? A well filled purse, the possession of elegant appearance, combined with pleasing manners and voluble speech.

Then, too, what barbed wire fence so close? Government, State and town offices. Something of the pathetic shade over us as we look back from the present to the golden dates to obtain entrance.

Can that be one of our honored political brothers who has been low as to stretch his worthy personage on the ground and crawl through the wire fence? Sadly scratched, endeavors to push himself through the upper wire. Oh! piteous sight! He who a few minutes before had a well-to-do appearance of hood, now hangs in so bruised and mutilated a condition that his own mother would not recognize him. He is left behind, however, from his awkward position by interested friends and taken to his home, where after the first few applications of the tentative relations of his flesh will have disappeared and he will be prepared to try again.

Unwritten Music.

BY MISS LIZZIE DE CAMP.

Love, happiness, pain and sorrow are all essential to the great, though apparently insignificant theme.

How wonderful in beauty, variety and influence is our instrumental music! yet how simple, with apparently so few notes, grand in its conception and perfect in harmony.

We speak of it as unwritten, because we, as part of nature's work, are able only to appreciate and enjoy, not understand and reproduce the work of so great a musician as the composer of our "unwritten music."

Let us for a moment study the wonderful opera. Contemplate the tireless movements of these great heavenly bodies as they sweep on in their mighty course, never ceasing or resting at all their courses, and how natural seems Pythagoras' "music of the spheres."

Then see the birds in the trees, the soft, trill ing notes of the happy warblers, floating on the soft breeze, echoing in the distant woods, and the sad notes of the mourning dove, and gradations to fading twilight.

What more desirable option to the most ardent lover than the soft notes of these innocent birds of fairy-like development. Is there music in the ocean? Yes! mild, grand music of the surges ever in motion, of the wave tossed and lashed by bold and free breezes and rustling with a mighty power upon the land, testing in their rich diapason of the power of the Lord, and how he holds the seas in his mighty hand.

Go with me far away from the sighing shores of the restless ocean, from the land of gentle breezes to the country land, to the rich meadows and hear the brook as it ripples through its banks, and the water falls and as to reach the distant ocean, and you to become acquainted with more friends of laughing brook and river as it leaps and sings all its unconscious singing and gently bathes the fringed garments of the drooping willows.

What is a sweeter to a mother than the joyous voices of her happy children at play t what more grand and musical than the musician who can tame his harp to echo the tones of a loving parent's voice.

But a sweeter, richest as i strongest of all our unwritten music is that of a noble life, inspired with a lofty purpose, which never fails to touch the heart of its own unreasonable longings. Every thought, word and action seems pure and true, and free from all discord, the sweet harmony flows on, making "One grand, sweet song."

—Edwards's dry and fancy goods store is one of the liveliest places in the city. Low prices and big and wide-awake methods of doing business have made a success of rich and desirable goods at popular low prices the order of the day in this business. His free use of printing ink in telling the story of his low prices has great advantages to be gained in purchasing of him. Every installment is a valuable means to this end. We like a good deal about the way he goes about to such a reliable house, and one of our leading merchants who will deserve the encouragement of his home trade by his principle of encouraging home trade.

THE PLEASURES OF THE "PASEO."

Joaquin Miller Writes of Mexico's Handsome Horses and Graceful Riders.

The Spaniard is the true and only cavalier. He was born on horseback. The cavalier of Virginia "is only a weak imitation." But let us not be unjust. Let us look at the wooded and watered paseo before us.

Of course, hundreds prefer carriages on the grand drive under the trees to Chapultepec. And I ever join them. It is unpopular in a city of less than a half a million souls before. The only real, true-class thing for a man to do, however, is to get a fine saddle horse and ride like a true cavalier to the castle of Montezuma.

I have not room, really not the ability, to do justice to the handsome horses and the most graceful horsemen. But if I tell you that I galloped from the gate of the city to Chapultepec and back in a half an hour, whose saddle and bridle some cost $5,000 you can begin to imagine that there is some display of wealth on the popular paseo.

Hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of carriages. Those graceful men have their hats in their hands most of the time. For they meet many carriages with ladies and their national yellow shawls. Deep necks uncovered in the presence of ladies. Besides that, they are mostly young, and have fine tinted cheek and bright eyes.

A splendid band plays in the crescent that doubles about the group representing Columbus and the scene on and the whole distance to the castle of Montezuma. And at every hours in the afternoon alone with beauty and gay colors.

And I must know, too, that not nearly all of this is Mexican. Here are many foreign legations, foreign merchants of much wealth, many travelers and all that. So you see that a great deal is here and there with its border of flowers on either side. Its lands of music, its dense and stately trees, is rather the opposition after all. The associations are in France, or Spain, or Rome. And as French is rather run it, I gallop hard and see something on the other side of the paseo when almost to some pretty lady who expects to be spoken to.

The price of a ride: Really I have hardly been able to find out. You see I know my Mexicans in Utah and Arizona. Those away full-hearted fellows have good memories for their real friends. But I am told a good horse costs about $1 for the afternoon. A lady from New York rode in here with her husband for the winter, told me, however, that they pay for two horses, by taking them from some one who does not pay duty each.—Joaquin Miller's Mexico Letter.

THE WAR RESUMED,

WITH THE SAME OLD TACTICS OF A MONTH AGO.

Lake Shore Switchmen Quit Work, and the Routine of Taking Out an Engine Under Guard and Taking It Back Under Shouts of Derision.

CHICAGO, June 25.—The Lake Shore engineers are again at it struggle with the strikers, but it is thought by parties in the neighborhood that when they are called on to take out their engines they will be unable to tent to respond to the summons as they were during the late trouble.

Sheriff Hanchett has gone to Iowa. Deputy Sheriff Jones said that the sheriff only had not asked for any deputies to protect the property of the road.

Mr. John Newell, president of the Lake Shore road, said that when an open card, in which he says regarding the statement that the company had agreed to discharge the non-union men in the employ:

"I decline to enter into such agreement was ever made by me with any person, and I never made any promise, expressed or implied, that the eight men in question should be discharged, removed to other places, or transferred to other positions, nor was any such promise made on behalf of the Lake Shore company, but, on the contrary, positively refused at all times to make any such promise or permit any such understanding."

In connection with this a shorthand account of the conference between Mr. Newell and Sheriff Hanchett is published, which supports Mr. Newell's statement. It is also shown that Sheriff Hanchett signed a paper pledging that the men would be discharged within sixty days, and that when he returned to Indianapolis he would re sign this paper, the latter declared that he would not be a party to any such compact, and regarded the action which the sheriff could remain as long as they chose in the company's employ.

Shortly after 8 o'clock an engine in charge of Engineer Shea pulled out of the round house at Forty-first street. It was immediately surrounded by strikers, some of whom attempted to climb into the cab, but were beaten off by the lake police. The police arrested one of the most violent of the strikers and successfully ran the engine into the station. The police succeeded in clearing the track, after which the engine went up to Forty-third street. She crowd grew momentarily greater and more and more boisterous, and the courage of the engineer finally deserting him, he reversed the lever and took the engine back to the round house. He was cheered frantically when the effort to move the train was abandoned.

At the various newspaper offices a communication was left stating as an explanation of their course the following communication, dated during the former strike and written in Sheriff Hanchett's chirography upon one of his official letter heads:

SHERIFF'S OFFICE.

CHICAGO, April 25, 1886.

W. L. Stahl, Esq., Chairman.

SIR: If all the switchmen of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway company in Chicago or Cook county return to work they will be retained in their positions that within sixty days from this date the eight objectionable switchmen will be furnished other employment, and permanently removed from the employ of the company.

SETH F. HANCHETT, Sheriff.

About half of the cigarmakers who struck for a change in the wages to date have returned to work. They claim there is a difference of seventy-five cents per thousand more paid to the maker who rolls and bunches tobacco than the makers who roll and bunch separately.

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., June 25.—About 200 miners assembled at Campbell's creek and held secret meetings. All the mines and the Campbell's Creek Coal company, and a committee of two ordered to watch the distribution of all coal shipped in these companies, and to notify their purchasers of said boycott. Large sums of money have been lost to people engaged in coal operations since the strike began, and many who have aided the strikers say they are tired of doing so since these boycotts are declared.

PITTSBURG, June 25.—The joint committee of manufacturers and nail ers adjourned without reaching a satisfactory result, and for the present no conference will be held. The indications are that the scale is not signed on or before July 1, all the Amalgamated members in mills where nails are manufactured, estimated at 5,000, will go out on a strike.

ROXBURY, N. Y., June 25.—One hundred boatmen were laid off by the Delaware and Hudson Canal company to-day. They have appointed committees to wait on the president and vice-president and ask for employment. The men say they are willing to work on the condition that the company did not see its way clear to abandon the plan of retiring 100 boats. The company will try to diminish the hardship in part by discharging a few.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., June 25.—The printers and apprentices employed in the office of the Daily Times struck on account of the publishers refusing to grant an advance in the rate of wages from 23 to 28 cents per 1,000.

O'DONOVAN WANT'S GORE.

Nothing Short of an Ocean of Blood Will Do.

NEW YORK, June 25.—A mass meeting was held in Chickering hall last night under appointed committees to wait on the president and vice-president and ask for employment. And if ever a people were outraged in a city of less than a half a million souls before. The only real, true-class thing for a man to do, however, is to get a fine saddle like a true cavalier to the castle of Montezuma.

PENSIONS VETOED.

Some of the Petitioners for Government Aid.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—President Cleveland sent to the house yesterday thirty messages vetoing as many private bills. These messages are all short and terse, and the conclusions reached in some of them as to the merits of the case make rich reading. The veto in the case of James H. Darling, whose disability is described in the records as a general stiffness of joints. The president says it appears that Darling enlisted in November, 1861, and was reported as having deserted March 5, 1862. An examination in 1882 found this certain of soldier's disability to the existence of a hale, hearty old man, weighing 196 pounds. "It is evident to me," he concludes, "that this man ought not to be pensioned."

Commenting on another case, a bill for the relief of William Bisbon, who was enrolled as a substitute March 25, 1865, admitted to hospital May 8, returned to duty May 8, and was mustered out May 11, 1865, the president says: "This is the soldier's record of a man, who remained in the army one month and seventeen days, having entered it as a substitute at a time when high bounties were paid. He has no claim for this brilliant service and this terrific encounter with measles, and on the 28th day of June, 1880, the claimant discovered that his attack was of a character which entitled him to his army enrollment, and that this disease had settled in his eyes, also affecting his spinal column."

Of another case, in the bill for the relief of Julia Connelly, widow of Thomas Connelly, a soldier mustered into service Oct. 1, 1861, and reported dead Feb. 14, 1862, the president says: "He never did a day's service, so far as his name appears on the records. He visited his family about the 15th of December, and was found drowned in a canal about six miles from his home. Those who prosecute claims for pensions have grown very bold when cases of this description are presented for consideration."

The case of Andrew J. Wilson, who was drafted in Pendleton, and died and discharged in September of the same year on account of chronic nephritis and deafness, and who in his application for a pension alleged rheumatism, resulting from exposure and inflammation of the muscles of the back, diarrhea and rupture, the president dismisses by saying: "Whatever else may be said of this claimant's service during his short military career, it must be with that he accumulated a great deal of of stability. There is no doubt in my mind that whatever soldier's disability this claim to, he title to the same was complete before he entered the army."

THE PRINCE'S MANIFESTO.

At "The Decisive Hour" He Is Ready to Do His Part.

LONDON, June 25.—The Comte de Paris has issued a manifesto protesting against his expulsion from France, in the name of justice, and asseverating his passionate attachment to his country.

"In prescribing me," he says, "vengeance is taken in the name of more than 3,000,000 votes, which on Oct. 4 last condemned the faults of the republic, which sought to intimidate those who were daily attaching themselves from the present regime.

"In me is prosecuted the monarchial principle which, identified as it is by birth with my soul, is my life. I shall not neglect the responsibility of working for the salvation of the country. I have confidence in France, and at the decisive hour will be ready to perform my duty."

River and Harbor Increase.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The senate committee on commerce has nearly completed the river and harbor bill. It is possible, but not probable, that a few unimportant changes may by made at the meeting to-day. Items in the house have been increased to the aggregate of $9,480,375 and others have been added, making the aggregate of $615,509; net increase, $2,967,775; total appropriation by senate bill $18,049,973. Among the additions proposed by the senate are:

New York—Dunkirk harbor, $20,000. Canarsie bay $10,000; Charlotte harbor, $35,000; Gowanus bay, $25,000; Oswego harbor, $12,500; Oriedt, $10,000. Wilson, $10,000. New York harbor, $1,000,000; Plattsburg, $5,000. Thousandgea river, $2,000.

New Jersey—Atlantic City, $5,000, Raritan bay, $50,000.

The committee adds $300,000 for the Hennepin canal project in Illinois.

Mr. Arthur Gone to the Country.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 25.—Ex-President Arthur arrived in this city from Boston cottage, near the Pequot house. He came in the palace car President, which was attached to the express train from New York, arriving at 5.35. Until 6.30 the car was not dropped off at Shaw's Neck, where carriages were waiting for the party. Allen Arthur, Mrs. McElroy and children were of the party. The ex-president came from the car as soon as it stopped and walked to his carriage, leaning upon the arm of his nurse. He was pale and looked as though he had suffering he has endured. He made the trip without much fatigue, and felt very comfortable last night.

"Joe" in the Wrong Boat.

LONDON, June 25.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, while passing through Preston on his way to Liverpool, this evening, had to take a train fully by a large crowd which had assembled at the railway station. On reaching Liverpool Mr. Chamberlain was mobbed. The police were powerless to take advice from me, but I warn them."

Rosa closed by urging all his hearers to join the Fenian Brotherhood, and came to the place of July 9.

Stanley Mortimer Sued.

HICKSVILLE, L. I., June 25.—Miss Katie Jones, of East Oyster Bay, has begun an action against Stanley Mortimer, a member of the Meadow Brook hunt, for $10,000 damages. She was driving along the Wallbury road about a year ago when Mr. Mortimer, who was riding with the hounds, jumped a fence into the road causing Miss Jones' horse to stop so suddenly that she was thrown forward on to the dashboard. Since that time she has been suffering from hemorrhage of the lungs, which her physician attributes to the injury caused by her fall.

An Umpire Bounced.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Umpire McCall, of the Hudson River league, was fined $15 yesterday, at Poughkeepsie, for bad decision in the Newburg-Kingston game last Friday. He was also permanently expelled from the Hudson River league and the American association.

COLLEGE ATHLETES.

PENNSYLVANIANS FAIRLY OUTROWED BY THE COLUMBIANS.

Rapid Time Over a Four-Mile Course on the Thames—The Boys Strike Out Like Professionals, and Almost Beat the Record.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 25.—The boat crew representing the University of Pennsylvania, which beat the Columbia freshmen at Harlem last May by only six feet, tried conclusions with the latter crew, yesterday afternoon, on the Thames course, yesterday evening, and was badly defeated. At the May regatta Capt. Gunning, of the Pennsylvania crew, said that all he now was ready to meet Columbia's best eight at any time after the Yale race, and intimated an ability to polish them off in good style.

Capt. Gunning, of Columbia College, and when the Keystone stale boys went up the river to practice they met a challenge from the Columbia's for a four-mile race over the river course. After consultation the challenge was accepted. Columbia proposed Monday as the day, but Capt. Gunning's blood was up and he would not wait a week. Sunday was the time agreed upon. Capt. Cooke, of Yale's crew, was made referee; Mr. Simonds, of Columbia, and Mr. Hunter, of Pennsylvania, were selected into the Yale launch as judges. Joe Lawrence, of Columbia, and G. Q. Howitz, of Philadelphia, were appointed judges on the finish, and David Kennedy and O. B. Pew, Columbia's coach, were made timekeepers. The crews were promptly on hand, and at 4.45 the word "go" was given. Columbia had the west side of the course and took the water first. The crews rowed the first half mile side by side, making forty strokes to the minute. The boys started very evenly. The speed was too great for Pennsylvania, and she soon began to lag. Columbia was now speeding through the water at a rate which made the Yale men on the launch applaud vigorously.

The first mile was covered in 5.05, showing that the Columbians had gained two seconds while Columbia dropped her stroke to thirty-eight and Pennsylvania to thirty-seven. The men from New York grew deadly pale at the stroke of their oars. They completed their second mile in 10.12, leading the "Green" crew by four lengths. The steamer Ella, bound up the river, passed to the westward of both crews and sent out waves which tossed both shells like feathers. This perceptibly retarded the racers, resulted in considerable splashing and the drop of the stroke of both crews to 36. The third mile was consequently the slowest of the race, being covered by Columbia in 5.17. The Pennsylvania crew was now eight lengths behind and gradually losing ground. Columbia now spurted for the first time.

Columbia increased his strokes to thirty-nine. The boys responded in fine shape, kept their blades humming with all the vim they could muster, and swept across the finish line, winning by eight lengths in the excellent time of 20.41. Pennsylvania's time, 20.21.

The Columbia's time was within nine seconds of the best record ever made by an eight-oared crew.

THE PRINCE EXILES

Welcomed to England by an Enthusiastic Throng.

LONDON, June 25.—The Comte and Comtesse de Paris, their son, the Duc d' Orleans, the Duc d' Chartres and fifty companions arrived at Dover last evening. They were met at the station by a delegation of people and loudly cheered. The mayor of Dover and the magnates of the city boarded the steamer and welcomed the exiles to England, at the same time expressing their sympathy with them, and presenting the Comte de Paris with an address. The Comte replied in terms of great feeling, expressing joy at finding so many friends at hand. Upon leaving at Dover the Comte was made the recipient of an address presented by the mayor. Demonstrations in all parts of Great Britain. Many of the Comte's companions returned immediately to Paris.

The Editor Was In.

BUTTE, Mon., June 25.—George Miller, of Anaconda, conceiving himself to be wronged by the publication in The Daily Miner of letters concerning him in the aggregate, armed himself with a six shooter, went to the newspaper office and asked to see Editor C. S. Zeigenfuss in private. He met the editor at the head of the stairs and drawing his revolver, said: "I'll fix you here." Zeigenfuss threw up Miller's arm just as the latter fired, the ball passing through the ceiling. The two men clinched and Editor Zeigenfuss threw his would-be murderer down the stairs, falling on him and almost crushing the life out of him. The Anaconda man was hustled out to the street and was afterward arrested.

The Navy Meets the President.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Secretary and Mrs. Whitney gave a dinner last evening in honor of the President and Mrs. Cleveland. The other guests were Admiral and Mrs. Porter, Vice-Admiral Rowan, Rear Admiral Jouett, Commodore and Mrs. Queen, Commodore and Mrs. Harmony, Commodore Walker, Capt. Ramsay of the Naval academy, Surgeon General Gunnell, Engineer-in-Chief Loring, Commodore and Mrs. Beard, Commodores and Mrs. Schley, Commodore and Mrs. Gross, Commodore and Mrs. Cawley, Miss Clymer and Miss Gregg.

An American Fisherman Boarded.

HALIFAX, June 25.—While the Gloucester mackerel schooner Maria, Capt. Canning-ham, was entering Liverpool harbor Capt. Quigley, of the cruiser Terror ordered her to proceed no further. The Terror at that time was lying at anchor in the Liverpool harbor. The order was obeyed by the Maria C., and Capt. Quigley placed two men on board of her to see that none of the crew landed and to watch her during the night.

Tuthill King's Will Set Aside.

CHICAGO, June 25.—The friendly contest of the heirs of Tuthill King, the well-known lumberman, regarding his sanity at the time he made his will, was decided yesterday. The jury found that Mr. King was not in his right mind and the will was ordered set aside. The property will now be equally divided between the three daughters.

Opposed to Panama Lottery.

PARIS, June 25.—Of the eleven members of the chamber of deputies appointed as a commission to examine and report upon the Panama lottery loan scheme, eight are hostile to it and three in favor.

Money For Panama Canal.

PARIS, June 25.—A syndicate of Parisian capitalists has advanced $5,000,000 to the Panama Canal company as security for the hypothecation of the recent call.

Milwaukee Anarchists.

MILWAUKEE, June 25.—After an all-night session the jury in the case of Henry Lammel and John Protzman, charged with rioting, brought in a verdict of guilty against Protzman and acquitted Lampel.

THE GRAND BOUNCE.

Postal Clerks Try to Take the Bit in Their Mouths.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Twenty-nine railway postal clerks were yesterday dismissed by Postmaster General Vilas, for conspiracy. Mr. Vilas says that no organization exists to prevent by menace the removal of any clerk from the service. An executive committee was selected to order a strike and stop the postal service in case he desired to make a change for the public good. The conspiracy was discovered, and the following formal notice served upon Mr. Fahey, assistant general superintendent of the railway mail service:

OFFICE OF GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT } RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE. }

By order of the postmaster general the clerks named below have been removed from the service for insubordination in conspiring to obstruct the regulation of the service by the department and to injure its efficiency. Said clerks have attempted to form an association with a view to dictate action to the department, and many of them have been guilty of deception in misleading fellow-clerks by representing the purposes of such association to be merely benevolent, and thus entangling them. At the same time they have attempted to secure means to express his gratification that so far, comparatively, few could be found to engage in such schemes and his acknowledgements to those who have kept the department informed.

Murdoch Hollingshead, George W. Thornton, transfer clerks at Cincinnati; A. G. Kennedy, W. W. Rafferty, L. Dillon, C. R. Scott, Charles C. Brown, J. L. Chamberlin, C. C. Meade, W. O. McKinney, G. M. Dodge, Jr., Frank Bear, E. B. Peckett, Jos. Jenkins, M. H. Wing, Owen E. Sullivan, R. F. Morrison, W. M. Stewart, J. E. Darr, J. G. Russell, J. M. Barnckee, A. C. Buffington, C. H. Eisel, C. H. Hartwell, T. W. Randall, J. A. Humphreys, R. F. Robb, J. F. Allen, S. A. Myers, most of whom were on lines running out of Ohio cities or from Chicago and St. Louis.

WHAT H. H. FULLER SAYS

About the Campaign Speech of Parson Burchard.

NEW YORK, June 25.—A special from St. Paul to The World says:

ST. PAUL, June 24.

Mr. H. H. Fuller, of St. Paul, the leader of the anti-administration Democracy of Minnesota, and the author of the letter of the famous Burchard incident, which he says he has on unimpeachable authority: It was understood would carry on the heavy mortgage on some property belonging to Burchard fell due. The lien was held by Smith M. Weed, of Plattsburg, who, at a dinner party Burchard should allow him to write his remarks. The confiding man accepted, and Weed and his friends concocted the fatal speech. Burchard was to be compelled about sixty days after the election. In the first triumph Weed is reported to have given the thing away to a friend of thirty days after the election. In confiding moment, said Mr. Fuller during his recent visit to the east.

CANADA REJOICING

Over the Completion of the Pacific Railroad.

MONTREAL, June 25.—The first through train to the pacific over the Canadian Pacific railroad will leave here Monday evening, for Vancouver, the 3,000 miles be covered in 136 hours. When the track is thoroughly ballasted the time will be about ninety hours, much better. At present, that time is made for the same number of miles between New York and San Francisco. Rates have not yet been fixed, but it is understood they will be $60 first and $50 for second class tickets. The sleeping cars are fitted with baths and every luxury. The through charge for berths will be $22. Dining cars will be attached to the trains at Port Arthur and Springs. From that point a series of mountain hotels take their places.

There will be no effort to formally celebrate the opening of the road, except that the city council has voted to be present at the depot to see the train off, and a deputation of prominent citizens will accompany the train as far as St. Martin's junction. The Montreal Field battery will fire a salute as the train leaves.

Mrs. Davis' Adventure.

PEABODY, Mass., June 25.—The adventure of Mrs. Davis, of New York, which is not much of a surprise to those who knew her here. She left Peabody June 1, taking three children, leaving her eldest boy, about 8 years, with her husband. She was going to New York on the Fall River line that night and would sail from Brooklyn, N. Y., for Germany on June 3. She was next heard from at a hotel in Fall River. There is no question but that the lady is suffering from mental aberration, and she should not have been allowed to travel alone as she did. Her husband is not a leather merchant, but a morocco colorer. Mrs. Davis is a German woman, well educated, and has taught the German language and given lessons in painting.

Knights of St. John.

CINCINNATI, June 25.—The eighth annual convention of the Roman Catholic Union of the Knights of St. John opened yesterday at Washington Park hall. For some days past, and more especially yesterday, the delegates arrived from all over the United States and Canada. The colored commandery, of Washington, sends several delegates and will have forty members to parade. Various commanderies will arrive in time to-day to join in the parade, which will consist of from 3,000 to 4,000 men in uniform.

Affecting Scene in Court.

CHELSEA, Vt., June 25.—In the Sloan trial Sheriff Hamilton related the circumstances attending the finding of the little child, and gave the substance of the statement she confessed by Mrs. Sloan to her husband in Hamilton's presence. At this point the voice of the witness became broken, and the prisoner held her head in her hands for some days. Hazelton stopped for a moment to get command of his feelings there was a silence as of death in the court room.

Photographers Elect Officers.

ST. LOUIS, June 25.—The Photographers' Association of America: C. Cramer, St. Louis, president; H. S. Bellamith, Hampton, N. Y., secretary; C. M. Carlyle, Providence, R. I., treasurer; James Lundy, of Cincinnati, and H. Ranger, of Syracuse, N. Y., members of the executive committee.

Charter Oak Starters.

HARTFORD, Conn., June 25.—The Charter Oak races were again postponed on account of a slippery track. Four races are to be trotted to-day—the 2:30, 2:23, 2:17 and 2:24 classes. On Saturday the programme will be completed as follows: 2:34 pacers, and 2:20 and 2:32 trotters.

A PISTOL IN COURT.

TWO FRIENDS DO EACH OTHER UP IN APPROVED STYLE.

A Young Farmer and Politician Carved to Pieces by His Friend—The Latter Brought Into Court to Answer and is Shot Down.

BALTIMORE, June 25.—The police court of the central district was the scene of the wildest excitement yesterday afternoon, the occasion being the shooting at the bar of justice of Jerome Kuhn, a saloon keeper, by his friend, Hon. Wallace Owings, a rich young farmer of Calverton county and ex-member of the legislature. The two men started out on a lark. At 3 o'clock in the morning they got into a dispute about $3.75 that resulted in Kuhn cutting his friend with a knife in a terrible manner, one gash reaching from the right ear to the chin along the cheek, another from the right ear down the back to the base of the head, and a third fourteen inches long on the thigh. Owings was taken upstairs and placed on a cot and a physician summoned. Kuhn was arrested. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon Owings was taken to court in a carriage. He took a seat near the railing. Kuhn was brought in to answer the charge of carving Owings. Kuhn's counsel had barely reached the bar when Owings drew a revolver and fired, the ball taking effect in Kuhn's left side. Instantly all was confusion. Kuhn ran, but fell in the corridor, the blood streaming from his side, saturating his clothing and dyeing the concrete flooring. Justice Hodges dropped behind his desk and the spectators got behind the doors and scrambled out the windows. But there was no danger, for with the firing of the pistol the pistol dropped from Owings' hands and he fainted. The man was so exhausted from loss of blood from the wounds he received in the morning that he had to be carried to the court. Kuhn's wound is thought to be mortal. Owings was committed to jail, bail being refused. Kuhn was furnished bail to answer the charge of cutting, but should the former recover. Kuhn was taken to the University hospital, and his death is hourly looked for.

CAPT. JOHNSON'S COURT MARTIAL

Brought Up For Contempt of Court and Disobeying.

BOSTON, June 25.—The naval court martial for the trial of Commander Johnson, U. S. N., met pursuant to adjournment, at the navy yard. Judge Advocate Reid read the charges against Johnson, which were unjealous conduct while in Burlington, he having been summoned as a witness in a criminal case, and refusing to comply, was imprisoned in the jail for contempt of court, and in time was released by Lawyer Scudley, who afterward presented a bill for $15 to Johnson for services. The latter refused to honor the demand. It is further alleged that Johnson, while in command of the Monongahela, during his stay at San Francisco, purchased $586.60 worth of goods for his own use, amounting to $586.60, which he repeatedly refused to pay. The firm appealed to the secretary of the navy and Johnson was ordered by cable dispatch to pay the bill. The secretary wrote several letters to Johnson, which he failed to answer. To all charges except the scandalous conduct Johnson pleaded not guilty.

The President Invited.

BOSTON, June 25.—The general court is about to adjourn, and has invited the President Cleveland to visit the commonwealth this summer. On the governor's suggestion the house adopted the following order:

Ordered, That the committee be authorized to report in any appropriation bill such sum as may be necessary to defray the expenses of the governor, to extend the proper courtesies of the commonwealth to the president of the United States, in case he should visit the state this season.

A Chinaman Murdered for Gold.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—Charlie Linder, an old resident of Bayou La Fourche parish, who has accumulated about $5,000, was assaulted by two white men Tuesday who beat him with clubs until they thought him dead. They then ransacked the house and secured $400 of his money. The Chinaman recognized one of them, a Creole, named Joseph Lagrange, and the other the negro who was Leon Levy, a Jew. Linder died after making an ante mortem statement to this effect. Teague and Levy are in jail. They rely on proving an alibi.

Good-By, Miranda.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 25.—An easterly storm prevails, and fears are expected that the steamer Miranda, ashore near Point Judith, will go to pieces. The wreckers have landed 2000 barrels from the wreck. Valuable apparatus bearing to the name of Miranda on board and cannot be taken off, as it is not deemed advisable to board the steamer to-day. The vessel is a total loss to the wreckers will be unusually heavy. Divers have found it impossible to reach the compartment through which the rocks project. The steamer is valued at $100,000.

Letter Carriers' Caucus.

NEW YORK, June 25.—A mass meeting of letter carriers and others employed by the government was held at the Cooper institute last evening to advocate shorter hours of labor. Robert Ellwert presided, and speeches were made by Messrs. Thomas, T. V. Powderly, Dr. J. C. Boyd and others. Letters of sympathy were received from R. G. Ingersoll, Senators Blair and Miller, Congressman Morrison and Governor Abbett. Resolutions urging congress to pass the eight hour bill were adopted.

Civil Service Commissioners Resign.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The civil service commissioners of Albany have prepared their resignations, and will present them to Mayor Thacker. This action is taken because the latter has removed the clerk of the board without notice.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

Arranging an Order of Business and Preparing to Adjourn.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Nearly all of the Democratic members of the house were present at the caucus last night. The proceedings were harmonious. Only the order of business for the remainder of the session was considered. Most of the chairmen of committees were present, and the order of consideration of the business during the session. Finally a motion was made to appoint a committee of nine members to confer with the committee on appropriations at the caucus adjourned. Mr. Morrison said last night that he had a talk with members of the senate committee on appropriations and others, and the general opinion of the body was willing to accept a resolution to adjourn on July 15. He thought the house committee on ways and means would report a resolution to adjourn and that the 15th of July at time was extended it would be to Monday, July 19.

ILLINOIS PROHIBITIONISTS

Nominate Candidates and Condemn Everybody but Themselves.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., June 25.—The state Prohibition convention adopted its platform, and nominated H. A. Austin, of Champaign, as its candidate for governor. Professor U. Z. Gilmer, of Quincy, superintendent of public instruction, announced his intention of making a thorough canvass. The thousand delegates in the city will campaign purposes, and at 4 o'clock the convention adjourned sine die. The platform declares that the liquor traffic is justly charged with organized and well-supported opposition to existing statutes, and calls upon all good citizens to renounce all allegiance to party which refuses to aid in its suppression. Favors the granting of suffrage to all, regardless of sex; heartily indorses the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and denounces the republican party as the most valuable to humanity that the state cannot be true to its trust which neglects to grant it from desecration. The following is the platform:

That Screw Door Spring.

He slid quietly into a Jefferson avenue hardware store yesterday forenoon, unrolled a paper on the counter, and as he held up a patent door spring he said:

"I buy him two days ago, and I like to exchange him for a whetstone."

"What's th' matter?"

"Well, I can't make him fit on my screen door."

"Why, that's the easiest thing in the world. See here. This end screws on the door and that end on the casing."

"I tried him dat vhay, and he doan' work."

"When it is on you take this metal pin and turn the spring. See the holes there?"

"I does dat vhay, und my screen doors flies over."

"You turned the wrong way."

"I turns him safety way. Sometimes der door vhas wide open, und all der flies in Michigan go in, und sometimes he vhas shut one so tight I can't get in my own house. I begin on him in der morning, und I doan' leave off till night, but he won't work right."

"That's curious. What tools did you have?"

"I use a hammer und screw driver und cold chisel und saw und auger und crow bar und lots of tools, but he don't spring for me. My wife works at him, too, und my bread man he lose half a day, und I vhas discouraged. I guess I trade him for a whetstone."

"Well, I'll exchange with you, but I'm sure I can show you how to adjust it."

"I guess I don't try any more. You see, my life vhas short, und I can't spare so mooch time mit machinery. If I get a whetstone I doan' have to screw him on nor turn him around. I vhas use to pins or rakehels in his stomach. He vhas all right both ends up. Maybe he doan' keep out flies, but he makes no troubles for me."

The exchange was made, and the man went away light hearted, calling back from the door:

"I can make oudt a whetstone all right, und I vhas obliged mit you. A whetstone vin's cop only one vhay."—Detroit Free Press.

AT THE MARKET.

Young housekeeper (timidly)—I will take some lamb to-day.

Obsequious butcher—Will you have a four quarter, madam?

Young housekeeper (with more assurance) —I think that rather much for our family. I'll take a three quarter.

MAKING RAPID STRIDES.

Boston young lady (visiting in Chicago)—I am very agreeably surprised in Chicago. I had no idea that it was a city of so much refinement and culture.

Chicago young lady—Oh, yes; we are making Chicago a very dizzy place for cult.

DOCTRTUL OWNERSHIP.

Smith—I say, Brown, did I leave my umbrella at your house last night?

Brown—You left an umbrella, Smith, but I don't know whether it's yours or not.

NOT A HOME RUN.

Woman (to magistrate)—Me husband has left me, sorr, an' I want to make a charge agin him for desertion.

Magistrate—That is the proper course to pursue, madam. Is he your first husband?

Woman—No, sorr; he is my third.

Magistrate (who spends his afternoons at the Polo grounds)—Ah, yes, I see; got left on third.

ALWAYS ON HAND.

Belated citizen (at Polo grounds)—Can you give me a ticket to the grand stand?

Ticket seller—Yes, sir.

Belated citizen—Is it a good seat?

Ticket seller—It's not a seat, it's a ticket.

Belated citizen—Haven't you any seats left?

Ticket seller—No; we have nothing left but tickets. That's something we never run short of.

TOO LATE.

"I left a little check for $10,000 among the wedding gifts," said the girl's father to his prospective son-in-law, "and after the ceremony is over we will quietly bear it up. See! That's the style nowadays, George."

"Yes," hesitated George, "that's the style, but I'm afraid it's too late to tear it up now."

"Why?"

"Because I went down to the bank and got it cashed."

THE PAPER SURVIVED.

Stranger (visiting city)—Say, mister, what's that ere big stone buildin', an' orphans out front?

Citizen—Why, no, my dear sir, that's the office of The Daily and Weekly Givemlits, just crowded with accumulated dividends.

Stranger—Gosh all fish hooks! The deuce you say. Why, I got mad at the editor and stopped that ere paper mor'n five years ago, and supposed of course the consarn had busted up and quit.

DREAMING OF TREE.

"Well, Bobby," said young Featherly, as the former entered the store, "what can I do for you this morning? And how is everything up in your room?"

"All right, I guess. I heard sister Clara tell ma that she dreamed about you last night."

"Is that so?" whispered Featherly, bending over the counter. "And what did you ma say?"

"She said that Clara must have eaten something what didn't agree with her. I want to get a spool of No. 60 cotton and a dime bone collar buttons."—New York Sun.

THE LAUNDRY GIRLS.

AN OCCUPATION OF MANY HARDSHIPS AND TRIBULATIONS.

Talk with an Employe About the Patrons of the Establishment—Bothered Almost to Death by Brutes, Dead-Beats and Love-Lorn Dudes—Wages.

Under the impetus of civilization the laundry business has become an important industry in large cities. The pretty, sunny girl with banged hair, rosy cheeks, soft voice and glib tongue is an essential feature of the system.

The laundry girl has a hard life. Her hours on duty are very wearisome. She must be on duty at 7 o'clock in the morning. There she remains until 6 or 10 o'clock at night. Nobody in the world has a better opportunity to observe the good and bad side of men than she has. If she is pretty and young she will receive in the community attempts to pay her court. The little office where the washing is received is usually besieged by a gang of disreputable loafers, who offer the fair clerks all sorts of delightful under the guise of admiration. She is expected to remain good-natured and agreeable in spite of all the improper remarks and contemptible proposals which are the only thoughts of the professional masher. A pretty girl, who is well known among the patrons of laundries, has had seven years' experience in the business. Her opinion of men is decidedly unfavorable. She uses a good deal of slang.

BRUTES, DUDES AND GENTLEMEN.

"I have a hard time of it," she said to a reporter, who left some of his linen to be relieved of its sable coloring. "You can't appreciate what brutes some men are. Of course, many gentlemen deal with us and treat us with respect. We are bothered to death by dead beats, smile gamblers and base-ball players. These fellows are stuck on themselves, and think the girls get mashed on them. They might as well be left. Some of them come in here with a shirt and a pair of cuffs and a collar and want to talk with me two or three hours. I'm asked to go to ride, a day, and I am home to-night?" A few dudes try the love racket. It goes in one ear and out of the other.

"Is any one mean enough to beat you out of your pay for the laundry work?"

"Why, I should say so. A prominent lawyer in this town owes me $8, and I can't collect a cent. He would come after his bundle and say, 'I'll pay you for this after a while, Miss Meigs.' They're badly

CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT.

HOW THE HERO FELL THIS 25TH OF JUNE TEN YEARS AGO.

Picture of Sitting Bull, the Great Sioux Chief, Who Defeated Custer on the Little Big Horn—His Children—Curly, the General's Scout.

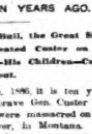
This 25th of June, 1886, it is ten years since the day when brave Gen. Custer and his band of soldiers were massacred on the Little Big Horn river, in Montana. The wild Indian region of ten years ago is a civilized country now. Fields and herds graze peacefully where brave Custer and his men marched to their death that day. The only bit of real wildness in all that country is the National Yellowstone park, set apart by government as a "public park or pleasure ground for the benefit of the people."

It is the strangest river in the world, that Yellowstone, down a branch of which heroic Custer marched with his men. It was explored for the first time in 1873-74. When the surveying party came suddenly to a square mile of hot springs they could only stop and wonder. The terrific rift in the mountains, 3,000 feet deep some distance further on, with the rapid river flowing through the bottom, was still more wonderful. It was awful. The ravine is so sunless that in broad daylight persons looking up from the bottom can see the stars.

George A. Custer was an Ohio man, born in an obscure country village, New Rumley, in Harrison county, not far from Wheeling and near the Pennsylvania border, in 1838. His ancestry was English and Germ an, as far back as the revolution. In point of fact he was descended from one of the Hessian officers who fought on the wrong side in the American revolution. There was little of the phlegmatic German temperament in the boy George, however. He was as restless and nervous as a squirrel. He was educated at West Point. A good story is told of him in his senior year, 1861. He was officer of the guard one day, and was put under arrest for the heinous offense of fighting. He wanted to see which would whip, and was letting the fellows fight it out, when suddenly Gen. Hasen, then a lieutenant, came on the scene. Custer was put under arrest. His class was allowed to go at once to the seat of war, where officers were so much needed, but Custer was not with them. On the contrary, he joined in a guard house at West Point. His was regularly court-martialed on the specification that "he, the said Custer, did fail to suppress a riot or disturbance near the guard tent, and did fail to separate, etc., but, on the contrary, did cry out in a loud tone of voice: 'Stand back, boys, let's have a fair fight,' or words to that effect."



GEN. CUSTER

While awaiting sentence a telegram came from Washington ordering his release and commanding him to report at Washington for duty. From that on he an erel heart and soul into the war. He won fame as a cavalry leader, and one promotion after another accorded him till he who had entered the war as a lieutenant came out a brevet brigadier general.

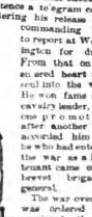
The war over, he was ordered for service to the far west and became an Indian fighter. The country rang with his praises. His lamented death made an impression only second to that caused by the murder of a president. Yet so soon are even the greatest and best forgotten that few even remember now when and where bold Custer was killed. To recall the story to their memory these lines are written.

Of all the red foes our soldiers ten years ago had to meet, Sitting Bull, the Sioux, was the wiliest. He considered himself a good Roman Catholic Christian, but one who sees his portrait cannot help fancying that his pious beads and medals and crucifix are worn quite as much for ornamentation as for devotion. He has a splendidly strong, though cruel, relentless face. He is many years to make a good likeness of, but the red man as Sitting Bull. He had a huge head, with hair whose color was brown—very unusual for an Indian. He could not read nor write, but, strange to say, he kept a journal, which is soon found and brought into the United States army camp. It contained "a history of his life, drawn in grotesque Indian pictures. Most of them represented S. B. killing somebody, white or red.



CROWFOOT

Sitting Bull destroyed Custer and his command on the Little Big Horn river, June 25, 1876. He then fled across the border into British America and annoyed the United States government people six years longer. It was not till 1881 that he finally surrendered. Even then he has always claimed that he himself did not surrender. It was his son Crowfoot, the lively Indian youth who appears in the picture, that at last snatched his father's gun and handed it over to Maj. Brotherton. The boy has some of his father's own grit. His character and strong face shows him to be a chip of the old block. Sitting Bull is also rather pleased at his boy's daring, and let the surrender stand. Unlike the Apache Geronimo, Sitting Bull kept his word, and never made the white people any more trouble after giving up. The long braided hair upon each side is a badge of the Sioux.

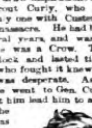
Sitting Bull has a pretty little daughter. This picture of her is from a photograph taken a year ago in Bismarck, Dakota. The little maiden, except for the cruel and merciless strings of wampum in her ears, would be as bright and attractive to look at as any of her small white sisters who learn music and go to Sunday school.

Custer's forces was divided into three columns on that fatal day, one commanded by Maj. Reno, another by Col. Benteen, the third by Custer himself. The plan was for these three columns to take different routes then converging toward the Indian village on the Little Big Horn. The rest of the story may be told in one sentence. Reno and Benteen failed to come to time. Custer and his men charged the village, fought an overwhelming force of Indians till every man died in his tracks. For a mile or more their bodies were found strung along the banks of the Little Big Horn just where they fell. The particulars of this last fight are as thrilling as the story of Thermopylæ. It ought to be put into the school books for American boys to read and draw inspirations from.

The Indian scout Curly, who tells the story, was the only one with Custer who escaped from the massacre. He had been with the leader several years, and was trusted and faithful. He was a Crow. The fight began at 2 o'clock and lasted till sunset. The white men realized that it knew it was the end. It clear that it was desperate. As soon as Curly saw this he went to Gen. Custer and begged him to let him lead him to a place of safety of which he knew. There was one way of escape whereby a single man, the general and could be saved. Curly pressed the proposition upon him earnestly on his general. Custer's head fell on his breast a moment, as if in deep thought. Then he looked up calmly, and waved the scout away. That was the last time Curly ever looked on the face of his general alive.



CURLY.

In that moment the dashing, heroic cavalry leader closed his life and death. He fought like a tiger himself before giving up his life.

The Indians closed in around him at too close quarters for him to use gun or pistol. Then he snatched his saber. The Indians say that he killed three braves with his saber before he was finally overcome. Then a chief, named Rain-in-the-Face, who had a mortal grudge at the white leader, shot and killed him. Such bravery as he had shown his self-possession, was more than mortal. His was the only body they left unmutilated. This proved that they looked on it with superstitious awe. The Indians said there were more of their braves killed than of white men.

Curly, the Crow scout, escaped alone by the way he had indicated to Custer. He washed his Crow paint off and let his hair down like a Sioux, and thus, undetected, hovered around till the awful fight was over. Then, much dead as alive with grief and horror, he followed on down the river till he reached the steamboat landing.

THEIR MONUMENT.

It seems that, all the while the five hours' fight was going on, Reno and Benteen were not more than three miles away. Reno heard the firing, and knew that his chief was engaged with the enemy.

Reno had been even attacked by a portion of the hostiles that had joined in the Custer fight. They came riding like the wind, "crouching over the necks of their fleet little ponies, hanging away with their shields, firing random bullets in the air, and all the time yelling out their Hi! yip—yip—yip—hiyah!" The sight seems to have been rather a demoralizing one to Reno and his men.

A monument was erected on the scene of the massacre. Its marble rail-fence posts are already fast chipping it away. Three Custers, a sister's husband and a beloved, bright-haired schoolboy nephew, perished of the hapless family. Col. Tom Custer and young Boston Custer were the general's brothers. These were all found in a group close together. The monument contains the names of those who fell, the flower of the United States Seventh Cavalry regiment. It is one of the most thrilling stories ever told in any language.

A Celebrated American Theologian.

One of the most celebrated of American divines died recently at his home in Lancaster, Pa., at the age of 83 years. It was the Rev. Dr. John Williamson Nevin. He was a native of Pennsylvania, of Scotch-Irish descent. In early youth he exhibited a strong theological turn of mind, which developed in after years until he became famous as a sturdy champion of Christianity.

He graduated from Union college, Schenectady, at the early age of 19. He entered Princeton Theological seminary in 1823, where he became distinguished as a Hebrew scholar and student of Oriental literature. He afterward filled chairs in those branches of learning in Princeton and other colleges. The Western Theological seminary, now a power in the Presbyterian church, owes much of its prosperity to the early labors of Dr. Nevin. In 1840 he became professor in the Theological seminary of the Reformed Church at Mercersburg, Pa., and was afterward made president. Early in 1845 he published, through the publication of a tract called "The Anxious Bench" Dr. Nevin became, in 1843, involved in a controversy which nearly shook the Reformed Church to its foundation, and was the beginning of the movement known as the "Mercersburg Theology." From 1849 to 1853 he edited The Mercersburg Review, and during this time got into a theological controversy with Rev. Orestes B. Brunson, D. D., of Boston, which attracted wide attention at the time. From 1868 to 1878 he was the president of Franklin and Marshall college, after which he retired from public life.

THE MAD KING'S LIFE.

PORTRAIT OF LOUIS, OF BAVARIA, ALSO OF HIS SLEIGH.

How He and Wagner Lived the Life of the Future, and Listened to Its Music, Six Castles and Four Millions of Debts Left Behind.

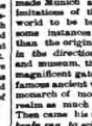
It is well, perhaps, that the descendants of great poets, artists and musicians do not inherit their peculiar gifts. In the case of the hapless king of Bavaria, three generations of artistic tendencies led to madness. King Louis I., or Ludwig, as it is in German, the grandfather of Ludwig II, was the first of his house to manifest the artistic tastes. He made Munich a beautiful city. He ordered fountains of the finest art works of the world to be built for his capital, and in some instances the limitations are better than the originals. Building out of the city of the Pinacothek library and museum, the tourist passes through a magnificent gateway, which is the copy of a famous ancient work at Rome. No European monarch of modern times has beautified his realm as much as Louis I of Bavaria did. Then came his son, King Maximilian. His brain ran to science and architecture. He encouraged men of letters and erected stately buildings.

In 1845 began the life of his son, Louis II, that strange, inexplicable life which has sought its own exit from this world through the waters of Lake Starnberg. Maximilian died in 1864, and Louis, his son, reigned in his stead.



LOUIS II OF BAVARIA.

It was one of Louis' eccentricities that he would not have portraits or photographs of himself taken. There seems to be only one in existence, that from which the illustration is copied.

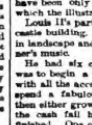
Louis II's particular fads were music and castle building. He delighted to reproduce in landscape and palace the scenes of Wagner's music.

He had six castles. One of his hobbies was to begin a magnificent edifice, planned with all the accessories of barbaric splendor, and a fabulous amount of money on it, then either grow weary of it or else have the cash fail him and leave the work unfinished. One of these failures is

HOHENSCHWAUGAU CASTLE.

In the days when he was in fact a young king and mad over Wagner music Hohenschwangau palace, high up in the Bavarian Alps, was his favorite residence. It was fabled to be the original home of the swans and the swan knight. On the mountain opposite the picturesque old castle of mediæval times he started to build a splendid new one. He thought he wished to live there forever. He spent some millions of marks on it, then grew weary of his plaything and abandoned it. Now one sees the walls still hanging about the unfinished, ruined palace.

The great Wagner festival at Bayreuth, where the "music of the future" was produced, and for which Wagner wrote his operas, was one of his favorite diversions. It was said that Wagner was for many years the one being whom this king could tolerate. Him he adored. But Wagner was quite as extravagant in his tastes and nearly as eccentric as his royal friend. Between the two tapestry and furniture for every one of the four seasons of the year. Moreover, he dressed himself to correspond. "When he had donned his celebrated gold brocade dressing gown, he could not live in a room unadorned by orange or canary colored tapestry." Every day he demanded new watches, jewels and snuff boxes, as though, forsooth, we myself lived in a Wagnerian future, when a watch and a jewel-case were to be worn by the dozen. As it was, both the king and Wagner lived in our time, and all those fancies cost money. Wagner and the king overshadowed the rest of the fair future. Soon the state treasury was hollow as a beggar's stomach at midday, and Herr Wagner was hissed and almost mobbed in the streets, and shortly took himself out of Munich forever.



HIS SLEIGH.

When Louis rode or walked out for recreation it was always in the dead of night. In winter there would perhaps be suddenly heard in Munich streets and homes in the streets, and next morning it would be found that the king had been taking his pleasure. He imitated the Louis IV style in his belongings. The sleigh here seen is a masterpiece of wood carving. It has in front a kind of swan neck's head rising to a height of five or six feet. Another sleigh is in front, the one holds a crown, the others bear peacock, copper and mineral eagle and gargoyles. Four horses draw the king along over the mountain roads. Outriders and drivers wear the costume of the period of Louis XIV.

The train traveled at a mad gallop always. Sometimes he disappeared altogether, and then the Bavarians lost their king for a while. He traveled occasionally to Paris or Berlin, but his visits were minimized. At times did not know where he was. Politics he hated. The one achievement of his life was that he introduced and popularized Wagnerian music.

He was a finished pianist. Von Bulow was his teacher. He had special theatrical representations at midnight in the court theatre, at which he alone was the audience. He was one of the most singular characters of many centuries. A strange and very unfortunate life ended in disappointment. In early life may or may not have had something to do with his eccentricities.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, ESQ.

Portrait and Sketch of the Scotch-born American Millionaire Manufacturer.

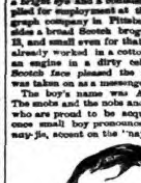
In the year 1848 a small boy with tow hair, a bright eye and a confidential manner applied for employment at the office of a telegraph company in Pittsburg. He had besides a broad Scotch brogue. He was only 13, and small even for that age, but he had already worked in a cotton mill and "fired an engine." He was a bright, ruddy Saxon face pleased the manager, and he was taken on as a messenger at $2.50 a week.

The boy's name was Andrew Carnegie. The snobs and the nobs and the titled people who are proud to be acquaintances of the once small boy pronounce the name Carnay-gie, accent on the "nay."



ANDREW CARNEGIE.

The tow-headed boy of 1848 is now the millionaire manufacturer of Pittsburg and New York. He is the extensive producer of steel rails, pig iron and coke in the world. He is the distinguished-looking gentleman in the picture. Besides being a millionaire he is a philanthropist and brilliant author. His book on America, "Triumphant Democracy," has attracted much attention on both sides of the Atlantic. A man with a broad, level head like that can do anything.

The boy Andrew in time became a telegraph operator, and he was number one. Whatever he went at he worked as hard as he could at it, and devoted his leisure time to learning something else. His eye saw how things quickly, and he made some valuable telegraphic suggestions to the company. Before long he was made division superintendent of the Pennsylvania railroad. Besides being a shrewd and energetic, he had been economical, too, and saved his earnings. He invested them in Pennsylvania oil lands, which became immensely productive. Then he engaged in iron manufacture, and the Scotch boy was a millionaire.

Best of all he is as wisely benevolent as he is rich. He gives away every year seven or eight times as much money as he spends. Hundreds of charitable and educational institutions have received his flowing gifts.

His latest plan is in connection with John Jarrett to form a gigantic co-operative organization in which workingmen alone shall be stockholders. First one co-operative steel works will be started in Pittsburg. Next the organization will feel its way to the establishment of great workshops and factories. The object is to unite the interests of capital and labor upon the only basis where they can meet—co-operation.

Oregon's Governor Elect.

Hon. Sylvester Pennoyer, the governor-elect of Oregon, is a native of New York, born in 1831. His early years were spent upon his father's farm, but desiring to pursue a professional career, he entered the law school of Harvard university, and graduated from there in 1854. The following year he removed to Oregon, where he was still a territory, and has resided there ever since. He was admitted to practice in the inferior and superior courts of the state; but, seeing the splendid possibilities of the lumber business in the then immense forests of Oregon, he abandoned his professional ambition and engaged in the lumber trade, and for been for years connected with one of the largest mills in the state. For a brief period he edited The Oregon Herald, displaying marked ability as a writer.

SYLVESTER PENNOYER.

Blind Maud Cook, Musical Wonder.

Little, blind Maud Cook, whose home is in Manchester, Tenn., is probably the greatest living musical prodigy. She is only 9 years of age, and yet when but 5 years old she was not only a musician but a composer also, and the young poet on record. She has already composed and had published three instrumental pieces: "Cleveland's March." "Hendrick's Funeral March" and "Texas Galop," very pretty, and a song, "Let the Cloud Pass by Me." Admirable for one of her years. It is claimed that she surpasses Blind Tom, in that the soul, the inspiration of music, is fully developed in her; and, besides, she is altogether intelligent, having no peculiarities to distinguish her save her passion for music, which she manifested at the early age of 18 months. Of the seven children, two more of whom, like herself, were born blind, and all betraying the same passion for music, Blind Tom, though not in the same high degree. A copy of her "Hendrick's Funeral March" was sent to the widow of the ex-vice-president, who acknowledged its receipt in grateful terms. It is a very appropriate production, and does the little genius great credit. She will be 10 years old by October. Her parents are too poor to give her the benefits of a musical training, or there is no telling what she might not develop.

One of a Number.

De Lancy—Who is that simpering idiot who persists in staring at you from the opposite box?

Mrs. De Lancy—Let me see; oh, that's—er—well, I've forgotten his name, but he used to be a husband of mine.—The Judge.

The Usual Picnic Jokes.

The picnic season now is here,
And the paragraphist
Will do his duty, never fear,
On jokes he ne'er has missed.

The young man in the new light pants
Will crush the blithe squash pie;
The sandwiches alive with ants
Will make the children cry.

Food lovers in the forest glade,
They eager love to tell,
When all at once the timid maid
Will see a snake and yell.

The man who swings the pretty girls
Will make his shoulders lame;
The dude who tries to row a boat
Will wonder why he came.

The thunderstorm that ends the fun
Will crash down prompt at four;
With startled shrieks the girls will run
And drabbled skirts deplore.
—Somerville Journal.

Well, Now the Chinese Must Go.

Speaking of Chinamen, the historian fell in with one of the race the other day directly in front of Cook's Academy of Music, and there wasn't much to gaze at except the dainty costumes displayed in the window. There was a very peculiar sort of smile clearly perceptible in the Chinaman's face.

"Not many dresses like that for the ladies in China, John," said the Caucasian.

The Chinaman's superior smile ex ended noticeably in either direction.

"Chinese ladies no likee such dress-a," said he. "Too much cloth; likee show small feet. Mallee-ly, they lump big feet and be measured off a space of about two feet in the air with his hands—"gotta wear big dress; no likee show feet!"—Boston Record.

She Wanted to Borrow.

A Chicago woman entered the office of a loan agency the other day and said:

"I want you to raise $1,000 on $3,000 worth of furniture. What is your lowest rate of interest?"

"On such loans we generally ask 10 per cent."

"Very well. Send your examiner up to the house. It is a speculation with me."

"Going into business, ma'am?"

"Yes, I'm going to take my three daughters to the seashore, and either marry 'em off or drown 'em!"—Wall Street Daily News.

Kentucky the Cradle of Colonels.

A careful estimate of the army Kentucky can throw into the field gives some astounding results. Estimating two colonels to a regiment, the usual allowance, we have a comfortable little force of 397,000,000 of soldiers. This calculation is on the basis of 500 soldiers to every citizen of Kentucky who is called "colonel." In case of war, we can only hope that the state will stand by us.—Life.

JOTTINGS.

—Efforts are being made to form a G. A. R. Post in Round Brook.

—The Somerville public schools will close for the summer next Friday.

—St. Mary's T. A. B. Society will hold a semi-monthly meeting Monday evening.

—Commencement exercises were held in the various schools in Elizabeth last evening.

—The Bee Hive offers to-day special dresses in ladies' white lawn suits and Oriental flouncings.

—The Union County Court, after an adjournment of a week will again open in Elizabeth on Monday morning.

—Four unreleased canines are to be annihilated to the North Plainfield authorities in the borough lock-up this evening.

—The Senior Society, Boys' Branch of the Y. M. C. A. will have a reunion (to stages) to Boynton Beach on Tuesday next.

—Sweepstake shooting at live birds took place on the grounds of the Middlesex County Gun Club at Dunellen on Thursday afternoon.

—Borough Marshal Weaver and Becker will visit Stine's bridge and the bridge at Clinton avenue to-morrow and arrest all persons found bathing in the water at those points.

—A lot of boys got into an argument with some men on North avenue, last evening, and fighting words were exchanged. The police put an end to the matter before any serious damage was done.

—Germann Schmied H-nrel, from Martinsville, was arrested in Somerville a few days ago for falling through a pane of glass while drunk. He was subsequently discharged upon payment of damages.

—The poem, "School Statistics," is reproduced on our last page to-day for the accommodation of those who were unable to obtain extra copies at the time it was originally published in THE NEWS last month.

—French, the clothier, is selling out his entire stock of men's and boys' clothing at twenty five per cent. less than cost to wind up the business. He invites all who want bargains to give him a call, assuring them that it will pay them big.

—Home influence is queerly portrayed in the fact that the wife of a man who some months ago signed the pledge, and who is said to have since lived up to his vows, can be nightly seen passing through Park avenue on her way to and from a beer saloon, after a pitcher of beer.

—The semi-annual election of officers for the Junior Society, Boys' Branch, Y. M. C. A. was held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall yesterday afternoon at four o'clock and resulted in the election of the following named: President—Eddie Finch; Vice-President—Eddie Patterson; Secretary—Arthur Sorrell; Treasurer—Vincent Rockwell.

—We long ago predicted that the W. C. T. U. would prove the most formidable adversary of intemperance the world has ever seen, and would in the end triumph, if such a result is possible. The women have to-day the most perfect of organizations and an indomitable determination to wipe out the accursed traffic to save their sons, and daughter, husbands, sisters, brothers, fathers and mothers, and humanity generally from misery, disgrace and ruin. Their latest step to that end is a scrap book, containing much startling information, and got up very artistically, which is for sale at thirty-five cents per copy, three copies for one dollar. Mrs. R. P. Penfield, P. O. Box 1423 is the address. She is the State Superintendent of publications.

CHURCH SERVICE.

German service, Warren Mission Chapel, Cleatham street, North Plainfield, 10½ a. m. Theme: "Christenthum ohne den Geist Christi." P. Koenig, pastor.

Rev. Mr. Eddy of New York will officiate in Grace church to-morrow morning in the absence of the rector, Rev. Dean Rodman, who will preach at Ardsley.

Services in the Park Avenue Baptist Church to-morrow. Preaching by the pastor, the Rev. Asa R. Dilts, jr., at 10.45 a. m. A prayer and praise service at 7.45 p. m.

Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector of Grace church, will officiate at the Nutherwood Union Chapel to-morrow morning at eleven o'clock. The usual choir will furnish the music.

Rev. A. V. V. Raymond will continue his series of sermons on the latest question in Christian Reform at the morning service. His subject will be "The Responsibility of Capitalists."

At the Methodist Episcopal church the pastor, Rev. J. B. Van Meter, will preach at 10.30 a. m. and 7.45 p. m. The evening sermon will be the fourth in the course addressed to the young. Theme: "A Disastrous Choice."

Rev. Mr. Love will occupy the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church to-morrow morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketchum, who is sojourning at Deal Beach. The wife of Dr. Ketchum has gone to Schooley's mountain.

A Gospel service will be held at the Congregational church to-morrow evening, beginning at 7.45. Good singing from the new Gospel Choir by a chorus choir. Short sermon by the pastor, after which the meeting will be thrown open. After the morning service the examining committee will meet candidates for admission to the church.

Graves Desecrated.

Several complaints have of late been made of the desecration of the graves in the Methodist Cemetery on Plainfield avenue. Persons have reported to the authorities have been in the habit of robbing the graves of flowers and plants placed thereon by relatives and friends of the departed dead. In most instances the plants have been litterally dug from the mounds, and in many other cases flowers have been cut off. The latest complaint is made by Justice V. W. Nash, who owns a plot in the cemetery. Surrounding the lot is a row of beautiful evergreens, about six feet high, and some miscreant has deliberately clipped the tops from many of these and strewn them on the ground. Complaints are becoming numerous and the offenders, once caught, will in all probability have "very parts" meted out to them as they richly deserve.

Latest News from the Poisoned District.

Mr. E. B. Tilsworth of this city last evening arrived from the scene of the wholesale poisoning at Pottersville, in Somerset county, and reports that as yet no deaths have resulted from the effects of the poisoning, but the lives of four of the afflicted persons are despaired of. In all 235 cases have been reported, but a majority of these have recovered. In many instances whole families were stricken down with the deadly poison and many are yet suffering for want of proper treatment. All of the available physicians from the surrounding country are called to their assistance, but the number, he says, is totally inadequate to meet the requirements.

Perseverance Lodge Election.

At the regular convention of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., held in Castle Hall last evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Chancellor Commander—John Ulrich.
Vice-Chancellor—Wm. Stine.
Prelate—Dr. T. S. Davis.
Master of Exchequer—John Carney.
Master of Work—Edward Sayre.
Keeper of Records and Seal—Halsey S. Mason.
Master of Finances—J. B. Higgins.
Master of Arms—S. Robinson.
Representative to Grand Lodge—P. Patterson.
Alternate—C. Jones.
Trustee—B. F. Moore.

FANWOOD

The case of the Importers and Traders' Bank against Isabella Littell of Fanwood, which was brought by the creditors of the defendant, came up before Vice-Chancellor Van Fleet at Jersey City on Thursday. The case was brought for alleged fraudulent misrepresentation. The court felt that it had been imposed upon when it was learned that the defendant had sold all of his property. One witness swore that he had bought all the property furnished by the defendant. The Vice Chancellor then dismissed the case, and held a decree in favor of the defendant as to the advisability of sending the case before the grand jury.

The Barb Wire Fence Case.

One contest in the barb wire fence case of Carl Polak vs. Huls a has been had in the Supreme Court and decision rendered in favor of Mr. Polak. Motion was made by his counsel, Craig A. Marsh, to strike out the second plea filed by defendants. The court sustained the motion at the late law, and has just announced an opinion granting the motion, and striking out the plea with costs, with leave to defendants to amend on payment of the costs.

Election of Officers.

At a recent meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Patrick Casey; vice-president, Jas Mullowney; recording secretary, R. J. Perkins; financial secretary, Patrick Kisly; treasurer, Joseph Cellary. The headquarters of this organization are over Woolston & Buckle's paint store on North avenue, where they meet the second Tuesday in each month.

Justices' Court Notes.

A third action for debt brought by Miller vs. De Camp will be tried before Justice Nash on July 24.

A writ of attachment upon contract brought by Griffin vs. Budd, and can fairly discount "Pooh Bah" in the Mikado. At Rockaway, he at one time was one of the Township Committee, Superintendent of Schools, Township Collector, School Trustee, Justice of the Peace and Commissioner of Deeds. He is the son of Amos Wadsworth, for forty years a merchant at Litchfield, and is a lineal descendant of Joseph Wadsworth, who hid in the oak tree in the Charter Oak at Hartford, he his son of William, one of the original settlers in Hartford, in 1633.

—"The sound of the fire-cracker is heard in our midst," and the recording of burning accidents are now in order. There is, however, a city ordinance prohibiting the exploding of crackers and bombs before the Fourth of July, and reckless parents would do well to see that their patriotic offspring do not infringe thereon.

PERSONAL.

Seeley Edsall has gone to Norwich, Connecticut, for a few weeks recreation.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh and wife sailed for Europe to-day, per steamer "Westernland."

Mr. A. L. Mundy, a former resident here, but now of Somerville, one day last week, landed four pound bass from the Raritan River, near Bound Brook.

The many friends of Mr. F. T. Lincoln will be glad to learn of his return to his home in Union street, this city, after an absence of eight weeks at Mt. Tabor, N. J.

Gen. Wm. Ward, ex-postmaster was recently the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Lorton of West Front street. Mr. Ward is prominently spoken of as the Republican candidate for gubernational honors.

At a meeting of the members of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Agricultural Association held at Laing's Hotel on Thursday evening Nathan Robbins of Metuchen was chosen as president and William Williams of North Plainfield as secretary for the ensuing year.

Joseph N. Randolph of Manning avenue, North Plainfield, died at Morris Plains Asylum on Thursday morning, where he has been confined for about four months. The remains will be interred in Rahway. Some months ago the wife of the deceased died and this is thought to have affected his reason.

The large organ built by Messrs. V. H. and C. S. Odell for the Crescent avenue church of this place was on exhibition at the firm's manufactory, 406 and 408 West 42d street, yesterday afternoon, between the hours of three and five o'clock, when all those interested in the matter were invited to be present.

St. Bridget's Roman Catholic parish of Jersey City is about to erect one of the most beautiful and costly structures in the country. Rev. Father Smyth of St. Mary' church in this city, was pastor of St. Bridget's church in 1876, and remained there four years, until ill health compelled him to leave the parish. In 1883, he located in Plainfield, where he has since remained.

Edward White, of the firm of Messrs. J. E. White & Son, the dry goods merchants of Front street, was married Thursday by the Rev. the rge R. Hoer to Miss Kate M., daughter of Theodore Barcalow of Somerville. The bride is a neice of the late Cal Barcalow, recently deceased. The wedding was private, only a few relatives and friends being present, and after a short wedding trip the happy couple will settle down in Plainfield. They have many friends here and in Somerville, who will feel like throwing slippers after them for good luck.

John Bayard Brown of this city has promoted to the Job Mase Art Gallery a very fine steel engraving, entitled "The Three Holy Children." It was engraved by Peter Simon after the painting of Rev. Wm. Peters, and published by John Boydell, London, 1788. The picture first belonged to Col. Josia Bayard of New Brunswick, and was presented by a friend, a subsequent guest, and to commemorate whom Bayard street in that city is named. About fifty-five years ago it descended to the family of Mr. Brown, who now generously gives it to the city.

The accompanying notice is an obituary quoted from the Christian Advocate respecting the death of Albert Horn, a grandfather of Tsemann Horn, who graduated with high honors in Stillman Music Hall on Thursday evening: Albert Horn was born in New York city in 1799, and there died April 23, 1886, where he had lived 87 years an upright citizen, a true friend, a kind parent, and a consistent Christian. His father, Col. Horn, served in the ranks under Washington during the whole of the Revolutionary War. In the War of 1812 he was appointed colonel, and his regiment built strong works between Harlem and Kingsbridge, one of the forts was called Fort Horn, in his honor, and remains in 121st street. His son, then a lad of 13, was full of patriotism, and delighted in aiding his father and the soldiers. In 1825 Brother Horn married the daughter of Asbury Tennison, a Germa n Methodist preacher. His widow remains to mourn her loss. He connected himself with the Bowery Village Church in 1830, now Seventh street M thodist Episcopal church. At his decease he was a member of No. 2 class, in charge of Brother Hall, and a leader in the same, but his death triumphant, his last words were: "I am going home, all is well. I hear the angels singing."

Lydia Fenn Wadsworth of this city is a native of Litchfield, Conn., where he was born, May 26, 1825, the youngest of two sons, the elder brother being now a farmer in Ohio wasnne county, Michigan. He graduated at the Troy Female Seminary. Colle ge, Hartford, Conn., in 1844, and in 1846 he changed his place of residence from Litchfield, removing to New York, where he entered Stoughton's law office, in 1847, studying with him for three years. In 1850 he was admitted to the bar of the Assembly of New York State, which position he held for one year. In 1853 he obtained a position as clerk in the Custom House, and continued in various capacities thereon until 1870. In 1860 he visited his brother in Michigan, remaining about one year, returning to New York in 1861 and remaining until 1862, when he became a citizen of New Jersey, locating at Rockaway, engaging in farming and continuing thereat until 1875, when he removed to Newark, remaining there for two years, when he located in this city, where he has since resided, always a conspicuous Democrat. He at present holds the following offices: Inspector of Election, School Trustee, Justice of the Peace, Overseer of the Poor, Notary Public, and Commissioner of Deeds, and can fairly discount

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

A Voice from a Borough Pupil.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—I would like to ask through the columns of your paper, those who attended the exercises of the North Plainfield Public School Thursday evening, if they noticed an awkward void in the program, when compared with the commencement exercises of our school-mates in the city—to a painful extent? Both gold pieces given for good scholarship. Being one of the pupils I speak from experience and say we have noticed it and felt the want a long time.

Why is this? Have we no wealthy or generous citizens on side of the "brook," or do they think there are no specimens worthy of encouragement that would compare favorably with the shining lights of the Plainfield High School. Oh, ye who doubt, just try us and see if our honors are not fairly earned. Do they suppose it is easier for us to work out our problems in double-jointed proportion, or, with aching heads and weary brains, disentangle our right angled-triangles and find the length of the hypothenuse of double and twisted parallelograms? If the sum of the two sides ain't equal let x equal the number. To say the least, it is very galling and trying for us to limp over the rough "road to learning" in this place, and see scholars on the other side glide through on a golden track. Who will give us a little gilt-edged sympathy next year? SAM.

Freeholder James T. Pierson of this place was reelected sheriff of Union county by a large majority, to the extent of 437.50. A few days ago a well-dressed stranger called at Mr. Pierson's store and presented a check for the above sum, purporting to have been drawn by George H. Embree, a wealthy resident of the village, and the National Bank of the State of New York, and payable to the order of James H. Smith. Mr. Pierson was not in the store at the time, and the accommodating clerk said he had only 430 in the drawer, and asked if that would do any service. Upon his return to the store Mr. Pierson approved of the transaction, and filling out a check for the balance of the stated sum he drew it. It has since been discovered that the whole affair was a forgery, and the Freeholder is the victim of misplaced confidence.

—A good place to get artist's materials of all kinds is at Swaim's on Front street. He also has engravings, etchings and some beautiful hand-colored photographs. You are invited to call and look at his stock.

—Constable Smith took in evening made a levy in the action brought by the New York and New Jersey Land Improvement Company vs. Carpenter, to satisfy a judgment rendered by Justice Hetfield, in favor of the plaintiff, on Thursday, in the sum of $179 with interest and costs. The sale was stopped by the defendant, who came out and gave his note, which he redeemed at the time set for the sale.

—Arthur, a son of Fletcher Streeter of Somerville, aged about 14 years, while visiting friends in this city a few days ago, in jumping across a small creek landed upon a manure fork the tines of which ran through both feet, causing very severe wounds. The little fellow pulled the fork out and ran to the house, where medical aid was summoned and the wounds dressed. He was taken to his home in the evening, and is getting along quite comfortably.

PENSION VETOES.

AN EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO OVERRIDE THEM.

A Test Case Selected From Kentucky. Mr. Watson Defends the President Against an Attack by Mr. Haynes—A Lively Scrimmage of Words.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—During the evening session the House became an incised over the matter of pension vetoes.

The Kentucky members propose to show fight. They have selected a test case, and they expect to make it a test vote. Two days are to be set that the bill be passed over the president's veto. They expect in this way to stem the veto tide for a time. The test case may have been selected in that of Carter H. Tiller, of Kentucky. Tiller's son, George W. Tiller, was a private in a Kentucky company, and was killed in battle. His father was captured while in the discharge of duty near Bridgport, Ala.; was confined at Andersonville, Ga., where he died July 21, 1864. He was sound at enlistment and at capture, and it is shown by the records of the war department to have died of diarrhœa. He was never married. His mother died in February, 1885.

The chairman and auditor say of this bill is his father, who filed claim for pension as dependent father, Dec. 31, 1877, which was rejected the 19th of May, 1879, on the plea that the claimant was not dependent on the soldier, as he has supported himself by the income from his exemption since the soldier's death. The auditor says further that the father has been a cripple since 1864, and has barely supported himself through a position on the police force of Louisville. The president vetoed the bill because the records of the war department showed Tiller to have deserted his regiment in 1863, and because he did not believe the soldier's death accident upon his son at the time of the son's death.

Congressmen Matson, of Indiana, and Taulbee, of the Kentucky delegation, are heard on the floor of the house during the day he acted upon 118 private pension bills, after giving each case a thorough personal examination. Thirty bills were vetoed and eighty-eight approved. He also approved the bill reinbursing Edwin Stevens, United States consul at Ningpo, China, for extraordinary expenses incurred during the French-Chinese war. The bill for the relief of Richard T. Wintersmith, late doorkeeper of the house, was allowed to become a law without the president's signature. The president wrote all the veto messages himself, without assistance by dictation or otherwise. They made about fifty pages of closely legal cap. He also approved the bill reim

CLASSIC MUSCLE.

COLLEGE STUDENTS EXHIBITING SCHOLASTIC ACQUIREMENTS.

Yale's Crew Runs Away from the Pennsylvania Quakers of the University of Pennsylvania—Some Good Work Done by Both Parties—Hanlan and Hosmer.

NEW LONDON, June 26.—Yale's university boat crew did fine work on the Thames yesterday afternoon, and rowed away from the Pennsylvania crew without any apparent effort. Indeed it was much larger than was expected, as it was regarded as certain that Yale would win, and the odds were largely in her favor. At 5 o'clock the steamers Manhasset and Cecile left their wharves with large crowds aboard, including about fifty Amherst college men who had their class supper at the Pequot house last night. The steamers were followed up the course by a score of smaller craft, which anchored near the finish, while the steam yacht Talisman, of Providence, and the Norma and Nereid went up above the Naval to follow the crew down. Capt. Mumford, of Harvard, was chosen referee, and the word to "go" was given at 5:57, neither crew having an apparent advantage. Yale's first strokes were powerful ones, and when they had dipped their oars three times their shell was ahead at 36 strokes to the minute. The Quakers started out on 39 strokes, but they kept it only 50 seconds. Yale forged still further ahead and dropped her stroke to 34, before the half mile flag was reached, and slowed to 31 when they found they were holding their own. Finer rowing was seldom seen. Every man moved with the precision of machinery and not a drop of water splashed during the first mile which Yale covered in 5m. 46s., with the Quakers two lengths behind. The Yale crew, at 31 strokes, still increased their lead, and as they neared the two mile flag had a clear boat length. They covered the second mile in 5m. 42s. The Quakers were perceptibly weak, and it was apparent that Yale was now slowing down to conclude them. The time of the third mile was covered by Yale in 6m. 14s., with Pennsylvania a dozen lengths to the rear. The first half of the last mile, the fastest of the race, was covered by Yale in 5m. 39s. at a 36 stroke, but she dropped her stroke to 33 in the last half, and completed the four miles in 23m. 33s. Pennsylvania's time was 24m. 44s.

HANLAN BEATS HOSMER.

Racing in the Rain at Lake St. Josephs—A Close Pull.

LAKE ST. JOSEPH, June 26.—There were about 3,000 spectators here to witness the Hanlan-Hosmer boat race. The weather was drizzly all day, and shortly before the start was made a squall came down upon the lake in which lasted until after the finish; but the water at the start was without a ripple. A slight breeze somewhat ruffled the surface of the lake during the race, but not much, but not sufficient to make any perceptible difference in time. Both took the water at 5:30, Hosmer getting off on the first attempt on a stroke of 36½ to the minute. They slowed down in the second mile to 32½ strokes. The course was three miles with a turn. Hosmer rowed the first home in 9m. 5s., and Hanlan in 9m. 23s., when the latter made a spurt and caught up to his opponent, passing him in the homestretch and getting a lead of about three lengths. Within 300 yards of the finish Hanlan again eased off. He was approaching the finish about one length ahead when Hosmer made a final spurt, reducing his opponent's lead by half a length. The applause was tremendous, and cheers were given for the Canadian and his defeated rival. A reception was tendered Hanlan and Hosmer by the mayor and citizens, when the mayor delivered an address, complimentary to both, and distributed the prizes won in at the regatta.

The Jury May Drink But Not Read.

CHICAGO, June 26.—C. B. Todd, a fine looking business man, was the fourth and only juror selected yesterday in the Anarchist trial. Judge Gary gave orders to the bailiffs not to allow jurors to receive any messages or letters, or to hold conversation with any strangers or to read the daily papers. It also forbids the

BILL NYE TURNS ASTRONOMER.

A Rebtail Comet Unworthy to Bear His Name.

Dr. Corner, proprietor of Corner's no plus ultra kidney calmer, Jasperville, N. J.:

DEAR SIR: I write to say that last night I was so fortunate as to discover a new comet for which you were kind enough to offer a prize of $100 last year. Allow me to say, your offer I immediately began to scan the heavens. I presume that there isn't a square foot of the whole sky that I haven't been over during that time in search of comets. In January, on the early morning of the second, I think, while going home after soldering in the ornaments of ushering in the new year, I discovered a comet of great magnitude, but on the following evening when I attempted to put my hand on it it was gone, and drew up on you for the prize money. I found that it had evaded me. I now agree with my wife that it was an optical illusion of the first magnitude.

Last week, however, I succeeded in running down a large red comet which had never been used before. It was situated in the constellation of Chanticleer, about due west of it. It might be described as you look out of my barn door on a clear night.

Its apparent size is that of a large webfoot body at the end of a normal comet's tail. This is the only drawback to my discovery. I am sorry to come to you with a tailless comet. After the long nights of anxiety and weary labor it seems to me rather hard bringing a tailless comet. I will, therefore, throw off $10 from the amount you offered. Send me postal note for $90. Dear, and the gentle, and the true. Will be glad to hear from you if you are careful to observe my direct one.

Had this comet been a success, with a tail to it, I could have been glad to bestow my name upon it, never having put my name on a comet, but I would prefer not to name a worthless comet after myself. A man works he hard to win a deathless name to enjoy one to put on a nebulous and skittish tailless comet, with no record. I have had wished to have my name appear in the sky by first and contiguous companions will be found here and there throughout the American book of book, but when I ponder it on a heavenly body I want it to be attached to a good one.

I am on the eve of discovering another comet, however, and if you will hold out the advance to me, I will return the money to you.

New Discovering Comets for a Livelihood.

Mr. Corner has discovered to the early evening. It is not a brilliant comet, but rather interior in its appearance. Its motions, also, are erratic, and at times almost lost. It has no original tail, but Mr. Corner holds to it. I hope that this will make no difference, however, as it is no fault of mine. I will agree that it shall not occur again.

I hope some day to discover a comet with a parabola to it. I have found a place where such a comet had been the star before and dragged its parabola across the milky way. What pride do you offer for a comet with a parabola? Also, what will you give me for a small comet in good condition, with a perihelion to it?

I found a light scrawl comet last year, but had not completed the discovery and filed on it before it disappeared for the night. I learned the next day that it was a comet with a large orbit, and that it would not again appear for 5,000 years. The discovery was a long ride one, however, and if you will advance the amount of the prize, it will be of great pecuniary advantage to me, and if at any time you should feel as I do I shall refund the money to you or your heirs with pleasure. This comet had a long, heavy make and tail, and seemed to be looping the loop in the sky as it came from me when I discovered it, but when I looked at it again I saw that it was turned the other way. I really looked at it as it was gone. Should any other astronomer find this comet and report it to you I wish you would tell him that it belongs to me. It is about the medium height, is a good roadster, and wears its tail at an angle of about forty-five degrees when in motion.

I would rather discover comets for a livelihood than to do anything else, if it did not keep me from my family so much.

Do you prefer a comet with a no-legs, or can you get one with a rear elevation? Do you prefer to better advantage? Could you use a poem on the presidential nuptials? I often write little poems of this character while waiting behind a tree for a comet to come down past me for a drink. I also have a double-barrel shotgun to guard over and the right to a small incidental privilege to it in the both magnitude, both of which I would like to dispose of.

In answering this letter please pin the check to the letter left hand corner of your manuscript. Write plainly on one side only, with your indorsement on the other. I cannot promise to return manuscript. Please write only on one side of the paper. Let me hear from you what use my discoveries or not.

I would like to say that I could do for you or for some left hand corner and I will give you noble figures and cut rates on comets, microbes, or anything else in my line.

Please write your name and postoffice address plainly and tell the cashier to sign his name plainly at the bottom of the check.

Yours with a telescope in each eye and a comet cork screw in each hand.—Bill Nye in Boston Globe.

How to Keep From Drowning.

Boys and girls, learn to swim this summer, if you do not know how already. An apparently good swimmer says the best way to learn is in a rather shallow stream with a good current. The shallowness keeps the learner from being afraid. Go into water just where it is about deep, with a friend. Let that friend stand or walk along by you and put his hand under your chin. While he holds your chin and sees out of the water he can easily keep you afloat. Then catch the swimming strokes with your hands and feet. As you get accustomed to the water and get confidence in your friend can gradually withdraw his hand, one finger after another, till only one finger is left under your chin. By and by he can take even that away, and you will be a swimmer before you know it. Do not try to learn one another, however, by taking away the finger before the learner is ready.

Below is a picture which you should learn by heart about learning from drowning. It may save many lives.

The human body weighs a pound in the water, and a cork will carry two persons, that is, it will keep the head above water, which is all that is necessary when it is a question of life and death. Any one can keep afloat on a stool or chair, or a small box or a piece of board will easily keep the head above water, while the two feet and the other hand may be used as paddles to propel toward the shore. It is not necessary to know how to swim to be able to keep from drowning. Little experience of the body and plenty of water and faith in it, is all that is required. Children and all others should have pieces in the swimming power of water in the head to keep it above water. Any one will soon find out what will sustain a pound weight is all that is necessary to keep one's head above the water, and will serve every purpose except that of the greatest exercises as a swimmer. A person unfamiliar with the buoyant power will naturally try to climb on top of the floating object on which he tries to save himself. If it is large enough that is all right, but it is generally not large enough to keep all entirely above water. This often happens when rowboats capsize. All immediately want to get out of the water on top of the overturned or half filled boat, and all go down except those on whom the weighed craft will wholly bear up. If they simply trust the water to sustain 90 100 of the weight of their bodies, and the dashed boat or other floating object might be saved under most circumstances. An overturned or half filled wooden boat will sustain more people than will carry. It will keep the heads above the water of as many people as could get their hands on the gunwales.

Playing Soldier.

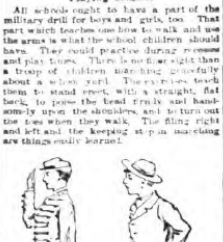
All schools ought to have a part of the military drill for boys and girls, too. That part which teaches one how to walk and use the arms is what the school children should have. They could practice during recesses and play times, and when sufficiently well drilled a troop of children marching gracefully about a school yard. The exercises teach them to stand erect, with a straight, flat back, to point the head proudly and handsomely upon the shoulders, and to turn out the toes when they walk. The filing right and left and the keeping of step marching are things easily learned.



AFTER. BEFORE.

A year of military drill often makes as much difference as a boy's looks as you see in the picture. It can transform a clumsy, awkward lad into an erect, graceful boy. And both boys and girls like to play soldier. The boy naturally, for he can then command a company of boy soldiers with uniform and a small drum and fife, while the girl like the right shouldering of muskets and the inside of the chamber. The chamber is two feet in diameter. It is made of the best cast steel, two inches thick. It has been tested up to 10,000 pounds to the square inch, and as the gauge will only indicate 1,000 pounds to the square inch, the engineers would not feel alarmed if the needle should blow the wheel gauge away. As a matter of fact, the pressure of the explosions so far used has but little, if any, exceeded 100 pounds.

When the Eureka's machinery was set in motion the first there was simply a lot of big splashes on each side aft, the blue smoke rising in curls and the boat took on a list as if she were on fire under water. The machine was reversed and they came out forward, the gas rising perpendicularly and not moving the boat an inch. Then when the metal warmed up, the explosions became more violent and finally the vessel began to move.

Mr. Secor comes of a long line of steamboat machinists and iron workmen. For three generations the inventive talent has been accumulating.

The old established steamer companies, with their millions of money invested in steam machinery, will not take up this invention long as they can help it. The president of one of the great companies said to Mr. Secor: "I could afford to pay you a large sum to fail. I hope you will fail."

The way the explosions are produced is ingenious. Petroleum spray is injected into the explosion chamber where the compressed air is. A spray strikes upon a white hot platinum wire, kept hot by an electric current. The result is a succession of explosions, sixty to or fifty a minute.

Refining the Body.

A singular wave of thought is passing over England and America. There is a theory that through ages of flesh feeling and thinking in the grosser parts of the soul of more matter that manifest have is gey lost their finer or spiritual insight. They have, it is said, unknown and almost unmeasurable powers of mind, of perception, of seeing into things quickly, and of drawing conclusions which will infallibly lead them to success in their undertakings. These marvelous powers have been choked well nigh out of existence by excessive eating and drinking, and other gross material indulgences. The only way to recover them is to retrace the path down which mankind have come, to learn to live more by the strength of the fine powers, and less on gross stimulants.

So man will regain his lost kingdom. Looking over the list of men famous for intellectual achievement, it is surprising what small eaters many of them were. Dickens it was said ate like a bird. Socrates lived on water and a little fruit and vegetables. William Cullen Bryant took nothing in the evening but a baked apple and a glass of milk.

Members of theatrical companies have a curious experience of eating. When on the road they must frequently do with only one meal a day, in order to get from one point to another to fill their engagements. They find that they can get accustomed to this with the greatest ease and do their work as well on one meal a day as on three. They state this to be a fact themselves. It is also a fact that at this moment there are a few eastern cities numbering about 100,000 people, who labor constantly and do an immense amount of work, that eat only once a day—at midday or in the evening.

John Secor may be another well known example of this. It is persons that constantly use stimulants, such as tea, coffee, beer and whisky, that suffer most from hunger and faintness when a meal has been skipped. Dr. Tanner, the faster, proved that we eat far too much.

Further, it is the over indulgence in gross food and drinks that has brought on many diseases which afflict the race. Doing without these, and eating sparingly of milk, fruits and cereals, will bring mankind back to health. Such is an outline of the latest hygienic craze.

A Mexican Scorpion.

At Durango, Mex., the scorpions are a frightful pest. They are found everywhere in the city, and every effort has been made to exterminate them. A scorpion is the reward of a cent and a half for males, and double that amount for females, is paid by the authorities, and the records indicate that some years over one million thousand are captured and destroyed. The sting, especially in the case of children, is horribly fatal; the victim, if under 3 or 4 years of age, dies in a few days, and sometimes in a few minutes, in strong general convulsions. No antidote for the poison has as yet been discovered.

Feats of Interest.

Artificial ivory is now made of sheep's hoofs and other refuse of the slaughter house.

Men above 80 years old only average six teeth apiece, women of that age no more than three.

The replacement of a diseased eye by the healthy eye of an animal has now been done five times, with one success.

The south is rapidly changing her broad gauge railroads to the standard gauge used in the rest of the country.

Dried potatoes are an article of export from Prince Edward Island. They are sliced thin, steeped in brine twenty minutes and dried like apples and other fruit.

The French Academy of Medicine has reported against the use of nudfs for use in the French hospitals, and the government refuses to allow its use there.

The average of life is lengthening. By attention to health and the cessation of wars the human race may grow old, but it should not be prolonged almost indefinitely.

Tornadoes have so scared the citizens of Meriden, Ills., that they talk of building a huge "cyclone cellar," where the whole town can take refuge when a wind storm comes along.

Cultivation has so affected the evolution of the tomato that the seeds are fast disappearing, and bid fair to pass out of existence entirely, as in the case of the banana, leaving the propagation of the plants dependent on cuttings.

A law has been enacted in Ohio creating the office of dairy and food commissioner. His duty is to inspect any article—butter, cheese, lard, syrup, sugar or other articles of food, and to prosecute all corporations, firms or persons engaged in the manufacture or sale of any adulterated or counterfeit article of food or drink in violation of the laws of Ohio.

The North African Slave Trade.

Morocco is now the chief out export of the north African slave trade. The Egyptians have by no means ceased to be slavers, though they keep them under other names. The merchants of Tunis, Tripoli and Tripoli still keep slaves, and they all buy them at the same rates as before. There is no long limited darkness of Dahomey to make room in the slavery wood heads of the lower Senegal trained dancers, singing girls, dancing girls, house servants, and all of the lower classes, and are bought at cash prices varying from £25 to £60 according to the quality of the article. Next to coal stingers boys under 16 form the big out piece, an average of 25 frames more than girls can handle. At the Suez Canal, Port Said, Alexandria, Cairo and Suez, from 2,000 to 3,000 slaves are sent annually sold or exchanged, and as a heavy duty is charged on the export of slaves, a large revenue to the sheikh of the district, as well as to the majesty the sultan.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

SCHOOL STATISTICS.

[By one of Our Local School Teachers.]

Reported to the Town Board of May 25th by Superintendent.

Term Saturday night, sat a teacher sat
Alone, her task pursuing;
She average'd the sum of the average 1 that,
And 'twas a very good one.

She reckoned percentages so many boys
And so many girls she counted,
And marked all tardy and absentees,
And what the district amounted.

Names and residence were in full,
On many columns and pages,
Yes low, Tentative, African, Celt
And Saxon mixed with Negro.

The rate of admission of every one,
And cases of flagellation,
And prepared a list of questions,
For the May examination.

Her weary head sank low in her look
And her weary heart still lower,
For some of the pupils had little brains
And had not studied with power.

She slept. She dreamed. It seemed she died
And her spirit went to Hades—
And they met her there with a question fair,
"State what the per cent of your grade is?"

Apes had slowly rolled away,
Leaving but partial traces,
And the teacher's spirit walked one day
In the old familiar places.

A mound of fossilized school reports,
Attracted her observation,
As high as the State House dome, and as wide
As the entire area Kaiser.

She came to the spot where they buried her bones,
And the ground was well built over,
But Science digging, threw out a skull
One buried beneath the clover.

A disciple of Galen wondering by,
Paused to look at the diggers;
And picking the skull up, looked through the eye
And saw it was lined with figures.

"Just as I thought," said the young M. D.,
"How easy it is to tell 'em,
Statistics petrified every bone
Of cerebrum and cerebellum.'

"It's a great curiosity, sure, said Pat,"
"By the bones ye can tell the creeches;"
"Oh! nothing strange," said the disciple, "That Was a nineteenth century teacher."

per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an assessment. There are no Membership Fees, or annual dues; nothing else to pay. The usual premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy, and the contract is backed by a paid up capital of $500,000.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since. It has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $943,182.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over 600,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. ### JOTTINGS.

—The Axle Works at Bound Brook began operations to-day.

—The firemen of No. 2 Engine Company still have hopes of receiving their new engine by the Fourth of July.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Building Loan Association will be held in Cutler's Hall this evening.

—On account of the hot weather High Mass will not be celebrated in St. Mary's church on Sundays during the months of July and August.

—The trustees of the Mt. Horeb school held a special meeting Saturday evening to consider the advisability of electing a new teacher.

—The Sunday-school of the Rossiln Baptist church will celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of its organization on Sunday evening next with appropriate exercises.

—The subject at the young men's meeting of the Y. M. C. A. hall this evening will be "Naaman the Leper." A feature of the meeting will be good singing by a male choir. All are invited.

—The building occupied by John H. King's stone cracking apparatus at Chimney Rock was fired by an incendiary recently and damage done to the amount of several hundred dollars. There was no insurance.

—The first in a series of actions brought by the Mallet Hill vs. Aloni Du Cate to recover $121.26, the amount due on a note, was on Saturday afternoon adjusted by the defendant paying over the full amount before the case was put on trial.

—An employe of Force's Hotel was arrested by Chief Dodd and Policeman Lynch on Saturday afternoon on a charge of adultery. The accused was released by marrying the girl. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. J. O'Hanlon.

—William Betts, a colored man who has heretofore been employed by Mr. J. D. Spicer of Fifth and Union streets, met with an accident at Asbury Park on Saturday afternoon. The man is said to have gone to the Park to engage for the summer, and when alighting from a train fell and dislocated his shoulder.

—The members of the Order of the Knights of Pythias throughout the State will have an opportunity to visit Canada and attend the session of the Supreme Lodge at Toronto, which convenes on July 13th. Arrangements have been made with the Erie Railway company whereby return tickets may be obtained at $11 each.

—The Presbytery of Elizabeth, of which Rev. W. R. Richards of the Crescent Ave. nue church here is Moderator, met in special session in Elizabeth to-day for the purpose of receiving that body. Hilton Cobb from the Presbytery of Hudson, and arranging his installation as pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Elizabeth.

—The wife of a Front street merchant remarked in a bargain, "As I go along Front street or Park avenue I am often spattered by mud from the wheels of those holding their heads high, who, if they paid their debts to my husband and others, would enable us to keep our own carriages, instead of being compelled to walk when we would rule."

—It is rumored that the Pennsylvania Railroad is not to be outdone by the Baltimore and Ohio, and that if the latter succeeds in building its bridge across the Arthur Kill the Pennsylvania will apply for permission and will build another bridge near the same point, connect with it by a main line and loop to utilize the road on Staten Island. Among the latest reports as to the route the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will take to enter New York city, is one that the road will make an alliance with the Erie by build. ing a line from Bound Brook to Newark, connecting with the Erie there, and so using through Plainfield, and then straight across the country to North Newark. If the road is built it will pass through the best Jersey Central territory, reaching all its important stations between Bound Brook and New York, except Elizabeth. It is said that the six miles of railroad between Plainfield and Elizabeth, a charter for which was taken out quietly some time ago, will be part of the new line.—Flemington Democrat.

A Fish Boil.

"We feel that we are very fortunate," said Mr. C. B. Dwinell of East Calais, Vt., "in securing so nice a boil, and through the benevolence of an entire stranger to most of us." The "stranger" referred to is the popular Frederick Knowland of this city. Last summer, while Mr. Knowland was visiting the New England villages referred to, and during his stay fishing in several small lakes near by, he cast his weather-eye about him to see in what manner he could best show his appreciation for the many kindnesses shown him by the inhabitants. At last he discovered that the bell used at the school house to announce the school time was an old iron one, which could be heard only a short distance. Now, instead of that old iron relic, there hangs in the belfry of the school house a beautiful bronze bell, which can be heard three and four miles around, and no doubt there will be fewer delinquents this summer than last. "I didn't bear the bell ring" will no longer be the excuse of the small boy, who would rather spend his time fishing. The citizens of East Calais called a meeting and voted their thanks in due form to the kind donor, and through their clerk send us the copy of the following letter to him:

EAST CALAIS, VT., June 1, 1886.

Mr. F. Knowland.

MY DEAR SIR:—In token of the interest you have manifested toward the people of this little village by presenting the nice toned bell for their school house, I am requested by the citizens to tender to you our sincere thanks. And will say that the children who are called to-gether by it will often think kindly of the stranger who bestowed it. May you live long to enjoy the pleasure of life and receive the reward of Him who said "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Truly yours,

C. B. DWINELL, District Clerk.

If Mr. Knowland revisits East Calais this season, residents thereof say that a royal fish boil awaits him. The streams by the lake may show him a trick or two about fishing not before even to him known.

Base Ball.

Saturday afternoon the Stars of North Plainfield and the Laurels of Westfield crossed bats in a game of ball in that village. A large crowd of spectators were on the grounds and watched the seven innings with interest and the players were frequently applauded. The club from this city carried off the honors by a score of 19 to 7.

A game of ball between the Stars (colored) of this city and a colored nine from Netherwood was started on the Somerset street grounds Saturday afternoon, but before the game was finished the Stars, it is said, stopped on account of the rain and the umpire decided it a draw game. The club proposed to settle it on Thursday afternoon next. At the close the score stood 11 to 13 in favor of the Netherwood club. Wm. Titus was the umpire, Messrs. Mahew and Mullen scorers and Israel Jones, bugler.

Before Justice Nash.

The case of Peter B. Smith vs. Edward C. Mulford in an action for an alleged debt of $6.54 for sundry vegetables, which was adjourned over from the 19th instant, came up for trial before Justice Nash on Saturday afternoon. The plaintiff testified to having sold the defendant garden truck and fruit amounting to $6.54 for which amount he brought suit to recover. Several witnesses testified for the plaintiff, among whom was the wife of the defendant. The defendant himself and his son, Armstrong, were the witnesses put on the stand for the defense. At the conclusion of the trial the Justice rendered judgment in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount together with $5.80 costs. Mr. Mulford will probably appeal the case.

Lost a Finger.

Thomas Scott, a man employed in the upholstering department of Frank C. Green's establishment on Park avenue, this morning met with an accident which resulted in the loss of the forefinger on his left hand. He was at work picking a mattress with a machine which Mr. Green had purchased therefor, when his hand was caught in the gearing and the finger nearly severed from the hand. The injured man was taken to the office of Dr. Tomlinson on West Second street where the doctor amputated the finger in order to save the hand.

Before the City Judge.

Martin Gaughan, keeper of a well-known house on East Third street, was arraigned before the City Judge this morning to answer to a charge preferred by Chief Dodd of selling cider on Sunday. He was paroled on his own recognizance to appear for trial in the City Court room to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

Lawrence Paoli was arraigned before Judge Ulrich this morning on a charge of selling on Sunday. He was paroled to appear for trial in the City Court room on Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

Reform Club Meeting.

Reform Hall was filled with an audience comprising a large delegation on Sunday evening at the regular Sunday evening meeting of the Reform Club. The exercises were unusually interesting and the addresses were enthusiastic in every detail. Dean Rodman made the first address, followed by Francis C. Hard, vice-president of the Reform Club, and Mr. A. S. Patterson, who each made a fervent appeal in the cause of temperance. Freebolder Vanderbeek led the singing and President French made the usual closing address.

Another Horse Disappears.

Some time during last night a medium-sized bay horse disappeared from the stable of Mr. T. Nels on West Fourth street. Mr. Nels, who resides on the premises, says that he left the stable door open to allow the fresh air to circulate in the barn, and when he went there early this morning, the horse and halter were missing. Whether or not the animal was stolen he is not prepared to say.

—A few changes in the Philadelphia and Reading time table went into effect to-day. The 8.05 a. m. train from this city to New York will hereafter make connection at Elizabethport for the transfer of long Branch passengers. The Sunday train heretofore leaving this city at 2.21 p. m. for New York and also the train arriving here at 11.45 have been discontinued.

A Warning to North Plainfield Beer Boozlers.

Ludwig Satterleis, of the firm of C. Stahl and Co., beer bottlers of North Plainfield, presented himself before the city court this morning to answer a charge preferred against him by Chief Dodd for selling bottled beer on the street in this city without being licensed therefor. Mr. Satterleis, who is a German and does not understand the English language, stated that he thought he had a right to sell; that he had a Government license; and supposed that would give him the privilege of selling beer in quantities not less than a quart; that he had seen others do it, and did not suppose he was violating the law. Judge Ulrich in passing judgment stated that he believed accused sold innocently, but nevertheless he had violated an ordinance, and while the court regretted that the ignorant should be punished, he deemed it as a matter of duty that some punishment should be meted out, as an example to others. It would not be just to permit others to dispose of and sell beer in this city to the detriment of those who had to pay a heavy tax for the privilege; it was a violation of the law; it was an infringement upon other's rights that should not go unpunished. It being the first case of that sort brought to notice, the court was inclined to be lenient and imposed a fine of ten dollars.

The police intend to stop all parties from selling bottled beer in this city without being licensed therefor, and the above should prove a warning to such who are engaged in the business.

Logical.

A newspaper in Illinois recently brought suit against forty-three men who would not pay their subscription bills, and in the judgment in each case for the full amount of the claims. Of these twenty-eight made affidavit that they owned no property but that the law allowed them, thus prevenating attachment. Then under a decision of the Supreme Court they were arrested for petit larceny and bound over in the sum of $300 each. All but six gave bond, while the six went to jail.—Flemington Democrat.

The foregoing seems to be good law, and if enforced would save our local merchants and mechanics from being defrauded. A person who obtains merchandise or labor, knowing that he has no property to pay for it, and on his supposed financial standing, thereby conniving at deception, is a swindler and a thief, and as such should be punished as any other criminal. Under the operation of such a law the conspicuous few who have so severely fleeced our local merchants during the past few years by false pretenses would pay their victims their honest due. There are well-meaning people who are unfortunate, and no jury would crowd such persons knowingly. Such are not the class who put on all manner of superstitious airs, to conceal they are dead beats and the full ness thereof, yet try to cheat whoever will trust them.

PERSONAL.

Adeline Brock of Dunellen was last week granted a patent at Washington for flexible metallic fence.

Mr. B. W. Hand, a former superintendent of the Weston Sunday School, is now a resident of Plainfield.

Mr. O. E. Runyon of Newark a son of Mr. J. C. Runyon of the Central Times, spent Sunday with his parents on Arlington avenue.

The funeral of the late Joseph N. Randolph of this city, who died in the Morris Plains Asylum on Thursday, took place in Railway on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blackford of Brooklyn, N. Y., spent yesterday in this city, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Sharkey of Third and New streets.

George Oakley, a brother of the Messrs. Oakley, who are employed by Frank C. Green of this place, was buried from his late residence in Elizabeth on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Jacob Wahl and family, together with her daughter, Mrs. John H. Carey, and children leave to-day to spend the summer at their summer residence west of Bound Brook on the second mountain.

Rev. Mr. Raymond continued his discourses on the labor question in Trinity Reformed church last evening. The meeting, however, was abruptly brought to a close by the pastor being suddenly taken ill.

Katie A. Mc nell, the nineteen-year-old daughter of Mr. C. H. Monnell, died at her home in Evona at about four o'clock yesterday afternoon. Deceased had been in delicate health for a long time from a complication of diseases, which subsequently developed into typho-malarial fever and resulted in her death. The father of the deceased has for the past 24 years been employed by the Marvin Safe Company of New York, and has for many years resided with his family at Evona.

Two new editions of The Philanthropist series have just been published and are ready for distribution. No. 5, "The Sacredness of Motherhood," by Mrs. Elizabeth Powell Bond, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Powell of this city; and No. 6, "The White Cross," by Rev. Charles H. Hall, D. D., Assistant Bishop of New York. Both are of great interest and value for general circulation. Price post paid, ten cents a dozen, fifty cents a hundred. Address The Philanthropist, P. O. box 2256, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Nehemiah Randolph of Union street, were married June 28, 1836. They were born in this vicinity and have resided here nearly all their lives. They have had no children, but are blessed with many good friends, who know of their many excellent qualities of head and heart, their charitable and efforts to relieve sufferers, and particularly their kindness to children, for whom they have a great fondness. This afternoon the beloved old couple are celebrating their golden wedding, with hosts of sincere old friends as their guests and are receiving congratulations and testimonies of good will. We congratulate the old couple upon their fifty years of wedded life and trust that they may continue to journey happily together for many years to come and not until they can see the grass picking the grass off their graves.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

A Plainfield Tourist on the Wing.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 8, 1886.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—We left the Yellowstone Park tired and weary for Livingston, and took the cars down the Yellowstone valley and stopped off for a days' rest. This valley is beautiful, and the cattle herds were many. The land was dry, especially where not irrigated, yet the stock looked fine. The valley is wide, the mountains settled back a little and bluer, and the snow-capped mountains have disappeared. Billings is the great commercial cattle market of the valley, and men and cowboys come here for hundreds of miles around, some from as far north as the British possessions. It was interesting to learn from these men and boys their ways of life and business of the cattle ranches. But we are on the wing toward the rising sun now, although everything is yet interesting. We next come to Moiora, the great beef-packing establishment of the Northwest. Too tame in cattle trade here is by thousands instead of hundreds, and the sights of cattle are wonderful. On we go to Bismarck, a nice town out upon the grand prairies, the great wheat fields of the world, and over Dakota. More beautiful prairies was looked upon than these. Stretch your eyes north and south to the length of your vision and nothing is to be seen but wheat fields. But the night closes upon us and we retire in the Northern Pacific sleeper, the weather being just right for a blissful sleep for the weary traveler. When morning dawns upon us we find ourselves in the woodlands, amid the beautiful lakes in Minnesota. Now appear cornfields, the first we saw since leaving Kansas and Nebraska. Next Colorado, California, (Northern) Oregon and the fortunate owners of here the nights are cool and the seasons too short for corn to grow and mature.

We push on and strike the Mississippi river, and now we see sawdogs by thousands floating down to the saw mills along the river. Soon we arrive at Minneapolis, the great milling and wheat flouring city of the world. Here we feel almost at home, for we are treading on ground that we trod upon twenty-five years ago, and only 1300 miles or so to reach our journey's end. There in this town there were some 2,000 inhabitants; now there are 140,000, and the town is the most flourishing in the Northwest. Its mammoth buildings, fine residences, beautiful lawns and shade trees are magnificent. It possesses one of the finest city parks in America, and is not surpassed by any on the continent of Europe. The falls of the river are beautiful and its waters supply all the mills of the town save in the dryest times of the season. The place has twenty-three flouring mills, with a capacity of turning up 53,700 barrels per day; the largest one being able to put up 7,000 per day. The lumber mills are about upon the same large scale, and all the work is done by machinery. The products of both flour and lumber are shipped all over the globe. The buildings are of a superior kind, many of the stories high and of solid masonry with elevators from top to bottom. Its exposition building, now in progress of construction, is to be one of the finest structures extant. But enough of glorification of this enterprising city. St. Paul is but miles below on the river, and each city line borders on the other and the cities are fast closing in together. St. Paul is the older city of the two, but is outnumbered by her sister to the extent of several thousand in population. St. Paul claims the largest capital and the largest wholesale and banking business, but Minneapolis has the advantage in water power and must ever outstrip her in manufacturing. These cities are largely inhabited by Eastern people and foreign capital is invested in a great extent before opening country is fertile and pleasing to the eye. Just the place for thousands of our young men who loiter around our Eastern cities. Here they can find a good home and become useful in the world. TOURIST.

SCOTCH PALMS.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Wm. D. Walker, wife of Alonzo Walker, who died at her home in this place on Wednesday evening from hemorrhage, took place from the Presbyterian church on Saturday morning, in the presence of a large number of friends and acquaintances of the deceased. Rev. Mr. Raymond officiated and paid a fitting tribute to the memory of the beloved dead, and an impromptu choir, composed of the lady members of Arrow Archman's family, in whose employ Mr. Walker has been for many years, and other ladies sang "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." Interment was made in the Baptist cemetery.

—A free fight took place in an Alley on East Second street, about nine o'clock on Saturday evening.

—The New York base ball club passed through this city on the 7.30 p. m. train last evening en route for New York.

—A large Newfoundland dog, the property of John Drake of Seventh street and Park avenue, has been so crippled of its coat of hair as to resemble a huge lion.

—Allen, the stationer, has floating his flag to the breeze and is now able to sell fresh and new all-colored fireworks at less than New York prices, asking all to call and see him.

—At the morning service in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church yesterday, 22 persons were admitted to the church upon confession of their faith and nine were admitted by letter.

—The Martinville Reform Club will hold a mass meeting on Wednesday evening, June 30, to ratify the nomination of Clinton E. Fisk for governor. Frank C. Smith of New York will address the meeting.

—The recent rumors at Bound Brook, place the number of school children between the ages of five and eighteen years at 305. Of this number 144 are girls and 161 are boys. Last year the total number of school children was 339.

The Millionaire and the Cad.

The Hon. John Bigelow, in the Sutherland affair, should have followed the example of a New York millionaire, in a similar exigency. The gentleman in question was at the Newport cottages the past summer, and had invited some of the most charming people available to meet the son of an English marquis, who was to be known by a letter of introduction, at dinner. A few minutes before the hour at which the guests were to sit down, his lordship appeared, evidently in the conventional dress which gentlemen of every nation in christendom wear upon such an occasion, but in an out of the way nursing-gal, wearing at least black-and-white check, and a sky-blue necktie.

He was met by his host at the door. The gentleman was flushed, but he was not equal to the occasion. "My lord," said he, "you are presumably a gentleman, and know the usages of the order. In light the dress you have in the habit of wearing at dinners in England? If it is, then your education has been singularly neglected. If it is not, then you have a right to consider the insult you me in return for what I intended as a courtesy. Now, which of these things am I to think?" The young scion began to stammer out something about "ignorance," this would-have-been host, sharply: "If you did not know what was proper you are not what you pretended to be—a gentleman. If you did know, then you are a wretched cad, who deliberately intended to insult those who had opened to you courtesies. Leave my house at once." The nobleman left. Next day he got a friend to try and explain that he didn't know people were in evening dress, and really didn't mean to be bad intended no harm, etc. "I do do not wish to have any further acquaintance with him. That is all I have to say," was the curt answer, and ended the international episode amiel.—The Argonaut.

Gen. Phil Sheridan Doesn't Play.

"I discovered re ently what is to me a very surprising thing about Gen. Sheridan," said ex Congressman Amos Townsend of Cleveland, who has been in Washington for some days. "That is, he doesn't play poker. Now poker is played by every one in the army, and he has been with it all the better poker player he is as a rule. Gen. Grant was a great poker player, and he loved to play the game. I was considerably surprised when I learned that Phil Sheridan didn't play, and I asked him about it. He said he didn't care for the game. When he was in that part of the country he came to his headquarters a great deal and indulge in a quiet game. He would entertain them, but would never join them at the card table. We have a fishing club with headquarters on a little group of islands off Sandusky, of which Gen. Sheridan was a member. We go there every year to fish and have a good time generally, but we can never get Sheridan to take a hand at poker.—Washington Letter.

STUDENTS HOLD HIGH CARNIVAL WITH SERIOUS RESULTS.

A RAVING MANIAC MILLIONAIRE.

Champagne and Greek Idioms Don't Harmonize Well Together—A Supper on a Ship Turns the Heads of Cambridge Men Who Have a "Parrot and Monkey" Time.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 28.—A party of eight students among whom were George Gail Whiteiaw, of St. Louis, '87, Gaston Newton Bruce, of San Francisco, '86; Miss Maxwell Overton, of Nashville, Tenn., '86; J. E. Aitkson of Xenia, O., '87, and Elden Rabee, of Washington, D. C., '87, started from the rooms of the former about a week ago and attended in a body a champagne supper on board the United States receiving ship Wabash, lying off the Charlestown navy yard. The party left with vigorant spirits into the festivities of the occasion. They were lionized, as Harvard men always are, and toasted by all the company until well toward the small hours.

At last the intensity of the excitement proved too much for three of the eight, who fell asleep on the floor, and returned to their rooms at the college.

The five above-named students remained and at once proceeded with commendable energy to consummate the company for the loss of their three companions by an increase of their own boisterousness. Ashe, who served as a sort of Bacchic leader, and who for some time had had the largest and good deal of skill and enjoyed a widespread college reputation as an exponent of the manly art, assumed at this stage of the proceedings a somewhat pugilistic tendency, much to the alarm of the ladies present. So offensive did his conduct become that some of the officers of the ship ventured to remonstrate with him.

At 10 o'clock the quintet took their departure in the happiest condition of mind. They succeeded in hailing a Charlestown horse car and all the way over to Boston amused themselves by smashing their hats and singing ribald songs, much to the delectation of the car conductor.

As the party approached the entrance of the Miller house, No. 147 Court street, Ashe was heard to say to his companions:

"Now, boys, let's go to bed. Let's go into the Miller and clean the place out." The proposition met with instant approval from all the rest, and they left the car entrance one of them, suggested:

"Let's not go in, boys, we'll better no." But the objection was overruled and, with the same last remark of the kind to that they "would knock the whole gang out at one slap," they entered. Their approach was noticed by the proprietor of the place, Gerrard A. Miller, who was standing by the doorway at the time, and, filled with knowledge born of a year's experience as manager of the house, he considered it necessary, in an emergency, to consult the best to follow the boys in. He found them already making things pretty much their own, and, being a man of nerve, he chose at the expense of parties desiring to use the shooting gallery which is run in connection with the establishment.

The three thin barrels up, down and sideways in the greatest glee, made himself, with the rest of his crowd, unceremoniously familiar and boisterously. Mr. Avery exercised his choice quickly.

Things now reached a crisis. As he squared off according to the most approved principles of the fistic art, Ashe, as an athlete, grasped his arms and held them. Suddenly, however, without warning, a stunning blow from a loaded cane fell upon the head of Mr. Avery. He sank insensible and he sank bleeding and senseless to the floor.

Then ensued a lively scene. About fifteen loafers were in the saloon. McAvoy's fall was the signal for their combination against the intruders and a concerted attack was made upon the boys, who fought with whatever was handy. Drunk as they were, the Harvard boys were "game" and they answered the cry of "Down with the college youngsters," with a defiance that the occasion was used. The blows of weapons fell incessantly. Chairs and tab es were overturned and the orchestrion instruments were hopelessly ruined. Blood flowed freely on both sides. McAvoy recovered from the blow given him, staggered to his feet, and calling to his brother, who aided at the moment:

"I'm all right. We'll lick the whelps yet." He sprang into the thick-st of the mêlée. For a time by for the students an immediate rush to the police station, in Joy street, from which place a squad of officers were sent. They soon brought the maddened crowd to their senses. As one of the officers put it, "I had all I could do."

"If the scrimmage had lasted three minutes longer some of us would never have been home again." McAvoy ordered the five arrested, but when the officers went to lock for them two were missing. The remaining three were taken to the station, but McAvoy refused to make a charge against them for fear of injuring his business. They were accordingly released and all went together to Dr. Cilley's office, where their injuries were dressed. Ashe's wound of th m were pretty serious, that of McAvoy necessitating seventeen stitches in the scalp.

The anger of the Harvard men was by no means allayed and was rather increased by accession to their ranks. Numerous threats were made of going back to "wipe out" the saloon, but the police were on the alert and all night succeeded in keeping order.

"One of the young fellows," said Dr. Cilley, "deliberately offered me $100 for a parrot that I have at McAvoy's. He—a gentleman. If you did know, then you are a wretched cad, who deliberately intended to insult those who had opened to you courtesies to you. Leave my house at once." The nobleman left. Next day he got a friend to try and explain that he didn't know people were in evening dress, and really didn't mean to be bad intended no harm, etc. "I do do not wish to have any further acquaintance with him. That is all I have to say," was the curt answer, and ended the international episode amiel.—The Argonaut.

HIS LAST DIVE.

A Sunday Swimmer Loops to His Death.

NEW YORK, June 28.—When the steamboat Grand Republic left her last stopping place at the foot of West Twenty-second street yesterday morning she carried 2,000 excursionists on board bound for Yonkers, West Point and Newburg and an incidental view of the great American Rains. Since the complaints against the shiftless on Sunday Brike grounds excursions extra precautions have been taken to prevent their boarding the excursion steamboats.

As a result, in spite of the large crowd on the Grand Republic no disturbance marred the day's pleasure, and the solitary policeman on the boat had nothing to do but to relieve the ladies to fond parents and keep off the flies.

Most of the young men who left the steamer at West Point went half a mile above the landing, and when out of sight stripped among the rocks for a swim. Among them were four young men—Wm. Hughes, H. C. Sanderson and Charley and Gus Anderson. The three last entered the water and swam around, calling to their friend, William Hughes, to hurry in. He descended to the edge of the water, and called to them to watch for him, jumped in.

There were over fifteen young men within a few feet of him at the time, several expert swimmers, they say, and all noticed that he did not rise. Sanderson, becoming alarmed, called for help and several bathers swam to the spot where the missing man had gone down. They dived, searched the water for twenty or thirty feet around, but young Hughes could not be found. Finding no trace of the body, sadly his three companions dressed, put on their clothes and left the spot. The tide ran very strong at the point where Hughes dove, which may have carried the body down the river. Hughes, it was learned, had only two living relatives, a wealthy aunt, with whom he lived, and his father, who is at present in Ireland. He was 19 years old and was well liked by his fellow-clerks.

MR. SAWYER AND PENSIONS.

Expert Assistants Employed in Looking Into Applications.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Of all the pension bills reported to the senate during the present session Mr. Sawyer has reported more than one-half. Senator Mitchell of Pennsylvania, chairman of the committee on pensions, has been absent through ill-health, and the work has fallen upon Sawyer, who has been the hands of Senator Sawyer. While Mr. Sawyer has reported favorably on so many hundreds of pension bills, he has not reported one bill adversely. In one, Mr. Sawyer does the work of the whole committee, generally speaking. The committee, as a whole, never undertakes the investigation of a pension bill.

The bills are referred to individual members of the committee for investigation and the committee has fallen into the hands of the investigating member. Mr. Sawyer, in his boundless sympathy with the old soldiers of the republic and their heirs, has been eager to undertake the investigation of all the pension claims that came his way, and his fellow members of the committee have been perfectly willing that he should be kept busy. Come quently the senator has employed a staff of assistants to help him with the work. The senate refers the bills to the committee on pensions. The committee refers to Mr. Sawyer and Mr. Sawyer distributes them among his assistants whom he generously pays out of his own pocket to investigate and report upon. One of these assistants Mr. Sawyer is alleged to be especially proud of. His qualifications for making the investigations are, the senator thinks, unique, without equal. This highly qualified assistant was at one time a medical gentleman of some promise in the west and became interested in pensions in the case of Guiteau. On the adjudication of the Guiteau expert the pension bills referred to Mr. Sawyer by the committee are favorably reported on the same as are rushed through without debate at the rate of from three to five per minute.

A Nashua Mystery.

NASHUA, N. H., June 28.—Robert C. Sanders mysteriously disappeared from his store on Factory street Monday afternoon last week. He was found lying on the bank on the piazza of his residence in a famished condition late Saturday evening, and could give no account of his wanderings during the five days. He apparently imagined that he had had nothing to eat but wild berries and that he had slept out of doors in the woods. His mind died suddenly in Vermont, Friday, after reading an account of her son's disappearance.

To Attend Judge Davis' Funeral.

CHICAGO, Judge 27.—A meeting of the Chicago Bar Association will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the government building to select a committee to represent the Chicago bar at the funeral of Judge Davis. The meeting is called for this purpose alone, and there will be no memorial addresses or resolutions. Ex-Judge Drummond will be one of the pall-bearers at the funeral.

Pumping Out the Miranda.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 28.—Nearly a hundred men with a number of steam pumps have been constantly at work on the English steamer Miranda, which went ashore at Point Judith early in the week, and by partially closing up leaks succeeded in gaining upon the water. The force will be kept at work in the hope of floating the steamer.

Bad Work of Indians.

GUAYMAS, MEX., June 28.—Word has just been received here that Yaqui Indians attacked a mule train loaded with freight, near Ostimuri, on the 24th inst., killed seven and captured thirty mules. A later report states that a lieutenant colonel (name not given) and seven soldiers were killed by Yaquis near Potum.

Bomb Passes in His Checks.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Bombi, the new $5,000 elephant that arrived last week for the Central Park, died late Saturday night after a brief illness. The veterinary surgeons who were called in administered whisky in liberal doses, but failed to save the monster. The skin and skeleton will adorn the museum.

Killed by a Newspaper Train.

MILTON, Pa., June 28.—Robert Hilands and wife, of Call.squogus, aged 60 and 59 years respectively, were instantly killed by the newspaper train at the Mahoning river railroad crossing yesterday morning while on their way to church. Their horse was badly injured and their carriage was broken into splinters.

Talmage Goes Fishing.

ARKEXANDRIA BAY, June 28.—The Brooklyn Tabernacle pilgrims quartered here at the Thousand Islands. Ornament and other hotels, enjoying the splendid scenery and weather. Dr. Talmage preached from the steps of the hotel at 10 o'clock yesterday to 7,000 people. He went on a fishing trip today.

A GRAND MONUMENT.

Design Made by a Bavarian Artist to be Submitted.

NEW YORK, June 28.—In an unpretending studio at Mott Haven, Morrisania, is completed a model of a monument to Gen. Grant. The sculptor is Joseph Echteler, a Bavarian artist, well known in art circles and a member of the Munich academy. A number of his admirers suggested that he should prepare a design for a monument to Gen. Grant, and the model in question is the result.

It will be submitted to the committee at an early date.

The base of the design is a mau-oleum, to be seventy-two feet square. Upon this rests the pedestal, which is also square, in two sections. Upon each face of the two sections of the pedestal is a group of figures illustrating scenes, real or imaginary, in Grant's life. The first typifies the north and south reunited. They are represented clasping hands, while above them soars an American eagle, the latter in the attitude forming a drapery for the background.

The foreground is a sewn with broken implements of war. The group on the right shows Grant at the battle of Shiloh. At the back is an ideal group, showing Grant as having stricken the shackles from the slave. A child sits in the foreground playing with the fetters, and on the left the liberated parents are kneeling at the feet of their benefactor, who disclaims their thanks. The third group shows Chief Justice Chase administering the oath of office. The fourth illustrates the surrender of Lee at Appomatox. The remaining figures represent statesmanship and justice, peace and plenty, agriculture and commerce, industry and invention.

The whole is surmounted by an equestrian statue of Grant at a moment when he has passed suddenly to direct the attention of his troops to the advance of the enemy. It is lifelike and effective. The portrait of Grant is excellent, all that is lacking is the cigar. The horse was modelled from life. The original was a present from the Emperor Nicholas to the King of Wurtemberg. The monument is intended to be 60 feet high, and the height of the entire monument sixty-six feet.

A SUNDAY ARMISTICE.

Situation of the Lake Shore Switchmen's Strike.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Lake Shore company observed the Sabbath as far, at least, as manual labor was concerned, and the strikers pursued the same course. The people, however, did not cease to watch the cause of the armistice, and, as a result, the yards for the greater part of the day were teamed by hundreds of people. They stood about in groups and talked about the outrages of the company and disadvantages of the strikers. The usual force of police officers was on the ground. The only act committed by way of retaliation by the strikers was a box car across the Lake Shore tracks in the Rock Island yards at Forty-ninth street. The Midway and Rock Island Pacific also purchased the Lake Shore train Saturday and was captured from the strikers by the Hyde police, was left at South Chicago on Saturday night in charge of a guard carrying it drew the water from the tanks without first putting out the fire, consequently burning the flues and crown sheet of the engine, which will necessitate its being sent to the shops for repairs. The strikers yesterday secured a Belt Line engine, and going to South Chicago, hitched on to the engine and brought it to the Mil waukee shops. There are now thirty cars of merchandise in the Root street yards, thirty at Twelfth street and about 300 at Englewood. The company will endeavor to move these cars to-day. The strikers intimate that they will not. It has been claimed by officials that the switchmen in Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and Toledo were not in sympathy with the strikers. This claim is proved to be untrue from the fact that the strikers have received dispatches from the switchmen in all these points in which they expressed a decided willingness to assist the Chicagoans by going out on a strike.

SIX PEOPLE DROWNED.

Shocking Accident to a Sunday Pleasure Party.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 27.—E. G. Farmer, his wife, Mary E., and his daughter, Mamie, aged 6, Mr. C. W. Gorsch, wife and three children, all members of the manufacturers of the firm of Farmer, Gorsch & Co., engravers and printers, also William G. Brayton, their traveling salesman, and his wife, went for a sail down the bay at 2 p. m. in the sailboat Wanderer. They reached Bristol safely and after a short stop started towards Prudence island. The wind was blowing strong and Mr. Brayton, who was sailing the boat, was unable to manage it. About 4 p. m., when entering Potter's cove, the boat capsized and six of the party were drowned. The four children were in the cabin and were not again seen alive.

The names of the persons drowned by the capsizing of the sailboat Wanderer were Mrs. E. G. Farmer and daughter Mamie, William Brayton and two children of C. W. Gorsch, of New York.

Pursued by Angry Polanders.

CLEVELAND, June 28.—A terrible fight occurred yesterday afternoon at Fairport, thirty miles west of here, on the Lake Shore. An excursion party of about 300 men, women and children visited the place. A dozen or more men, who had been drinking on the boat, went to the Catholic church and at Fairport and soon started a quarrel, which ended by all the windows of the saloon being broken by the excursionists. Some of them then went to the yellow frame house of a large tenement house occupied by Polanders. Fifteen or twenty of the Polanders armed themselves with clubs and moved on the excursionists. Several Polanders were cut and bruised, and one Polander was struck in the temple by a stone. He fell unconscious and was carried away by his companions. The Polanders chased the men, women and children 300 yards to the boat over railroad tracks and ore piles, but just as the pursuing party reached the dock the boat moved away preventing further bloodshed.

The Priscilla on Hand.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., June 28.—The Priscilla has arrived at this port. As she entered the harbor the flags of some of the yachts dipped and the band of Lincoln boomed a welcome. Hundreds of people swarmed around her in dories. The old tars agree that the beauty and expect to see her give the Yankee boat a close race next Tuesday. The Priscilla had a very pleasant trip through the sound. From Saturday noon until her arrival the wind was fresh from the northwest. She will have her bottom scraped.

President Porter's Farewell.

NEW HAVEN, June 28.—President Porter, of Yale College, preached his farewell Baccalaureate sermon yesterday. Battel chapel was crowded with students and their friends, who came to hear Dr. Porter preach to the Yale boys for the last time. His sermon urged the necessity for teaching Christianity in colleges, and above all in Yale College, which has always been a Christian institution.

MEXICAN METHODS.

AN AMERICAN CITIZEN IN PRISON WITHOUT JUST CAUSE.

The United States Consul Ignored in the Matter—An Offense Committed in Texas Punished in Mexico—The Government Looked to For Redress.

PASO DEL NORTE, MEX., June 28.—The local authorities of this city have proceeded to deal in a very summary manner with an American citizen, which has produced much bad blood, and from the present outlook will result in diplomatic correspondence between the two governments. The origin of the trouble is a newspaper controversy of a virulent character. A. K. Cutting, an American, publishes a paper in this city which is printed in Spanish and English. In one of his issues Cutting took occasion to excoriate Amalia Medina, a Mexican of a notoriously bad character, for which Medina had Cutting arrested and the local court, not content with compelling Cutting to publish a retraction, fined him $500. The fine was rudely treated. Cutting, finally securing release, crossed over to El Paso and drove his own signature, in last Sunday's edition of the El Paso Herald, published a letter attack upon Medina, supplementing it with the statement that he was willing to give Medina satisfaction if he so desired or desires. Medina, who is influential, had Cutting arrested when he recrossed the river and thrown into a dungeon. This occurred over a week ago, and Cutting seeing no hope of speedy release asserted his nationality and claimed the protection of the American consul. Brigham immediately insisted upon his release and was promised that Cutting would be released and permitted to remain at the house of a friend until the matter could be adjudicated. On this the authorities violated their pledge and allowed Cutting to remain in his dark cell. Consul Brigham ascertained this fact and at once made a peremptory demand upon the authorities for the release of Cutting, declaring that unless his demand was complied with he would lay the case before the state department at Washington. The case was discussed in the Alcalde's court, when it was clearly developed that Cutting was imprisoned for the second offense to gratify personal malevolence. This offense, if such it can be called, was committed on the American side and is attempted to be punished in Mexico. This offense, if such it can be called, was committed on the American side and is attempted to be punished in Mexico. The case is aggravated by the fact that other Americans have been subjected to similar indignities illegally and to gratify the hatred of Mexican enemies.

A Big Land Suit.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 28.—In the United States court, now in session at Parkersburg, the suit of Jeremiah N. Pelton, of New York, against Col. Jesse B. Irwin, to enforce an alleged lien on a section of the Robert Morris land of 480,000 acres in West Virginia, was heard before Chief Justice Waite and Associate Judges Bond and Jackson, the decision of the court below, Pelton vs. Irwin, et al., Pendered by the chief justice dismissing Mr. Pelton's suit with costs and dissolving the injunction granted by Judge Jackson. The land in dispute forms a great portion of this section of the state.

A Madman's Work.

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—A few minutes after noon yesterday Joseph Villio, an Austrian, aged 60, during a fit of insanity cut his wife's throat until the head fell and then threw the weapon across his own throat. Mrs. Villio died a few minutes after the attack, but Villio was taken to the hospital and is reported out of danger. Villio has been an inmate of an insane asylum, but was released two weeks ago.

Killed by a Train.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., June 28.—Alexander Miller, an old farmer, while driving to the city with his wife on a wagon load of corn, was struck by the fast mail of the Lake Shore and Chicago north bound passenger train Saturday morning. Both were instantly killed. The bodies were thrown high in the air, and the body of Mrs. Miller was carried a third of a mile. The train was running fifty miles an hour.

Coney Island Music.

NEW YORK, June 28.—John Ross and Thomas F. Green, of New York, engaged in a fight at Coney Island on the pavilion walk opposite Feltman's pavilion. Green drew a knife and stabbed Ross in the neck. The wound is dangerous. Two open-ed knives found near where the affray took place.

KILLED WITH A CLOTHES POLE.

Wedding Festivities Broken Up with a Murder.

NEW YORK, June 28.—John Arrol, of Paterson, was struck on the head with a clothes pole Saturday night and died at the Ladies' hospital yesterday morning. His assailant is Walter Hodgson, of this city.

Saturday evening Miss Arrol attended the marriage of a daughter of William Heron. It is said that during the subsequent festivities the young lady, who had just become a wife, felt nervous and fearful that the devil was fearful that a catastrophe was impending. This fear was ridiculed and soon laughed down as foolishness.

Outside the house a crowd of boys and young men gathered, as usual, to cheer or hoot those going in and out. Their badinage or pranks were mostly of a good natured kind, but several of the elder lads manifested a disposition to be mischievous and annoying. About midnight the youngsters became so boisterous that Arrol went out to request them to desist. He became involved in a quarrel with Hodgson, who is but a girl been years old and lived in the adjoining house.

It is said that after some words Arrol struck him. Jumping on the top of a shed Hodgson, with a long rod or pole, struck and brought it down with fearful force on Arrol's head. Arrol fell unconscious. Some of the other guests were notified and Arrol was carried to the house, where he remained unconscious.

He then went home and retired to bed. Early yesterday morning he was found to be unconscious, and a physician who was summoned announced that Arrol was suffering from compression of the brain. He was taken to the Ladies hospital and died some hours later.

It was found that Hodgson had fled, but he was captured last night.

"Of course I hit him," he said, "but he hit me first."

Hodgson was graduated at the reform school and some time ago he attempted to decapitate his father with an axe. Arrol leaves a widow and two young children in Scotland.

HARVARD'S DEFEAT.

Oarsmen Say the Yankees Pulled Too Many Strokes.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 28.—Rob Cook and Robert Cornell attributed Harvard's defeat by Columbia to Faulkner's method, which they claim will rarely bring a crew to victory in a four mile race. Columbia has learned by experience that the winning strokes must be a big powerful sweep such as she rowed on Saturday. The full strength of a crew cannot be put into a stroke which is faster than thirty-five to the minute. For steady regular race horse work the thirty-four stroke cannot be beaten. Capt. Cook believes that Faulkner will not coach Harvard again. His method will do for professionals, but never for college races. Faulkner asserted that Harvard's defeat was not a surprise to him, and that Harvard did not expect to win yesterday. He seemed to be very sore. It is understood that the Harvard crew have laid out some hard work for the next three days and will begin and endeavor to save themselves from a whitewash in the three races to come this week by going over the entire course twice a day.

The Teaneck Burglar.

HACKENSACK, N. J., June 28.—There is one man in the county jail here who puzzles the deputy sheriff. He is Hargy, the Teaneck burglar, who is awaiting his trial. It is well known that the deputy is afraid of Hugg. The other prisoners all have allowed the freedom of the corridor in common with the other prisoners. By them he is looked up to as a man of superior intelligence. His high, white forehead is deeply marked with scars where young Coe struck him with the pistol, and in fully a dozen places his scalp is scarred and cut up terribly.

On several occasions he has mentioned his ability to get out of the jail. His trial will not take place until September.

Salvationists in the Water.

WEEHA, N. H., June 28.—Ten thousand people attended the National camp meeting of the Salvation army here yesterday. At 2 p. m. the wharf of steamer Lincoln gave way, precipitating seventy people into the lake. The water is three or four feet deep and no lives were lost, although for a time, the panic was terrible. Subsequently fifty-three male and female converts were immersed by Gen. Booth. Immense meetings were held all day and far into the night. The Salvationists claim over 100 converts for the week.

Capitol Notes.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Naval Officer Silas W. Burt is here. He says that he has nothing to say for publication. Treasury officials think his visit has reference to the administration of the civil service law in the New York custom house.

The treasury department has decided that certain ready made clothing imported into the United States by a citizen of this country, who went to Montreal expressly to purchase it, is not exempt from duty as wearing apparel in use of a person arriving in the United States.

The Championship Record.

Murdered by a Hackman.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Christopher Stein, Jr., a young painter, was assaulted by John Fleming, a coupe driver. The assault was apparently unprovoked. Young struck Stein with a blunt instrument of some kind and broke his skull, besides beating his face into a jelly. Fleming was arrested, and Stein was removed to the county hospital. He was unable to talk, although he groaned terribly. Death relieved him from his sufferings, and Fleming is held as a murderer.

Dedicated at Last.

CLINTON, Mass., June 28.—The new Catholic church of St. John, the Evangelist, which has been in process of erection for a number of years, was dedicated yesterday by Bishop O'Reilly, of Springfield, assisted by several clergymen. Rev. Charles McKeown, O. P., of New Haven, the eloquent American missionary, preached the dedicatory sermon.

Naval Training Ships at Anchor.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 28.—The naval training ships Portsmouth and Saratoga arrived in the harbor yesterday morning and anchored near the schoolship New Hampshire. They will remain about ten days.

The Weather.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Fair weather is indicated for New England and Atlantic coast states.

A LUMBER FLUME.

A LIGHTNING TRIP DOWN A NEVADA MOUNTAIN SIDE.

The Speed of the Fastest Engine Outdone—Getting Aboard the "Yacht"—A Plunge to Destruction—Through the Air as if Blown from a Catapult.

Whenever a Vanderbilt takes a railway ride it seems to be the stock in trade of some reporters to tell how fast he traveled. Jay Gould's ride for life and Sage's gamble used to feed with great interest how he would harness up the fleetest engine at his command and ever how many minutes and all that, but fast railway traveling is now given to the common multitude. There are several trains that go out of Chicago daily that ten years ago would on level places go a mile in sixty seconds. "There is nothing novel in the sensation," said an old newspaper man the other night at the Press club. "If you want to feel that you are going fast over the ground you want to ride on a Nevada lumber flume. I picked up a paper the other day that put it all in a nutshell. The residents along a lumber flume in the mountains above Truckee, Cal., have a novel way of getting their mail. It is started on a raft from the head of the flume at regular dates and the people below watch for it, take out what belongs to them and send the raft with its precious cargo on its way.

"That isn't quite true, but it illustrates the general idea. The lumber flumes in the Sierra Nevada are all the way from five to forty miles long. They are built on a regular engineer's grade. The bed of the flume is made of two inch planks in the form of a V, the sides of the V being from eighteen to twenty-six inches high. They are built on a grade of about sixteen feet drop to the thousand. They carry eight inches of water in the acute angle, and discharge it at the rate of 400 miner's inches a minute. Now, a miner's inch," Patton said, "Boys, we'll go home by the flume, and we'll get there a little quicker, I think."

So they did—by forty-five minutes.

He directed a man to bring out the yacht, as he called it. This was a V shaped canoe about fourteen feet long, very shallow, and made to fit the flume and just about fill it with the displacement of 600 pounds. The yacht had a brake—two rubber pads on either side, worked with a lever, and so applied against the sides of the V flume that on pressure it would lift the yacht gradually and allow the lightning current to pass under her. She also had two small rudder wheels, one on either bow, to keep her nose from grinding the side of the flume as she went by curves. "Now, boys," said Mr. Patton, button up your coats, tie down your hats, and hold on. Don't get scared. Trust your lives to me for the next half hour. I've sailed in this yacht before, and I know she's stanch." There were three seats. Patton took the front one, to handle the brake. Smalley took the next one, and I took the rear and worked the "tiller." That was rigged just like a ship's rudder, with a rubber wheel to ease off her steering when the side of the flume if she got to yawing. Patton told his men to put on two inches more of water, and then, with a wave of his hat, we "weighed anchor." Words can't tell how that thing jumped. Smalley got sea sick. I jammed my helm hard down, but Patton yelled through the air, 'Let her go. I've got her!' and with one hand on his brake, his hat crushed down on his head, and his teeth set, he looked the incarnation of courage.

"We plunged down the mountain with a speed that no steam could give. Trees flew like specters looking ahead down the narrow thread like a ribbon, and like a plunge to destruction. Several times the flume carried us over a high trestle. It seemed like leaping over a precipice. Smalley held his breath, but the little Yacht jumped it through the air apparently with a swish. Curves would show themselves ahead. The rudder wheel would squeak on either side, and the good ship would round that curve like a flash. Sometimes an inversion in the flume would occur, and then, as the craft would rise in it, the spray would rise fifty feet in the air. 'Keep on your hats!' shouted Patton, then, as we struck a straight five mile stretch, 'Now hold on by your teeth.' I will hardly know what the next sensation was, but I tried to peep out from under the rim of my hat, and, my soul, it was all a blur. Trees, landscapes, were all mingled in an indistinguishable mass. It was as if one was blown through the air from a catapult.

"Well, from the time we 'weighed anchor' up at Lake Tahoe until Patton put on his brakes just outside the lumber field at Carson City it seemed like a minute or two. We all looked at our watches. We had made just sixteen miles in eight minutes and forty seconds. I never in all my life had such an illustration of the force of water.

"I have always recognized it," said a third party, who had listened to the tale, "and never much believed it. Let us go and get something else."—Chicago Herald "Walks and Talks."

Various Medical Uses of Salt.

A poultice of salt and the white of an egg is a most powerful resolvent, and if applied in time will disperse a felon. Salt and cider vinegar will cure a obstinate case of chronic diarrhœa. A solution of salt will relieve pain in bruises. Equal parts of strong salt water and spirits of camphor applied to the temples is sure for toothache. Salt will check bleeding of the lungs when other remedies fail. Salt is a remedy in catarrh.—Edwin M. Livingston in Western Pawnan.

AN ORDINANCE.

To amend an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance relating to the erection and removal of buildings within certain limits," approved November 7th, 1881, and amendments by ordinance approved October 7th, 1884.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. That section 1 of the aforesaid ordinance be amended so as to read as follows: "Section 1. No building or addition to any existing building shall hereafter be erected, constructed or placed within that part of the City bounded by Green Brook, Grove street to Front street, thence Front street to Park avenue, Park avenue to Washington street by way of Broadway, to Third street, to Plainfield, Dunellen Front street and thence to the intersection of a line from the westerly terminus of Pearl street, with the City line, unless the outside walls thereof shall be covered with brick or stone or other incombustible material, and the roof thereof shall be covered with metal, slate or other incombustible material." The terms "outside walls" shall be construed to include uprights, sills, lintels, finishing, and all other material for the thickness of at least ten inches measured from the outer surface that go to make up said outside walls. Provided that the common councils may grant permission to erect one story frame buildings within the above named limits if said buildings be covered with tin, iron or other incombustible substance, said buildings not to cover more than one hundred square feet of ground, not to be more than twelve feet in height.

Section 2. No building or addition to any existing building shall be erected, constructed or placed within that part of the City bounded by Green Brook, Front street and the Dunellen avenue, Seventh street, Lafayette avenue, Washington avenue and Fifth Place unless the outside walls and roofs thereof shall be constructed as described in Section 1, the common Council may grant permission to erect any building or addition to any existing building proposed to be erected, and the plans and specifications submitted.

Section 3. No building that is not fire proof shall hereafter be erected by the City limits to any point within or without the City without the permission of the Common Council first obtained, and that no building be moved through the public streets of the City limits to any point within or without the City without permission of the Common Council first obtained. Every application for permission to erect any building or addition shall state the place from and the place to which it is proposed to remove said building, and the street or streets if any, through which it is proposed to turn in your.

Section 4. That Section 3 of the aforesaid ordinance be amended so as to read "Section 3. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance, as amended, shall on conviction thereof be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or sixty days imprisonment, or both."

Section 5. That all other ordinances or parts thereof inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Adopted June 7, 1886.
Approved June 14, 1886.

How to Sell a Farm.

A young man near Estellina was recently negotiating to sell his farm when his father, an old settler in the territory, came to him and said:

"William, tryin' to sell this land of yourn?"

"Yes, father."

"Eastern speculator?"

"I believe so."

"What are you telling him?"

"Good land, big crops, well watered and all that kind of thing."

"That's very good, William, as far as it goes. Why not have indications of silver on the furth a corner?"

"It might be a good thing."

"What's the matter of havin' seen specks of gold in the creek?"

"Perhaps it would be best."

"I s'pose it never o'curred to you that there was signs of oil all over this bul place?"

"Don't believe it did."

"Didn't think to tell him 'bout strikin' coal when you dug yer well?"

"No."

"Not a word concernin' the water power down on the stream or the splendid buildin' stun in that knoll?"

"No, father, I guess not."

"Probably forgot to mention you was sell in' to get money to support a poor old cripp led father?"

"I believe I did."

"William, I'm afraid all the teaching yer poor old father has give you hasn't mounted yer mind. Better jest travel under this house and lay low and when that eastern man shows up this afternoon you just keep yer ears open and find out bout the good points of your ole farm. Why sling a few mines 'round promiscuus like and you see if I don't down him for as extra thousand."—Estellina (D. T.) Bell.

The Young Idea.

"Say, master," said an Estelline small boy as he went into a drug store, "I want 1' get one of your infallible pencils—one of those 'ere we can't rub out none of the writin'."—Estelline (D. T.) Bell.

MISSED BY MOVING.

A Kingston family moved from their house a month ago, and recently the little girl of the family and her mother went to call on the new tenant. While there the child saw a small baby that had arrived a few days before and said: "Mamma, we moved too soon; we'd have got that baby if we had stayed here."—Kingston Freeman.

A FINANCIER.

"Please, sir, will you buy a ticket for the Cedar Street church strawberry festival? They're only twenty-five cents," said a little mite of a girl to a gentleman sitting on the piazza of a Second street boarding house yesterday afternoon, tendering him a square of yellow pasteboard as she spoke. "I'm sorry, but I'm going out of town and will not be able to attend," replied the good-natured man, desirous of avoiding a point blank refusal, "I have some ten cent tickets for those who can't attend," promptly responded the quick witted solicitor. She went out of the gate a dime richer.—The Buffalo Courier.

CAUSE IN THE FAMILY.

"Are you having a pleasant time?" asked a lady of a little mite of a fashionable children's party. "Delightful, thanks." "And will your papa and mamma come later?" "Oh, dear, no; papa and mamma and I don't belong to the same set."—Harper's Bazar.

NOT THE SAME.

Here is the latest small boy story told at dinner the other night. The new rector grew mildly at the small boy in the Sunday school and says: "My dear little fellow, have you read the thirty nine articles?" "No," rejoins the small boy, "but I've read the 'Forty Thieves.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Selecting a Doll.

Mamma (at the doll counter)—Now, Flossie, here is a very large assortment to select from. What kind of a dolly would you like to have?

Flossie—Twins, mamma, if you please.—Harper's Bazar.

Why Mr. Tod Scorned the Double d.

One of Lincoln's most esteemed friends was old ex-Governor Tod, of Ohio. He was a quaint old character, and Lincoln loved him for his honesty, ability and rustic shrewdness. One evening when Tod was in town Lincoln invited him over to the White House. They had a long chat together, when Lincoln finally said: "Look here, Tod, how is it that you spell your name with only one d? I married a Todd, but she spelled her name with two ds. All of her relatives do the same. You are the first Tod I ever met who spelled his name with so few letters." Old Tod looked for a moment in his peculiarly quizzing manner and then replied: "Mr. President, God spells his name with only one d, and what is good enough for God is good enough for me." Lincoln used to repeat this story to some of his more intimate friends, and every time he did so the tears would well up the tears ran down over that furrowed but grand face.—Boston Traveller.

Mrs. Partington Discounted.

"Yes," said Mrs. Richdale, "my daughter graduates next week."

"I understand she is at the head of her class?"

"No," she said, with some sadness, "she will not be the valedictorian, but she will take the salutary, and that's nearly as high."

"The commencement exercises are to be very interesting."

"Oh, yes, Rev. Dr. Grave will preach the baccalaureate sermon, Rev. Mr. Mortimer will deliver the dilemmas and there will be other dolractions too numerous to mention."—Washington Critic.

Not One of Their Numbers.

"Are we all here?" inquired Mr. Brutal Jones of his landlady the other morning at the breakfast table.

"I think so—one—two—three—four—yes, you are all here, I believe," and she smiled sweetly. "Why?"

"Because, only I see by the morning paper that a human skeleton was picked up just outside the city limits. The smile vanished.—Merchant Traveler.

Spare the Birds.

The Audubon society, No. 40 Park row, New York, whose purpose is the protection of American birds, has issued a form for a petition to be presented to the legislature of all the states, the first section of which reads as follows:

Section 1. Any person who shall, within the state of ——, kill any wild bird other than a game bird, or purchase, offer, or expose for sale any such wild bird, after it has been killed, shall for each offense be subject to a fine of $50, imprisonment for ten days, or both, at the discretion of the court. For the purpo es of this act the following only shall be considered game birds: The sanderling, commonly known as a sea snipe, gone, brant, and river and sea ducks; the rallidæ, commonly known as rails, coots, mud hens and gallinules; the limicolæ, commonly known as shore birds, plovers, surf birds, snipe, woodcock, sandpipers, tatlers and curlews; the gallinæ, commonly known as wild turkeys, grouse, prairie chickens, pheasants, partridges and quails.

Section 2 relates to the needless destruction of nests or eggs.

Section 3 exempts those taking birds or eggs for scientific purposes, and makes rules for the same.

Section 4 exempts the English sparrow from the list of birds which it shall be unlawful to kill.

Those desiring copies of this petition to circulate can obtain them by addressing the Audubon society as above.

Cutter for Strawberry Runners.

The most profitable system of strawberry culture is the hill system. The greatest objection to it is the labor and trouble of keeping the runners off. I find a cutter made like that shown in the illustration a very convenient arrangement for that purpose. Take a thin plate of steel two to three inches broad and two feet long; sharpen one edge, bend it into a half circle, rivet three shanks to it—one near each end and one in the middle—bring them together with a genie curve in the center and weld them into a single solid shank. Then put a handle on this, as on an ordinary hoe, and your instrument is complete. Two tasks with this will cut the runners completely around a hill of plants, and no stooping is required. Any blacksmith can make one.

RUNNER CUTTER.

L. J. TEEPLIN.

Handsome Country House.

For persons who would like something stylish and attractive in a country residence, the accompanying design has been prepared. It is a picture of a new house lately erected in New Jersey. It is not a cheap house, exactly, the cost being $4,200.

COUNTRY HOUSE.

It is considered a very handsome house. A range, furnace, bath room, plumbing and drainage are included in the cost. House has connected with it, however, in the original plan the old-fashioned cesspool and privy vault, which is a little surprising in these days of earth and sanitary closet for country houses. That part of the plan could be modified and an earth closet constructed for less cost.

FIRST FLOOR.

The house is built of wood. The first story has a hard wood floor. The wood work outside is of white pine. A slate roof covers the house.

SECOND FLOOR.

The furnace is in the cellar. Gas pipes are put in. For the country these, of course, would be left out.

Two Opinions.

The opinion of a woman whose husband has a good garden:

Does a garden pay! What a foolish question! Of course it pays. It pays better than any other part of the farm. Why? Because it is the one thing we can depend on. The family can make available at all seasons of the year. It isn't a mere summer institution, this garden of ours. Why, last summer ended we had vegetables to use the same as we had during the growing season, for we always raised enough to last until garden stuff grows again. Think of the variety the garden gives our bill of fare: Corn, cabbage, tomatoes, lettuce, cucumbers, parsnips, squashes, onions, salsify, beans, beets, turnips, radishes—why, if you were a woman with a family to cook for, and you wanted something to make a change with, you'd see where the advantage of having a garden came in for all those vegetables to draw from a woman can so vary the bill of fare from day to day that the men folks won't be complaining about the "same old grub" from one week's end to another. But isn't it funny how much to raise! See here: How much money do you suppose I'd have to expend on vegetables if we had to buy all we used? I'll venture to say that I wouldn't get $5 for that purpose through the year. Indeed I kept it back from the butter money. Men folks don't like to buy garden stuff, but they do like to eat it. Thank goodness my husband has appreciated to the advantage of a garden. I don't know that he likes to work in one, but he sees that it pays, and he is not regarding the pleasure of his appetite alone, but considering the financial effect of the case, when he raises vegetables. He knows that what we eat from the garden costs less than the other things we would have to buy if we had no garden.

The opinion of the man who doesn't have a garden:

Do I have a garden! Not much! Catch me puttering 'round in one. I'd rather go down to the corner and sit 'round the grocery store or saloon all day long than work in a garden. That is all foolishness. You sow the seed, and half won't come up, and what grows gets smothered by weeds. Why don't I put in one, then? Well, I can work enough on the farm, but I won't work in the garden. Why! Because it don't pay to—didn't I tell you that b-fore? But wouldn't it pay if I put it in the right way? I don't know. I don't care to know. But don't I like vegetables! Of course I do. Do we buy any? Well, no, not to speak of. We can't afford to. Don't I get tired of pork and potatoes and bread the year round? Well, yes, I do; and it does seem as if my wife might give us a change sometimes, but she don't. If she did we'd "spring out" with a better appetite, and not have to take "bitters" and such stuff. She always harps about a garden—at least I've heard her say so—down and tell her she don't get me into that trap. No, sir. I won't bother with one.—Our Country Home.

Sorting Sheep at Shearing Time.

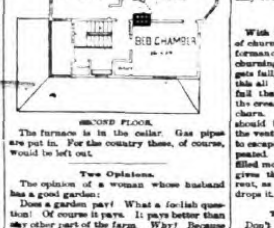
It is a very poor farmer who does not know a good sheep when he sees it; but he may be a tolerably good farmer and not know a poor sheep when he sees it. That is to say, he hates to throw it out. There is nothing on a farm which is so poor a piece of property as a poor sheep. A light weight steer may make as good beef as a heavy weight, or better, and it may be nearly or quite as profitable as animal. But a light weight sheep usually eats as much as the heavy fleeced one, and often more, because it is leggy and restless.

When freshly shorn the sheep stands revealed in its true form, and the fleece is subject to test separate from the body. Merely to weigh a fleece is rather a raw and crude test of its quality; still it is necessary to admit that the weight is the foremost consideration with most flock masters. My own method was to have a pair of grocer's scales, on one side of which was fastened a very light coal frame work, large enough to receive the fleece, and this was balanced by bits of iron, and the scale set so as to require a six-pound fleece to turn it. Then over a shaver finished a sheep. I took it while he carried and laid the fleece on the scales, and upon this test together with the fleece's characteristics upon the animal's form, I affixed a mark with red lead to designate the sheep's future. A wether was marked with the letter W on the left shoulder, and a ewe lamb letter reaching the sides, to prevent the sheep from rubbing it off against his fellows. A ram received the same letter on its left hip. A sheep of either sex to be rejected from the flock was marked with a cipher, 0, on the right hip. My full bloods had Dana's labels in the ears, but if these are not used a number may be marked with paint midway of the spine. Tar should never be used; it makes a hard lump which has to be cut off by hand before the fleece can be manufactured.

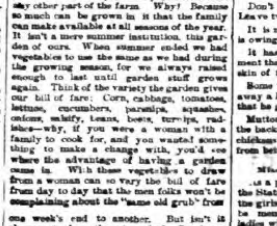
To keep the shearers from waiting, a head of the marker, a rope was hung down from the ceiling of the shop. The sheep ab bached which could be buckled around the sheep just back of the forelegs.

The marking apparatus ought to be always on hand in the shearing time, to be used on a ewe not fit to be bred again. Any mark put on then, of course, will have to be renewed with it, however, in the original plan the old-fashioned cesspool and privy vault, which is a little surprising in these days of earth and sanitary closet for country houses. That part of the plan could be modified and an earth closet constructed for less cost.



FIRST FLOOR.

The house is built of wood. The first story has a hard wood floor. The wood work outside is of white pine. A slate roof covers the house.



SECOND FLOOR.

The furnace is in the cellar. Gas pipes are put in. For the country these, of course, would be left out.

Two Opinions.

The opinion of a woman whose husband has a good garden:

Does a garden pay! What a foolish question! Of course it pays. It pays better than any other part of the farm. Why? Because it is the one thing we can depend on. The family can make available at all seasons of the year. It isn't a mere summer institution, this garden of ours. Why, last summer ended we had vegetables to use the same as we had during the growing season, for we always raised enough to last until garden stuff grows again. Think of the variety the garden gives our bill of fare: Corn, cabbage, tomatoes, lettuce, cucumbers, parsnips, squashes, onions, salsify, beans, beets, turnips, radishes—why, if you were a woman with a family to cook for, and you wanted something to make a change with, you'd see where the advantage of having a garden came in for all those vegetables to draw from a woman can so vary the bill of fare from day to day that the men folks won't be complaining about the "same old grub" from one week's end to another. But isn't it funny how much to raise! See here: How much money do you suppose I'd have to expend on vegetables if we had to buy all we used? I'll venture to say that I wouldn't

Play Upon Station.

A gentle Miss, once seized with chill,
Was feeling very, very ill.
When from an M.D., for to know
If N. Y. service he could do.

"O," cried the maid (for scared was she),
"Do you ind. Tena. to murder Ma.?"

"La.," cried the doctor, "I Kan. save
You from a most untimely grave
If you will let me Coun. your case,
And hang this liver pad in place."

"Am Ia. fool?" the patient cried;
"I cannot Do," the doctor replied;
"But no one can be long time Ill.
Who Tex. a patent like Mass. pill."

"Ark I" shrieked the girl, "I'll hear no Mo.,
Your nostrums are N. J.—No go."

Young Sailors.

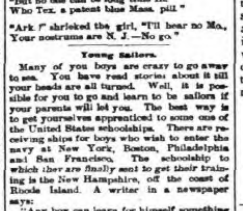
Many of you boys are crazy to go away to sea. You have read stories and think your heads are all turned. Well, it is possible for you to go and learn to be sailors if your parents will let you. The best way is to get yourself appointed to some one of the United States schoolships. There are receiving ships for boys who wish to enter the navy at New York, Boston, Philadelphia and San Francisco. The schoolship to which *they are finally sent to get their train*ing is the New Hampshire, off the coast of Rhode Island. A writer in a newspaper says:

"Any boy can learn for himself something about the discomforts of life at sea if he will get out of bed at midnight when there is a storm raging, and go out, dressed only in coat and trousers, and climb a tree, and busy himself until daylight by cutting off limbs with a jackknife. This is hardly the means for a fair trial, however; a short storm late in the fall would give a better idea of the real life which sailors live."



KEEPING THE TOPSAIL.

The picture shows how the fellows must stand upon ropes and balance themselves almost upon nothing while using their hands to pull in and fasten the huge sail before a squall comes.

Before they can go to the real sea, however, and do that, they have much to learn in the United States schoolship. They are taken as naval apprentices, serving in this capacity three years. They remain in the navy until they are 21 years old.

After that they may resign if they wish. It is better to resign then, indeed, for boys who have served in the navy in this way can never become high officers, no matter how skillful, talented or ambitious they are. The officers are taken from the United States Naval academy at Annapolis.

This is a shame, but it is a fact. A schoolship boy might stay in the navy fifty years and be as skillful as brave Admiral Farragut, but he can never get to be anything more than a fo'cta'sman—pronounced bo'sen —with a pay of a few hundred dollars a year. So it is better after being educated in the schoolship to resign and go into the merchant marine service. This means the common trade ships that carry cargoes and passengers. In this service the young man can get to be somebody if he is ambitious.

Boys are taken into the navy between the ages of 14 and 16. They must be physically perfect, and be able to read and write. This is not much, but it said that only about twenty-six boys out of 100 are able bodied. It is a sad fact that most have something the matter with them. Many have hurt themselves smoking cigarettes, which injures the action of the heart. No boy who is a cigarette smoker is admitted. The examining surgeon always knows it if they are, too. The smoke stains their fingers brown, and he has only to look at their hands.

TARGET-SHOOTING.

The boys are made to keep themselves very clean. They do their own washing and mending. They are drilled in military exercises, sword practice, hauling, painting and firing the heavy cannons on board the ship. They come to be as handy in running the great guns in and out of the port holes. The picture shows how they fire a cannon. They have practice in shooting smaller guns and pistols. They have all a war practices, besides learning all the ordinary duties of a sailor, manning up rigging, attending to sails, etc.

They have not so bad a time of it on the school ship. They have pretty blue uniforms, get $9.30 a month and their rations from the ship's stores. If they pay attention to duty and are strong and skilful, they are, after a few months, promoted to first-class apprentices or seamen, and get $13 a month.

If they are smart they will follow their sometimes do not stay on the school ship more than a year, but are sent into real service, with pay of $24 a month. Then the hardships of sea life begin.

On the other hand, though, they cruise all over the earth. They see foreign countries and go around the world. The ships of our navy are generally sent off on three years' cruises. On the school ships the boys are not allowed to waste any time. It is an excellent training for a lazy boy, and takes the kinks out of him very quick. The young mariner learn from books, too, under instructors. They are taught seamanship, gunnery and other studies. For ships, when a boy is admitted to the New Hampshire, the officer of the deck says:

"Master-at-arms, see that you see that this boy has a bath and that his hair is cut; then take him down to the sick bay to be vaccinated. After that, get him his bag and hammock, show him his 'wing,' and how to 'lash and carry.'"

Interesting Experiment in Agriculture.

An interesting experiment in agriculture is about to be tried on the duke of Portland's Nottinghamshire estates. His grace has let a farm of 450 acres, at Gringley Carr, to a company of six agricultural laborers. They are allowed to take the farm as it stands, without paying valuation or tenant right. The duke finds them stock, implements, horses, etc., charging them a low rate of interest on the whole.—London Letter.

Mississippi's State Female College.

...s a practical illustration of the benefit the State Female college is bestowing upon the girls of the State of Mississippi it might be mentioned that several of the young ladies who are studying stenography have progressed so far as to be able to take down very fair verbatim reports of the sermons of Talk-Some-Man.—Chicago Herald.

per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an assessment. There are no Membership Fees to be collected. Policies, but a plain, honest premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for a $10,000 policy, and the company pays the cost of same. $400,000 deposited.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $963,182.75 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets amounting to over $60,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. —A large number of subpœnas have been issued for persons to appear and testify in the Pfaoli case, which comes up in the City Court room on Friday afternoon.

—A pleasing entertainment was given by the Kitchen Garden Society, in the basement of Reform Hall yesterday afternoon. Ice cream and refreshments were served.

—Messrs. Neary & Stork and Lason & Brown, grocers from Perth Amboy, were yesterday fined $100 each in the U. S. Court in session at New Brunswick for selling bogus butter

—The printers in the Journal and Herald offices of Elizabeth contested a game of ball with a printer's nine from Newark on Saturday and came off victorious by a score of 11 to 12.

—Constable Smith on Saturday night served a writ in an action upon contract brought by McVoy vs. Brown. The case will come up for trial before Justice Nash on July 12th.

—The plank walk at the railroad station has become so rotten that a new one has become necessary, and workmen are engaged in laying a substantial walk along the entire front of the depot.

—About half past seven o'clock last evening a horse belonging to F. W. Miles, left standing on West Front street, became frightened and ran away, but was caught on Somerset street before doing any serious damage.

—In the action of debt brought by Weaver vs. Naylor and wife Justice Nash yesterday afternoon rendered judgment for the plaintiff in the sum of $2.99, the full amount of the claim and interest, together with the cost of the suit.

—St. Mary's T. A. B. Society have abandoned the project of holding a second Homecoming meeting to aid in the parliamentary fund, and instead have started sub scription papers which they intend to circulate among their friends.

—Borough Marshal Weaver last evening arrested John Mocraft on Mountain avenue, for assault and battery on one John Mowry. The accused was arraigned before Justice Mattison and subsequently discharged, there being no cause for action.

—About thirty members of the Senior Society, Boys' Branch, Y. M. C. A., accompanied by the general secretary, Mr. Willis embarked in stages for Boynton Beach this morning, where they will spend the day in bathing, boating fishing and other healthful recreation.

—About eighty members of the Boys' of the Y. M. C. A. assembled in the Y. M. C. A. hall last evening to take part in the regular meeting of the society. The meeting was conducted by Mr. Willis, the general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and was very interesting. A feature of the exercises was the singing by a male choir, who rendered excellent music.

—The case of the Freise boy whom the borough authorities are trying to have committed to the Reform School for the state, before Judge Bartine in Somerville last week and in which the Judge reserved his decision until last Friday, has not, as yet been decided upon. The authorities are holding the boy in anticipation of securing a home for him. It is expected to so do he will be sent to the Reform School.

—When riding his bicycle to the depot about seven o'clock this morning, Howard Runyon of West Front street, accidentally collided with one of Mr. J. S. Cutter's grocery wagon's which was being turned in Park avenue near Second street, and as a result he was thrown from his machine, fortunately without injury, but the bicycle was severely damaged. The crippled machine was placed in the wagon and taken to the home of its owner.

Union County Courts.

The Court of Special Sessions re-convened at Elizabeth yesterday morning, Judges McCormick, Harper and Hyer on the bench. The first case to come up was that of Jacob Knobland, proprietor of the "Continental Hotel," at Roselle, charged with illegally keeping house and selling on Sunday. The case was laid over until the October term in order to await the decision of the Supreme court on a similar offense now pending before that body.

The case of the State vs. John Mohr, of Rahway for assault and battery was the next to put on trial. The prisoner was acquitted. The same case was tried two weeks ago when the jury failed to agree.

The next case was that of Charles Wilson a locomotive fireman, indicted for embezzling $500 from Marcus Bray, a cripple. Wilson was secretary of the Firemen's Brotherhood, and the money taken was part of the endowment policy of $1,500 paid by the Brotherhood to Bray when he became disabled. Wilson was given the money to pay over to Bray, and it is alleged by the latter and his sister all the money they received was $1,000. On motion of counsel the case was adjourned over until the third Tuesday in October.

The court having refused to grant an application for a new trial in the case of Frederick DeGraw of Roselle convicted of the seduction of Miss Mamie Long of the same place, and who was released on $1,000 bail pending the application, was on motion of Prosecutor Wilson arraigned for sentence. The girl testified to Judge McCormick that she would not marry DeGraw under any circumstances, and that being the case the judge suspended sentence. DeGraw is alleged to have consummated the woman in the sum of $500 since his conviction, which probably accounts for his acquittal.

At the close of the session yesterday Judge McCormick thanked the jurymen and at the same time discharged them from further duty, and declared the spring term of court adjourned.

Base Ball on the Fourth.

A game of base ball will be played on the fifth of July on the grounds situate at the right of Park avenue below Cedar brook, beginning at a little after nine o'clock in the morning. The game promises to be more than usually interesting, inasmuch as a nine is to be picked from among the best players in both this city and North Plainfield, and will include some of the members of the defunct Central, Crescent and Silver Star Base Ball Clubs, all of which originally existed in this city, and all of which took part in some of the most exciting games here a few years ago. Among the players who will compose the nine from this city are: Geo. Cornwell, H. Doane, B. Demarest, J. W. Marray, jr., Bert. Tilney, Percy Stewart and Harold Smith, while the team from North Plainfield will include some of the members of the Washington Base Ball Club, and will be captained by Walter McGee. Councilman St. J. McCutchen, A. Van Deventer, H. McGee, F. A. Church and others. The match will be Plainfield vs. North Plainfield.

The Mary Ann Lupardus Estate.

On Tuesday last Abner S. Coriell, guardian of the above estate, through his counsel in the City Court at this city, filed a petition against the Middlesex County Orphan's Court to pass thereon. Mrs. Lupardus alleged the guardian had been derelict in his duty and therefore should not be entitled to any commission.

The matter coming last presiding Judge Cowenhoven rendered the decision of the court, complimenting Mr. Coriell upon his faithful and efficient performances of his duties, passed his account as filed, and also allowed him an extra allowance of $25 as counsel fee and also for his commission of five per cent., discharged him with the thanks of the court. Mr. Coriell had acted as guardian for about 13 years.

Accidentally Shot.

The thirteen-year-old son of Mr. J. B. Allen of Washington street was on Saturday afternoon shooting at frogs with a pistol, along Cedar brook in the vicinity of Park avenue, where he accidentally shot Richard, the fifteen-year-old son of Mr. R. Peoniston of La Grande avenue, the ball entering the calf of the left leg and taking a downward course to the region of the ankle. The wounded boy was conveyed to the home in a wagon and Dr. G. W. Endicott summoned. The doctor probed for the ball but was unable to find it, as the flesh had been penetrated to so great a depth. No serious results are anticipated, but the wound is painful and will require some months to heal.

—A meeting of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society was held in St. Mary's Hall last evening. But little business of importance was transacted other than making the preliminary arrangements for the coming entertainment which takes place during July.

—One week from yesterday the ever-glorious Fourth will be celebrated. The regular monthly meeting of the City Council falls on Monday evening July 5th, but no business having been made at the last meeting, the council will in all probability meet and adjourn over until another day.

—A suit, brought by the Messrs. Lee Bros. vs. Cole to set aside alleged fraudulent conveyances, which has been in litigation for a long time, will come up before Vice-Chancellor Van Fleet in this city on Thursday morning at ten o'clock. A summons has been served on each of the litigants to be present and testify.

—A Home Rule demonstration in aid of the Parliamentary fund will be held in Elizabeth on Tuesday night. The committee awaited upon Gov. Abbett, who has pledged himself to be present and speak in the interests of Home Rule. Congressman Robert S. Green, Rev. H. H. Gallaher of Brooklyn, Rev. Isaac P. Whelan of Paterson and Editor F. McDonald of Hudson will also speak.

—The residence of Mr. J. N. Rappleyea on Arlington avenue was offered for sale at auction on Saturday afternoon. There were a number of bidders in attendance. Mr. Rappleyea reserved the right of disposition. A gentleman from New York bid $2,900 which was the highest bid offered, when the sale adjourned over. Yesterday morning the same gentleman offered $200 additional for the place, and the owner is considering the proposition.

The Electric Light Franchises.

Westinghouse, Church, Ker & Co. of Cortlandt street, New York, are the reputed purchasers of the franchise granted by this city to what is named in the grant "The Plainfield Electric Light Co." It is reported that the Westinghouse Institute only the franchise to furnish the city with electric light, and that the system is to be something entirely new, the invention of Mr. Westinghouse, a prolific inventor of world-wide fame, through his greatest invention, the Westinghouse air-brake. It is alleged that the price paid for the franchise is $4,000, and that the entire plant of the franchise company, at $21,000, has been declined. Although the clear intent of the city was to give the contract for the Thomson-Houston system, it is claimed that there is nothing in the contract which prevents any other system being used. But it is a question whether Council will not interfere in the matter, if there is any different light given them than that contracted for.

The new company have purchased the property on the north side of Madison avenue, next to and west of the railroad, for their headquarters. The place was formerly occupied by colored families, who moved out yesterday, upon notices to quit, that the premises might be altered for the purposes of the business, and suitable buildings erected.

A Mean Thief Makes His Exit.

Louis Stevens, a young man about 25 years of age and a former resident of Crawfordsville, Ind., came to this city from Philadelphia about six weeks ago, and engaged with James McKee, who resides a little above the Fair Grounds on Park avenue. The man was employed by Mr. McKee to look after the trotting stock of which he is the owner of a number of well-known trotting horses. During Sunday Stevens acted in a rather suspicious manner but nothing was thought of it at the time. Late on Sunday night he unceremoniously disappeared, together with about $100 worth of clothing and other paraphernalia belonging to Mr. McKee and another hired man named James Armstrong. Of the latter's personal effects he is said to have taken everything he possessed with the exception of a pair of overalls. In taking his sudden departure Stevens failed to leave his address and as yet all efforts to discover his whereabouts have proved fruitless.

PERSONAL.

Miss Bertha Frink and Miss Selima Ullman of New York, who have been visiting the recently wedded couple Mr. and Mrs. H. Eckwed of East Sixth street, returned home yesterday.

Miss Ella T. Moffett, daughter of Elmer D. Moffett, an assistant in the County Clerk's office at Elizabeth, has been spending a few weeks at the residence of Miss Lillie Holman of Saydam street, New Brunswick.

Frank Hand of Somerset street will tomorrow go to Long Branch for the express purpose of placing a new set of shoes on the beautiful team of gray horses owned by Mr. C. A. Raster of Crescent avenue, this city, who, with his family, are summering at the Branch.

Mrs. Alexander Gee of Somerset street, North Plainfield, left Newark yesterday, where she has been visiting for the past two weeks, for Wellsville, N. Y. Mr. Gee started this morning to join his wife at that place, where they expect to remain the balance of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur J. Chamberlin arrived in this city on Sunday, after a ten days' wedding trip. They will hereafter be registered at Dayton Hotel, Jersey City, the groom's business engagements compelling him to locate in that city. The bride will leave for Jersey City to-morrow.

Isaac Schwed, the junior partner of the firm of Schwed Bros., the Plainfield clothiers will leave for Europe on July 8th, on the steamer Illinois, for a three months' vacation. He is the principal cutter in the establishment, but hopes to have all immediate demands upon him supplied before his departure.

Fire Commissioner Brower and Living-ston returned on Sunday evening from Lake Gogebric, Michigan, where in company with Commissioner Jacob Hay they have been on a two weeks' fishing cruise. Mr. Knowland arrived home a few days in advance of the other members of the party. They report an abundance of black bass in the lake and are all well pleased with their trip.

Joseph Hahn has completely renovated his hotel on Somerset street, and it is now considered one of the finest hotels in Somerset county. He prides himself on keeping a first-class table. A bowling alley connected with the hotel has been put in first class condition and is intended to be a great attraction to those who are boarders and patrons. The hotel promises to be a favorite resort for summer months. Read his advertisement.

The many friends of Parker B. Miller, who was last week taken to the home of his sister Mrs. Andrew Schuyler, of Scotch Plains, where he has since been lying at the point of death, will regret to learn that his condition remains unchanged, and that his death is momentarily expected. Mr. Miller was on the panel of petit jurors for the May term of the Union county courts, but for a few days past has been compelled to be absent on account of his rapidly failing health.

Charles Winston and wife start to-morrow on an extended pleasure trip to Kansas City, Atchison, St. Joseph and Omaha, remaining away about one month. Mr. Winston is a remarkably talented landscape gardener. Previous to three years ago he was fond of a drop of the "creature," and though always jolly, he says he lost his health, his money and his "senses" in liquor saloons. Now, he says, he is going to enjoy himself on the fruits of sobriety and industry. Two years ago he joined St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, and attributes all his prosperity since to that act. His brother at St. Joseph, Mo., runs the Union Hotel and is a councilman on his eighth term, the result of his swearing off also.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Reply to Charges Against the Union County Board of Freeholders.—Facts to Think About.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—Fault is found with the Board of Freeholders by the Elizabeth Board of Trade. No true and just criticism is given, but general indefinite charges of extravagance are made.

A thorough and minute account of all the transactions of the Board is kept and the books are always open to the taxpayers for investigation. The Board of Freeholders is no secret organization. On the contrary our doings are published all over the county that taxpayers may fully know how they are served.

One charge is that the Board has gone to unnecessary expense in enlarging our Jail. The Grand Jury, at its last session, inspected the jail accommodations and by a unanimous vote declared that the accommodations were not sufficient. We have in our jail twenty-eight cells, each but about two and a half by seven feet, intended to accommodate only one prisoner to a cell. Now we have on an average fifty prisoners and sometimes as high as seventy to provide for. The law requires that these shall be provided suitable accommodations and the Grand Jury could indict the whole Board of Freeholders for failing to thus provide. Now with but twenty-eight small cells does not an average fifty prisoners appear to call for greater accommodations? The Freeholder don't send these prisoners to the county jail, but it is significant that the complaints and the prisoners are from the same section of the county. Every year a number of persons placed in our jail was 400, and the peculiar feature of it is that 378 of them came from Elizabeth city, leaving only seventy-five balance of the county—five times as many coming from the city as from almost as large a population in the rest of the county.

Objection is made to our new Grand Jury room, very serviceable addition to our county building, all agree. Well, that is at least without any extra expense, for its cost was defrayed out of our current expense fund and our yearly appropriation of $40,000 less than that of ten previous years. Besides this we reduced our county debt some $25,000, and still at the close of the year had a surplus in our treasury. Does that look as though the Freeholders were prodigals with the trust committed to them?

Another objection is to the building of bridges. We were told some five-cent iron bridges which will now rusted down, cost us over $1,600 each. We are a growing county and naturally our necessities increase with our growth. Is it any crime for us to try and build bridges that will last ages for the least money? But we propose further to annul extravagance, and there are bold yet intelligent men on the Board of Freeholders that means must soon be provided for the care of the insane committed to us. We have to pay $3.66 per week for each Morris Plains asylum. Our quota from this county is seventy-nine. Multiply seventy-nine by seven days in the week, the yearly expense is about full. The authorities there can at any time turn home sixty-seven extra persons back to the Freeholders, and then the question arises, where will we put them? They must be provided for. Owing to the great increase of insanity, principally due to rum, demands that we prepare to meet the difficulty. The State Board of Charities and Asylums of its own. According to the yearly report just published the cost of maintaining the State county insane in the Morris Plains Asylum is $3.45 per person per week, and we pay the State for the Essex county in the home institution at the dollar and 80-100ths and 9-10ths per person per week. The saving to the State in maintaining their own patients, amounts to about $80 per day, and the saving, aside from the advantages, to us at the same time, would leave at the present time about $30 per day. Should we neglect to make this saving at the earliest practical moment it will be a fatal upon-sinning our county expenses by filling our jails, poor houses and asylums, and would thereby strive to blot Union from the list of higher state of civilization, they would be ashamed to own it as a county and the world would be bettered by their having lived in it. At least that is the opinion

Reverses' Conditions of Somnambulism.

Like insanity, somnambulism may reverse the ordinary tendencies and characteristics of its victim. Thus a case is reported of a Carthusian monk who was remarkable for his cowardice and timidity, but who became a thief, robber, and plunderer of the dead when he walked in his sleep, and this, unfortunately, occurred almost every night. A Jew was detected in a similar habit of somnambulism in his sleep, on one occasion he even plundered his own church. A case occurred in Malmo, Sweden, years ago, in which the somnambulist was in his sleep, on one occasion he even plundered his own church. A case occurred in Malmo, Sweden, years ago, in which the tendency was to suicide. Watchers had to be employed to prevent him carrying out this idea, which did not occur while he was awake. The case is recorded from his attendants, who soon heard an outcry from a neighboring pasture. On investigation he was found suspended by a rope round the hind of a tree. When cut down he was found unhurt, as he had tied the rope to his feet instead of to his neck.

Whether cases like somnambulist commits are, necessarily, the outcome of the prevailing vices, which may be true or false. Sometimes there is a confused condition of mind on awaking suddenly, especially after great physical fatigue, which has been named "deep drunkenness." In this a predominant idea is carried out, as in a trance. Thus, two individuals having to stay over night in a place infested with robbers, one watched while the other slept. The sleeper dreamed he was being pursued, and shot his friend through the heart on being suddenly aroused.—Globe Democrat.

The Troubles of a Comedian.

Mr. John T. Raymond, the comedian, said the other day: "I never tasted a vegetable of any sort in my life, and I've not the green seen in 'Sol.' unless it where he makes a meal of turnips and water, and I am compelled to eat a couple of them every evening that basket of turnips every night, and if by any accident the apple is forgotten, you may imagine my plight. I never drink a drop of spirituous liquor and smoke but one cigar a day. I never smoke a cigar or use tobacco in any form, and yet in one of my characters I am invited to smoke a cigar and resort to all manner of expedients to overcome the disgust and nausea that the very sight of the things fills me with."—Ex-Editor Americus.

A Business Chance for Clergymen.

Any clergyman who wishes to open a $10 note can apply at the office of the Age, and to an election which the common council held on only to choose the new vicar of St. Bartholomew's Bethnal green. As soon as the names of the successful candidates had been announced it was proposed and carried that a testimonial be presented to each of the unsuccessful applicants, presumably as a sort of solace. The number of candidates was nine. I am certainly surprised that, under the circumstances, it was not ninety.—London Truth.

GLADSTONE'S CAMPAIGN

THE BATTLE OF THE MASSES AGAINST THE CLASSES.

The Grand Old Man Speaks in Liverpool—Ireland Can be Governed by the Power of Love More Easily than by Force.

LIVERPOOL, June 29.—Mr. Gladstone spoke at Bostock's circus in this city last night. The vast building was filled to overflowing and thousands of people were unable to gain admittance. Mr. Gladstone said that never before had he received such fervor in the cause of home rule, and expressed his entire confidence that the result would be overwhelming in favor of the government and its Irish policy, notwithstanding the immense sums of money at the disposal of the opposition and which they were using without stint.

"My proposition," said Mr. Gladstone, "is to give a statutory parliament to Ireland for dealing only with Irish matters. With our opponents I wish to obliterate the allegiance of Ireland to the imperial parliament. Heretofore, however, the allegiance of Ireland has been given grudgingly, and this is the sort of allegiance that the Liberals are anxious to destroy and to compel the Irish, like the Scotch and English, to heartily observe the imperial statutes. I hope to get being ignored in the present movement. Let her make suggestions and they will be respected."

Referring to the land purchase scheme, Mr. Gladstone drew a parallel between spending the money of the British taxpayers and investing it in the purchase of Irish land.

If any land purchase scheme should carry the money of the British taxpayers beyond the point of safety, he declared, Mr. Gladstone said, he would decline to support it. He denied that the home rule and land purchase questions were inseparable. The first is a question of the classes against the masses of the people, and it is now to be shown if the masses can constitutionally overthrow the power of the classes.

"It has ever been the case," Mr. Gladstone said, impressively, "that when truth, justice and humanity have entered into a combat they have always been in the right and the classes wrong."

Mr. Gladstone made a passing allusion to Lord Randolph Churchill, saying that if the world lost sight of him for a time he was thrown away, the remaining half might be reconstructed into a valuable public servant. Parliament, he said, had been paralyzed on account of the Irish question, and would remain in that state unless some measure of justice were passed. The Liberals were actuated by their principles, and the result of home rule would be that force would be required to hold Ireland to the Union. Such he declared to be the case now, but he hoped that England would in the future be able to hold her by love.

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher was on the platform while Mr. Gladstone was speaking.

There is much regret that the many and heavy demands upon the wealthy supporters of Mr. Gladstone's policy should result in the most entire failure of the special fund of the National Liberal club, which was founded to assist the labor candidates and the middle class candidates, to $40 to $50 each.

The total receipts thus far are £2 000 but many of the provincial newspapers have started auxiliary funds, which will possibly get much larger and more worthy the cause it is designed to aid.

Mr. Parnell's tour has been of immense benefit to the home rule cause. His speeches have certainly been of a more moderate and state-manlike tone of the utterances of a man who six months ago was regarded as a leggy by hundreds of thousands of Englishmen.

In addition to the good work of the National street, a score of Parnellite orators are working hard in the north and in the midlands at the invitation of the local Liberal societies. The Irish Parliament Home Rule association is overwhelmed with applications for speakers, and the latest development of the capital orators left Dublin for England, where they will immediately receive engagements. The parliamentary fund for the Parnellites is now £41,000, and contributions are coming in slowly but steadily.

Lord George Hamilton, who was first lord of the admiralty in the Marquis of Salisbury's cabinet, in a speech at Portsmouth Spalding, denied, on behalf of the Conservative government, that Lord Carnarvon had an authority to negotiate with Mr. Parnell on behalf of the cabinet.

The Parliamentary Fund.

NEW YORK, June 29.—At last night's meeting of the parliamentary fund committee, amounted one amounting to $10,000 since the last meeting. The total subscriptions to date aggregates over $100,000. Among the letters of sympathy read at the meeting was one from P. T. Barnum, pledging a handsome subscription.

Bavaria's New King Installed.

MUNICH June 29. Prince Luitpold was today formally made regent of Bavaria, to administer the affairs of the kingdom during the incapacity of the insane King Otto, the insane successor of Ludwig. The oath was administered by Dr. von Fenzle, minister of justice, and the ceremony was performed in the Bronce room of the Residenz Schloss in the presence of the ministry and a majority of the Parliament. Prince Luitpold, after the reading of the oath, stood with his right hand uplifted, and at the conclusion of the reading said in a clear, strong voice: "I swear." He was cheered as he left the room, and in response thanked the assembly for their manifestations of loyalty, feelingly referred to the career of King Ludwig and promised to do all in his power to promote the prosperity of Bavaria.

The President Cannot Attend.

BALTIMORE, June 29.—A committee, headed by Rev. Fr. John S. Foley, went to Washington this morning to invite President Cleveland, the Right Rev. Archbishop Gibbons and the Rev. Archbishop Ireland to be present at the great Catholic demonstration to be held here in October. The committee was unable to see the President, the cabinet officers and Archbishop Ireland, but saw Archbishop Gibbons, who promised to present the request to the President. The committee left Washington this afternoon, and will call on Archbishop Ireland in New York. The President cannot attend.

DRUGGIST AM ENDES TRIAL.

Sensational Testimony Promised in the Robeken Poisoning Case.

NEW YORK, June 29.—The drug trade and the medical profession of this city and vicinity are much interested in certain rumors that startling developments are to be made at the forthcoming trial of C. A. Ahlers, the druggist who has been held responsible for the deaths of Ella and Marguerite Holtz, of Hoboken, last September. The two girls died a few hours after taking powders supposed to be quinine, prescribed by Dr. A. Loewenthal and put up by Mr. Am Ende. Separate indictments were found against Am Ende, but he was tried first on the charge of causing the death of Marguerite by criminal negligence in giving morphine for quinine. He was acquitted but will soon be tried on a similar charge in Ella's case, which is the one in which the prosecution chiefly relies, as her symptoms were more pronounced, and her death occurred first, both cases being diagnosed by the attending physicians as those of morphine poisoning. Am Ende's counsel now claim to have proof that the symptoms were those of atropine poisoning. It was shown on the former trial that Dr. Loewenthal administered atropine as an antidote for the supposed overdose of morphine. It will be attempted to prove that Loewenthal, who was engaged to be married to one of the girls, is really responsible for the fatal results, and some sensational testimony is hinted at, not, however, in any way reflecting upon Am Ende's actions, who bears the highest character. Dr. Loewenthal is absent from home, and has not yet had an opportunity to deny the insinuations referred to. Mr. Am Ende is held under a bond of $5,000, and employed a leading lawyer and eminent reputation as a manufacturing chemist.

AN INHUMAN HOOSIER.

A Wife Beater Burns His Barn and Fires Buckshot at His Neighbors.

MUNCIE Ind., June 29.—On Thursday William Gaskill, a rough citizen living ten miles south of this city, after a day's carousal went home drunk and shamefully abused his wife, an excellent lady. This being one of many such punishments that she had patiently endured she was determined to endure it no longer and Saturday morning went to Newcastle, Henry County, to begin divorce proceedings. Her husband went to a small town near by, and, again becoming drunk, went home in the evening in a desperate humor. As soon as he learned the whereabouts of his wife and the purpose of her visit to the county seat he became fiendish, set taking his axe, went to his barn and proceeded to chop to pieces his farm implements and then finished up his work of destruction by setting fire to his barn, which in a short time was consumed. Some neighbors, seeing the fire, but not suspecting the cause, ran to lend Garrett such assistance as lay in their power. By this time he had armed himself with a shot gun, and upon the appearance of the neighbors ordered them to leave his premises. They hesitated a moment and he fired upon them, shooting Walter Beagel in the back, inflicting a dangerous wound. His second shot was fired at Boone's companion, but he escaped unhurt. Officers were dispatched for and placed Garrett under arrest. Threats of lynching are indulged in.

Nailers to Resume Work.

PITTSBURG, June 29.—The best evidence that the seventeen cent compromise nailers' scale, as recently adopted by the conference committees of the Amalgamated association and the nail manufacturers, will be generally accepted by the workmen, lies in the fact that active preparations for resuming are in progress at the mills of Shoenberger & Co. and Jones & Laughlin's, in this city. The management of these, the two largest nail factories in the country, state that their mills will be in operation as soon as it is possible to get them in running order.

American Fishermen to be Pursued.

TORONTO, June 29.—The Mail's Ottawa correspondent denies on the highest authority the statement recently published that the Canadian government, at the instance of the imperial authorities, have relaxed their measures for the protection of the Canadian fisheries. On the contrary, there has been no interference on the part of the home government, and the Dominion government are determined in the future as in the past to strictly enforce the law against United States fishing vessels found violating it.

Bishop Becker's Successor.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 29.—A telegram from Rome announces the appointment of Rev. John Joseph Curtis, of Baltimore, as bishop of Wilmington vice Bishop Becker, transferred to Savannah.

BALTIMORE, June 29.—The dispatch regarding the appointment relative to the bishop of the vicant Catholic bishopric there is not credited in this city. No word has been received of the kind from Cardinal Gibbons, and he does not think there is anything in the report.

Brothers Fight a Duel With Shotguns.

OPELOUSAS, La., June 29.—News has just been received here of a duel fought with shotguns between two brothers, Adam and Alphonse Ford, on the Bayou a mile west of here. Adam Ford received two wounds, one in the face and one in the bowels, which it is thought will prove fatal. Alphonse was untouched. Adam fired two shots at him. A physician and a priest went to see the wounded man.

Medical Men in Convention.

SARATOGA, N. Y., June 29.—The thirtyninth annual session of the American Institute of Homœopathy commenced at the Grand Union Hotel this evening. There was a large attendance, and the exercises were very interesting. Dr. S. A. Pearsall, of Saratoga Springs, made the address of welcome, which was responded to by President Russell, of Indianapolis. The session was devoted to reports of the different committees.

Yale Draws the Line.

NEW HAVEN, June 29.—At a meeting of the corporation of Yale college it was voted to confer the degree of LL. B. on Mr. Alfred E. Jordan, who entered the law school under the clause in the catalogue admitting attorneys-at-law of any state to the senior class. The corporation, however, decided that a rule be inserted in the next catalogue that the courses of instruction are only open to the undergrad.

To Stop the Ringing of Bells.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., June 29.—A suit against the Methodist church has been filed in the circuit court by Mrs. Mina Balman, who asks that the pastor and trustees be enjoined from ringing the chime of bells. She complains that her daughter, who has been an invalid for years, suffers a dangerous relapse at each ringing of the bells.

Dying of Her Injuries.

COREY Pa., June 29.—Mrs. Mark Sheldon, who was so severely burned Sunday morning by the explosion of the gasoline stove, is dead.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—For the middle Atlantic states and New England fair weather, stationary temperature.

MOVING THE FREIGHT.

TRAINS PUT IN MOTION ON THE LAKE SHORE.

Officers on the Governor Have Armed With Winchesters, Aided by Detectives, Deputies and "Scabs" Held in Check Large Crowds of Strikers.

CHICAGO, June 29.—With the assistance of the entire police force of the town of Lake, 125 Pinkerton men, armed with Winchester rifles and heavy Colt's revolvers, a squad of Twenty-second street officers, a large force of deputies in the employ of Cook county, the Thirty-fifth street patrol wagon, and a score of scabs from Toledo the Lake Shore company has finally succeeded in moving its freight in the yards at Twelfth street, Root street, Forty-third street and Englewood. All of this was accomplished this morning, although a number of heads were cracked before business resumed.

At 8:30 a. m. 124 dusty looking fellows, under command of Capt. Foley, marched toward a crowd of strikers and their sympathizers at the Root street depot. Twenty of the marchers carried Winchester rifles and fifty rounds of ammunition. The remainder were armed with Colt's revolvers.

"You'll have to get out of this," said a spokesman of the party to the crowd of strikers. Other officers marched up and down the yards repeating the same thing, while the men with the rifles and revolvers stood in the tracks ahead into the crowd with drawn clubs and cracked heads right and left. So suddenly had this bloo mall been taken that the strikers and their friends of them were beaten unmercifully before they could recover from their surprise. The strikers flew over the tracks as fast as they could, taking up positions on the street corners and on the prairie, where they remained all day watching the officers patrolling the tracks.

About 9:30 o'clock engine 27, with one car, reached the Root street depot with twenty-five scabs from Toledo and other points. They were taken to Englewood. As the locomotive passed through the yards men and children thrust their heads out of windows and yelled "rats" and "scabs."

About noon a train of freight cars was made up at the Forty-third street yards. It was the first attempt of the company to raise the blockade, and the strikers watched with interest. The train was then coupled together drawn by engine 530. Engineer Schultz with two men armed with rifles upon the cowcatcher, and as many more on the pilot of the engine, steamed south through a double line of Pinkerton men and police officers. The strikers made no attempt to stop the train, and it arrived at South Chicago without incident. At this time until 5 o'clock trains were dispatched from the Forty-third street yards without interference. A down freight which had been side-tracked during the first days of the strike was reported in motion, and the officials of the road, confident that the backbone of the strike was broken, called to the other roads that they would accept stock for all points. Up to 5 o'clock four trains had arrived from the south and six had left with freight for southern points.

While the officials of the Lake Shore were congratulating themselves, late in the afternoon a mysterious young man with a green shade over his eyes became the talk of the Twenty-second street district. At 4:30 a train of about eighteen freight cars was made up in the Twelfth street yards. Riflemen and revolver men were stationed at each end of the train. The muzzles of two guns peeped out of the windows of the cabin of the caboose, and two Pinkerton men were in the rear platform. While the train was passing Sixteenth stret a young man pulled open the switch at that point, and a second later eight cars were derailed, blocking both tracks on the ties. The mysterious young man escaped.

In an hour the cars were righted and the train resumed.

During the excitement at Forty-third street station Richard Power assaulted Officer Stanley and was taken to the police station. Power claims he was assaulted because he refused to move off a sidewalk.

It is reported that the officials of the various railroads entering the city have notified their employes that they need not visit the scene of the present strike under pain of dismissal.

If the strikers request the switchmen of the other roads not to handle Lake Shore cars it is almost certain that a general strike would be declared on all of the roads. The strikers say that they are prepared to fight the road all summer.

A Red Hot Mountain.

OTTAWA June 29.—A hunting party of young gentlemen, named Sutton, Williamson, Van Horne, Cribbs and Alexander, Alphonse Ford. Adam Ford received two wounds, one in the face and one in the bowels, which it is thought will prove fatal. Alphonse was untouched. Adam fired two shots at him. A physician and a priest went to see the wounded man.

GALLANT SAILORS.

Heroic Work by the Crew of the Fine-ship Tennessee.

PORTLAND, Me., June 29.—The officers of the deck on board of the United States flagship Tennessee, lying at anchor in the outer harbor of Portland, yesterday discovered dense masses of smoke arising from a schooner about two miles distant. About two manned and Capt. Robert Boyd sent a party of sailors with axes and fire extinguishers under Cadet Shindle and Sailmaker Caddy to offer assistance. The schooner was the Lucy Baker, Capt. Hamilton, of Rockport, Me., which had come here for a harbor on account of an easterly gale blowing along the coast. She was bound for Boston with a cargo of 1,900 barrels of lime, and had run on the rocks in Whitehead Passage with such force that she bilged almost immediately. The crew threw the deck load of 250 barrels of lime and other cargo in the hold overboard, attempting to float her. Thus they worked until 4 o'clock a. m., when the cargo was discovered to be on fire, and the crew were compelled to abandon her.

The sailors from the Tennessee boarded the burning schooner, and in less than no time had her sails set, when the main part of the rigging by cutting away the weather shrouds. The gallantry and heroism displayed, and the willingness with which the officers and tars of the Tennessee and Lucy Baker called forth the highest commendation of a large crowd which had assembled in steam yachts, sail and row boats to witness the rescue. The schooner was towed by G. F. Burgess, of Rockport, and was not insured. She will be a total loss.

MRS. CLEVELAND'S LEGACY.

Her Share of Her Grandfather's Estate Only $10,000, Instead of $50,000.

WARSAW, N. Y., June 29.—Neither President Cleveland's wife nor any of the heirs of the late Col. J. B. Folsom appeared yesterday at the probate of the will. Benjamin Folsom, of Buffalo, was here as attorney, and Dr. W. N. Martin, of Folsomdale. Judge Healy appointed Loyd A. Hayward appraiser and Dr. W. N. Martin and L. M. Kittaly appraisers. The property amounts to $150,000, of which $25,000 is personal. The real estate lies in Omaha, Tarsonas and Lyle, Neb., and Attica and Folsomdale, N. Y. The homestead of 200 acres is to be reserved intact, with its appurtenances, until the grandchildren, who are minors, reach their majority. The western property is to remain intact for six years. The will divides the property among his eight grandchildren, share and share alike. Thus it will be seen, that unless the western property increases, as it is expected to do, the president's wife will receive only $20,000, instead of $50,000, as reported.

Fires in Various Places.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 29.—Shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday morning the bakery of J. H. Arthaus, three buildings and a barn with stock were burned. The loss on stock is $5,000; on the buildings $1,500. The building was fully covered by insurance.

SALEM, Mass., June 29.—The large summer hotel, the house and barn of Parker F. Tirrell in Wenham, and owned by Capt. Tirrell of Beverly, have been burned. The loss is $6,000; insurance, $3,000

BUTTE, Mont., June 29.—Scott & Co.'s oatmeal mill has been burned. Loss, $10,000; no insurance.

BAY CITY, Mich., June 29.—The warehouse of Thorn & Hawkins was burned. The building was filled with cement, lime, hair, plaster, etc. Loss, $10 000, covered by insurance. The fire is supposed by rain, which slaked a quantity of lime.

Alleged Tampering with a Jury.

BUFFALO, June 29.—Sworn statements made by eleven members of the court of sessions grand jury are published, setting forth that a lawyer, Charles T. Whitcher, had attempted to influence them through the postal card concerning a case in which he desired an indictment found. The case involves Horace Selleck, of Holland, Erie county, and Dr. Lewis Lee, of Gilbert Mills, being anxious to have the former indicted for abortion. The lawyer makes a counter statement, claiming that certain politicians and officials were trying to get Selleck's case quashed. Judge Hammond advised the grand jury to find an indictment against Whitcher.

Effect of Mr. Randall's Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—From computations made at the treasury, based on last year's receipts, it is estimated that the Randall tariff bill in the house will effect a reduction in the government of $34,027,965, including $7,000,000 on account of the removal of tariff on distillate article, $1,529,124 on account of the additions to the free list, and $26,467,089 on account of the removal of the internal revenue tax on tobacco.

Fatally Hurt by a Frightened Team.

GREENFIELD, Mass., June 29.—A team of horses becoming frightened at a train, overturned a wagon, throwing out four men. Joseph Mullen of East Pepperell, had his skull fractured and died in a few hours. He severely injured internally. Both will probably die. Frank Mullen had one of his legs badly hurt and Patrick Rooney had his collar bone broken.

Town Topics Missing.

NEW YORK, June 29.—The case of Paul M. Potter, of Town Topics, was called in the court of general sessions to-day for libel, on complaint of William Dorshemier, editor of The Star. He failed to respond and his bonds of $1,000 each were forfeited. The judge ordered that Potter's bonds be forfeited, but said he would not issue a bench warrant until to-morrow, when he will require the defendant to appear.

A Murderer Shot by Officers.

HARRISON, Tex., June 29.—T. K. Singleton murdered two men in Louisiana and then came to Texas. In Correll county, Tex., in 1885, he was an accomplice with Jack Bell in killing Frank A. Hyde and Moore. Since 1885 he has committed various thefts. Yesterday news came that Singleton had been killed in Greer county while resisting arrest.

The Anarchist Trial.

CHICAGO, June 29.—The jury in the Anarchist case will stand eight for conviction, with the exception that the defense has temporarily accepted three men. They were locked up with the four "true and accepted members."

Dead at the Bottom of a Shaft.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 29.—John Thomas, engineer in a local shaft near this city, was found dead at the bottom of the shaft yesterday. Thomas went down to start the pumps, and it is supposed died in a fit.

A Brooklyn Painter Killed.

SUMMIT, N. J., June 29.—James L. Wall, a painter, 30 years old, No. 198 Prospect street, Brooklyn, was killed at this place yesterday by the Chatham drill engine.

In Jail for Horse Stealing.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—William Carroll, a resident of Brooklyn, is in Moyamensing prison in default of bail for stealing a horse and carriage.

SOLVING THE MYSTERY.

NEEBE SAYS THAT KRUEGER THREW THE CHICAGO BOMB.

How the Desperate Man Met His Death the Following Day—Trying to Kill an Officer First but Failing—A Remarkable Story.

CHICAGO, June 29.—"The man who threw the bomb is dead." This startling remark was made to-night to a correspondent by Oscar Neebe, one of the eight men now arraigned in Judge Gary's court for complicity in the Haymarket horrors. "It is no wonder," he continued, "that the police have not found him. I did not at the time know who threw the terrible missile, but I have taken every means to find out, and my opportunities are greater than those of the police. The man who threw the bomb was Rhelnhold Krueger, who tried to kill Officer Michael Madden the day after the Haymarket riot, and who was fatally shot by Madden. Krueger was driven to desperation by the deed that he did on the night of May 4. All that night he and a companion spent in the saloons in Milwaukee avenue drinking hard. They were armed, and on Wednesday Krueger was heard to say in one of these places that he was determined to kill the first policeman he met and to die with him. He feared capture and hanging and made up his mind to die with his boots on."

This remarkable story led to an investigation of Krueger's record. William Seliger, the indicted man who will give state's evidence, says that Krueger was one of the conspirators in the meeting at the north meeting held on West Lake street on the night of May 3. Lingg, Engel, Fischer, Hirschberger and Appel were there. It was at that meeting that the plot was laid. In the investigation made by State's Attorney Grinnell and Capt. Schaack revealed the fact that Krueger was one of the most radical of the Anarchists, and a constant advocator of offensive action. His name was found among the list in The Arbeiter Zeitung office. He was a single man, born in Germany, 22 years old, 5 feet 9 inches in height and of light complexion. He did not look like a laboring man. This description agrees in the main with the description which John Bonset gives of the man who threw the bomb. Neither Fischer nor Schnaubelt answers that description. Krueger is known and he occupied a room at No. 119 North Paulina street. He was known to be engaged with Louis Lingg and two other men in the manufacture of dynamite and bombs. He attended the Haymarket meeting with Wilhelm Boggs. After the terrible affair there all the other conspirators surrendered themselves and left their homes or hiding places only when dragged forth by the police. Krueger and Boggs went on a debauch, as described.

On the afternoon of the 5th the two men moved south on Desplaines street, approaching gradually the scene of the massacre of the preceding night. There they knew that there would be policemen. In the saloon of Henry Schneider, at Desplaines and Fulton streets, Krueger displayed a bulldog revolver and declared that he would kill the first policeman that he met. He went to the door and fired into the street. Officer Madden, who was not far away, ran to the saloon, came to the part that covered poor Madden's left breast and fired. The officer dragged his assailant to the sidewalk, where they engaged in a life and death struggle. Policeman Daly and Hartnett ran to the scene and Daly shot Krueger in the right thigh, bringing him to his knees. Madden fired as he fell; "You have killed me and I will kill you." Then he put his revolver against Krueger's forehead and the ball pierced the Anarchist's brain to the base. The two men were taken to the hospital, where Madden recovered rapidly. Krueger lay unconscious until some time after midnight between Saturday and Sunday, when he died. Then Capt. Chandler, who had been at No. 61 Austin avenue, watched over him and took his body.

A few days after Krueger was shot some friends of his removed the body from his room, in North Paulina street, to a house near Roley street and Bloomington road. Two weeks later they placed dynamite bombs were found under a sidewalk at that point. The police said that they had evidence to convince them that the bombs had been carried in one of the hacks that took Krueger's room, but they declined to make this evidence public.

DENVER, June 29.—The Knights of Labor here meet every Monday for debate. Last night their speakers attempted to justify the action of the Chicago bomb thrower. Joseph Labadie, a self-confessed Anarchist, claimed in the freedom of speech was the essential and unalienable right of every American, and that so long as overt acts were refrained from no power could be interfered with. Judson Grennell said that the Chicago police had time and time again interfered with peaceable meetings, not merely of Socialists, but of ordinary union meetings. The people became goaded to desperation, and, having no means of protecting themselves from "the most brutal and arbitrary police force in America," were obliged to resort to dynamite. There were other speakers, most of whom took similar views.

Muldoon-Lewis Wrestling Match.

CHICAGO, June 29.—About 2,000 people assembled in Battery D. to witness the Graeco-Roman wrestling contest between five, between William Muldoon and Lewis Lewis. At the first collision in the first bout Lewis secured his famous "strangle" hold on Muldoon and threw him in 3m. and 30s. In the second bout Muldoon forced the contest and it was give and take for twenty-five minutes, when ten minutes were given for a rubber bout. During the rest Muldoon, for some unknown reason, retired to his dressing room. He returned to the ring and while Lewis was trying to get a half Nelson lock Muldoon slipped his right arm over Lewis' neck and by a quick turn threw Lewis clear over him, landing him squarely on his shoulders. Muldoon again retired to the dressing room and early after it announced that he was ill and unable to continue the match. The referee thereupon decided in favor of Lewis.

WOMAN AND HEALTH.

IMPORTANCE OF PHYSICAL CULTURE AND GOOD HEALTH.

Simplicity in Dress—Women of the South—A Star Actress—Working Girls in Society—Husbands and Wives—Early Engagements—Clippings and Notes.

It used to be considered fashionable to take no exercise, and the prevailing custom of little, cramping shoes, too short for the foot, and further adjustered with a French heel set in the center of the sole, helped out the fancy. I declare I have known people who could not walk a mile without groaning were typical less flies. Now girls learn to row with their brothers, tramp with their fathers and are quite as fond of the gymnasium as their masculine admirers. Eighteen inches about the heel is no longer desirable, nor is guilt the sine qua non of fashion. It is certainly true that we owe our children a culture of the body as well as that of the brain. A little fellow with spindling limbs may have a fine head, but the development a little maid with crooked shoulders may become as straight and symetrical as her neighbor who has passed with credit at an Irene. If a mother should permit a girl to run to the age of maturity without learning to row we would blame her extensively, yet we consider the offense which permitted both bent shoulders and sallow skin. In all cases there is a pure tablet upon which to write the record of care.

There is no doubt about the importance of physical culture. The hair, the teeth, the eyes and the skin are subject to the influences of the air. The skin, the latter to be almost entombed by dust, bathing and fresh air. People go all the year with the pores of their skin clogged, and their eyes never fair enough to be obtained at the water cure, simply because they do there what they neglect at home—bathe regularly, eye, breast and body. Physicians are not, of course, at hand to prescribe certain baths as infallible cures. What will do for a robust person will kill a frail one, but the general rule of frequent and judicious bathing may be laid down. Then comes the fresh air cure. The windows of a house should be open day and night, and the latter should be patient of God's sunlight on the floor inside. The esthetic gloom so depressing to the young who are to be carefully trained, in order would urge gymnastic exercises almost of Greek and Latin first, and a romp in the green fields before any instruction in books. Then the young people arise in the blessings of health all round us and silent as and within reach.

Last week the writer overheard a very much dressed woman conversing on the street corner with a youth. "I scarcely know what it is to walk," she said, "and I do so dislike walking." The close observer took in the cramped features, the heavily powdered skin, with the sallow color looking through it, observed the tightly drawn face and a pucker about the eyes it shuns and shuddered as she eye fell on the pinched waist and narrow shoulders and this passed for good! I need not tell a girl not to curse to be vigorous, for masculine to have muscles. Her shoulders should be thrown back, her eye seen and her color good. It is a curious fact that a bath at 10, supposed to have constant headache at 30, and indigestion is no more a part of her earthly lot than to go and come. At a dancing party and watch the delicate women tax their stomachs and yet they wonder why they are not well. True, we may inherit certain organic troubles, but the majority of such is the inconvenience of entailment, but we can stop further transmission. Bad breath ought to be looked upon as worse than mild fits, and yet you would scarcely excuse a lady the latter attachment.—Kansas City Journal.

Penalty of Being a Star Actress.

Take a sensitive, highly organized girl, who is also exquisitely vain, and put her in the footlights and before the public audience, and you set up what the doctors call a "local inflammation." The ecstasy of vanity will take her to the theatre through dangers that would kill a longshoreman in a week. She calls it "enthusiasm for her art."

I have seen her, weak-chested and neuralgic, about to catch her death of cold as it were a festal procession, and she trod the one night stands with an airy defiance that made the pharmacopoeia hide its superfluous drugs.

Out of the superheated cars to the cold theater through the sleet. No sooner into the barren dressing room than she stuffed a shawl into the broken pane and began to disrobe for the full-dress scene. Then for half an hour in the draughts of the stage, with her arms bare, her throat and chest exposed, that have been wrapped up all day in furs in the heated cars.

But a woman's enthusiasm lifts her over these difficulties, as a sea gull surmounts a line of ice. Heated and flushed with the heavy clothing and violent action of the last scene, she will run to the dressing room to don her traveling wraps, snatch a bite, and off through the storm to the next stand.

She doesn't know there is such a thing as weather. She is thinking of the applause and the flowers. The next night, as she hurriedly gets off stage undresses part of the trunk in the new dressing room, a little shower of tiny crystals fall like snow to the floor. It is the frozen perspiration of last night's triumph. But the "things" must go on, for she must go on. So her exultant young heart must melt the ice and keep her warm.

Nothing can beat a high pulse. I have seen health win a triumph that genius could not hope for. And there is a spiritual lift to a woman's emotions that is married with health, endurance, and defiance in spite of weak lungs and tuberculous diathesis.

But there comes a time when her emotions get the best of her. She can't simulate all the time. She loses the power to discriminate between the real and the ideal. She may marry a gambler with the belief that he is a saint, and empty all her hard earnings into his lap. She may—logically enough, there are a hundred things she may do, and nearly always succeeds in doing, that will show you that her profession has made her insane.

Parents look somewhere in success. You never find it in patient drudgery. It's like hay fever and consumption in the curse of the penalties of organizations that succeed.—Sym Cynic.

Beauty of Simplicity in Dress.

Nobody who has ever seen Mrs. Edmund Russell for a moment will doubt of her future success, and if fashion is not charmed with this American it proves it wrongly. Here she has been giving advice to fashionable ladies in private parlors. Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett opened her new house for her, and we had, under her patronage, from Mrs. Russell so lucid a lesson in the basic principles of expression, with illustrations, so graceful a woman as I have never seen. Wherever she goes she is the most beautifully dressed woman in the room, and her dress is made of chese-cloth 5 cents a yard. All women look at her with envy. But it is an art to convocationalize the dress of a street woman so that it is in place at a modern reception.

The other morning thirty of us, in the tight sleeves and tight belts and heavy draperies and hot bonnet-strings, and gloves as tight as our skins, and boots a misery on, of the perfect, listened to Mrs. Russell while she talked to us on dress. There were not three present who could raise the arms fearlessly straight over the head, or who could stoop to pick up a pin as a child would. Mrs. Russell, in her 60 coat crimson chese-cloth, was as comfortable as a boy in a ballet-suit, as beautiful as a picture, and no one could find fault with this dress, wherever she might wear it. "Perhaps in heaven we shall all know how to dress like that," she remarked, as her hand arched under her bustle as most backs do, whose collar chafed her neck as all collars will, whose sleeves pinched at the wrist, and whose corsets, though they were not even tied, were tight, as all corsets are, however loosely put on, the weight of skirts dragging from the hips to the feet.

I doubt if a single woman who reads this is altogether happy and comfortable in her clothes; yet, strangely enough, we all hate "dress reform." But when a pretty woman like Mrs. Russell shows us how to get our whole year's wardrobe for the amount we pay for one Paris dress, and, discarding every single thing that tortures other women, yet is daintily, exquisitely dressed and draped, so that every man admires her and every woman envies her, it seems there are reforms and reformers. But Mrs. Russell's dress is but the expression of her knowledge of the laws of harmony in everything.—Margery Deane in Boston Beacon.

The Women of the South.

There is an impression in the north that educated and cultivated southern women are less able to take care of themselves and fortunate by misfortune than northern women of the same class are. The impression is not well founded, and those who have had more opportunity to observe, and have not had access to correct sources of information. There is another incorrect impression entertained at the north with regard to southern women, it is that they do not hold labor in as much esteem as northern women do, and are not so ready therefore, to undertake it for themselves when thrown upon their own resources.

It is doubtful if there are in any section of the country, in proportion to the number of the class to which they belong, as many refined and cultivated women who are earning their own support or helping to earn it as there are in the south. And, more probably, that when slavery was an institution, and there was little poverty among educated people, southern women of the better class were as often found engaged in work of any kind that was not purely a matter of choice. There was no occasion for them to work. When misfortune came, however, they were not found wanting in any of the qualities which were necessary to meet the requirements of their changed conditions. They faced the situation pluckily and hopefully, and did willingly whatever they could find to do. Everywhere in the south, in town and country, there are young women employed quite above, belonging to the best families and moving in the best circles, who are quietly earning their own support and helping to support others dependent upon them. They make no parade of what they are doing, and those whose lot is exceptionally hard seldom complain.

The south has made great progress in the last twenty years. She is richer now, doubtless, than ever before, but she is not perhaps, not so apparent as it was in slavery times, because it is much more generally distributed. If the truth could be known it would appear, doubtless, that the women of the south, by their example, self reliance, readiness and willingness to do with their own hands whatever became necessary for them to do, have done more than all else to lift them above the level of the colored family, but had the help who waited upon her, and who, by the way, was far superior in everything, dared to have sat at that same table that she waited on, they would not be half so hard to be found in the south and they are still working, and have as profound an appreciation of the dignity of labor as there is to be found anywhere in the world.—Savannah (Ga.) News.

Working Girls Position in Society.

We all have to work in some way, and perhaps more than half of us have to earn our own living, then why should not the girl who works in the kitchen be treated with the same respect as a young girl at a school teacher? But they are not, indeed. I have seen the sewing girl seated at the table and be treated as one of the family, but had the help who waited upon her, and who, by the way, was far superior in everything, dared to have sat at that same table she would have been shoved into the kitchen to be found in the south; and they are still working, and have as profound an appreciation of the dignity of labor as there is to be found anywhere in the world.—Savannah (Ga.) News.

A Hair Dye from Walnut Shells.

There is danger in some of the patent hair dyes and hence The Detroit Free Press can offers what is known as the walnut hair dye. The simplest form is the expressed juice of the large shell of green walnuts. To preserve the juice a little alcohol is commonly added to it with a few crushed cloves, and the whole digested together. Some persons use the juice of the hull, but fortnight, when the clear portion is decanted and, if necessary, filtered. Sometimes a little common salt is added with the same intention of preserving it, but it is not necessary for this purpose. The most convenient way of application is by means of a sponge.—Exchange

A New Wrinkle Is Coming.

A new wrinkle is coming over the sea to agitate the realms of fashion next season, if not this summer. It is the fashion of using tints to lend some special significance to a card of invitation, and no longer have it an engraved bit of conventional pasteboard, but a work of art, indeed, the picturesque captivating picture the nature of the entertainment to be given. These cards cost like the missives from the hand of the artist—in the line of exclusive society. Artists must not be bashful in sending in their bills for work that must, of course, be unique.—Courier-Journal.

First Female Lawyer in California.

Miss Kate Stoneman, the sister of Gov. Stoneman of California, has passed the requisite legal examination in New York, and, if admitted to the bar, will be the first female lawyer in that state.

The woman-soul, when it sets itself to come to the rescue—in church, state, society, family—will subordinate all other things.—Rose Cleveland.

Let me know what a man thinks of his family, and I can most generally pick out the virtues that will fit him to a T.—Jud Lafagan.

Boston women have started a rage for buttercups, which are popular as corsage bouquets.

Peanuts belong, as much, to one as to the other. Probably neither husband nor wife likes them. He has their ago heartily that she has her little tempers and petulances; that her opinions on many subjects differ radically from his own; that she is very likely governed by her feelings rather than by her reason, but he loves her through all. And on her part she has found out that many things which please her husband, though, do not appeal to him at all; that he does not care a fig for her favorite poem, and characterizes as "bosh" the story over which she has shed tears. And she well knows that no one else could make him so happy, and in making his happiness she finds her own. Verily love sees other men well to wear truly Cloud—Good Housekeeping.

With Regard to Early Engagements.

She was about 18 and as pretty as a peach. He was about 22, and they were engaged. They had been out to the theatre with her, and as they trotted off happily. I made some remark to her mother.

"They're young to be engaged, in my own opinion," she said, "but it's a good thing it's good for both of them. He's an honest, steady boy, and she's as pretty as a peach, and I am willing that they should be devoted to one another. I encourage it. I like to know that she is so fond of him that the flattery and flummery of less honest men does not touch her. She's proud of her beau. He runs $1 her, he simply slaves for her, and she satisfies even the girlish vanity which is all girls' danger. He is honorable, and would cut his hand off rather than think of doing an injury to her. He's proud of her, and it keeps him steady, because he has an all-absorbing subject to think about. The love may die out, yes, it may; but by just kind, if it ever happens, my child will have learned so deeply the lesson of what respect is due to her, what devotion is capable of, that she will find it very difficult to find a man who will not honor her forget it. And so, I set them go, and I shall be quite content if when they are old enough to marry they love each other as well enough for that time."—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Sharp Arrow for Husbands.

A man and wife enjoying a walk together, or a tete-a-tete sweetened by confidential and affectionate conversation, is a sight delightful for the mind and man. But too often the picture is reversed. He saunters out with her, careless and uninterested, scarcely, during the walk, uttering a word to her or about her dress, and is guilty of abuse of the sciences of intelligence! In the hour of absence and of solitude the husband is unconscious of the sweetness of the domestic disposition and demeanor of his wife, of her unwearied endeavors to promote and perpetuate his happiness, and of its being his boundless duty to show by the most unequivocal expressions of attachment and of tenderness his full approbation of her assiduity and faithfulness. But too often these expressions of approbation are not forthcoming, and, with a mistaken silence, he shrinks from honoring his wife and rewarding her by words of praise which are so well deserves and would so greatly appreciate. "My master is all very well," said the dog, but I wish he had a tail to wag when he is pleased."—The Quiver.

Destroys Her Personal Independence.

Anna B. McMahan, writing about domestic life in the United States, says that people never cease to wonder that poor girls choose labor in factories, behind counters and at sewing machines rather than live comfortably and happily work in families, and she goes on to intimate that while the average housekeeper is not the most delightful person to have for a mistress, still the average hired girls shrink from housework mainly because it utterly destroys her personal independence. There may be more in this than many people imagine. The factory girl has her evenings, her meal times and her general freedom. The domestic is never her own.—Philadelphia Times.

A Hair Dye from Walnut Shells.

There is danger in some of the patent hair dyes and hence The Detroit Free Press can offers what is known as the walnut hair dye. The simplest form is the expressed juice of the large shell of green walnuts. To preserve the juice a little alcohol is commonly added to it with a few crushed cloves, and the whole digested together. Some persons use the juice of the hull, but this is not necessary. Sometimes a little common salt is added with the same intention of preserving it, but it is not necessary for this purpose. The most convenient way of application is by means of a sponge.—Exchange

A New Wrinkle Is Coming.

A new wrinkle is coming over the sea to agitate the realms of fashion next season, if not this summer. It is the fashion of using tints to lend some special significance to a card of invitation, and no longer have it an engraved bit of conventional pasteboard, but a work of art, indeed, the picturesque captivating picture the nature of the entertainment to be given. These cards cost like the missives from the hand of the artist—in the line of exclusive society. Artists must not be bashful in sending in their bills for work that must, of course, be unique.—Courier-Journal.

THE WORKING GIRL.

HOW SHE APPEARS AND HOW SHE LIVES IN NEW YORK.

Going to Work and Coming Home—Her Poor Food and Poorer Wages—The Summit of Her Ambition—How She Spends Her Sundays.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, June 8.—The working girl of this city is hereby without knowing it. She works harder, gets less pay and has fewer comforts than the working girl in any other spot over which the Stars and Stripes wave. She is on the street in the second railways at 7 o'clock in the morning, going to her work, with a cheerful face, as tidy a toilet as she can afford, and possibly a rose or pin on her breast. You will see her again in the evening, going home, pale, disheveled and weary, swinging to a strap in the car, while the fat broken up lawyers, and silk-hatted gentry monopolize the seats. It might then occur to you that American men are not the "most gallant in the world," though it would be safer not to say so. You will lose faith in tradition's veracity at once. But you will remember a little later that they are not all Americans. Many of them come from countries where gallantry is not a national virtue, and others are descendants of foreigners. New York has not much thirty American to boast of, save the soil it stands on.

You may notice the working girl's dress. It will show service, but has a strong leaning toward style. Her hat is sure to be fitted into a jaunty basque and there will be that about her costume, poor as it is, which shows that she knows how to make herself look up with the times if she only had a chance. Whatever the style is she approximates it in her poor way. She will have a little bonnet, or toque, made of the material of her dress, and though poor, be sure, but with the flare of fashion about it, and she will wear it with an air, too. She is pretty sometimes, but it is rarely a lasting beauty. It is not fragile. It fades early and reaches the break-down period soon.

You will notice, too, perhaps, how slender are the wrists as the dress sleeve is away from the hand that clutches the car strap. You may wonder why she doesn't sew up the rent in her dress. She hasn't time. She wears the dress until she is ready to be seen in a heavy, and then she is so very tired, she thinks she will let it go till morning, and when she wakes up she finds that she has overslept, and hasn't time. It is most all she knows one another well enough by that time."—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company has reduced the premium on its $5,000 insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to
per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the policies issued by this company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and does not depend upon an inventory of the assets of the company, which is generally of no value. Policies issued for one year or a $5,000 policy for $25 for a $10,000 policy for $50. Every contract is backed by assets of over $600,000.
The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has been in successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims under its accident policies, and has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $262,182.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company's business will be more readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having established assets amounting to over $600,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000. ### JOTTINGS.

—The regular July meeting of the North Plainfield Common Council will be held on Friday evening next.

—A regular meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders will be held in the Court House at Elizabeth to-morrow afternoon.

—The Trinity Reformed Church Sunday school will hold its session at three o'clock p. m. instead of 2.30, as formerly, during the months of July and August.

—A game of base ball will be played on the grounds at Westfield on Monday afternoon next between a picked nine from North Plainfield and a nine from Jersey City.

—The second case of Miller Bros. vs. Alonzo De Camp, which was to have come up for trial before Justice Nash yesterday, has been adjourned for over two weeks.

—The third annual excursion of the Trinity Reformed, First Presbyterian and Park Avenue Baptist Sunday schools to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove will take place in August.

—A movement is said to be going the rounds among the barbers of the city to close their places of business on Sunday. The scheme has worked satisfactorily in other places.

—A meeting of the Union County Board of Agriculture and the executive committee will be held in the Court House in Elizabeth to-morrow. Important business is to be transacted.

—It required the combined strength of four men, together with a bottle of ether and less than a hundred yards of rope, to clip a donkey belonging to Mr. T. B. Brooks of West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon.

—Thomas Peterson, who recently escaped from the Union County Jail by scaling a fence, was re-arrested and is now in Gazzam on Monday night. He was taken back to jail and will now be sent to State Prison.

—Mayor Rockfellow is at least entitled to honorable mention in his efforts to outdo the fishermen of the city. Yesterday he captured a black bass weighing three and one-half pounds from the Raritan river at Bound Brook.

—The work of repainting and decorating Muhlenberg Hospital which has been in progress under the supervision of Architect Smith for some time past, was yesterday completed. The building now presents an attractive appearance.

—Prof. Vos Boyle will deliver a temperance lecture, accompanied by some of his humorous recitations to-morrow evening in Reform Hall. All those who wish a good laugh, as well as instruction, are cordially invited. Admission free.

—The members of Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1, took their apparatus to Cedar Brook for trial last evening, and later pumped from the well on Second street west of Park avenue. The engine appeared to be "filling" and the engineer remedied the difficulty.

—Marshal Weaver this morning served a notice on a prominent merchant to have abolished an alleged nuisance elevated to the detriment of the health of the inhabitants in the vicinity of Somerset street and Greenbrook road, said nuisance consisting of heaps of refuse.

—John H. French having decided to give up the ready made clothing business, will sell the balance of his stock at great sacrifice, see advertisement. Those wishing to buy clothing he invites to call at his store No. 29 West Front street, before purchasing elsewhere.

—A Park avenue business man locked up his store and left suspended in front a flag while he went to his dinner at noon to-day. In his absence some of his friends draped the flag in mourning and tacked a card on the door bearing the inscription "Gone though not forgotten."

—James Parent, the nine-year-old son of Andrew Parent, who resides at Nelson and Richmond streets in New Brunswick, was drowned while bathing with some playmates in the Raritan river at that place last evening. The little fellow was taken with cramps and sank before assistance could be summoned. The body was recovered two hours later.

Convicted of Selling on Sunday.

Numerous complaints have been made to the policeof late of the open violation of the city ordinance prohibiting the sale of cider on Sunday. On Monday morning Martin Geoghan, proprietor of an alleged disreputable house on East Fourth street, was arrested and arraigned before City Judge Ulrich to answer to a charge preferred by Chief Dodd, of having illegally dispensed cider on the Sunday previous. Geoghan pleaded not guilty and obtained counsel, the trial being set down for yesterday afternoon in the City Court room. Arthur P. Miller represented the defendant and ex-Judge Geo. P. Saydam appeared for the prosecution. The following is a list of the jurymen: C. B. Crane, R. Walker, W. Addis, J. H. Doane, F. B. Huff, G. W. Rank, D. J. Marshal, R. A. TenEyck, John Johnson, W. Claassen, B. H. Bachman and J. Bellow.

At the trial the counsel for the defendant raised several objections which the court overruled. The witnesses who appeared for the prosecution were James McCarthy, John Culley and John Kiely. The latter testified to having paid for cider in defendant's place on the Sunday named, while the former testified to having received cider without pay. James Rollins another witness for the city failed to answer to a summons, and a warrant has been issued for his arrest to show cause for his non-appearance. Mr. C. O. Meeker and John Keaney were also subpœnaed on the panel of jurymen, but failed to respond. Proceedings are about to be instituted against them.

The defendant in his own behalf testified to having dispensed no cider on the Sunday in question and produced Annie O'Connell, Susan Ackerman and James Balbitt to substantiate his statement. The case was given to the jury late in the afternoon, and after several hours' deliberation returned a verdict of "guilty." Judge Ulrich reserved sentence until to-morrow morning.

Geoghan it will be remembered is the husband of the woman who was arrested on a similar charge last September and who was fined $50 for the offence. The place in which the alleged selling took place has for a long time been an eye-sore to the respectable inhabitants who reside in the immediate vicinity. Rows are said to be of frequent occurrence and the police are often called upon to eject an unruly customer or to restore order among the inmates. The sentence of the court will probably, for a time at least, prohibit the violation of the law.

In the case against Mrs. Bridget Burke on a like charge, Borough Counsel Jackson moved for a dismissal of the complaint on the ground that there was no allegation that the sale was not in a case of necessity. Mr. Saydam strenuously opposed the motion and the Court reserved decision until this morning. The case stands in statu quo

A similar case against Lawrence Pasoli is set down for trial on Friday.

The New Steamer on the Road.

The old No. 2, engine which has been in active service here for so many years past was this morning shipped to the Amoskeag Works at Manchester, N. H. The company expect to have their new steamer by the Fourth of July, in which event the engine will be paraded through the streets preceded by a brass band.

Since the above was written, the following dispatch has been received from Fire Commissioner Knowland:

NEW YORK, June 30th.

EDITOR EVENING NEWS:—The new fire engine for Plainfield was shipped from Manchester, N. H., on Monday, June 28th. I think you can safely say the boys will have it for duty July 4th.

FREDERICK KNOWLAND.

Silent Workers.

Some fourteen years ago the old Orthodox Quaker Meeting House on Peace street had a new ceiling put in the attic over the meeting-room. About a year ago stains on the ceiling led the worshipers to the conclusion that they were due to a leak in the roof, which was forth with repaired, but still the stains continued to spread. An investigation was made a few days ago, when it was discovered that the ceiling was rotted and, how long, no one knows, but it is presumed over twelve years ago, and yesterday over two loads of their filth was removed from the place. The damage is considerable, but steps are to be taken to obliterate the nuisance. Many bats were driven from the building.

—No word has yet been received concerning the horse which mysteriously disappeared from the stable of Mr. F. Nels on West Fourth street during Sunday night. Mr. Nels says the animal has probably wandered to Liberty Corner, from which place he originally came.

—Under the supervision of the Street Committee, Street Commissioner Angleman this morning began the work of paving the gutters along Park avenue with substantial stone blocks. When completed the street commissioner intends to have the entire surface of the roadbed a coating of fine stone which will greatly improve the thoroughfare.

—Guv. Ablett yesterday filed the last law of the Legislature session of 1886. This makes 279 laws, a larger number than were enacted in any one session since 1875. Of the 279 laws there was a thirteen weeks session, and 439 laws went on the statute books. Since then the number averaged about 225. The law filed yesterday is the act enabling Newark to devote public lands for burial purposes.

—The residents in Jackson avenue are thoroughly aroused at the conduct of seven Plainfield young men from sixteen to twenty years of age passing along that neighborhood last evening singing the most obscene songs. Unavailing efforts were made to foil Marshal Weaver to secure the arrest of the entire crowd. They were identified, conspicuous among them being a young man named Marsh who bears a thoroughly bad reputation. It was expected to have warrants out to-day for their arrest. It is alleged that they have committed the offence several times before.

Who are They?

Emily Putnam and Julia De Reiter, aged respectively sixteen and fifteen years, who gave their residence place as Plainfield, were arrested at Coney Island on Monday night and locked up at headquarters. To the Chief of Police the girls stated that they ran away from their homes in this city and went to the island, where they met Sam Batcheler, a singer, and Wm. J. Heapley, a waiter, and went with them to a place called the "Red Light," where they registered as the wives of the men. The De Reiter girl claimed to have an uncle in New York city and they were turned over to the authorities there, who will place them in his charge. The name "De Reiter" does not appear in the directory, and if the girls originated from here they are thought to have given fictitious names.

Miss Emily Putnam is a daughter of Mr. L. C. Putnam of West Second street. The lady stoutly denies the allegations made and insists that the story was first started by an enemy. She has not been absent from home during the time mentioned, and to this end can furnish an abundance of proof.

Arrangements for the Fourth at New Market.

Extensive preparations are being made for the celebration of the Fourth of July at New Market on Monday next. Contributions are being solicited for the purpose, one part of which will be devoted to the purchase of fireworks and the remainder will be divided into prizes to be awarded to the successful competitors in the various unique and entertaining races which will take place during the day. In the morning a base ball match will be played between two local picked nines. During the afternoon, boat races, tub races, wheelbarrow races, climbing a greased pole, chasing a shaved pig and other interesting features will be offered for the enjoyment of the spectators. In the evening a liberal amount of fireworks will be exploded, from a point to be hereafter designated along the beautiful New Market lake, where the effect will be most pleasing. The whole day's sport will be free, and a large number of persons from the surrounding country will undoubtedly avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded to be present and witness the exercises.

PERSONAL.

A german was given at the Park House last evening, and there was a large attendance.

Charles Griffen of East Second street started yesterday for Williamsport, Pa., to be absent for a few weeks.

Mrs. Thomas Yould, formerly of this city, but now of St. Paul, Minnesota, is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. J. Dent of West Sixth street.

Miss Elizabeth Thompson of LaGrande avenue has returned home after undergoing a course of instruction at the Model School in Trenton.

Miss Tolido, the twelve-year-old daughter of Stephen Haff, died at the home of her parents in Evona yesterday afternoon from Bright's disease.

Miss Bertha Vourbees of Millstone, Somerset county, who has been visiting relatives on Park Place in the borough, left the city to-day for Somerville.

The family of Mr. A. C. Vall of Madison avenue and Eighth street, returned to the city this morning, after a few weeks' absence at Manasquan.

An eight-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Muir died at the residence of his parents, corner of Second street and Plainfield avenue, about eight o'clock yesterday morning, from inflammation of the bowels.

Lobbout L. Martin and wife of North Plainfield left to-day for the Catskills where they will spend the summer. Fuyl, Martin, his son, and family, started for the Catskills yesterday to be absent during the heated term.

Dr. Robert W. Anderson, the popular young dentist of this place, and William D. Craig of Somerset street will sail for Europe on Saturday morning next per "Pomeritia" of the Anchor Line. They go for a few weeks' pleasure trip abroad.

Peter Alpaugh, the carpenter who was injured about the head and shoulder by falling from a scaffold in Messrs. Cook Bros.' lumber yard a week ago, and who was quite severely taken to his home at Bellington, is still confined to the house from the effects of his injuries.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Kate A. Monsell, who died at her home in Evona on Sunday afternoon, aged nineteen years, will take place from the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Evona, at five o'clock this afternoon. Rev. Mr. Taylor, the rector, will officiate.

Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist, addressed an audience of about 4,000 from a platform erected on the beach at Seabright in Monmouth county on Sunday afternoon, taking for his text the words "Seek, for ye shall find." During the service Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, the Prohibition candidate for the gubernatorial chair, occupied a seat on the platform

Mr. A. M. Sneeker of the Plainfield Lawn Tennis Club is among the single entries for the opening tournament of the New Jersey State Lawn Tennis Association which began on the grounds of the Orange Lawn Tennis Club at Montrose on Monday afternoon. The association is said to include most of the clubs in the State, and offers liberal prizes in the various contests.

It has been discovered that Gladstone's mother, as well as Parnell's, was a native of New Jersey. Her maiden name was Robertson. Her family was one of the oldest in the State and their name appears in a history of prominent New Jersey families published many years ago, a copy of which is in the library of School Commissioner Erastus G. Putnam of Elizabeth. The discovery of this fact draws a happy augury from the singular coincidence of the mothers of Ireland's two greatest uncrowned kings being Jersey girls.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

That Awful Smell.

EDISON EVENING NEWS—It is presumed by some that editors know nearly everything. If that be so, just take a stroll up Central avenue and past the corner of Third street, and then inform us from whence comes that awful smell. Awful is no name for it. Possibly the residents on the street have become accustomed to it, but the pedestrian who chances to pass that way, gets the full benefit of the offensive stench. I know not who it is that fosters this nuisance, but it seems to come fearfully from the building on the corner, where a horrid one may be due to some description of fertilizer stored in the little building. The health inspector should visit the place and hold a consultation in the matter and have the nuisance removed some further distance from the public thoroughfare, and thus relieve the traveling public from the nasty odor. Most respectfully,

A PEDESTRIAN.

—The case of Michael Burke vs. Special Policeman Randolph Marsh, brought by the plaintiff to recover damages for alleged illegal shooting of said complainant's dog, will come up before Justice Hetfield to-morrow afternoon.

—The installation of the Rev. Elbon B. Cobb, formerly of Ramapo, N. Y., as pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, will take place this evening. A sermon will be preached by the Rev. Wm. R. Richards of this city.

WESTFIELD.

William G. Peckham will soon start for a month's vacation in the Adirondacks.

Elm Lawn Tennis Club will give a series of tournaments July 3d and 5th at the courts on Elm street.

Thos. Love expects to make some decided changes in the old Lamson property on Broad street, which he purchased recently.

Saturday last Justice Jacques committed John Kelly to the county jail at Elizabeth for five days for intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Citizen Heinecks is making a complete change in the adornment and furniture of his honorial establishment for the coming season.

William W. Gilby is the lat at one to be congratulated. He was presented with a young daughter on Tuesday morning and is now a happy father.

The Amusement Committee is hard at work soliciting subscriptions toward defraying the expenses of the proposed celebration to be held on July 5th.

Latest Dispatches

Ogilby Pleads Non Vult and is Sentenced.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 30.—Arthur G. Ogilby arrived from the Trenton Insane Asylum, in this city at 2.55 o'clock this afternoon, in charge of Sheriff Cowvey and accompanied by his brother, Charles Ogilby. He was immediately taken before Judge Scudder, pleaded non vult to an indictment charging him with stealing $66,000 from the Dime Savings Bank while he was cashier.

LATER—4 p. m.—Judge Scudder has sentenced Ogilby to four years' imprisonment, and to pay $500 fine. No bail was asked for and he was immediately removed to jail. The sentence excites much surprise and is condemned by some as light.

A Period of Self-Humiliation.

This business of presentation at court is an extremely ugly and nasty affair, as a deal which no true American would accept for the sake of the empty honor gained. Uniform, or the court costume, including knee breeches and sword, is indispensable. From an æsthetic or picturesque point of view the knee breeches have their advantages, but as to the consideration that is due to the ladies, it is safe to say that American dames are as complaisant as those of any other nation when it is a question of wearing dress or the contrary, or adhering to a ceremony. But the American citizen at the English court in costume looks like nothing so much as a gentleman of the colonial days dragged to duty at the end of a string, after the fashion of the monkey in the organ-toned enterprise. To wait his turn while a long line of Guelphic magnificoes, nobodies pass in ahead of him to look on the fast-vanishing splendor of dukes and duchesses, lords and countesses, barons, baronets, knights and squires, to count the long weary hours, to weigh the self-humiliation in the scales of manhood's worth, is an ordeal which the right-minded citizen, republican and genial Holmes to come casually near swearing a profane oath. If an American citizen of the true stamp wants to gain a good idea of purgatory let him get well to the whim of being presented to the English court.

It is only fair to say that the most thoughtful section of the English people, the middle classes, are heartily ashamed of the whole business. There is plenty of loyalty in the air, but it is not exactly of the kind in the concrete, and though the masses will always flock to see a royal procession there are thousands of cultured Englishmen who would not walk to a window to see the queen. They would shoulder a musket and fight to the last man in the last ditch against any invasion of the realm, but the royal show is played out. If a man doubts this let him take up a recognized society paper like Truth or The World.—London Cor. Baltimore Herald.

Nearly All Born in America.

So much talk has been made about the foreign sounding names of the American Opera company, that we give the place of birth of most of them: Clara Louise L'Allemand, Syracuse, N. Y.; Helen Dudley Campbell, Louisville, Ky.; Jessie Bartlett Davis, Illinois; Christine Jossett, Buffalo, N. Y.; Charles Holloway, Brooklyn, N. Y.; May Fielding, Detroit, Mich.; Helena Hastreiter, Kentucky; Emma Juch, Vienna, of naturalized American parents; William Candidus, Philadelphia, Pa.; William H. Lee, New York city; Homer A. Moore, Chautauqua, N. Y.; Albert Parlet, San Francisco, Cal.; Adrian C. Shoddard, Massachusetts; Myron W. Whitney, Ashley, Mass.; William H. # PURITAN THE VICTOR.

GALA DAY AT MARBLEHEAD

The White Sloop Passing Her Competitors Amid Wild Cheering.

Wonderful Work of the Puritan Before the Wind—New York's Favorite Yacht Outsailed—A Scene that Nearly Capsized the Mayflower—Scenes and Incidents in the Bay.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., June 30.—The great and much anticipated regatta of the Eastern Yacht club was sailed yesterday, and victory once more rested with the Puritan, the Priscilla taking second and the Mayflower third. The day was perfect. Not a cloud obscured the sky, and a good technical breeze blew from the west. Many thousands of visitors were here to witness the contest. The race was to be sailed in fifteen mile triangle off Marblehead rock, five miles to a leg. At 12:07 o'clock the start was made. The Priscilla crossing the line first at 12:08, the Fortuna second. The Puritan, close behind, took the wrong course, was soon back, and crossed the line again at 12:11½, followed by the Mayflower at 12:12. Shortly past the line the Mayflower, almost careening, had to take in sail, as she was unable to hold up under the tremendous canvas she was attempting to carry and for several seconds was second and the Puritan third. At 12:16 o'clock the second-class boats crossed the line. The Puritan lost one and a half and the Mayflower two minutes by not getting over the line within the time limit. The Priscilla immediately forged ahead and at the end of the first leg, half a mile, but the wind soon began to freshen and the Puritan and Mayflower at once gained on New York's favorite. The yachts turned the first stake boat as follows: Gitana, 12:33½; Priscilla, 12:34¾; Fortuna, 12:35; Mayflower, 12:40; Puritan, 12:40½. The Puritan and the Mayflower continued to gain on the second leg. The Mayflower showed great speed and rapidly walked away from the Puritan. Half way between the first and second stake boats, or between seven and eight miles from the start, the Gitana was an eighth of a mile ahead of the Priscilla, which led the Fortuna by about the same distance. The Mayflower was doing remarkable work, but was still a mile to the rear. She had drawn to windward of the Puritan and was leading her by about twenty rods. Both the Puritan and Mayflower were to windward of the leading boats. The six leading yachts passed the second mark boat in the following order: Gitana, 1:03:59; Priscilla, 1:04:50; Fortuna, 1:05; Mohican, 1:08; Mayflower, 1:08:16; Puritan, 1:08:15. Cheers and steam whistles greeted the yachts as they passed the mark boat. At 1:15 the leading boats were about three miles to windward tacks. They started away at a fast pace on the last leg of the first triangle and the Puritan made splendid work. The Priscilla had sailed farther to windward than her competitors, and when she tacked she was only a short distance from the turning. Before a mile had been sailed the Puritan had walked away from them all. The yachts were then sailing close hauled. The work of the Puritan was wonderful. She had not to tack until the Mayflower got to weather of her, and then began work on the Priscilla. When the vessels came along on the port tack and headed for the stake boat at 2:37 it was seen that the Puritan had outsailed her to leeward and gone into the lead, which she held to the finish on all sides. The yachts rounded the home stake boat, without the race completed, as follows: Puritan 1:55:50; Priscilla, 1:56:05; Mayflower, 1:57. The Puritan now began to outrun all hands before the wind and the balance of the race was a procession. The Puritan passed the finish line at 3:24:20; the Priscilla at 3:37:50 and the Mayflower at 3:39. Had the Puritan and Mayflower been prompter in getting under way the Puritan would have beaten the great New York sloop by over eight minutes, while the Mayflower would have beaten her by a little over 4 minutes and secured the second place at the finish instead of the third.

Following are the tabulated results as made up by the judges:

As for the race the Priscilla was towed to Boston. The eastern club banqueted its guests in the club house at 1 p. m.

Justifiable Homicide.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide in the case of Samuel Gassenheimer, a school proprietor, who, Monday night, shot and killed Frank A. Blackford. Gassenheimer was discharged. Blackford and Gassenheimer, who is a colored woman, stayed in the latter's room for the purpose of a row, and Blackford a pistol. They chased Gassenheimer out of the room, and he finally shot Blackford three times, who died in twenty minutes.

Distillers Disagree.

CINCINNATI, June 30.—Quite a full representation of big distillers are here wrestling with the question of rool or no pool, rather than what kind of pool shall exist. The dissatisfied have so far refused to sign any agreement. It is very likely the manufacturers may breather be a free-for-all, gouge-you-guess business. Nothing has yet been accomplished except a great deal of talk. There is a hitch in some of the local distillers and there are grave doubts if all can be brought in.

POWDERLY DISLIKES GOULD.

Expression of Opinion Brought Out by the Associated Press Controversy.

NEW YORK, June 30.—A correspondent has taken pains between David M. Stone president of the New York Associated Press and T. V. Powderly, general master workman Knights of Labor, relative to an expression said to have emanated from Mr. Powderly respecting the dispatches from Cleveland during the recent convention of the order. It was reported to have said that the Associated Press lost no opportunity to malign him, and that instructions had been sent out by the Associate Press at the instance of Jay Gould to misrepresent him.

Mr. Powderly was informed that Jay Gould and the Associated press represented opposite interests and are so strongly antagonistic that they would not be likely to act in harmony on any subject, and certainly neither would do anything whatever at the direct instance of the other. In speaking of Jay Gould, Mr. Powderly says:

Until the receipt of your letter I fully believed that Mr. Gould was a controlling spirit in the Associated Press, and I am informed from you that such is not the case. I am pleased to find out that the New York Associated Press and Jay Gould represent opposite interests, and that as strongly antagonistic they would not be likely to act in harmony on any subject.

I can assure you that no matter what the papers may say at times in favor of Mr. Gould, no matter though he has wealth unlimited at his command, he is the most unpopular man in public life on this or the other side of the Atlantic to-day. I speak from a knowledge of the people, having mingled among them, and I can in the future read the Associated Press dispatches with more pleasure, knowing that Jay Gould does not control the wires over which they are sent.

"I can assure you," concluded the master workman, "that it was with no intention to do the press, associated or otherwise, an injury that I made the statement to which you refer." The request for an interview with the two gentlemen everything was satisfactorily explained.

MRS. CLEVELAND "AT HOME."

The President's Wife Begins Her Series of Afternoon Receptions.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The president's wife, for her first receptions, has chosen different days from those formerly observed by his sister, but the same hour, from 12 to 1. Mrs. Cleveland was "at home" in the Red parlor on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday noon; Mrs. Cleveland on Tuesdays and Thursdays, choosing the hour between the opening of the cabinet meeting with his cabinet. Yesterday was the first of these receptions under favoring skies, and there was present a brave show of so early spring for the closing week of June.

Mrs. Cleveland looked more youthful than ever in a short dress of white mull, with yoke and sleeves of Valenciennes lace and ruffles of the same across the skirt front. Her only ornament was a jeweled pansy at the throat and a bunch of pink roses and carried in the hand. Many ladies insisted that she looked lovelier than in her more elaborate toilets. Her voice has gained a certain tone as if she felt herself no longer a stranger.

The Murder of Preller.

ST. LOUIS, June 30.—H. D. Dixon, the English merchant for whom C. A. Preller was traveling at the time of the murder at the Southern hotel has arrived in this city. Many of Preller's effects and to secure official papers which the victim had in his possession. He will take back with him the court record of the case against Mitchell and will collect the $5,000 insurance on Preller's life for the benefit of the Preller family.

Murdering and Robbing His Father.

PLYMOUTH, N. C., June 30.—James N. Basemore, who lives near Windsor, Bertie county, and his son quarreled. The son struck his father a severe blow with a buckshot into his father's body. He then broke open a safe, took therefrom $800 and fled. The sheriff and a large posse are scouring the country in search of him. The father is yet alive but will die.

A Fight With Horse Thieves.

GALVESTON, Tex., June 30.—A News special from Uvalde says: Deputy Sheriffs T. P. Baylor and G. R. Nunno had a desperate fight with Mexican horse thieves at Kent, Texas, on the line of the road of Uvalde. One Mexican was killed and another wounded. The officers clothing was riddled with bullets, but they escaped unmaimed.

Kate Townsend's Will.

NEW ORLEANS, June 30.—In the famous Kate Townsend will case Judge Houston rendered a decision decreeing the will of Kate Townsend to be void. Judge Sykes null and void, and giving judgment in favor of the state of Louisiana, decreeing the state to be the heir-at-law of the deed Morgan and Mrs. Morgan in ownership and possession of all the property left by her.

A New Planet Discovered.

UTICA, June 30.—Dr. C. H. F. Peters, of the Litchfield observatory of Hamilton college, reports that a minor planet, which he believes to be unknown, was observed there on the morning of June 29 in right ascension 17h 28m. 53s., and south declination 25 deg., 6m.

Studying Hebrew in the Dog Days.

CHICAGO, June 30.—The Chicago summer school of Hebrew, under the direction of Professor William R. Harper, began at Morgan park with seventy students. William Henry Green, D. D., of Princeton, announced to deliver four lectures during the session.

To Educate Young Alaskans.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Senator Dolph submitted a proposed amendment to the civil appropriation bill to appropriate $50,000 for the education of children of school age, without reference to race, in the Territory of Alaska.

Soldiers Withdrawn From Garfield's Grave.

CLEVELAND, June 30.—The United States soldiers who have been pacing to and fro in front of Garfield's tomb, in Lake View cemetery, ever since the body was placed in the Scoffield vault, have been removed.

A Business Failure in North Carolina.

PITTSBURGH, Va., June 30.—News has been received here of the failure of John A. Stockton, of Winston, N. C., merchants and proprietors of the Central hotel; liabilities, $60,000.

A Congressional Nomination.

CONCORD, N. H., June 30.—The Second district Democratic congressional convention nominated Joan H. George, of Concord, for congressman.

Killed by the Express.

MADISONVILLE, O., June 30.—James Baker, a carpenter, aged 35, was struck by the west bound C. W. and B. express and instantly killed.

THE RANNEY REPORT

FROM THE COMMITTEE ON THE TELEPHONE CHARGES.

Severe Criticism of the Attorney General and Solicitor General Goode—The Minority Report Indorsed by the Four Republican Members of the Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The minority, or Republican report of the special committee which conducted the Pan Electric telephone investigation, prepared by Hon. Ambrose A. Ranney, of Boston, is completed and will be submitted to the house as soon as the Democratic members reach an agreement upon their report. Mr. Ranney's report is indorsed by the four Republican members of the committee, and Chairman Boyle's report, which was intended to represent views of the majority, is understood to be signed by four Democratic members, Mr. Hall, of Missouri, the fifth Democratic member of the committee, having decided to submit his individual views independently of his colleagues.

The Ranney report reviews the testimony of the principal witnesses examined before the committee, and embodies some severe criticisms of the methods pursued by the projectors of the Pan Electric enterprise, and of the testimony as well as the conduct of Attorney General Garland and Solicitor General Goode in connection with granting the government suit against the Bell company. Referring to the efforts of the Pan Electric people to bring about a government suit, Ranney says: "It was thought that to have the department of justice, at the head of which was one of their co-directors, the attorney general, bring a suit against the Bell company, from which would remain under their control."

They did not want to have the Bell patent vacated, but hoped they could frighten the Bell company into the belief that they could do so, for then they could drive that company, perhaps, to pay them for peace. A suit, apparently backed by the power of the government, with one of their own directors at the head of the government which authorized it, under their control, so that they could, if they chose, withdraw and die if they pleased, might seem formidable. They thought, moreover, that the mere intention of such a suit would deter the United States courts from granting any injunction in favor of the Bell patent.

Of Attorney General Garland's action or non action in connection with bringing the government suit, the report says, that to have the Bell patent had been repeatedly sustained, and so it concerned the honor of the department that such a patent should not be shielded without serious inquiry, and the duty of the attorney general to see to it that it received such inquiry they say, was increased by the fact that to know a application was going to be made and that the parties pressing action wanted it passed on without reference to the patent office, and that he had a great personal interest that it should be so passed, and should meet with no delay. After criticising the attorney general for not speaking to Solicitor General Goode about this matter, and instructing him that, as he himself was personally interested, it concerned the honor of the department to make sure that the fullest investigation preceded any action, the minority, commenting on the testimony of the solicitor general in which the latter spoke to him on the subject, say: "There are a number of facts and circumstances, however, which leave it beyond doubt that Mr. Goode's recollection is entirely at fault as to a large part of what took place between them. He has not pursued, in any portion, the course which became solicitor general in May by an appointment made by the president, but not yet confirmed by the senate. On June 25 he went to British Columbia on a mission for the department and appeared at his office again Aug. 20. Mr. Garland testifies that he was then expecting to go away for his vacation, which would interrupt his duties for a month, and did go away on the 27th of August. Mr. Goode testifies that during the week that intervened, he hardly spoke to Mr. Garland, except for the ordinary interchange of courtesies, and did not talk with him about business whatever. Mr. Goode must be mistaken about it. It is not possible that after he had been away from the department for two months, and when the attorney general was about to be absent for six weeks, leaving him at the head of the department, the one should not have asked and the other should not have given information or instructions concerning the pending business of the office and matters expected to arrive. It would not be tolerated that private counsel could so neglect the interests of an important private client. It is not to be believed that Mr. Goode could have done so toward the interests of the United States; he must have had consultations and forgotten all about them."

The minority reach the conclusion that the solicitor general was led to grant the application for a government suit without the usual reference or inquiry, without competent examination, with a speed unexampled in the history of the department and in violation of the established rules and practice of the office. "Ordinary cases," they add, "such action would be held to be positive proof of fraud, at least proof of such negligence, which, in a person in his position is equivalent to fraud." The Republican minority, following this severe criticism of the solicitor general with an arraignment of Attorney General Garland, equally severe. They say: "The best that can be said of him is that he lent himself to this scheme because he got short of his monthly pay, and that he did not, if himself, had sufficient manhood and influence to do good to others. He was then only a senator of the United States. He was next placed at the head of the department of justice. The man whom when he had received the $50,000 of stock wanted now to borrow the name of that department and get its indorsement, then an ally asked for it; then the official representative of his company asked for it. Such men would easily have found a course for themselves. He took one also; but his associate who knew him and who speculated on his character were certain they would get what they wanted, and they did. His intelligence told him there were things he should not permit, and then his vacillating will let him argue that he might stand as do and see his office do them for his benefit. He had not the strength to deny what his associates asked, nor to return the stock and cease to be an associate; he had not the boldness to do personally what they thought was a fair service for the stock he kept. But it was done by his department as such a thing never was done before.

As to the press the minority say that The New York Times is the only journal that has received pay for articles published relating to the telephone controversy, but that was for the insertion of a four column industrial article, and the price charged —$1,200—was at regular advertising rates. The evidence, they say shows that the Bell company resolved at the outset of the controversy not to go into newspaper discussion, and has adhered to that policy.

YALE LAW SCHOOL EXERCISES.
Mr. Thacher Takes a Prize for a Speech on "Boycotting."
NEW HAVEN, June 30.—The anniversary exercises of the Yale law school occurred in the Battell chapel this morning. President Porter offered prayer. The competitive speaking for the Townsend prize then began. The competitors were as follows: Frederick Townsend, B. A., of New Haven: "American Independence as a cause of the French Revolution," by Frank D. Pavey, B. A., of Washington Court House, O.: "Boycotting," by Mr. Thacher, B. A., of New Haven, Conn.
When the above named speakers had concluded Professor Porter introduced Hon. Wayne MacVeagh, LL.D., of Philadelphia, who delivered the anniversary oration, taking for his theme, "Law and Democracy."
The committee on award, President Cyrus R Northrop, of Minneapolis, Minn., Hon. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., of Boston, and Gen Brayton Ives, of New York, then announced that they had decided to award the prize to Sherman Day Thacher, of New Haven. A benediction by President Porter concluded the exercises. The law faculty of the law school received the graduates and their friends at the law department.
THEIR ESTIMATE OF EACH OTHER.
Mr. Gladstone on Mr. Beecher and Mr. Beecher on Mr. Gladstone.
LONDON, June 30.—An interview with a reporter for The Post, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher expressed himself as delighted with the powerful speech delivered by Mr. Gladstone at Liverpool. Referring to the exchange of compliments with Mr. G adstone after the speech, Mr. Beecher said he told Mr. Gladstone at the time how much overcome by the power and eloquence of the premier to be able to express his appreciation of his address in words. The speech, he said, had done more to enlighten him upon the affairs of Ireland than he had ever had before. To this Mr. Gladstone remarked that he considered Mr. Beecher's words highly complimentary, as he (Gladstone) thought him as capable a judge of the merits of an address or its author as any man he had ever met.
Distress in Louisiana.
BATON ROUGE, La., June 30.—Governor McEnery has issued a proclamation reciting information received of great distress resulting from severe storms and inundations in portions of the parishes of Rapide, Grant and Catahoula. The crops have been totally destroyed, cattle and hogs drowned and the soil in many cases has been washed away to such an extent that it will be impossible to raise crops for this year. The governor, therefore, asks all charitably disposed persons in the state to send contributions of provisions to these distressed people.
Attempted Murder and Suicide.
PITTSBURG, June 30.—Frederick Jutte, aged 25 years, son of Charles Jutte, a prominent merchant of Allegheny, shot himself through the head, at his father's residence, that place, near the city, last evening. He died instantly. Previous to shooting himself he had had a quarrel with his father and two of his stepmother. It is also reported he shot his little stepbrother through the shoulder. No cause for the deed has been made public.
To Provide France's Poor With Work.
PARIS, June 30.—The article to-day adopted the bill authorizing the city of Paris to issue a loan of $50,000,000 to inaugurate public improvements for the purpose of furnishing work to the unemployed, working out, however, the claims now held by the chamber of deputies forbidding the use of material obtained outside of France.

THE ENGLISH ELECTIONS.

SALISBURY DENIES THE TRUTH OF PARNELL'S ASSERTIONS.

The Betting Two to One Against Gladstone at the Conservative Clubs, Though His Friends are Confident—The Pall-mallites Contest all Ulster.

LONDON, June 30.—Lord Salisbury has written a letter denying the assertions of Mr. Parnell that the latter has carried on negotiations with the Conservative Cabinet respecting home rule for Ireland, and denouncing his statements as baseless fabrications. Lord Salisbury continuing, says: "It is false that Mr Parnell was given any reason to believe that if the Conservatives came into power after the general election they would give Ireland a statutory parliament; it is false that I showed any leaning toward such a policy, and it is equally false that Lord Carnarvon urged upon the cabinet the granting of such a concession. The statement is also false that the cabinet did not refuse to extend the concession of home rule to Ireland until after the elections went against us.

Lord Salisbury denies also, with great indignation, the statement that after the result of the elections became known the cabinet altered its intentions. "The assertion contains not the smallest element of truth," he says, "because the cabinet never had the slightest inclination toward the establishment of a statutory parliament in Ireland. The story that the land purchase bill was to be defeated in order to win support at an interview on Aug. 1 is impossible of truth, because the bill had already passed the house of lords, and the government was publicly pledged to its terms. The government resolved upon the land purchase scheme as soon as it entered office in a minority of the house."

Mr. Gladstone, in the course of his speech yesterday at Liverpool, said: "It was here that I first drew breath. I have drawn it once 76 years. The time is not distant when I shall pay my debt to nature, and then possibly are the last words I shall speak in Liverpool." Mr. Gladstone quoted from the Salisbury Chronicle, "Let us unbend—shall rise the hunting of that day," and exclaim ed: "If idle and shallow protests [illegible] people, or if [illegible] wealth and rank overbear the national [illegible] unborn shall rue the voting [illegible] that day. I entreat you to resolve that the children shall no longer assert that Ireland is England's Poland and to determine that England shall no longer have a Poland; she has had it long enough. Listen to prudence, courage and honor. Ring out the old, ring in the new! Ring out the notes of misery and discord, ring in the blessed notes of peace."

It is said that in consequence of Fenian threats Mr. Joseph Chamberlain has had his residence placed under the guard of detectives, and that he has also armed with revolvers accompanying him on all his journeys between his house and the city.

Mr. Thomas Sexton has commenced his campaign in Belfast, and it promises to be one of the liveliest parliamentary contests in the kingdom. The Orangemen early showed their opinion by hooting Mr. Sexton upon his arrival, and precipitating a street fight before he had proceeded fifty yards from the railway station. The police were promptly on hand and prevented a spread of the disturbance. Beyond a few broken heads no damage was done, but later in the evening a crowd of Orangemen stoned a party of Sextonites to the tune of "God Save Ireland," when the police again plied their sticks with good effect, and depleted the Orange ranks by exactly thirty or forty of their number to the lockup.

The Nationalists of Dublin are making merry over the campaign of Mr. Mackey, the Unionist candidate for the Harbor division of that city. That gentleman began his contest for a seat in parliament yesterday by laboriously reading his speech in a small room in the Custom House to nine persons, chiefly composed of students and boys.

Mr. Parnell's speeches in the south of England have so much damaged the prospects of the opposition that telegraphs have been sent to the Unionist committees in London imploring the presence of eminent Unionist orators to prevent the wholesale defection which is imminent. Lord Hartington has agreed to speak at Plymouth before the joint meeting on Friday, and the committee is searching for other speakers.

Lady Randolph Churchill is one of the hardest election workers in London. Besides assisting her husband in Paddington, she makes frequent excursions to other districts to organize and encourage the women of the Primrose league.

The Conservatists continue hopeful of obtaining a small majority in the coming elections. At the National Liberal club the majority for their government is estimated at twenty. The Unionists are confident of a majority, their estimates ranging from forty to sixty. The betting at the Conservative clubs is two to one against Gladstone.

To Contest Ulster Seats.

DUBLIN, June 30.—At the regular fortnightly meeting of the National League here Mr. Tim Healy, member of parliament for South Londonderry, gratefully announced that Americans had subscribed the present $30,000 contributions to the Nationalist parliamentary campaign fund. He also stated that the Nationalists had decided to contest every seat in Ulster, and answer to the brags of the Loyalists that they had a "long purse" for parliamentary election purposes.

Sixteen Dollars Each.

MUSKOGEE, I. T., June 30.—On the basis of the Cherokee census just completed it is estimated that each Cherokee by blood will receive $16 of the $300,000 derived from the lease of the Cherokee strip. Payment commences between July 1 and 15.

CONDENSED NEWS.

The Democrats have nominated Thomas Cogswell for governor of New Hampshire.

The governor has signed the bill legalizing the incorporation of trades unions and the bill granting the franking privilege to Mrs. Grant.

Henry Ward Beecher has arrived in London and is the guest of the Rev. Dr. Parker.

D'Ennery's new play, "Louis Martyr," was a pronounced success at Chicago, where it received its first presentation in America.

Tennessee has funded, at the rate of fifty cents on the dollar, $21,000,000 of her $24,000,000 debt.

Ex-Senator Stockton, of New Jersey, denies that he wants to be a candidate for governor.

Two daughters of William Miller, aged 12 and 10, were burned to death at Sherman, Tex.

The senate has passed over the president's veto, by a vote of 34 to 25, the bill to quiet the titles of settlers on the Des Moines river lands.

A large number of prominent persons attended the funeral of the late Judge Davis at Bloomington, Ills.

THE LAKE SHORE STRIKE.

Trains Moving and the Trouble Apparently Nearing an End.

CHICAGO, June 30.—The traffic on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad has been restored, in earnest. In and out bound trains are moved as rapidly as the company dare, but all are under strong police protection. No violence or interference is attempted by the strikers or their sympathizers. Here and there, at a distance of two or three blocks from the Root street and Forty-third street crossings, small groups of strikers and their friends gather and quietly discuss the outlook, but they do not attempt to stop. Every outbound train is escorted by Fullerton men armed with Winchester rifles as far as the Indiana state line. The switchmen of other roads have decided to place an embargo on the Lake Shore freight out of sympathy with the strikers. The Wabash, the Chicago and Eastern Illinois and the Grand Trunk handle Lake Shore freight as usual. President Newell expressed his satisfaction with the situation so far as it has progressed, but says he will not consider the strike at an end until trains can be run without the coercion of rifles and without the fear of malicious interference with property.

A BIG STRIKE THREATENED.

Fifteen Hundred Philadelphia Ironworkers to Go on Strike.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—The fifteen hundred employes of the five large rolling mills of this city, operated by James Rolaud & Co., Cassidy & Co., Baird & Cashyap, Hughes & Patterson, Marshall Bros. & Co., and Stevens, Robbins & Co., will go out on strike this evening and the mills will probably be idle indefinitely. The trouble, which has been impending for the past six months, grows out of the refusal of the manufacturers to grant the demand of their employes for a change in the existing schedule of wages. The sliding scale, which has been in force during the past year, expires to-day, and the employes want the adoption of any new scale by which their wages will be reduced. Repeated conferences had failed in having a satisfactory settlement of the difference, and the workmen posted a notice served on the manufacturers thirty days ago, the employes will stop work. The employes belong to the Amalgamated Steel and Iron Workers association and notice has been forwarded to President Wiebe of the intended action of the men in this city.

Another Horseshoe For Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Representative Rowden, of Pennsylvania, presented to the president as a welcome gift a fine steel horseshoe, which was made by Mr. John Schaadt, of Allentown, Pa., and intrusted to Mr. Rowden for delivery. On one end of the shoe are the initials "G. C." and on the other "F. F. C." in the center is the word "Gluck," which, in German, means good luck. When Mr. Cleveland was nominated for the presidency Mr. Schaadt sent a similar horseshoe to him, but the initials "F. F. C." were not on it.

Chief Justice Waite's Movements.

TOLEDO, June 30.—Chief Justice Waite, whose former home was in Toledo, is spending a short time among his old friends and relatives. He is in excellent health and is dividing his time between receiving calls from friends and writing opinions on decisions of the court reserved by him. He will leave for the Yellowstone Park shortly and proposes making a trip to Alaska the latter part of the summer.

Roller Mill Burned.

FALMOUTH, Ky., June 30.—The large brick building of the Champion roller mills owned by Messrs. Hodges and Hamilton, was discovered in flames. The entire structure was reduced to a mass of ashes in one hour. The origin of the fire was probably in a lot of brass, which heated and ignited. The loss is estimated at $30,000; insurance, $12,000.

Dead in the Bay.

TORONTO, June 30.—The body of a well-dressed man, between 35 and 40 years of age, was found floating in the bay yesterday morning. Letters found in the clothing indicate that the body is that of H. W. Hampton, of Cleveland, O. It was taken to the morgue.

An Assistant Bishop Elected.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—Right Rev. Ozi William Whitaker, bishop of Nevada, was yesterday elected assistant bishop of Pennsylvania by the clerical delegates in the Episcopal convention. The lay delegates have not yet voted.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—For the middle Atlantic states fair weather, stationary temperature.

RUMOR OF THE NEGRO.

THE PRACTICAL JOKES OF THE COLORED MAN OF THE SOUTH.

How, When, Where and Why He Laughs—A Prisoner's Plea Before the Mayor—An Old Preacher's Will—Jokes That Are Thoroughly Enjoyed.

The genuine southern negro is deficient in wit, but opulent in humor. The humor must be of the broadest kind for him to thoroughly enjoy it. Practical jokes are his professional jokes. They are his stock and are easily understood. Sambo not only laughs himself, but is a source of laughter to others. In this he is a public benefactor. His gills many an hour that otherwise could be very gloomy. His grotesque looks when he is surprised, his profound interest in anything traditional, and the curious fatality with which he mixes information obtained from the higher walks of life make him a boss relief on the walls of time. Slowly we are losing beyond our deserts. In return for his freedom and the inestimable privilege of selling his vote he makes us laugh. He is large, too, and laughs best. There may be an element of languor in our laughter, but his is hearty, rollicking, and uncontrolled.

As the originator of the sense of humor in others, the negro is a success. One of them gravely regarding the efforts of his employer to open a surgical case, broke into the silence with "Boss, you done los' de contposition, haint you!"

The same negro was the butt of the little boys in the back yards of society. Very fond of "red eye," he was continually in trouble with the law. It was his boast that he had twice sat in the sidewalk from the hotel to a certain cross street two blocks away. The fines collected from him had been applied to that purpose. Arrested for being drunk and disorderly, he was tried at the trial being put off until the next morning. Some of the young white men of the place told him that if he would plead guilty he should tell the mayor he would let him off without fine or imprisonment. On the morning of the trial, the court room was crowded. Sambo, by way of a novelty, pleaded guilty of somewhat inflammatory temperament at sentenced in awful dignity. The prisoner at the bar looked a little bit shaky at first, but seeing no sign of the white friends present he regained his confidence and assumed the attitude of one who knows his rights and knowing dares maintain them. Said the mayor.

"Henry, you are charged with being drunk and disorderly. What have you got to say?"

"Boss," was the reply. "I pleads 'stiffable homey side," and he beamed benignantly on his honor.

There was an uproarious shout of laughter, in which the mayor was forced to join. Henry escaped that time. Sent to the drug store after some tincture of cantharides, the nearest he could come to it was, "distinkshun peradies." A day or two afterward he was after some "oh dis vere peculiar intiment." Mercurial was the word that had thrown him.

AS A PRACTICAL JOKER.

As a practical joker the negro has no superior and if the joke is one that will cause distress he is so much the more satisfied. At Lake City, some years ago, some of them caught a hawk and dipped it in turpentine. Releasing it, and striking a lighted match to the neck feathers, they tossed the bird into the air. It made a brilliant spectacle for a moment, and then, with an agonizing scream, fell to the ground. The negroes were delighted beyond measure, and rolled over each other in paroxysms of laughter.

Sitting or standing around a camp fire along the track of one of the railroads were several section hands talking over diffe ent good times they had enjoyed. Sitting straddlegged on a horse was a young negro listening eagerly to the description of savory viands. At last one touched upon the coon, and the others, recognizing a superior soul, became silent.

"Take or nice fat coon," said the table orator, "pat'ble 'im, roas' 'im, sarb 'im up, wid plenty grabyer an' sweet taters."

Here the negro on the horse could stand it no longer. He had followed every movement of the orator, his nostrils flapping widely as if he would catch the scent of the coon, his lips working convulsively. Now he broke in with, "Hush you mout, you fool nigguh, or I'll cut you off on de hoss."

The nearest approach to wit on the part of the negro was that of the old preacher at a revival. Hearing some incoherent noise in the rear of the tent that disturbed the pious proceedings, he exclaimed angrily: "What fool niggah is dat prayin' down by de dor"

Came the reply: "It's Bradder Johnson."

"Well, let some niggah pray what's better 'quainted wid de Lord."

Johnson, being a notorious chicken thief, the parson didn't have faith in his prayers.

It was a much respected negro preacher stationed at Possum Trot who astonished his congregation on the last and beautiful Sunday by announcing solemnly: "My frens, dar am two ways from dis worl'. One am de broad road wat many trad dat lead to hell, an' de colder am de narrer an' broad road dat lead ter damnation."

There was breathless silence for a moment, and then one of the lighter-hued congregation whose wool was rapidly unkinking ejaculated: "Well, if dat am de case, dis yere niggah am a-gwine-ter take de woods."

A DIETETIC DELIRIUM.

You may talk about your groves
Where you wander with your loves;
You may talk about your moonlit waves
that fall and flow;
Something fairer far than these
I can show you if you please:
'Tis the charming little cupboard where the
jam pots grow,
Where the jam pots grow,
Where the jam pots grow,
Where the jolly jolly, jolly jolly jam pots
grow.

On the land or on the sea,
Is the charming little cupboards where the
jam pots grow.

There the golden peaches shine,
In their syrup clear and fine;
And the raspberries are blushing with a
dusky glow;
And the cherry and the plum
Seem to beckon me to come
To the charming little cupboard where the
jam pots grow,
Where the sprightly pickles stand,
With the cauliflowers in oil;
And the marmalades and jellies in a goodly row;
And the quince's ruddy fire
Would an anchorite inspire
To seek the little cupboard where the jam pots grow.

Never tell me of your bowers
That are full of bugs and flowers
Never tell me of your meadows where the cows
But sing me, if you will,
Of the house beneath the hill,
And the darling little cupboard where the
jam pots grow,
Where the jam pots grow,
Where the jam pots grow,
Where the jolly jolly, jolly jolly jam pots
grow
'Tis the dearest spot to me
On the land or on the sea,
Is the charming little cupboard where the jam pots grow.

CRANKS AND LOVERS.

The Trouble They Cause Policemen at the Capitol.

Cranks are drawn to the capitol like birds about a light. There is an officer placed on duty up in the dome expressly to keep them from jumping off. Not a day passes while congress is in session that they are not at the capitol. Cranks, newly-married folks, and lovers tend naturally toward the dome, with a view probably of getting nearer to heaven. There is a turn in the stairs that is known as the kissing corner. It is the proximity that lovers never pass up to the dome without stopping there to—take breath. It is said that a properly constituted girl always gets tired when she reaches that point, and a young man was never known to object. The turn is so situated that two persons standing there can be seen from neither above nor below. It offers a great temptation to rest. The whispering gallery has become well known that young folks who don't want their vows carried to the other side of the dome and make public property of it by the echoes are very careful to keep quiet when they reach that elevation.

Cranks, if they are recognized as such, are not allowed to go on the dome, but they are always managing around for an opportunity to slip up. Several attempts have been made by these adventurers to step out into space and jump, but only one in a hundred only one has been successful. One man was caught by the tail of his coat just as he stood ready for a plunge forward. Many have been caught skulking with their insane eyes the distance to the concrete below. They have always been induced to go down in the ordinary way by the winding stairs.

Very innocent and harmless looking men will stop at this point as they go climbing up the crowded stairs, and while at once become engrossed by the beauty of the great circular floor of the rotunda, and their eyes will get bright and round at the prospect. Then they will begin walking over the rail in a great hurry, as if they had forgotten something, and hadn't time to take the stairs to get to it. A policeman always appears at this juncture, and the visitor advises him to take his time about it and go by way of the stairs.

"I can tell them on sight," said the policeman to a reporter. "I can tell when they come for a jump, and I never give them a chance. There is something in their eyes and the way they look about them that reveals their purpose. But I presume any crank who got on the dome would feel it to be his duty to jump off. So we think it best not to let any cranks go up.

"No, we don't stop lovers," he added, in response to an insinuation that the society of crank was not dangerous. "They never have energy enough to jump off. They have to stop at every landing to rest. Sometimes they make a good deal of noise about it. The 'kissing corner' Yes, of course, they stop there! But the real genuine article will be found in the hall. They stop at every turn in the stairs! Let's see, now. Let's make a calculation how many kisses a real spoony couple who are visiting the Washington monument will get in on a round of the capitol. No, they can't use in the elevator; that's crowded, nor in the dome. They must walk up as they like to. There's the tomb of Washington under the crypt; they always put their heads close together to weep over that, and never have you hell them that it's empty. This is a particularly good place, because it's dark, and there are so many narrow aisles and turns that a score might be donne before they finally get out. Next is the senate-room, and then the crypt. After that they get upon the top floor, on the skirt, and the rotunda. But they make up for this on the way to the dome. Now, just count the landings and you've got it. But it isn't hard, for you see they don't stop permanent with them.—Washington Star.

The Emancipation Proclamation Fee.

I was given the following information by a friend whose veracity I have never had cause to question, and who called upon Mr. Lincoln on the days after the proclamation had been issued.

He relates that Mr. Lincoln told him he had been asked for the pen he used in signing that document.

"But," said Mr. Lincoln, "I can not for the life of me say positively which it is. It is one of a dozen or two lying on my desk at that time. Yet," he added, "I will do the best I can to select the right one, and, in any case, it will be a near relative, which reminds me of a story. I can't tell you, as I always tell a story, it is said, with which to illustrate a point, of the man who was importuned for a great man's autograph in his possession. After securing a good round price for it, he assured the purchaser he had made a great acquisition to his collection. That it might be genuine for it was written by the great man's brother-in-law."

All of which leads me to fear it is only a brother-in-law of the proclamation pen that is in Chicago at the present time.—S. G. Pomeroy in Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Funny Fine.

Fashionable Basques.

A fashion in great favor with young ladies for street suits is that of a basque of plain dark color with a vest of striped, checked or figured fabric. Any nice woolen stuff may be used for the basque, and should be of rather heavy quality, as it is to be worn without a jacket. Serge, cheviot or camel's hair is the fabric usually chosen, while the skirts may be of lighter summery fabric, such as etamine, bourette, th a delaine, canvas, or even of surah or Louisine silk.

Grenadine Dress Lining.

Formerly a grenadine dress was lined with heavy gros grain silk, underlined with French canton flannel, so that it was quite complete as heavy and uncomfortable as a winter dress would be. Now the silk lining alone is used with canton flannel shields set at each seam, to secure the machine stitching and bear the strain which naturally comes upon it.

Wedding Dresses.

This is about the time of year when numerous girls are thinking of being married. They say a dozen bridal couples a day sometimes call at the White House to congratulate the president. It is the fashion, as everybody knows, when a bride weds, a bridal trip to Washington. Full of sympathy with these dear girls, we this week give in the fashion column two of the most approved designs of wedding gowns. The first is a copy of that of Mrs. Frankie Folsom Cleveland, God bless her!

You see there how plain and rich looking it is. The ivory-white corded satin is all the fabric there was in it, except just the drapings across the front, white lace of Inelis silk. The scarfs crossed at the back were of fine white tulle. A border of orange buds surrounds the drapings in front, and just edges the tulle in the neck. The veil is fastened with a bunch of orange and myrtle upon the top, while tiny sprays of the same buds just dot the edge of the half sleeve above at the elbow. This costume was a very striking one.

We have here a bridal costume of cream colored French faille, which is French silk. Cream color is very fashionable for this summer's wedding dresses. Spanish lace forms a plaited panel under the draperies at the right. The front is cut in points, falling over a flat plaiting of the silk; slightly draped it is caught with orange blossoms; a large bunch of orange blossoms on the waist fine in front, and holding the soft muslin of crepe and lace. Twenty yards of silk, one and three-quarter yards of lace, one quarter of a yard of crepe, three and one-half yards of tulle for veil.

Bathing Suits.

A medium shade of blue flannel has trousers with a band, through which ivory braid is run, the hem being slashed at intervals; the waist is plain, with a full gathered skirt attached, the bottom finished the same as the trousers; a belt, with braid inserted, closes with buttons; on the left of front, two loops and two ends of braid, a pretty finish. The neck has a deep, square collar, finishing to a point, the braid finish being the same; the plastron narrow strips of blue and white flannel, short sleeves, with hem and braid as finish.

Another, in a pretty soft flannel in gray, is trimmed with the ivory Hercules braid, three rows, one up each side, on the skirt, which is gathered; the belt is piped on the edges with the braid, forming loops and ends in front, each end ornamented with three rows of braid, finishing to a point in the center; the waist has rows of braid, meeting in points; the sleeves short; are altered with three rows, three rows, three rows of braid; collar has two rows, with three in the back, forming to a deep point; the short trousers are trimmed to correspond with the sleeves. These are also to be obtained suitmen; can be easily made at home.

A pretty style for a little girl is to use plain flannel, trimming it with bands of striped flannel.

Every one wears long stockings and bathing shoes, quite an improvement; some wear white bathing shoes, low neck, tiny sleeves, a fashion not to be commended.

Bathing wraps are considered a necessity. Very handsome ones are made of white Turkish toweling with hood, collar, deep cuff a la Chinese, and cords with tassels of blue, red or gold color. Bathing wraps are merely a long, large circular which covers a lady's form considerably on the way to and from the surf. Just before she enters the water she takes it off and leaves it upon the beach. Emerging from the water all dripping wet, she throws it around her while she walks to the dressing room. This is to conceal her figure from the prying eyes that always follow a lady in a bathing suit.—New York Fashion Bazar.

Black Silk Aprons.

Black silk aprons are worn by ladies, while engaged in their morning duties, instead of white, which partakes so largely of a servant's garb. The apron is made with rounded corners, a pocket, and straight or pointed belt, into which it is gathered; the apron may be trimmed with three or five rows of braid, or a plaited ruffle, on a bias piece, with three plaits each side from the outside edge to the top of each of these trimmed to fancy. Some have deep, square bibs to protect the front of waist.

The Byzantine Dress.

A novelty is the Byzantine dress. It is of etamine, with plush stripes, in navy blue, garnet, black or olive green, with many colored designs like mosaic work. The skirt, which is draped over silk, has the stripes arranged horizontally in front over deep silk flounces. The etamine falls in the back in full straight folds, and is not draped. The waist, which is composed of striped Byzantine goods, is of plain etamine trimmed with small drooping passementerie ornaments.

False Hair Again.

The tendency of the day is to restore to hair importers a share of the business enjoyed by them when so much false hair was worn. It is possible that there are women sufficiently young to think the fashion of letting the hair near made of wearing the hair coiled up behind to wear with our English turbans. It is ugly, very ugly, but English, and must be copied. Some ladies, with the best enough of their own hair to produce this effect, so the importer of hair must be resorted to.

FASHIONLETS.

Lace mantles are profusely trimmed with beads.

Snowballs make a lovely trimming for a tulle bonnet.

Perfumed reticules and pockets are among late fancy novelties.

Pimpers of the cheeks are attached to the pale of false teeth.

The new peach blow color combines exquisitely with gold shades of yellow.

The crinkled front hair is worn more and more off and above the forehead.

Greenish gray tones are used in fashionable furnishings, curtains, upholstery and covers in rooms.

The business sack, the morning cutaway, the afternoon frock and the swallowtail dress coat remain the necessary articles for gentleman's wardrobe effects.

If you desire to know whether your lady friend is carrying a sun or a rain umbrella, you may look at the handle, and if a bow is nearly tied thereon you will know it is a sun umbrella.

Chamois, hunter's green and peachblow are meeting with success in suits, and are to be found in all materials, and can be had to be quite as much in favor as any of the regular colors.

If one wishes to look long and slender, the front belt is a flat band of velvet or silk two inches wide, pointed downward in the middle with the ends at the waist line and the point below concealing the end of the vest. A fringe of beads may be added to this pointed band.

Gazing at a World of Splendor—the Mammoth Plant—"Pulque."

The City of Mexico is under our feet; and it seems to be in the center of a sea. You can define the level of the water reaching from the mountains in many places to the walls of the city. But the valley of Mexico, as seen from the surrounding mountains, is all green. It is the color of grass, a vast body of water. To right and left and all around you, here and all over the low fertile hills, you see the magnificent maguey of green. This is the maguey plant. We call it the century plant at home. It is a rank and expensive grower, and disdains nurturing. It will grow in the poorest, most fashioned of loose stones, and flourish there better than in a field. It is certainly the diamond in the rough of the plant in the world. Its sturdy stiff leaves here where it grows to per section are in some cases as large as a man, and as war-like. The end of each dirk, long, and bristling with points is armed with a spear that would split a fence rail.

In the heart of this green, healthy plant, that extends away in vast rolling fields on either side of us for tens of twenty miles, the Mexican digs a hole. He goes to the largest in the field, and has perhaps 150 plants "tapped" at a time. Three times a day he comes with a pump and pumps out the liquid into a pig-skin, carries it on his back. It is a sort of "sugar making" business, only they do not boil down the water. They put it in barrels or tubs, and after three days take it to town, where it is sold for the natives to get "full" consumed. I have tried to drink this "pulque," both at the shops and at the table, but it is a nauseous, sickening smell of it after it has fermented and been tumbled about for days on the backs of men or mules in a pig skin of a former generation.

But I am not here to write of beyond the green sea of century plants. Look away beyond the great lake, the flower gardens, far away to the valley of Mexico, and the original mountains of snow that lie glistening and flashing in the setting sun. Was there ever such a world of splendor to look upon before? Is there such another? Says an old resident American, who comes from another car and stands at my side, "I have lived fifty years and have not seen the same as I do now, and never saw it before. I will come every year of my life now." Words, sentiment, all utterance, seems like an impertinence here. Old battle fields, the old hall of this faction or that state or nation—they all are below us now. These sublime mountains, these have they carved, or concerned themselves for all that man has done in this majestic presence! If we could only partake a little of their awful stability and permanence, we could be happy.

Here Montezuma stood, for he loved this spot, and in his simple faith seemed to see the foot steps of his god on yonder mountains on the first light of morning. Here Cortez stood, and in his religious bigotry planned to place a colossal cross on these eternal hills. Here stood later stood the old American soldier, glass in hand, contemplating the road by which he was to cross those shallow lakes and plant the first stronghold on the walls of Montezuma that had been planted there for more than three hundred years. What scenes! What surroundings! What traditions! What prospects stirred them! And now the unclassed Spaniard, when he first set foot he s, named the spot St. Angel!—Joaquin Miller in Chicago Times.

Argentina's Cattle and Sheep Interests.

The people are deeply interested in cattle. This industry has taken wonderful proportions. In 1864 there were 10,364,000 horned cattle in these countries. In 1881 this number had increased to 30,000,000. The slaughter of cattle amounts to 3,500,000 per annum. Two millions of these are for home consumption. Each person in the republic consumes one-half of an animal each year; the other 1,500,000 are consumed by the salaeros, or slaughter houses, which prepare, freeze and export the meat to Europe. With the refrigerators and salting establishments the market of these plains is the world.—Bishop Fowler's Argentina Letter.

Blindness Prevalent in Russia.

Military reports lately published show a startling prevalence of blindness in Russia. In the military one recruit in every 126 is totally blind.

COMING TO LIFE AGAIN.

NEW AND NOVEL EXPERIMENTS IN REVIVIFICATION.

The Well-Authenticated Case of the Hindoo Fakir—An Extraordinary Instance of the Trance Condition of Existence—A Swedish Scientist's Theory.

The scientific experimenter and the religious realist have ever had the same enemy to overcome—a mocking world. As late as January, 1820 George Stephenson used a "steam horse" in his fields. It brought consigned to Bedlam for advancing his wonderful theory of steam locomotion, which, since its adoption, has proved of such benefit to man. This is but one of the many instances where a man's incredulity has been a proof of his ignorance and lack of genius. Many of the innovations in the form of the most practical improvements are looked upon askance by the world, what a small chance must abstruse scientific investigations have, dealing, as they do, with facts and beliefs. Yet, there comes, from widely divergent parts of the earth, a theory which makes the most credulous doubt, and the most learned believe. It is this: It is the theory of revivification, by which persons apparently dead can be brought back to life.

First, the startling announcement of Professor Grumelluck, a distinguished Swedish chemist of the University of Upsal, in reference to the fact that mummies found in a state of perfect preservation in the ancient tombs of the Nile, surprised the scientific world. Differing from other mummies in that instead of the bodies having been eviscerated and filled with spices, as has always been removed, he claims that they were not embalmed at all, but "are really the bodies of individuals whose lives have been mercifully suspended, with the intention of restoring them at some future time—only the secret is lost." An instance in modern history which seems to give plausibility to this belief in "suspended animation" is particularly apropos.

A HINDOO FAKIR'S RESUSCITATION.

Sir Claude M. Wade, political resident at Ludhiana, British agent at the court of Ranjit Singe, affirms most solemnly that he saw a fakir at Hindostan brought back to life after being apparently dead for six months, in the year 1837. He says the arrival at the place a few hours after the fakir had been buried; the Ranjit Singh ordered the grave opened, and, according to the truth of his death. The tomb containing the body was a square room, called a barra durri, situated in the garden adjoining the city of Lahore. The doors of which were hermetically sealed, the fourth, of iron, being secured with a padlock, the hole of which was sealed with the private seal of the Maharajah; then there was no possible means of entrance or egress. Besides these precautions two companies kept guard to prevent fraud. At the end of the six weeks a number of dignitaries assembled to witness the resuscitation, and, on opening the coffin, Sir Claude Wade says the limbs of the fakir were perfectly flexible, and that the face only looking full and natural. The corpse was then subjected to a system of treatment, in which hot applications to the head were made, and in not more than half an hour the fakir was talking freely. The interest thus awakened in the subject again led to a most remarkably thinking. Investigations bearing on the subject, during which he learned that "the rationale of the process rested on the view of the vital principle being latent in organized bodies the self existent principle of life, and that if the functions even be so far interrupted as to be rendered imperceptible, life can be retained for long periods without air, food or other means of maintenance.

The fact such a thing as suspending animation was really known and practiced at so late a date as the nineteenth century makes it more than probable that it was known to the ancients. That there was an experiment "black art" known to, and practiced by, the people of the east is no myth; but that all knowledge of it was lost in the destruction of the Alexandrian library, except what tradition has handed down, is equally certain. The object now, however, of the scientific investigator is to discover the secret by which this suspended animation may be restored.

Mr. Francis Garry Fairfield, in his essay on "Apparent Death," gives an instance where the knowledge bermanized tragically. A certain Rajah of Jyttiah, named Yuni, who knew the art of feigning death, sold to the bands of his creditors by dying suddenly; his body was then given to his wife, Ranjit Bai, who had it taken back to his home, and by her knowledge of the secret of revivification, restored him to his original condition. Yuni was not slow to take advantage to play the same sharp trick, but having in the meantime married another wife unacquainted with the art, and who believed him really dead, his body was burnt with due ceremony.

Now, we presume this is what Professor Grumelluck means when he says happened to those mummies found in the tombs of the Nile: that for some reason of their own their animation had been suspended, and before life could set for their return to life had elapsed, those possessed of the secret had died, and their secret with them. The professor proposes many proofs of his theory of revivification, most convincing of which are his own successful experiments during the past ten or more years. He claims to have treated a live snake in such a way as to make it present in every particular the characteristics of a mortis one—even to the extreme brittleness; having preserved it in this condition for several years, he applied to it some stimulating fluid, known only to himself, by which it was restored to life. This he repeated many times for fifteen years, during which the snake was alternately putrified and revivified at the will of the professor, who was not delighted with his success that he has petitioned the Swedish government to allow him some of the condemned criminals to experiment on, promising to bring them to life at the end of two years, the criminals to be then pardoned.

Mr. James L. Finch and Dr. Armitage, in our own country, give some interesting accounts of resuscitating animals apparently dead. One was a dog they killed by bleeding, and afterwards brought back to life by inserting the blood of a living dog in its veins.

The theory of M. Robin, the distinguished French scientist, is allied to rejuvenation, the faith of the Rosicrucians, who, it was believed, renewed the tissues of their bodies by eating certain herbs. To Mr. Robin the fakir and the Hindoo prince of life, and he claims its power to be unfailing. Whether or not the knowledge of revivification and rejuvenation would be a blessing to the world is an open question. The wandering of the "Wandering Jew" is an unenviable one. Exceeding long life was pronounced upon him as the greatest curse, and certainly sentiment would be against prolonging it, as it be compelled to inhabit this earth after all our friends had gone, and what possible pleasure or benefit could those Egyptian mummies experience in being brought back to life centuries after their time, condemned to an existence as isolated as that which our imaginations picture of the cursed Israelite.—Detroit Free Press.

Rates Reduced.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company now reduced the premium on its $5,000 accident insurance with $25 weekly indemnity, from $25 to per annum. There is nothing indefinite about the terms used by this Company. The amount that it will pay is clearly stated to be $5,000, and the cost required is an unchangeable sum. There are no Membership Fees, or annual dues; nothing but a plain, definite premium of $18 a year for a $5,000 policy or $36 for $10,000, and so on. The fund on which this tract is backed by assets of over $6000,000. The Fidelity and Casualty Company was organized in 1876 and has had a successful operation ever since; it has paid thousands of claims and its assisted policies, but has also steadily increased its assets, and its Reserve Fund was $322,182.73 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The growth of this company, it will be readily appreciated by the statement that in addition to its having substantial assets over and above $322,000, it has paid claims to the present time amounting to over $700,000.
